DECALCOMANIE.—Instructions in this new and fashionable Art, by which Designs may be instantly transferred to Glass, Silk, Wood, &c., explained in every variety, free, in per Stamps. STAINED WINDOWS (Illuminated), Transparent Blinds, and LAMP SHADES. BARNARD, Artistic Repository, 339, Oxford-street, W.

CUPERLY'S—Cut or Embossjoint in Cream.—Letter is the "Habitat Cream and Gentle," by Richard, R.B.O.S., recommended by Society as the only good dirt system to restore the weight and benefit the health. Fresh Eggs, 1s. per dozen.
2, Mt. Evans, 37, Tachbrook-street, Pimlico, S.W.

PHEASANT and PARTRIDGE EGGS, Gentlemen can now procure their best of Dairy one supplied with good, fresh eggs by TIMOTHY MANOR, Pheasant Farmer, Tring Park, Hertfordshire. Price List free.

SELECT PLANTS, Post-free, at the annexed prices:—12 superb varieties, 3s.; 12 fine var. 2s.; 12 good varieties, 1s. 6d. Post-free, with name, 2d. extra.
JOHN R. WILKINSON, 11, Old-street, Bath, Somerset.

FINE OLD PORT, 42s. per dozen, twelve years in wood; direct therein, 36s. 2ds. per dozen; Sherries, 24s. per dozen. Terms, cash.—J. and J. WATSON, Wine and Spirit Merchants, 16, Cheapside-lane, City, E.C.

VERY FINE OLD PORTS.—Offley's, 40s.; Sandeman's, 42s.; Gonzalez's, 36s. per dozen. Delivered, W., City Offices, 15, John-street, Crutchedfriars, E.C.

IMPERIAL SHERRY, 30s.; XL 36s.; Port, 30s. Delivered, W., City Offices, 15, John-street, Crutchedfriars, E.C.

HEDGES and BUTLER, 155, Regent-street, Wine Merchants and Importers of Champagne, their Sherry, 24s., 30s., and 36s. per dozen. Port Claret, of good vintages, 24s., 30s., 36s., and 42s. per dozen. Hock and Moselle, 24s., 30s., 36s., and 42s. per dozen. Sparkling Champagne of a first-class order, 42s. per dozen. Pale and Brown Sherry, of the finest quality, 42s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Champagne, 48s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Sherry, 54s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Claret, 60s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Port, 60s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Hock, 60s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Moselle, 60s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Champagne, 60s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Champagne, 72s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Champagne, 84s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Champagne, 96s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Champagne, 108s. per dozen. Hedges and Butler's Dinner Champagne,

THE UNION BANK of ENGLAND and FRANCE (Limited).—Capital £1,000,000 in 10,000 shares of £100 each, with power to increase. First Issue, Eight Hundred Shares, now ready, at the Offices of the Company, 2, Royal Exchange Buildings, London, E.C. Bankers: Union Bank of London. London Merchants—English Banking Department, British West Ind. Co. Foreign Departments—Ernest Seyd, Esq., Manager in Paris—M. Hurtier, late Chef des Services Etrangers à la Banque de France, Manager in Paris—Messrs. Ernest Seyd, Frederick, & Wilson, and Co. Current accounts opened Agents—Messrs. Ernest Seyd, Frederick, & Wilson, and Co. Current accounts opened with the principal cities of commerce in the United Kingdom. Deposits received, subject to notice if withdrawal. The rate of interest will depend on the period for which the money is lodged. Bills discounted, and advances made on the deposit of bullion, or on such terms as may be agreed upon. Bullion purchased, and sold on commission. Bills drawn on London, Paris, and Liverpool, offered on the most favourable terms. Circular notes and letters of credit granted for the use of travellers, available in all parts of the world. Approved mercantile bills discounted and other negotiations effected. The Union Bank of London, having important facilities in houses trading with the provinces of France, and the Union Bank of France, having the same facilities with exchange transactions of credit and circular notes on the cities of Europe. The Bank will remit coupons of interest on Foreign Stocks, shares, and debentures, payable in London, England, France, and the Continent generally; undertakes orders for the purchase and sale of Foreign Stocks, shares, and debentures, and transacts all kinds of English and Foreign banking business.

JOHN W. MOLLETT, Secretary.

PICTURE FRAMES, Best and Cheapest. The Guinea Gilt Drawing-room Frame, as the "Do Drop Boy," given last week with this Paper. Also, two-inch Maple and Gilt or Rose and Gilt, Glass and Backing complete for Water-colour, superior, at the lowest prices, with every variety of Moulding supplied. Pictures Framed in the new and elegant "Cy Decy-lium Mount." Sold by all Artists.

JOHN W. MOLLETT, Secretary.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—ARTIST in HAIR. DEWDNEY begs to inform Ladies or Gentlemen that he has REMOVED from 103, Regent-street, to 25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, and respectfully solicits a continuance of their favours. Brooches, Rings, Pins, Studs, &c., and Guards of specimens, handsomely mounted, kept for inspection. An illustrated book sent post-free.—Dewdney, 178, Fenchurch-street, London.

GOLD CHAINS and FINE GOLD JEWELLERY.—A very elegant WATCH of SOLID GOLD, 18 carat, by Sigg, Goldsmith's Alert Chains, &c., to 28 gs.; Gold Bracelets, 3s., 5s., 7s., 10s., 15s., to £25; Diamond Rings, 10s., 15s., and 20s.; Gem Rings, 12s. 6d. to £20; Gold Pencil Cases, 5s., 7s., 10s., 15s., to £10; Gold Lockets, 5s., 7s., 10s., 15s., to £10. Gold Guard Chains, 10s., 15s., to £20. PETER HAWLEY, Goldsmith, 141, Regent-street, W. Jewellery repaired and Diamonds reset.

WATCHES, TIMEPIECES, and CLOCKS. A SILVER LEVER WATCH, jewelled in four holes, 42 hrs. to £3; Silver Watches, £1 5s. to 12 guineas; eight-day Timepieces, 10s. 6d. to 5 guineas; Clocks, 5s. to £20; Watches for seamen.—FREDERIC HAWLEY, Watchmaker, 141, Regent-street, W. Every description of Watch, Timepiece, and Clock Jewel, Main Spring, Glass, Dial Washer, Gold, Silver, Steel, Bezel, &c., purchased or taken in exchange. Merchants and Captains supplied on liberal terms. Watches and Clocks repaired.

DENT, Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker by Special Appointment to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and maker of the great clock for the Houses of Parliament, 61, Strand (adjoining Cranbourne Alley), and 34, Royal Exchange.

A IGERIAN ONYX MARBLE.—HOWELL, JAMES, and Co. respectfully announce that they are NOW SELLING the ONYX MARBLE OBTAINED UNDER the superintendence of this beautiful MARBLE, which comprehends almost every requisite for the Library, Dining-room, Drawing-room, Bedroom, Conservatory, Hall, Staircase, Garden, and Monument, including tables, pure basins, lamps, ring-stands, &c. These elegant articles are especially suitable for marriage gifts. Sole, and in the one establishment for the Company, 4, New-street, Spring-gardens. N.B. Observe the name of their establishment, 4 and 5, Regent-street.

OPERA, RACE, and FIELD GLASSES of unrivalled power and brilliancy and unsurpassed definition. The largest and best selection, in every variety of style and mounting, at the lowest prices. Sole stock, at 5, Haymarket, 2, New Bond-street, W. (corner of Conduit-street). N.B. Sole Agents to Voigtländer, Vienna.

AT EPSOM, DONCASTER, NEWMARKET, ASCOT, and GOODWOOD, BURROWS'S LIVING JUDGES.

ALPINE TRAVELLERS, Seaside Visitors, Yachtsmen, and Tourists use BURROWS'S BINOCULARS, the best and most reliable glasses made for viewing distant objects. Their power, clearness, and definition are unequalled.

BURROWS, HARRIS, & Co.

BURROWS'S FIELD-GLASSES and RIFLE TELESCOPES, forwarded on receipt of Post-office orders to 31 and 32, Cornhill, where Illustrated Lists and Prices may be had on application.

Opticians to Agassiz, B. Arnold, 32, Baker-street; Wales and M'Culloch, 56, Cornhill.

THE DERBY.—RACE-GLASSES, in every variety of form and price, from 30s. each, at CALLAGHAN'S, 24, New Bond-street, W. (corner of Conduit-street). N.B. Sole Agent for the celebrated Race and Field Glasses made by Voigtländer, Vienna. Also, Callaghan's celebrated Opera-glasses, as used by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, though of the largest size, weigh but a few ounces.

"RECONNOITRER" GLASS, 9s. 6d.; 3 guineas; achromatic, and powerful like those, costing ten times as much, used by officers of the Federal and Confederate armies in the battles of twenty-five miles. "I never before met with an article that I could so thoroughly recommend."—Sporting Gazette. "I have used it for some time, and can pronounce it a most excellent glass, and one before which mentioned so much power for its size, with so much clearness of definition."—Bell's Life. "Has a large field of view, and is very powerful."—Sporting Life. "Is well fitted with draw tubes, and is especially the Head Gamekeeper of the Marquis of Breadalbane. "The enclosed glass is not procured at one of those advertising shops, but was carefully tried the last time I was at Newmarket, and I found it to be one of the best lenses I ever used, although they had more than four times its price."—From the Field. Sole and free per post, 10s. 6d., from the Publication Office, strong leather case, 1s. extra. Sent C.O.D. These glasses are only to be had direct from SALOM and Co., 26, Strand, opposite Coutts's, who have no agents.

THE PIANETS and DOUBLE STARS may be seen to the best advantage with a good telescope, through the fore of a steep and the fairness of a new fine moon, the night of a fine moon, the night of a calm, shut mortar upon a tripod stand, and time by a church clock ten miles. This instrument is sold by Negretti and Zambra, Opticians to the Queen, at 63s., and is said to be the most powerful portable telescope ever made. It has a three-inch superior achromatic object glass two eyepieces, &c., with portable stand and pillar stand with jointed legs. Particulars with diagram gratis. Testimonials may be seen.

Manufactory, 38, Hatton-garden, Holborn. Where a small pocket telescope.

A VALUABLE INVENTION.—A NEW BAROMETER, with Compass, the size of a Geneva watch, the most compact Instrument ever invented, portable, gives the heights of mountains, direction of winds, and position of place, from A to Z.—NEGRETTI and ZAMBRA, 63, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

SPECTACLES.—The patent TINTED SPECTACLES are patronised by the majority of the nobility, gentry, and clergy throughout the United Kingdom, and are recommended by the most eminent oculists and scientific writers. The adaptation of spectacles to imperfect vision, by experienced persons, is indeed, of vital importance, as many of the ills to which the human organs of vision are liable arise from the bench only.—S. and S. SOLOMONS, 39, Sackville-street, Piccadilly. Opposite the York Hotel.

OPERA, RACE, FIELD, and general outdoor Day and Night Waistcoat-pocket RECOGNITIONS and Night Glasses, of extraordinary power, for the Theatre, Race-course, Field,

NEW MUSIC.

TBREELL'S WAVING LILY BELLS, Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TBREELL'S LA VOIX CELESTE. Reverie Nocturne pour Piano. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TBREELL'S LA BELLE MARIETTE. Valse Brillant pour Piano. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TBREELL'S LA PRIÈRE D'UNE MÈRE. Reverie pour Piano. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TBREELL'S THE ANGELS' HARP. Rhapsodie for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S ROYAL WEDDING MARCH, for the Pianoforte, specially illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NATIONAL MELODIES FOR THE PIANOFORTE.
No. 1. "The March of the Men of Harlech." Price 3s.
2. "Poor Mary Ann." [At Full Length.] Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S SEMILAMIDE. Grand Fantasia, for the Pianoforte, on the favourite Favourite Opera, for the Pianoforte, on the popular Cavatina. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASANIELLO.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia for the Pianoforte on Airs from the charming Opera. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S PRINCESS OF WALES. A Fantasia on Danish Melodies for the Pianoforte. Beautifully illustrated with a new Photograph of her Royal Highness the Princess Alexandra. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S PRINCE OF WALES: a Fantasia on the Danish National Melodies, for the Pianoforte, performed by Miss Arabella Goddard. Price 4s. Illustrated with a Photograph of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales by Mayall and Coloured Portrait of Parliament-street. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FALLEN LEAVES. Twelve short Pieces for the Pianoforte by the charming Composer. In three Books. Price 3s. each. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NAVA'S DANISH NATIONAL SONG and HYMN. Arranged for the Pianoforte. Beautifully illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE EDITION for the PIANOFORTE. The best, the newest, and cheapest of all Instruction Books, containing nearly 200 pages of pianoforte music, with the most popular themes as progressive exercises. Sixty pages full, price 2s., post free. N.B. A list of Brinley Richards' Popular Pieces will be sent on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' GRANITA. This popular Song arranged as a Valse for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. The Spanish Ballad arranged as an easy and effective drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' GOD SAVE THE QUEEN. "As a drawing-room piece, we are disposed to think that Mr. Brinley Richards has produced the most exhaustive performance."—Review. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S PRINCE OF WALES'S MARCH. A new Edition. Beautifully illustrated with Portrait (in Colours) of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales by BAXTER. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S SOLDIER'S POLKA. A new Edition of this splendid Polka is just published, with Portrait of the Royal Bridegroom and the Duke of Cambridge by BRANDARD, in Colours. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN WALTZ. Founded on the favourite Song of "Kathleen Mavourneen." Price 3s. Illustrated with Portrait of Miss Dolby, by BRANDARD; Duet, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERTS WEST-END POLKA. A new Edition of this charming Polka, splendidly illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S WEDDING QUADRILLES on the most admired MINSTRELS' MELODIES. 10th Edition of this very popular set. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S ERIN-GO-BRAGH QUADRILLE. A new Quadrille on the universally favourite Irish Melodies. Beautifully illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE RAGE OF VIENNA.—POPULAR FOREIGN WALTZES, &c.—
No. 1. Strauss' Grüsse aus Wien .. .. 4s.
2. Strauss's Wiener Bürger Walzer .. .. 4s.
3. Strauss's Wiener Carneval Walzer .. .. 4s.
4. Strauss's Fortuna Ball Walzer .. .. 4s.
5. Strauss's Good Old Times Waltzes .. .. 4s.
6. Strauss's Die Bayadere Tanze Polka Mazurka .. 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

EFFIE DEANS QUADRILLE, on favourite Scotch melodies. By LAFLEUR. Illustrated with a Photograph of Mrs. Beckstein as Effie Deans, and Miss Oliver as Madge Wildfire. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DENMARK QUADRILLE. Dedicated, by Special Permission, to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Composed on Danish National Melodies. By D. GODFREY, Jun., Grenadier Guards. Illustrated with a Photograph of H.R.H. the Princess Alexandra. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW and IMPORTANT WORK for the HARMONIUM, just published ROSSINI'S STABAT MATER, arranged expressly for the Harmonium, with the words carefully selected and marked by Dr. RIMBAULT. Bound in limp cloth and gilt. Price 7s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S MONTHLY COMPANION for the SMALL HARMONIUM, with or without the Pedals, consisting of Original Compositions and Arrangements of the most fashionable Dance Music, edited expressly for this publication by Dr. RIMBAULT. Nos. 1 and 2 are ready. Price 1s. each. Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW CANTATAS SOON READY.

A WILD, WET NIGHT. Composed by BINACE GREGSON, and sung by Miss Palmer with great success. Price 3s. 6d. MUTZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE HOUR, by HENRY SMART. "This new and effective Song is within the reach of every good singer." Price 3s. 6d. MUTZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

VIRGINIA GABRIELL'S "DREAMLAND."

SLUMBER, MINE OWN. In G and in E flat. Price 3s. 6d. MUTZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SLUMBER, MINE OWN. Transcription for the Piano of this popular Song. By W. KUHE. Price 3s. MUTZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

AUGENER and CO.'S Universal Circulating Musical Library exchanges 2,000 Guinea Works. Forms and Regulations sent post free on application. Two guineas per annum. Country subscriptions, Two guineas.—London: 86, Newgate-street; and 12, Tottenham-court-road. Brighton: 1, Bye-road.

NEW MUSIC.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD'S MUSIC CIRCULATING LIBRARY for Town and Country. Terms—Two, Three, and Four Guineas per Annum.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD undertake the PUBLICATION of COMPOSITIONS for the AUTHOR.

HALF-PRICE. ALL PULL-PRICED Music sent post free at the marked price by CRAMER BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

NICCOLO DE' LAPI'S New Opera, by Signor SCHIRA'S New Opera, has been produced at Her Majesty's Theatre with the greatest success, and is now published by CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street; and may be had of all Musicsellers.

NICCOLO DE' LAPI. VOCAL MUSIC.
"Qual dolce ti volea." Song by Mme. Lemaire 4 0
"O Lumbertes' Querriere." Song by Mme. Trebelli, Signori Gassier and Tagliafico 3 0
"Ah cupido, mondo infido." Song by Signor Gassier .. 3 0
"Il mondo non fa pietà." Song 3 0
"La notte bruna sparia." Song by Signor Gassier 3 0
"Intagalio." Air and Chorus. Sung by Signor Gassier .. 3 0
"Ah, non lasciarmi." Duet 4 0
"A mondo non fa pietà." Quartet and Chorus 4 0
May 11. "Very bright, sparkling, and pretty."—Times, May 11.
"Qual dolce ti volea." Air for Violin and Pianoforte .. 3 0
"Le Serenate." Air for Violoncello and Pianoforte 3 0
"Il primo amore." Air for Violoncello and Pianoforte .. 3 0
"A charming and quite original melody."—Times, May 11.
"Tirata amore." Song 3 0
"O, speranza." Song 3 0
"Ah, pallet." Song 3 0
PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
W. H. Callcott's Book of Airs. Duet 0 0
Ditto 0 0
E. F. Rimbault's Arrangement of the Overture 0 0
Ditto 0 0
Brinley Richards' Arrangement of Signor Schira's favourite Romanza, "O speranza" 3 0
A. Reed's Lucchesi Waltz 4 0
Performed at the Opening Concert.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

FARFALLETTA.—Signor ARDITI'S New MAZURKA, as sung by Mlle. Titiens, Mme. Lemaire, and Mlle. Parepa, introduced in the new ballet of "Farfalletta," danced by Mlle. Rosina Mazurka. Price 3s. Illustrated title-page for the Pianoforte, 3s. CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

CIRO PINSUTI.

ROSINA MAZURKA. Sung by Mdme. Rudolfo Bellio in "The Secret Service," and encored every night. Price 3s.—CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

JACQUOT'S SUMENTAL PIANOFORTE Albums (op. 60) .. .. .. 4s. each.
"Le Parfum." Morceau de Salon (op. 61) .. .. .. 4s.
"Bolero." Morceau de Salon .. .. 3s.
"Zarah." Valse .. .. 3s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ENGLISH SONGS, &c.
Birds from the South .. .. Sainton-Dolby .. 3s. 0d.
Her parkway stone with flowers .. .. Wrighton .. 3s. 0d.
Ever and Always .. .. .. Wrighton .. 3s. 0d.
Always fair? .. .. Virginia Gabriell .. 3s. 0d.
I come from the beautiful Rhine .. .. T. Mott .. 3s. 0d.
Lady Mabel .. .. Stella Gabriel .. 3s. 0d.
Shades of evening close around .. .. Stella Gabriel .. 3s. 0d.
Ah, non lasciarmi .. .. .. A. Mellon .. 3s. 0d.
Since white plumes .. .. .. Mrs. Mellon .. 3s. 0d.
Spinning-wheel .. .. Henry Smart .. 3s. 0d.
The Secret .. .. Henry Smart .. 3s. 0d.
When first the bells .. .. .. Sidney Pratten .. 3s. 0d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ITALIAN, &c., SONGS.
Qui Amor .. .. Arditi .. 3s. 0d.
Crepa Ah! .. .. Arditi .. 3s. 0d.
Gli Angeli (Italian version by G. Linley) .. .. F. Lablache .. 3s. 0d.
Gall dolci cose .. .. .. F. Lablache .. 3s. 0d.
La Canzone (song by Mdme. Alboni) .. .. G. F. Goldberg .. 3s. 0d.
Le Farfalletta (song by Mdme. Alboni) .. .. Arditi .. 3s. 0d.
Fortuna Bimpostura (song by Mdme. Sedlatzek) .. .. Arditi .. 3s. 0d.
Il Bacio (Italian version by Mdme. Sedlatzek) .. .. L. Badia .. 3s. 0d.
Il Primo Amore (Italian version by Mdme. Sedlatzek) .. .. L. Badia .. 3s. 0d.
Senza complimenti (song by Mdme. Bellio) .. .. L. Badia .. 3s. 0d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

G. GRETTON'S PIANOFORTE WORKS, Rede and Hummel, for Three Hands, 4s. 6. Fantasias, Airs, Duets, Trios, Quartets, Quintets, Sextets, Septets, Octets, Nonets, and Dectets, for Pianoforte, Violin, Violoncello, Double Bass, Flute, Cornet, Clarionet, Bassoon, Horn, and Trombone. Lists free. CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

NOTICE.—HALF-PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage-stamps. CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street, W.

HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

ANOTHER GREAT SUCCESS.
COOTE'S BOUQUET OF GEMS. Price 3s. The best Galop of the Day.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Introducing the Danish National Air,
COOTE'S PRINCESS ALEXANDRA VALSE. Illustrated with a Beautiful Portrait in Colours, respectfully inscribed to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

The Latest Excitement.
COOTE'S FAIRY POLKA. Illustrated, Price 3s. Solo or Duet. One of the Composer's happiest ideas, speaking and dancing.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-st.

COOTE'S Cure of Laziness and Cure of Lassez are COOTE'S CURE LANCERS. Price 4s. Most interesting.—The Times. "Mr. Coote's Cure Lancers are very fine."—Morning Post. "The Cure," and other popular Airs. A real dance set. No music required. Illustrated in Colours. Always redemanded.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S VILLAGE BELLS POLKA. Price 3s. Solo or Duet. "Mr. Coote's Village Bells will retain its popularity the celebrated "Great Eastern," by the same Composer. HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Continued Success.
TINNEY'S SONG OF THE WOOD VALSE. Price 3s. Solo or Duet. Performed by all the Bands in the United Kingdom.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

BUCKEYE'S BEAUTIFUL SONG.
COME WHERE THE MOONBEAMS LINGER. Price 3s. A beautiful Song, with words and music of Lamartine, and bids fair to rival in popularity the pretty Song, "Lead by and the roses fade." Price 3s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW BALLAD.
SIGHING FOR THEE, by F. BUCKLEY, price 3s. 6d., is exceedingly pretty. HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SUNG BY WARWOLD, ALWAYS REDEMANDED,
I WAIT TO HEAR THY SWEET GOOD NIGHT. Serenade. Price 3s. Solo or Duet. HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

WALTER MACFARREN'S ALPINE ROSE, 3s 6d. DAY BREAM, 3s. 6d. LA DANUBE GALOP, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

As invisible Morpheus.
KUHE'S 24 VOCAL EXERCISES. Price 3s. 6d. The most favourite pieces by this celebrated composer.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE HON. ALFRED STOURTON'S NEW SONG, "THE SPELL OF THY BEAUTY," transcribed for the Pianoforte. By M. KUHE. Price 3s.
A most effective transcription of this charming song.—Morning Post.
COCK, HUTCHINGS, and CO., 63 and 65, New Bond-street, London, and can be had of all Musicsellers throughout the country.

THE BROKEN FLOWER. New Song, Composed by the Hon. ALFRED STOURTON. Price 3s. 6d. LAMBORN COCK, HUTCHINGS, and CO., 63, New Bond-street.

SIMS REEVES'S NEWEST SONGS, "Blumenblatt's" Message." 3s. "Blumenblatt's" Good-morrow. Love, Good-morrow." 3s. London: DUNCAN DAVISON, 244, Regent-street.

NEW MUSIC.

CLARIBEL'S SONGS.—"CLARIBEL" is the new Ballad Composer. In her publications, by a lady well known in society, and highly distinguished as an accomplished musician. She has given to the public a number of vocal pieces, all marked by literary taste in the choice of the poetry, the gift of melody, and the refinement of style in the musical set."—The Times.

CLARIBEL.—JANET'S CHOICE and JANET'S BRIDAL. Two songs sung by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby and Miss Poynter. Price 3s. each. Many thousands have been sold of these ballads. HOPWOOD and CREW, Hollis-street.

CLARIBEL.—FIVE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING. The most popular of all this Author's songs. Sung in the Provinces by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby. Price 3s. BOOSEY and SONS, Hollis-street.

CLARIBEL.—THE TWO NESTS. A beautiful little song of domestic scenes. Very popular. Illustrated by the Author. Price 3s. BOOSEY and SONS, Hollis-street.

CLARIBEL.—YOU AND I. Sung with immense success by Sims Reeves. The most popular tenor song of the year. Price 3s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Hollis-street.

BOOSEYS' MUSICAL LIBRARY.—Every subscriber at Two Guineas receives a splendid bound Volume containing Fifty-two Pieces of Music, or Fifty-two Numbers, value Fifty-two Shillings. Prospectuses and Catalogues of Duplicates have the use of four pieces. Full particulars from 28, Hollis-street.

BOOSEYS' CHEAP VOCAL OPERAS, complete for Voice and Pianoforte, all with English words, and the whole Dialogue. Price 1s. each, in cloth volumes. The cheapest edition published in any country.
Il Barbiere .. 1s. 0d. | Semiramide .. 1s. 0d. | Zampa .. 1s. 0d.
Norma .. 1s. 0d. | Lucia .. 1s. 0d. | Puritani .. 1s. 0d.
Sonnambula .. 1s. 0d. | Il Barbiere .. 1s. 0d. | Faust .. 1s. 0d.
Don Pasquale .. 1s. 0d. | Martha .. 1s. 0d. | Trovatore .. 1s. 0d.
Linda .. 1s. 0d. | Don Juan .. 1s. 0d. | Figaro .. 1s. 0d.

THALBERG'S ART OF SINGING ILLUSTRATED, adapted to the Voice. The Favourite Numbers as performed at the Authentic Concerts. With Introductions and Notes by the Composer. Price 2s. 6d. each. Invaluable Work for Students of Singing. Complete. Price 2s. 6d. BOOSEY and SONS, Hollis-street.

VIRGINIA GABRIELL'S NEWEST SONGS.
THE ROSES. Words by WILLIAM MOTHY; and HUSH! LIE STILL, Shadow Song. Words by H. SAINTON. Each post-free for 19 stamps from EVANS and CO., 77, Baker-street, Portman-square, W., and all Musicsellers.

ENGLAND'S PRAYER FOR THE PRINCE OF WALES'S WEDDING, adapted to the Music of National Anthem. For Four Voices. By E. STERLING (Authoress of "All around the Old Church Tower"). Price 2 stamps; Half Music Size, free for 7 stamps. EVANS and CO., 77, Baker-street, Portman-square.

BOOSEYS' MINIATURE PIANOFORTE, price 17 guineas, in walnut or mahogany.—"We have had occasion to speak in terms of commendation of the Pianofortes made by Boosey and Sons, which combine quality and compass in a small space, and are therefore well adapted for the drawing-room. It combines all the modern improvements, and is, we believe, the most compact music with the virtue of a full-grown piano. It has a rich, brilliant, and sympathetic quality of tone, which extends to the top-note; and the whole mechanism of the instrument seems to be of the best description. The touch, also, which has ever before been presented to the public."—Morning Advertiser, Thursday, Feb. 26, 1863. This Piano is well adapted for the cottage of a ship, or for a limited space. BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Hollis-street, London.

EVANS' PEDAL ATTACHMENT (Tweedal), price 21 guineas, converts any Harmonium or Organ into a Pianoforte, and is the best and cheapest Pedal ever made. Can be had of all Musicsellers. Full particulars, with Testimonials, sent to which the attachment may be applied requires no alteration whatever. The value of this Pedal to every owner of a harmonium requires no comment. An illustrated prospectus may be had upon application to EVANS and CHILDS, 24, Hollis-street, Oxford-street, London, W.

EVANS'S ENGLISH HARMONIUMS. Exhibition Prize Medal. These Instruments are universally allowed to be the best and cheapest made. Lists of prices free. BOOSEY and CHILD, 24, Hollis-street, London.

CASE'S ENGLISH CONCERTINAS. These well-known Instruments are manufactured with the best materials and highest skill, and, for speed, a great quality of tone, and certain facility of execution, are unrivalled. BOOSEY and CHING, Manufacturers, 24, Hollis-street.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY, 201, Regent-street. The largest in Europe.
Every Instrument in this Gallery is at least equal to the description given of it. Inferior Instruments are carefully excluded from this Gallery.
Pianofortes for Sale, Hire, English, Continental, and American Manufacturers, for Sale or Hire.

EASY TERMS OF PURCHASE.—CRAMER BEALE, and WOOD'S Pianofortes with Cross Stretched Strings, PAY for a PIANOFORTE by INSTALMENTS. Terms may be had on application. CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S ENGLISH PIANETTE, 22 Guineas. Cramer and Co. manufacture this capital small Pianoforte, with Trichord Treble, Check Action, Compass from Three Octaves to F in Alt, and Full Seven Octaves in Walnut or Rosewood case, as is polished and elegant as any Piano in the Gallery. The tone is bright, pure, and sympathetic, and the touch elastic and responsive, and is the best and most effective. This description of Pianoforte is strongly recommended as an elegant drawing-room Piano of good quality of wood, and general characteristic which have gained for it universal popularity. Cramer, Beale, and Wood's Pianofortes can be made to order, in any variety of woods, at moderate prices.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES.—A great variety by Broadwood, Collard, Collard, and Erard, nearly equal to new, at £25, £30, £40, and £45. CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S HARMONIUMS, as manufactured by the inventor of the instrument M. Debain, of Paris, received the Prize Medal and the Legion of Honour. Testimonials of its superiority has been innumerably published.
Harmonium, with two rows of vibrators .. .. £ 8 0 0
Ditto, three rows 11 11 0
Ditto, three stops 13 13 0
Ditto, four stops 15 15 0
Ditto, five stops 18 18 0
Ditto, six stops 21 0 0
Ditto, seven stops 23 0 0
Ditto, eight stops 25 0 0
Ditto, with two rows of vibrators, and three stops and knee action 15 15 0
Ditto, four stops 18 18 0
Ditto, five stops 21 0 0
Ditto, six stops 23 0 0
Ditto, seven stops 25 0 0
Ditto, eight stops 27 0 0
WITH PEDALBOARD.
11. Harmonium, one row 20 10 0
12. Ditto, two rows 23 0 0
13. Ditto, two rows and knee action 25 0 0
14. Ditto, three rows 27 0 0
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD.

CRAMER'S CONCERTINAS—PRIZE MEDAL PRIZE, 1851, 1855, and 18 guineas. 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S CORNETS, manufactured by J. R. DALLMEYER, receiver of twenty-three medals. Cramer and Co. are now the sole Agents in London for the sale of R. Boosey's well-known Brass Instruments, recommended for Bands purchased. 201, Regent-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO is the only Pianino to which the Prize Medal was awarded.—A very elegant Pianoforte, of small size, the full compass, check action, and most perfect touch, admirably adapted to small rooms, yachts, boudoirs, &c. Warranted to keep in tune, and to stand any climate. Pianofortes with check action and all the latest improvements for SALE or HIRE.
Price, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 32 and 35 guineas. A great variety may be seen at CHAPPELL and CO.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S NEW TWENTY-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in 7 octaves, by French workmanship of the best description. This Instrument has been made by the first pianoforte maker in France, expressly built with this view of producing a really superior Instrument at the lowest price ever offered. It has the very best check action, the full compass (it is made in a handsome rosewood case, with all the latest improvements, and is guaranteed as well as a perfectly satisfactory pianoforte. Messrs. Chappell and Co. strongly recommend this Pianoforte as superior in all respects to second-hand or other cheap instruments. No advantage is derived in practising on a good pianoforte, with a perfect touch, will be found of immense service to the learner. Price 20 guineas. Packed free for the country. Messrs. Chappell and Co. have selected Erard as a fashionable and elegant cabinet pianoforte, in rosewood, or walnut, 50 guineas.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and ERARD. The best Pianofortes of every description, including all the latest improvements, may be obtained on the Three Years' System, and (after a limited trial) with option of purchase; at the new Showrooms of CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 50 guineas in rosewood; or in walnut, with Trichord Treble, Check Action, and Compass from C to C in alt. This Instrument is the result of a long study and experience, by a first-class musician to endure the greatest amount of wear, and to stand perfectly in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description, the tone is round, full, and rich; and the power equal to that of a Pianoforte of the usual size. Messrs. Chappell and Co. have made this Pianoforte a special study, and have had it manufactured in France, England at the same prices. Every instrument will be warranted, and (if desired) exchanged within three months for a pianoforte. Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ERARD'S NEW BOUDOIR GRAND PIANOFORTE, in rosewood case, with the full compass of seven octaves, and the latest improvements, can be hired, with the option of purchase, at CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES. CHAPPELL and CO. have a large Stock of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, COLLARD, ERARD, &c., &c., at very reduced prices. Also, new Instruments of every description, for Sale or Hire, on the Three Years' System. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The largest Stock in London, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c., for Sale or Hire on the Three Years' System. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S DRAWING-ROOM MODEL HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 50 guineas, in rosewood case. Messrs. Chappell and Co. have the sole agency of Pianofortes and Harmoniums by Alexandre.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM with two rows of vibrators, and three stops, in handsome oak case. These instruments are lower in price and superior to all other cheap harmoniums.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS, by ALEXANDRE, in rosewood and walnut, as good as new, at greatly-reduced prices, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S PRIZE EXHIBITION MODEL HARMONIUM, for the Drawing-room, in a case of rosewood, and Venetian swell, worked by the heel of the right foot. Price 50 guineas. Messrs. Chappell and Co. have the sole agency of Alexandre's Pianofortes and Harmoniums.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE SICCAMA FLUTE.—Old System of Fingering, with important improvements.—These celebrated Instruments, of perfect accuracy of intonation, are supplied from 4 to 14 guineas, by S. ARTHUR CHAPPELL, 201, Regent-street, where all the celebrated flutes may be obtained.

ANTOINE COURTOIS' CORNETS-à-PISTONS.—These celebrated Instruments, used by every principal performer, are supplied by S. ARTHUR CHAPPELL, 201, Regent-street, from whom price-lists and drawings may be obtained.

GARDNERS' £22 2s. DINNER SERVICES, for the convenience of persons of moderate expenditure. Breakfast, dessert, tea, and table services in equal variety, at the same proportionate reduction. Purchasers are requested to visit our wines, from 24s. per doz. Sauces. 201, Regent-street, and 453, West Strand. GARDNERS', Purveyors to Her Majesty's Court, Dining-room, four-feet-nine Mahogany Telescope Table, 4 end 3, Pembroke-street (adjoining), London. Established 1792.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, TEA, and TABLE SERVICES, in every variety of style and good pattern. Also a beautiful variety of every description of Cut Glass, Ornamental China, and Glass Ware, suitable for wedding parties furnishing to choose from, on superior taste—low prices. GARDNERS', 453, West Strand. Established 1760.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the Best.—The largest, most exclusive, and cheapest assortment in London. Moderator Lamps, 5s. 6d.; Palmer's Candles, 6d. per lb.; Sperm Candles, 9d. per lb.; Finest Colza Oil, 4s. per gallon. 2l. and 3 Guinea Ivy spotted-glass Dessert Services, 21s. Glass Dessert Services, 10s. 6d. per dozen. Tortoise-shell Tea Trays, 7s. 6d. GARDNERS', 453, West Strand. Established 1760.

HANDSOME BRASS and IRON BEDSTEADS, with Bed and Shower complete, in large assortment of Brass Bedsteads, suitable both for home use and for Hotels, Lodging-houses, &c., with Bedding of every description, and elegantly-japanned Plain Iron Bedsteads for servants; every article requisite for furnishing. Handsome Chintz Furniture Draperies, Blankets, Quilts, Sheets, Pillows, and Bolsters, all fitted, and Bedding and Furniture complete, as well as every description of Bedroom Furniture.—Heal and Son, 196, Tottenham-court-road, London, W.

OLD MATTRESSES CLEANED and RENOVATED by Steam and Hot Air Process. Lists of prices on application to HEAL and SON, 196, Tottenham-court-road, London, W.

STAINED DEAL GOTHIC BEDROOM FURNITURE, in Pine, Polished and Stained, specially suited for bedroom furniture to correspond in design with the Gothic Bedsteads manufactured by Heal and Son. Bedroom Chairs, Washstands, and a complete suite of BEDROOM FURNITURE of STAINED DEAL, in Pine, Polished and Stained, specially suited for bedroom furniture to correspond in design with the Gothic Bedsteads manufactured by Heal and Son. Bedroom Chairs, Washstands, and moderate in price.—Heal and Son, Bedstead, Bedding, and Bedroom Furniture Manufacturers, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W. Established 1778.

HEAL and SON'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing designs and prices of 100 BEDSTEADS, sent free by post.—Heal and Son, Bedstead, Bedding, and Bedroom Furniture Manufacturers, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

LE SOMMIER ÉLASTIQUE PORTATIF. The foundation of all luxurious repose. Requires no stuffing, and is made in three separate parts, and is therefore light and portable; it is recommended by the faculty as the most healthy bed, and is the easiest hammock made. Lists of Prices on application to Heal and Son, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

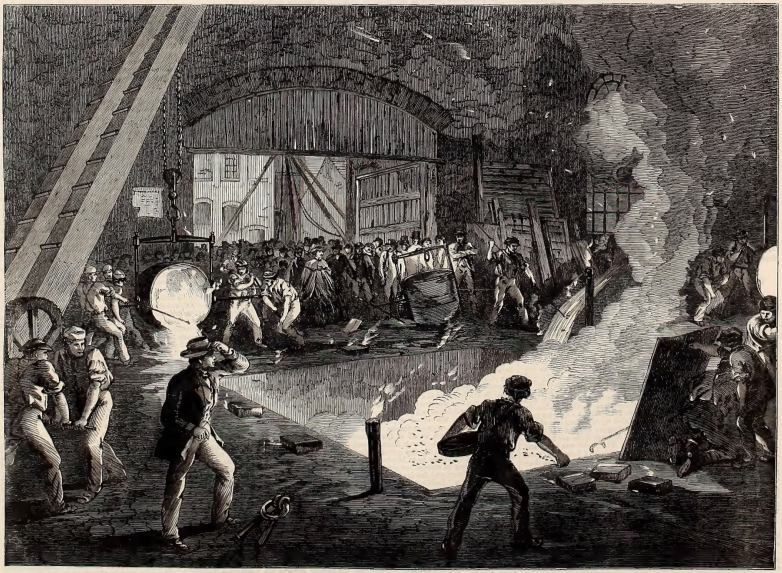
J. MAPLE and CO.'S BEDSTEAD, in Wood, Iron, Brass, and Steel, with Furniture and bedding complete, of the true Arab Bedstead, 36, Tottenham-court-road.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS FURNITURE.
The Parisian Couch .. .. 2 guineas.
The Prince of Wales Couch .. .. .. 14 guineas.
The Prince's Chair .. .. 3 guineas.
The Eugénie Easy Chair .. .. 5 guineas.
The Prince's Easy Chair .. .. 5 guineas.
Extensive Show-rooms, 36, Tottenham-court-road.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing the prices of every article required for completely furnishing a house of any class, post-free. This is the largest and most convenient furnishing establishment in the world.—36, Tottenham-court-road.

CARPETS.—TEN THOUSAND PIECES of Manufactures BRUSSELS, at 3s. 6d. per yard. J. MAPLE and CO., 142, Tottenham-court-road.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS TO THE 107TH REGIMENT (FIRST BATTALION) AT DUBLIN.—SEE PAGE 546.



CASTING A MONSTER ANVIL BLOCK (TO BE USED IN THE MANUFACTURE OF WHITWORTH GUNS) AT THE MIDLAND WORKS, SHEFFIELD.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA.

FEDERAL ATTACK ON THE HARBOUR DEFENCES OF CHARLESTON.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

Charleston, April 9.

At length the long expected moment arrives. Nine Federal ironclads are seen off the Bar, accompanied by twenty-four wooden vessels of war, while others are coming up in the distance. A great number of transports having troops on board are in the mouth of the "Stono" River, and 6000 Federal soldiers have been already landed on "Cole's" Island. Their object is to take the land defences of Charleston in the flank, while the fleet make an effort to force a passage past the forts. Should they succeed, the city of Charleston is lost, and at the mercy of the North, and the cause, which has sustained so many disappointments and repulses, will receive a great encouragement. But I have every faith in the result of the contest. Charleston for two years at any time have the Confederates been more determined to do or die than they express themselves now. Every preparation has been made, every appliance pressed into service, and General Ripley, the Brigadier commanding, to give the foe a warm reception; and, surrounded as he is, apparently by obstacles that appear insurmountable, he has said success seem perfectly certain. The land-fight, his real and success seem perfectly certain. The land-fight, his real and success seem perfectly certain. The land-fight, his real and tinent. This style aims at almost the divinity of sculpture—in the drawing and modelling of the nude and in the treatment of the drapery. Colour, handling, and texture are considered as inclinings to sensuousness or materialism, and nothing is sacrificed to mere picturesqueness. There is great prejudice against the style among English artists, and it is much decried by critics; but when adopted by a true artist (and it is seen to an unfair advantage in other hands) it is capable of the noblest results. And we cannot help regretting that it is not pursued by more of our painters, for it would certainly be useful as a protest against much of the vulgarity and sensationalism of the English school, to which it has been against the simply and conventional brushwork.

Mr. Gullick contributes one of the very few scriptural subjects in the exhibition—a picture illustrating the text from St. Luke, "And Peter went out and wept bitterly" (430). With great earnestness, and much sympathy, there is deep expression of remorse of technical immaturity, and the successful figure of the cock in the head of Peter, and especially expressive. Mr. Haylior, whose (particularly) clever works are very suggestive, sends a picture from Cromwellian "Practical Joke" we recently engraved, but whose picture does not seem to us to answer to the subject. The same as that of a picture by Mr. W. Field in the British Institution) is founded on the story of the three officers condemned to death, who were pardoned by Cromwell to draw lots which one of the three should die for the rest. The expression, at the critical moment when the prize is drawn, of the one who leaves the lots for them takes out the papers, or supposes by child who leaves the lots for them takes out the papers, or supposes by child who leaves the lots for them takes out the papers, or supposes by child

THE SULTAN ENTERING THE CITADEL OF CAIRO.—FROM A SKETCH BY MR. F. GEORGE.

THE SULTAN'S PROGRESS THROUGH CAIRO.—FROM A SKETCH BY MR. F. GEORGE.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

COLUMN FOR THE CURIOUS.

By the opening of the Exhibition of the Royal Academy we are reminded of the existence of a relic of considerable interest in connection with the history of the foundation. Such is the chair in which, ninety-five years since, Sir Joshua Reynolds took his seat as the first President of the Royal Academy of Arts, at their first place of meeting, in Pall-mall. It will be recollected that Reynolds reigned paramount at the Academy until the feud through Fuseli having elected Academician over Romney, to whose behalf the President had been over zealous. Sir Joshua then quitted the chair deeply offended, and wrote a cold and courteous farewell, which Romney endeavoured to soothe him: and the King, through Sir William Chambers, conveyed the Royal wish that Sir Joshua would continue president. He returned, and resumed the chair, but only to resign it with more kindly feeling, after an occupation altogether of twenty-one years. He last appeared in the Academy on Dec. 10, 1790. During his lectures great crash was heard, and the company, fearing that the building was about to come down, rushed towards the door. It was found, however, all sided and unmoved in his chair. The floor, which had only sunk a little, was soon supported, the company resumed their seats, and the President recommenced his discourse with the most perfect composure. He afterwards remarked that, if the floor had fallen, the whole company must have been killed, and the arts in Britain, as a consequence, thrown back two hundred years. Sir Joshua concluded his discourse with these emphatic words: "Speaking of Michael Angelo, he said:—'I feel a self congratulation in knowing myself capable of such sensations as he intended to excite. I say this without vanity, that these discourses bear testimony to my admiration of that truly divine man; and I should desire that the last words which I should pronounce in this academy may be from his place might be the name of—Michael Angelo." As Sir Joshua left the chair, Burke went up to him and said,

THE ORIGINAL PRESIDENTIAL CHAIR OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.

The angel ended, and in Adam's ear
So sweet a salutation sent, that waked
Thought him still speaking, still stood fix'd to hear.

The chair has been disused for the last three years, and is now preserved in the Academy with remarkable care as a relic.

Talking of chairs, at the recent sale of the effects of Lady Olivia Sparrow, at Henbrigg, Huntingdonshire, two ivory inlaid chairs, taken by Warren Hastings at the time he was Governor-General of India, were sold for £410. Mr. Hastings sent them together as chairs to England. Two of them went into the possession of Princess Charlotte; after her death and the acceptance of the throne of Belgium by her husband, they were sold to Lord William Bentinck, and were presented by his Lordship to the late Lady Olivia Sparrow. The other four chairs are in the possession of the Marquis of Hertford and Baron Rothschild.

The study of ornamentation in metal has, of late years, been a subject of considerable interest in association with the improved taste of our art-manufactures. The late exhibition at Stevens's Auction Rooms, Bond-street, and has only been exceeded by the metal-work in the Loan Collection at South Kensington, which, it should be recollected, was assembled under advantages altogether unprecedented. The subject is of paramount importance to our archæologists, and at the meeting of the London, Middlesex, and Surrey Archæological Society, on the 6th inst., some very interesting observations were made by Mr. Octavius Morgan on mediæval locks, ornamental keys, &c., and with the advantage of illustrative drawings. Of Saxon work we possess little; but Mr. Bailey referred to a MS in the British Museum which contains such curious information regarding the locks of Saxon work of that period, when the scroll or volute predominated:—the ironwork of the principal door of Stapleford Church, Lincolnshire, is of this kind, and fish, and hinges with serpents' and dragons' heads, resemble Roman work, but the Norman ironwork, characterised by the use of bars and horizontal bar hinges. In the thirteenth century, when the doors were covered with ironwork, the closing rings were as ornamental as the hinges, and in many instances forming the nucleus of the design. In the fourteenth century the ironwork became more elaborate in accordance with the architecture, as in the fine door of St. Saviour's Church, Dartmouth. A splendid collection of locks was furnished by Mr. C. D. Hardwick, whose taste and judgment are well exemplified throughout this architect's new hall and library in Lincoln's Inn. The locks of the fifteenth century work are very characteristic. The Elizabethan ironwork was remarkable for the foreign style of its ornamentation, especially in its scroll foliage and fleur-de-lis. Next, the iron was stamped and chased with a die, and brought up by hammering. The railings of Dean Wren's monument, in Canterbury Cathedral, are fine specimens of this period. Sir Christopher Wren greatly improved the working in iron of his time. His London churches abound with examples of graceful wreaths and pendental designs and sword-irons. Mr. Bailey well observes:—"Had Wren only produced the ironwork at Hampton Court he would well deserve his celebrity, but the City churches and City halls the examples are numerous." Mr. Bailey added an interesting fact that, from some correspondence and papers of Huntingdon Shaw, of Nottingham, is proved to have been the maker of the fine Nottingham Court gates, from Wren's design. A drawing was shown of some curious wrought-iron work existing on a staircase in a house in Lincoln's-inn-fields; and Mr. Bailey in conclusion, exhibited a series of German wrought-iron keys, the finest being the diploma-work of an apprentice: it bears an inscription in German verse, with the date 1734. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Bailey for his valuable communication.

The study of arms goes with locks. Mr. T. Wright has lately exhibited to the British Archæological Association a Roman pailock, or spring-bolt, and a Spanish lock of about 200 years since, which are models of its operation. Mr. Octavius Morgan has also exhibited and described to the Archæological Institute three remarkably fine steel locks of Nuremberg work of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries: they are etched and engraved with patterns of elegant design; the largest consists of no less than 109 pieces. Mr. Morgan brought also a "scratchbrick," of the last century, and a curious steel fork striking a light with flint, of the sixteenth century.

The Camden Society has just issued a volume which promises abundant interest to the curious in words: it is entitled "Wills from Doctors' Commons," and includes many of memorable persons—members of the Royal family, eminent prelates and noblemen, persons who played important parts during the great civil war; well-known poets, philosophers, and physicians; divines; and, lastly, some distinguished ladies.

The late Mr. Apsley Pellatt was a man of considerable ingenuity in that elegant branch of manufacture—Glass-making—with which his name will ever be honourably associated. To him we are indebted for the new construction of the crystal fountain, volume, entitled "Curiosities of Glassmaking; with Details of the Processes and Productions of Ancient and Modern Continental and Glassmakers," published in 1849. This volume (in the literary portion of which the author was aided by Mr. John Timbs) has already become a scarce book. It contains the experiments of a lifetime unceasingly devoted to the study and practice of the art; and it would be difficult to find a more complete work upon the subject in all its details. It concentrates the information to be found in the works of Neri, Merrett, Kunkell, Blancourt, Loisel, Deschamps, Buttenger, and others; and illustrates their researches certain curiosities of glass manufacture familiar to those practically engaged in glassworks, but comparatively little known to amateurs of the art; the illustrations of the volume being the result of Mr. Pellatt's own experience and investigation. The work has distinction, tastefully printed in colours.

Paris is about to part with one of its "metal-work" localities—a piece of ground upon which were established the government forges and the manufactory of arms when the Kings of France occupied the palaces of St. Paul and of the Tournelles, and which site, up to the other day, retained the name of the Royer Jouvre. It is now being intersected by a new street nearly parallel to the Rue St. Bernard. Another of the quarters of Paris is about to disappear to make way for a new street to be opened in the Faubourg St. Antoine—namely, a large tract of ground which was cultivated by market-gardeners, who supplied that quarter of Paris with vegetables, and who resided there in small thatched cottages, now being removed.

THE SULTAN'S RECENT VISIT TO EGYPT.

THE Turkish squadron, with the Royal yachts, arrived at Alexandria on the morning of the 7th ult. His Majesty the Sultan landed about noon at the Marine Palace, and was received by the Viceroy of Egypt and State dignitaries. For some time past the Egyptian Government had been making great preparations for the reception of the august visitor. No expense was spared to make it as magnificent as possible. The palaces placed at the disposal of his Majesty in Alexandria and Cairo had been re-decorated and furnished in the most gorgeous style, the interiors presenting a spectacle only to be imagined by reading the marvellous stories of the Arabian Nights. The Arsenal gates of the Sultan numbered some 700 persons. Fuad Pacha (Seraskier), with a large Staff, was in attendance upon His Majesty. The Sultan remained two days at Alexandria, visiting all the objects of interest in that place. All the Government offices and the inhabitants, both European and native, vied with each other in doing honour to the occasion. The town was brilliantly illuminated every night. On the 9th the Sultan left by a special train, composed of twenty splendid State carriages, for Cairo, where similar honours awaited him. He spent one day at Hahn Pacha's beautiful Palace of Shoubra, and another at the Pyramids, where he passed nearly three hours in carefully examining every object of interest. He also visited Kalah the ancient fortification erected by the late Viceroy at the apex of the delta, where the Barges traverses the two branches of the Nile, and from which, by the way, the most splendid and pure panorama to be a most formidable work. Our Engravings, on pages 549 and 553, illustrate his Majesty's progress through the streets of Cairo and his arrival at the citadel.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS TO THE 10TH REGIMENT.

On the 8th instant, the first battalion of the 10th Regiment, quartered in the Dublin garrison, was presented with a new set of colours by the Lord Lieutenant. The ceremony took place in the centre of the space in front of the Viceregal demesne, Phœnix Park, known as the "Nine Acres." The battalion has not been in Ireland since 1854, and now has been more distinguished, than the 10th Regiment of Foot. The battalion marched to the ground about three o'clock, and after the Marseillaise had been played by the band, the Lord Lieutenant, attended by a numerous Staff, arrived on the ground. The Lord Lieutenant, Sir Edward Stopford, Colonel Wetherall, G.B., Colonel Knipe, Colonel Mayou, and Colonel Haines, the commanding officers of the Regiment, were received by Major Butler, kept the ground. Troops of the 10th Hussars and 5th Dragoon Guards were also in attendance on the field. The 10th Regiment marched on mounted and unmounted. His Excellency and Staff, followed by private equipages, arrived about twenty minutes to three o'clock, when the troops presented arms. The Lord Lieutenant and Captain W. Moore, A.D.C.'s; Colonel Marshall, Captain M'Kinlay, and Captain Lascelles. His Excellency then proceeded in full uniform, rode up and down the line, having received the usual salute on the occasion. The Lord Lieutenant having formed the line, his Excellency fell back to the position occupied by the new colours, accompanied by the Staff, and Colonel Wetherall, Colonel Haines, Lieutenant Stopford, and ensign of the 10th Regiment. Mr. Oldfield and Mr. Hollingsworth, the junior Ensigns, marched to the front, and received the colours from the hands of drums in the ordinary way. The Rev. H. N. Wheeler, chaplain, then performed the ceremony of consecration, and delivered a short and appropriate speech from the Lord Lieutenant, in which his Excellency narrated the services of the corps and gratifically depicted almost every action in which it had been engaged. The colours were presented at due form to the Ensigns, kneeling, followed by a Royal salute and the National Anthem. Colonel Wetherall, C.B., commanding, then made a speech of much feeling. It was a sad reminiscence which he had to make, for the last time he addressed the corps in Ireland. The Gough intruded the old colours just twenty years ago, only three officers and fourteen men survived to receive the new colours. The battalion marched past in line, the colours were then trooped in the usual way and the troops marched off the ground. Field Marshal Lord Gough was absent, owing to family affliction.

The Caduceus, of 1106 tons, belonging to Messrs. Temperley, of London, sailed from Southampton on the 5th inst. for Constantinople, with 306 officers and men under the command of Dr. William Arthur, surgeon superintendent, assisted by Miss Ellen A. Sellon, as matron.

The Duke of Newcastle, K.G., Minister, has been elected a corresponding member of the Imperial Academy of Sciences of St. Petersburg (Class of Moral and Political Sciences). The Duke is the principal academics of Europe, and is a member of the French Institute.

THE Rev. Sydney Smith Godolphin Osborne, Liverpool-street, London has obtained some particular relative to the vessels which have been built by Messrs. Laird, of Birkenhead, for China. The first vessel that was launched from Birkenhead Ordorne has been forming in this country for the Emperor of China. She is a screw gun-boat, with engines of 90-horse power, which are to be built at her works, measure 150 ft. in length, 26 ft. in breadth, 12 ft. 8 in. in depth, and her draught of water will be 7 ft. 6 in. Her masts, rigging, and general fittings and armament are arranged after the plan of the most approved description of vessels in the British navy. She carries a pair of direct-acting horizontal screw-engines of 80-horse power, for which Messrs. Laird have lately supplied duplicates of these engines to her Majesty's Government. She is to steam 9 knots per hour with ease. The Chinese have also one 68-ft. pivot-gun and four 32-lb. broadsides, while her decks are arranged to receive another gun of the same calibre. The Pearl, another vessel which is armed with one 68-lb. pivot-gun forward; one 32-lb. broadside gun, on the starboard side; and four 32-lb. howitzer, besides her usual boat's guns. The crew consists of about ninety men. Another her trial-trip the speed of the Quangtung, with the two after boilers shut off from working, was seven knots, the engines making 60 revs. At a previous trial, when the vessel was in light trim, she realised a mean speed of over 9 knots per hour. The engines made 80 revolutions, with an indicated horse-power of 70. The Quangtung shipped her powder in the Mersey on Thursday week.—Daily News.

TESTIMONIAL TO R. HUTCHINSON, ESQ., LATE MAYOR OF LIVERPOOL.

We this week give an Engraving of a very handsome piece of plate which has been recently presented by the volunteers of Liverpool to Robert Hutchison, Esq., late Mayor of that town, who during the term of his office had distinguished himself by the hospitality and encouragement which he had shown to the volunteer movement. The plate, which is of the value of three hundred guineas, was subscribed for by all ranks, and designed and executed by Mr. Joseph Mayer, silversmith, of Liverpool. It consists of a covered tazza of silver supported on a stand of tasteful proportions, which rests on a massive pedestal. The whole being about 24 in. in height. The pedestal or base is quadrangular in form, and around the stand are grouped several combinations of military emblems, arranged to represent each branch of the service, and also to form a highly artistic group, so skilfully thrown together as to form a massive and highly interesting composition, from the centre of which springs the support of the tazza. The group referred to consists of piled arms, colours, and ammunition, including a massive field-gun and pile of balls, intrenchment tools, muskets, carbines, and swords, and also cavalry bancers and infantry standards. On each of the four sides are cleverly-modelled figures representative of the cavalry, artillery, engineer, and rifle branches of the volunteer service, the whole executed in frosted silver, the stand and tazza, as well as the cover of the latter, being highly burnished with slight but characteristic ornamentation. A beautifully-modelled "Hibernia" bird, in frosted silver, placed on the centre of the cover, forms an appropriate spot to the general design. Our Engraving is taken from a photograph by Mr. William Keith, of Liverpool.

TESTIMONIAL PRESENTED BY THE VOLUNTEERS TO THE EX-MAYOR OF LIVERPOOL.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of Miss Mary Eyre, late of the Rue du Marecage, Bruges, in Belgium, where she died on the 16th of February last, has been proved in London by her executors, Edward and Henry Eyre, Esqs., the personal property in England being sworn under £20,000. The will bears date December last, and is evident the month following. Her available property and effects she leaves between her nephews and nieces, the children of her brother Edward Eyre, Esq., of Derby, having an interest and claim to the Chandos mortgage moneys depending in the Court of Chancery, directs that, should the suit not be decided in her favour, a sum of £5,000 is to be set aside therefrom to the Right Rev. Lord William Clifford, Bishop of Clifton.

The will of George Thomas Wilgress, late of Stone-house, Pimlico, and Mosley Court, near Wolverhampton, Esq., who died on the 2nd ult., at the residence of his brother-in-law, Thomas Hall Hall, Esq., Q.C., Farthing, and Charles Hall, the executors, was proved under the value of £70,000. To testator's Roslee, Regis. The personalty was sworn under £60,000. To testator's family is of ancient descent, and he inherited Charles, Esq., of Perchmore, was an ancestor of the family of Wilgress, also one ancestor—Sir Thomas Wilgress, Knt., Mayor of Worcester. Mr. Whitgreave was Deputy Lieutenant for Staffordshire, and held the office of High Sheriff for that county, and was a magistrate. He succeeded to the family estates in 1816. He has been thrice married, and died without issue by any of his wives, having entered into a second marriage but a few months since, having entered into a second marriage but a few months since, having entered into a second marriage but a few months since

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

LORD HATHERTON.

The Right Hon. Edward John Littleton, D.C.L. and P.C., Baron Hatherton of Hatherton, in the county of Stafford, a politician and statesman of note and prominence, who died on the 6th inst. at his fine seat, Teddesley Park, Cockedge, Staffordshire, was the only son by his wife Anne Charcroft, daughter of Edward Loxdale, Esq., of Moreton Wallbeare, Shropshire, and Penn, Staffordshire, and was born at Pimlico, Middlesex, on the 19th of January, 1791, the first-born son, fourth and last child of Edward Littleton, Esq., of Hatherton Hall, in the county of Stafford. He was born on the 19th of March, 1791, and was educated at Rugby School and Brasenose College, Oxford, of which Littleton is also a D.C.L. in 1817. He assumed the name of Littleton on succeeding to his grand-uncle Sir Edward's estates in 1812; and he that year entered Parliament as M.P. for Staffordshire. He sat in the House of Commons until 1835, when he was thoroughly in the political career of the Liberal party, and in the preparation of the Reform Bill of 1832 he was at the head of the Parliamentary Boundary Committee, whose report was afterwards adopted with little modification. In 1834 he was appointed Secretary for Ireland, but resigned the secretaryship in the same year, and was made member of the following Melbourne Administration. On May 11, 1838, he was created a Peer with the title of Lord Hatherton, and in 1854 he was made Lieutenant of Staffordshire, which appointment ill-health caused him recently to resign. Lord Hatherton was an extending agriculturist and planter, and greatly respected by public men of all parties. He exercised much charity and hospitality in his county (Staffordshire) and took a great interest in agricultural matters. He was discreetly popular with all who knew him. Lord Hatherton married, first, Dec. 11, 1812, Blanche Mary, offspring of Richard, Marquis Wellesley, K.G., by whom (who died Jan. 4, 1849) he had an only son and three daughters. Of the latter, two were married—Lady Caroline Vanneck to Newark and the present Countess of Cowan. Lord Hatherton married, secondly, July 11, 1850, Caroline, offspring of Sir Charles Arbuthnot, K.C.B., Esq., of Copenthorne, and daughter of Richard Hart, Esq., of Widmerpool, by whom he had no issue. He is succeeded by his only son, Edward Richard, Member of Parliament, who has been M.P. for Staffordshire and Cambridgeshire, and who is Colonel of the 2nd Staffordshire Militia. He was born in 1814, and married, in 1841, Lady Margaret Percy, youngest daughter of George, Earl of Beverley, and has a family of five sons. The Lords Hatherton represent, in the female line, the families of Littleton, Hanbury and Lattelton, Knights and Baronets, of which the celebrated Judge, Sir Thomas Littleton, "the great luminary of the law," and author of the "Treatise on Tenures," had been one the head.

SIR ROBERT BATESON, BART.

Sir Robert Bateson, Bart., of Belvoir Park, Belfast, in the county of Down, who died, after a brief illness, on the 24th ult., at his seat, Belvoir Park, near Belfast, was the grandson of Thomas Bateson, Esq., of Lancashire, and Grace, daughter of Robert Echlin, in the county of Down; and was the eldest son of Thomas Bateson, Esq., by his wife, Elizabeth, youngest daughter of George Loyd, F.R.S., of Tolson Hall, Lancashire. He was born on the 15th of March, 1789, and was created a Baronet on the 18th of December, 1815. He was first returned to Parliament in 1830 for the county of Londonderry; he was re-elected for the same county without opposition in December, 1832; January, 1835; July, 1837; and July, 1841. He retired in May, 1847, and was succeeded in his seat by his eldest son, Robert Bateson, Esq., who was born in September, 1813. Sir Robert Bateson was throughout his long and consistent career known as a firm and uncompromising supporter of Conservative principles. In all relations of life he bore himself as a high-minded and honourable gentleman; and, whether as landlord, friend, or relative, his loss is very generally and sincerely lamented. He married, April 27, 1811, Catherine, youngest daughter of Samuel Dickson, of Ballynagilla, in the county of Limerick, by whom he has five sons and two daughters. His eldest son, Sir Hugh Mackie Bateson, is the wife of Sir Beresford R. M'Adam, Bart.; another son, Thomas Bateson, Esq., is married to the late Captain Jas. M'Clintock, R.N., discoverer of the fate of Sir John Franklin and his party. Sir Robert Bateson is succeeded in the title by his eldest son, Thomas Bateson, Esq., who has sat in Parliament for the county of Londonderry, and has been a Lord of the Treasury. He was born June 4, 1819, and was for a time in the 14th Light Dragoons. He married, 1845, Mary Elizabeth Anne, second daughter of George, Lord Dynevor. Sir Thomas's next brother, Samuel Bateson, Esq., barrister-at-law, is now the representative in the baronetcy. He married, in 1854, Florinda, eldest daughter of Viscount Castlemaine.

SIR JOHN W. POLLEN, BART.

Sir John Walter Pollen, second Baronet, of Redcliham, Hampshire, was the eldest son of Sir John Pollen, first Baronet, by his wife, Louisa, only daughter of Walter Hoik, Esq., of Redcliham, and was born in 1800. His father died and succeeded his father as second Baronet in the month of August, 1844. He was M.P. for Andover from 1830 to 1841, and from 1853 to 1861, and was a Magistrate for Hants. He married, September 9, 1819, Charlotte Elizabeth, only daughter of the Rev. John Hussey Delaune, Rector of Compton, Wiltshire, by whom he has had no issue. He died on the 2nd instant, and is succeeded by his nephew and heir, Richard Hungerford Pollen, the third Baronet, son of the late Richard Pollen, Esq., of Rodbourne, Wiltshire, by his wife, Anne, daughter of Samuel Popys Cockerell, of Netherwood, Dorsetshire. He was born the 19th of October, 1813, and married, June 6, 1846, Charlotte Elizabeth, second daughter of Sir Thomas Fuller, of Kilgiver, Leitrim, and has a son and four daughters. Sir Richard Hungerford's next brother is the Rev. Daniel Gaspard Pollen, formerly in holy orders of the Church of England, now a Roman Catholic, who was a distinguished Fellow of Oriel, Oxford, and who painted the splendid ceiling of Merton Chapel, an object of the greatest interest to visitors to Oxford. The Rev. Daniel is also of Lincolnshire origin, and springs from an eminent London merchant, Edward Pollen, who died in 1686, and whose grandson, John Pollen, Esq., of Andover and a Welsh Judge, had an only son, Sir John Pollen, who was created a Baronet, April 11, 1796, and was father of the Baronet just deceased.

SIR W. L. WRAXALL, BART.

Lieutenant-Colonel Sir William Lascelles Wraxall, second Baronet of Wraxall, in the county of Somerset, who was the elder son (by his wife, Jane, daughter of Peter Lascelles, Esq., of Gisborough) of Sir Nathaniel W. Wraxall, known historian and writer, Sir Nathaniel William Wraxall, Judge Advocate of India, succeeded to the Baronet Dec. 31, 1815. Sir William Lascelles Wraxall was born in 1791, and married, secondly, in 1824, Mary Ann, died, unmarried, at Penzy, near Paris, on the 2nd inst., and is succeeded by his nephew and heir, Sir Nathaniel Charles Lascelles Wraxall, the third Baronet, who is son of Sir William Lascelles Wraxall, the first Baronet, by his wife, Ellen, daughter of John Maddox, Esq., formerly of Hungerford, Surrey. Sir Nathaniel was born in 1828, and was for some time an Assistant Commissary in the Commissariat Department. He is also known as an occasional writer on the subject of various essays, original works, and translations from the French. He married, in 1854, Mary, daughter of J. Herring, Esq.

COMMANDER ROBERT HENRY BURTON, R.N.

Commander Robert Henry Burton, R.N., who perished in the wreck of her Majesty's ship Orpheus, on the coast of New Zealand, on the night of the 20th ult., was born in 1829, and entered the Royal Navy in 1841. He was employed on the Black Sea station in 1854-5, during the operations of Admiral Sir Thomas Cochrane, K.C.B., and served at the destruction of piratical forts at Kertch, Arabat, Fort Taganrog, and in the expedition to Sea of Azoff. In 1861, Lieutenant of the Hermes he co-operated with the army during the Kaffir War of 1852, and was gazetted for his gallantry while in action with rebel war-chiefs and batteries, and for his successful command of boats in numerous cannonading and bombarding. In 1854 he 1857 he was Lieutenant of the Malacca, which accompanied the late Prince Consort on a visit to the Emperor of the French in September, 1855, and also made a trial-trip to the coast of Scotland, and escorted her Majesty from Hull to Grimsby. While commanding the Triton on the west coast of Africa, from 1857 until 1861, Burton captured seven slavers, and was complimented by the Admiralty on the high state of discipline of his ship. He was advanced to the rank of Commander Jan. 31, 1862, and commissioned of the Orpheus when she was recently wrecked on Manukau Bar, New Zealand. Commander Burton had our medals for his services. He was kindly descended from a Yorkshire family of known antiquity.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

DELTA.—If you are debarred from studying the problems we publish as "Chess Enigmas" because they are not given on diagrams, you deprive yourself of much amusement and instruction. Why not try to solve them mentally? Many of the best players of the very first proficiency are blind, therefore, if necessity be pressed "mentals" or be confined altogether.

T. C. C.—We should be clever, but your thoughtfully notation occasions a great deal of needless trouble, and is sure to lead to mistakes. Why will correspondents, who do not wish to be at the trouble of a diagram in giving an enigma accompany it with one when the description of the knight's position is so easy and simple?

E. D. G.—It is under consideration.

W. H. S.—Your solutions of No. 1001 need not take either Pawn.

W. H. Y.—Your "extraordinary defence found" is in vain. The White King, in the position mentioned, or in any analogous one, cannot move on to any square commanded by a Black piece.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1001 by Dawson, A. B. C., Blizzard, W. D., M.P., Stanley, Cecil, T. T. C., Alexander, Beryth, Gregory, Alpha, Vitruvius, Pip, E. K. B., H. O., Lacey, A. Constant, T. L. Harris, Vernon, T. M., Delta, Rev. J. Owen, Hereford, Dawson, Jun., Rev. J. Wayte, Eton, Rev. J. Mitchell, Rugby, Sector, Hurstwood, Derby, H., Carlton Club, Rev. J. Bloxam, Rugby, Rev. J. Hall, Jun., Rugby, Rev. J. Hall, Sen., H. of Peckham: Herr Kling, R. M. P., Argus, S. D. B. S., H. D. S. Chetwyn, H. W. S. Cleveland, Rev. Winthrop Mackworth Praed, Trebor, Dublin, Rev. J. Crake, Rev. J. Jones, Quincy, I. B. S., Q. E. D., Canterbury, Lex, Temple, Omicron, D. of Jersey, Anglicus, J. C. D., Caroline, Fido, Chigborough, Rev. W. A. M. F., Sunniol, McHall, Pigeony, Hoppie Simon, E. S., Hartley, are correct. All others are wrong.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1002.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B takes QB P	P takes B (best)
2. Q to K Kt 6th	K to Q 4th

(If P takes Kt, White's Queen takes Pawn, checking, and mates next move. Again, if Black at move 2. play Kt to Q 7th, White's Rook takes Kt, and mates following move.)

3. Q takes P (ch)	K takes Q
4. Kt to Q Kt 6th.	Mate.

PROBLEM No. 1003.

By the Rev. G. M'CARTHUR.

One of the Prize Problems in the late Tourney.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White, having to play, can give mate in four moves.

CHESS IN LONDON.

A match of chess has lately been arranged between Mr. STEINITZ, a young player of Vienna, whose acquaintance we have never before enjoyed, and Mr. F. DEACON. The prize, which has been offered by the London Chess Club, fails to him with the score seven games to two. To prevent a dull and troublesome protraction of the match, one hour only is allowed to each player for twelve moves, and four games must be finished every week. At the time we go to press the scoresheet as follows:—(w. B., 3; Mr. D., 1; Drawn, 2. Mr. Deacon has the first move in the following game:—

(Allgaier Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr. D.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P
3. Kt to K B 3rd	P to K 4th
4. P to K 5th	P to K Kt 4th
5. Kt to K 5th	Kt to K B 3rd
6. B to Q B 4th	P to Q 4th

(This form of the opening first occurred, we believe, in a game between Von der Lasa and Mr. Staunton, which was contested thus—

WHITE (V. de L.)	BLACK (S.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. P to Q 4th	P takes P
3. B to K B 4th	B to K Kt 5th
4. P to K 5th	Q to K 2nd
5. Kt to K B 3rd	Q takes K P
6. Kt to Q B 3rd	B to K B 4th)
7. B takes P	Kt to Q 5th
8. Kt to Q B 3rd	B to K Kt 5th
9. B to Q Kt 3rd	P to Q 3rd

And Black wins.)

7. P takes P	P to Q 3rd
8. P to Q 4th	Kt to K R 4th
9. B to Q Kt 3rd	P to Q B 3rd

(Instead of this move Kt to K B 3rd, or Kt to Q 2nd, would be more in accordance with the principles of development. It appears to us, however, that Black has still the better game.)

10. Q to K 2nd	P to Q Kt 4th
11. B to K Kt 5th	P to K B 3rd
12. B takes P (ch)	K to Q 2nd
13. B to K B 4th	P to Q B 4th
14. Q takes Q (ch)	K to Q 3rd
15. P to Q 5th	P to K 5th
16. Q to Q 2nd (ch)	K to Q 2nd
17. B to K 3rd	P to Q Kt 5th
18. Q to K 2nd	P to Q R 4th
19. P to Q Kt 3rd	P to Q R 5th
20. Castles on K side	P to Q Kt 6th

(White, in a piece deficient, but his position is worth a full equivalent.)

20.	Kt to Q 2nd
21. B to K R 6th (ch)	K to Q 3rd

(Taking the Bishop would only have hastened his defeat.)

22. Kt takes B (ch)	Q takes Kt
23. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
24. Q takes Q (ch)	K to Kt 3rd
25. Q to K 3rd	K to B 2nd
26. Q to Q 3rd (ch), and wins.

CHESS IN NEW ORLEANS.

A dashing little Game between Mr. MACARTHUR and Mr. C. MAURIAN, the former giving the odds of his Q Kt.

(Remove White's Q Kt from the Board. K's Gambit declined.)

WHITE (Mr. C. M.)	BLACK (Mr. M.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P
3. P takes Q P	Q takes P
4. Kt to Q B 3rd	P to K B 3rd
5. B to K 2nd	B takes Kt
6. P takes B	P to Q 4th
7. Q to K 2nd	Kt to K B 3rd
8. P to K 5th	Q to Q 2nd
9. P to Q B 4th	Q to Q Kt 5th (ch)
10. K to B sq	Q takes Q P
11. Castles	Kt to Q B 3rd
12. P to Q 4th	Q to Q Kt 5th
13. Q takes Kt (ch)	B to K 2nd
14. Q to Q 2nd	Castles (ch. K's)
15. P to Q 5th	Q to Q Kt 5th
16. P to Q Kt 3rd	K to Kt sq

(Q to K 2nd would have been much better move.)

17. P takes Kt	B to Q B 4th
18. P to Q R 3rd	Q to Q R 4th
19. Q takes R (ch)	K to B 2nd

(Preference, however, as it looks, for a time exchange of pieces must have led to White having the worst of the fight.)

20. B takes B	P takes B
21. B takes Q R P	Q to Q B 3rd
22. B to Q B 4th	Q takes Q Kt P
23. B to Q R 6th	Q to Q B 3rd
24. P to Q R 4th	B to K 7th
25. P to Q R 5th	B to K 4th

(Frightened, and no wonder, at this terribly threatening array. Mr. MACARTHUR now, however, that he might have played Kt to Q 2nd, and certainly that move would have given his opponent serious trouble.)

26. R to Q R sq	Q to Q B sq
27. B to K 6th (ch)	P to K R 3rd
28. B to K 5th	P to K Kt 3rd

(The termination is very finely played by Mr. MACARTHUR.)

29.	R to Q B 3rd
30. Q to R 6th	Q to Q B 2nd
31. B to Q 4th	Q to Q R 2nd
32. B to Q B 3rd	Q to Q B 2nd
33. R to Q 7th	Q to B sq
34. P to R 6th

And Black resigned the game.

THE CHARM OF CHESSPLAYING.—In fact, there is nothing in the way of amusement which can compare with people throw into the eye such misery of pleasure as this same Game of Chess. It possesses all qualities that are good, and none at all that are bad. It even combines fascinations of opposite kinds, a quality entirely special to itself; for it is peaceful, and at the same time warlike; it is light, and yet profound; it is manly, and yet womanly; you can play it by daylight, and you can play it by lamplight; you can play it in the house, you can play it on the lawn; you can play it in a railway-carriage, you can play it with board and men, and you can play it without either. It costs nothing, it is reputable, it is dignified, and it becomes all classes and all ages of life. And it has a wealth that no other game can even approach. Its combinations are infinite, and are at any moment counting. Their bounty is like Cleopatra's—

Age cannot wither it, nor custom stale
Its infinite variety.

Cornhill Magazine for May.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

TRALLIUM.—An ingot of this new metal, weighing 5963 grains, discovered by Mr. W. Crookes (see the notice of his lecture in our Number for April 4, last, p. 367), was exhibited at the meeting of the members of the Royal Institution on Friday, the 1st inst., by Mr. L. Loewthian, the Assay Master of Newcastle. It was produced at his chemical works at Washington, near Durham, and is the largest piece yet shown of this remarkable metal.

MAGNETIC ACTION ON CLOCKS.—In the new number of the Philosophical Magazine Mr. Wm. Ellis, of the Greenwich Observatory, gives an account of some experiments made by him in order to ascertain whether it would be possible so to counteract the magnetic action of the earth as to stop the action of magnets, and thus avoid the necessity of touching the pendulum. The clock employed was one of precision, vibrating seconds, consisted of a wooden rod fitted with a lenticular-shaped bob of lead. Near the lower end of the pendulum rod was fixed a powerful magnetic bar, which, when the adjacent poles were similar, the clock was not retarded to the same extent to which it was accelerated when the poles were dissimilar. Tables of the results of observations are given, which will be studied by those who are interested in these remarkable phenomena.

THE HONEY-BEE is now generally admitted to be not indigenous to America. John Josselyn, in 1663, says, "The honey-bees are carried over by the English, and they thrive exceedingly." A traveller named Peter Kalm, Jefferson (in 1787) says, "The Indians concur with us in the tradition that the honey-bee was not known in America before the White men by whom he knew not. The bee have generally extended the moderate into the country a little in advance of the white men." The bee appears to be found in Mexico, and also consider their approach as indicating that of the settlements of the white. "The honey-bee is a native of Europe," says Prince, "and was introduced into the United States by man to cut out the hollow trees by Indians and whites." The honey-bee is now found in every part of the United States, including also the introduction of the Italian bee. The number of new hives which have been cultivated very extensively since 1775. According to Humboldt, the average export of sugar between 1768 and 1778 was only 30,000 lbs., in 1861 it amounted to 1,281,000 lbs. The average annual amount of exportation for the first thirty years of this century was 6,000,000 lbs., in 1,584,395 lb. of sugar, 2,531,320 lb. of honey. The quantity has probably considerably increased during the last twenty years. The average value of the cultivation of bees-wax in America south of the Antilles and Mexico. It is found in Honduras, but does not occur in New Granada and Peru. Wax candles are largely imported from Portugal in 1845, and has been three greatly diffused. It does not appear to exist at all in the Australian continent, which appears to be very poor in honey-gathering insects. These particulars are extracted from an article, by Dr. A. Gerstäcker, in the 3rd number of the Natural History, which contains, also, classified lists of varieties of the honey-bee. In conclusion, he enters into the question of the introduction of new forms of bees, and recommends the Egyptian bee as valuable for introduction into Europe, partly on account of its hardiness, and partly on account of its unwillingness to use its sting—a peculiarity of all African bees as well as of the Italian bees. He doubts whether the Red Indian bee would bear a northern climate.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

PROFESSOR ANSTED'S fourth lecture, given on Thursday, the 7th inst., was devoted to "The Forces Principally Manifested in the Formation of Rocks and other Metamorphoses," the principal agents being heat and water, but especially the latter. Water dissolves a part of the solid substance of the earth and vegetation, whereby it takes up carbonic and other acids, and is then absorbed by the roots of plants for nourishment. Besides this it is a great chemical action becomes greatly increased by pressure, and is then studied to dissolve out the constituents of the rocks, and to combine them in other substances, thus causing an entire rearrangement of their particles. That are formed from the decomposition of rocks. Even plastic substances, as mica, felspar, and quartz) is now considered to be of aqueous origin, and to contain in its structure water in a chemical combination. Under the action of heat water is changed into kin-ils, the material of Chinese porcelain. Many of the changes in the strata of the earth's crust are attributable to electric action, which may be generated by the processes now going on. The degrees of change are shown to be various. Some rocks are simply consolidated, and stained by the oxide of igneous origin, this is obliterated. Even open igneous rocks, such as lava and basalt, some of which are undoubtedly of aqueous action, are due to combined energies of chemical force and heat are, doubtless, to be attributed the wonderful phenomena of volcanic eruptions. Although we know little of heat, the more we investigate into the mysteries of nature, the more evidence we obtain of the peculiar of violent combustion of the earth's crust, and the work, and of our own ignorance of their operation.

PROFESSOR VOELCKER, of the Royal Agricultural College, Cirencester, gave the Friday evening discourse on the 8th inst., his subject being "The Chemical Principles of Agriculture, Part of the Soils of England." After referring to the soil constituents essential to the life of plants, especially lime, magnesia, silica, and phosphoric acid, and stating that they are derived by the action of air and water from the rocks, the lecturer proceeded to the consideration of the soils of England. He pointed out the necessity of the danger of looking too much at the more chemical properties of soils, and consequently thinking it unnecessary to artificially replace what is taken away by plants, according to a somewhat mechanical process. He gave an account of experiments made by Mr. Lawes, Mr. Gilbert, and Dr. Anderson, himself with various manures on different soils, which showed that soils not only possess the power of retaining the fertilising constituents supplied, but also of giving off what is injurious to them, a real power of extraction, absorption, and retention. The lecturer concluded that we must principally according to the nature of the soil, whether light or heavy, sand or clay. The great importance of thorough drainage was also pointed out by the lecturer. He great importance of further research into soils with the view of determining their essential properties, and of acquiring the power of controlling them with more certainty than has been hitherto been done. With regard to the continuance of the productive powers of the soil, he thought it should be expressed his conviction that it was the highest ground for anxiety. By means of improved methods of cultivation the fertility of land could and other means, and, particularly, the fertility of our country may be considered as inexhaustible.

PROFESSOR MAX MÜLLER'S sixth lecture "On the Science of Language" was given on Saturday last (the 9th inst.). He commenced by referring to Locke's definition of words, and showed that it was essential to all our knowledge, asking that language, as it were, which these words themselves, the origin of language was a subject which had been much discussed during the last century adopted the deductive method, beginning with theory instead of facts. The lecturer then briefly sketched the progress of the science during course, using the inductive process. Yet the works of Locke and Horne Tooke are of exceeding value. Language, he continued, was a natural product of our roots, which signify sensible ideas, was closely examined and proved to be the case. Words, therefore, were not to be derived from another language, but from the root. The relation which exists between language and the early mythology of the Greeks was then pointed out, and the fine old Homeric stories of Diana and Endymion and Orpheus and Eurydice. Etymologically considered, the name of Diana (the feminine form of Janus, signifying the setting sun), and Orpheus (the sun) alternately follows and precedes Eurydice (explained to mean dusk and dawn). These names are not originally so poetic as they may now appear.

PROFESSOR FARADAY'S third lecture "On Sound," given on Tuesday last, the 12th inst., was mainly devoted to experimental illustrations of the sonorous properties of air. It began with the consideration of vocal sounds, which is similar in its action to that of the syren, water being employed to produce sound instead of air. Afterwards, by means of the syren the lecturer determined the number of vibrations executed in one second by a tuning-fork to be 1941; and the length of the sound-wave corresponding to that vibration was calculated to be nearly three feet. The perfect unison of two tuning-forks was then demonstrated, and the effect of beats was explained. The addition first to the ear and then to the eye. It was then shown that the simpler the ratio of the vibrations of the two forks, the more perfect was the unison as appreciated by the ear, and the more simple was the luminous figure described upon the screen. The changes of form which the figures undergo, when the ratio of vibration is slightly altered, were also demonstrated. In conclusion, the physical foundation of the gamut, as determined by Pythagoras, and confirmed by Newton, Euler, Helmholtz, and others, was illustrated by means of the monochord.

PROFESSOR FARADAY will give the Friday evening discourse on the 22nd inst. "On the Direct Measurement of the Sun's Chemical Action."

NEW BOOKS.

Now ready at all the Libraries.

THE Hon. Mrs. NORTON'S NEW NOVEL.
"LOST AND SAVED."
BRANT AND CROSS. By the Author of "Margaret Maitland." 3 vols.
LIVE IT DOWN. By J. C. JEAFFRESON. 3 vs.
THE DESERTED HOUSE OF HAWKESNORTH. 3 vs.
CECIL BEAUMONT. By the Hon. C. S. SAVILE.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-st.

Price One Shilling, now ready, New and Cheaper Edition,
IN-DOOR PLANTS, and How to Grow Them, for the Drawing-room, Balcony, and Greenhouse. Containing Plain Instructions by which Ladies may obtain a small collection of a constant supply of flowers. By E. A. ROBINSON.
"Mrs. Robinson's book is charmingly got up, with Coloured Frontispiece, and is, for its price, a marvel."—Bell's Life.
By the same Author,
FLOWERS FOR ORNAMENT AND DECORATION, and How to Arrange Them. With Coloured Frontispiece, cloth, gilt, 2s. 6d.
WARD, LOCK, and HOW to Keep Them. With Coloured Frontispiece, cloth, gilt, 2s. 6d.
SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

In a few days, Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged, with Numerous Illustrations, demy 8vo, 12s.
HOUSEHOLD MEDICINE AND SICK-ROOM GUIDE. By JOHN GARDNER, M.D., of the Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh.
SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

NEW NOVELS.
CHESTERFORD. By the Author of "A Sad Beginning." Three vols. Post 8vo. (Nearly ready.
FORBIDDEN FRUIT. Two vols. Post 8vo. (Nearly ready.
ADRIAN L'ESTRANGE; or, Modelled on Life. Two vols. Post 8vo. (Nearly ready.
ARROWS IN THE DARK. By the Author of "Said and Done." Post 8vo.
A DARK NIGHT'S WORK. By Mrs. GASKELL, Author of "Ruth's Lover," Contributor from "All the Year Round." Post 8vo. (Nearly ready.
THE STORY OF ELIZABETH. (Reprinted from "Cornhill Magazine.") With Illustrations. Post 8vo. (Ready.
Cheap Edition of SYLVIA'S LOVERS. By Mrs. GASKELL. Author of "Mary Barton," "North and South," "The Life of Charlotte Brontë," &c. With Frontispiece. Post 8vo. (Ready.
SKIRMISHING. By the Author of "Cousin Stella." Three Vols. Post 8vo. 31s. 6d.
A SIMPLE WOMAN. By the Author of "Nut-Brown Maids." Three Vols. Post 8vo. (Ready.
SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

Now ready, Cheaper Edition, fcap 8vo, 2s. 6d.,
AGNES OF SORRENTO. By Mrs. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."
SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

Now ready, New and Cheaper Edition, fcap 8vo, 2s. 6d.,
AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF LUTFULLAH, a Mohammedan Gentleman, and his Transgressions with a Fallen Creature: interspersed with Remarks on the Habits, Customs, and Character of the Natives, with whom he had to deal. Edited by H. B. HAMILTON, Esq.
SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

Price Threepence,
THE WORDS OF LOVE THAT JESUS SPOKE.
THEOBT and CO., Sermon-street; and Warren, Hall, and Co., Camden-town.

CASSELL'S PILGRIM'S PROGRESS, Illustrated, and printed on fine toned paper. Price Twenty Nicely. No. 1 (Annual in a Wrapper) ready May 7th. Sold everywhere.

Eighteenth Edition, five cloth, 10s., post-free,
HOMŒOPATHIC DOMESTIC MEDICINE. By J. LAURIE, M.D. No medicine is prescribed without the indications for its selection, and the dose to be administered, free from all technicalities, and specially adapted to the use of clergymen, missionaries, heads of families, and all who cannot readily call in the above-named profession. Also, by the same, A Case of Medicines, with Directions, price £10, and to the large, £20.
LEATH and RALPH, 7, Fore-st., Cheapside, and 8, St. Paul's-ch.-yard.

Sixty-first Edition, bound, price 1s., post-free,
HOMŒOPATHIC FAMILY GUIDE; containing Plain Directions for the Domestic Treatment of Ordinary Ailments. A Chest of Medicines for this Work, price 18s.
LEATH and RALPH, 7, Fore-st., Cheapside, and 8, St. Paul's-ch.-yard.

Second Edition, price 5s., post-free,
HOMŒOPATHIC TREATMENT OF CHILDREN, Constipation and Piles. By W. MORGAN, M.D., containing Plain Directions for the Treatment of those Complaints, with Observations on Diet, Regimen, and Hygiene for Infancies which may be safely taken by persons suffering from either of these complaints.
LEATH and RALPH, 8, St. Paul's-ch.-yard, and 7, Fore-st., Cornhill.

Just published, in royal 8vo, price 7s. 6d.,
WHO CONSULT? or, a Book of Reference for Invalids to Disordered Health, Difficult Cases, or long-standing Complaints, in which they have consulted many of the most eminent Members of the Medical Profession, and have not met with a Cure of the most Distinguished Physicians and Surgeons of the Day: an Explanatory Glossary of Fashionable Terms, &c.
London: AYLOTT and SON, 8, Paternoster-row.

5000 CHURCH SERVICES, from 4s. 6d. per 100. Elegant Monumental BRASSES, 1s. to 3 guineas. 4000 Pocket, Free Communion, and Family BIBLES, 1s. to 2 guineas. PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

OS. PRIZE WRITING-CASE, fitted with Paper, Envelopes, Blotting-book, Pen-case, &c., can be sent post-free to any part of the United Kingdom upon receipt of 30 stamps. PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street, London.

PHOTOGRAPHIC ALBUMS.—A choice of 1000 Albums, from 6d. to 5 guineas, always on show. Catalogues sent free by post. A call invited to examine the Stock. The public supplied at wholesale prices. PARKINS and GOTTO, 24, Oxford-street, London. Albums for postage-stamps.

ELEGANT PRESENTS.
FIVE LARGE SHOWROOMS.
Rich Inlaid Writing-desks, 21s. | Rich Inlaid Dressing-cases, 21s.
Rich Writing-cases, from 10s. 6d. | Rich Inlaid Work-cases, from 21s.
Rich Inlaid Work-boxes, 21s. | Rich Inlaid Envelope-cases, 21s.
Rich Inlaid Envelope-boxes, 21s. | Rich Inlaid Blotting-books, 21s.
1000 Patterns and Cost-cases. | Glass-boxes and Letter-boxes.
Rich Inlaid Tea-caddies. | Rich Inlaid Tea-trays.
Glass and Gold Inkstands, 21s. | Ivory Chessmen and Tye-tables.
PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

NO CHARGE at PARKINS and GOTTO'S for Plain Stamping Writing-paper and Envelopes. Coloured Stamping made to pay 50s. Wedding and Visiting Cards and Cake Boxes. Initial and Address Dies cut at half prices. The public supplied at wholesale prices. Orders executed at trade prices.—PARKINS and GOTTO, 24, Oxford-street, London.

NO CHARGE MADE FOR STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, or Monogram. Illegible Engravings and Envelopes, 4s. per 100; Cream Note Paper, full size, five quires for 6d. At H. RODRIGUEZ, 47, Piccadilly.

WEDDING CARDS and ENVELOPES stamped in Silver, with Arms, Crest, or Monogram. Steel Dies engraved in the best manner. Specimens of Tradesmen's Cards printed for 5s. 6d. At HENRY RODRIGUEZ, 47, Piccadilly.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS. Dressing-cases, Travelling-bags, Dispatch-boxes, Writing-cases, Envel-cases, Monogram and Crest Dies. Rules for the Writing-table; and a choice variety of useful Elegancies suitable for Presents, at RODRIGUEZ, 42, Piccadilly. Catalogues post-free.

CARTE DE VISITE PORTRAIT ALBUMS from 6s. to 3l. guineas. Carte de Visite Portraits of the Royal Family and Distinguished Persons of all nations. Single Portraits, 1s. 6d.—At RODRIGUEZ, 49, Piccadilly. Catalogues post-free.

THE NEW STUDIO EASEL, for sketching and effects.
WINSOR and NEWTON, Manufacturers,
37, Rathbone-place, London.

PENCILS, BLACK LEAD, and COLOURED CRAYS. A. W. FABER'S POLYGRADE LEAD PENCILS, Sold by all Stationers and Artists' Colourmen. Sole Agents, Bittancourt and Rochussen, 9, Friary-street London, E.C.

NEW MUSIC.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FEU DE JOIE, One of the most recent and successful pieces by this universal Pianoforte Writer. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S UNE PERLE DE VARSOVIE. Polonaise. A perfect specimen of the purest and most elegant style of writing. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S L'OISEAU DE PARADIS. A most original and admirable piece. "Elegant, brilliant, and effective."—Review.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ECLIENNE. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace with unbounded applause. An elegant and effective piece. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE JET D'EAU. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace with unbounded applause. An elegant and effective piece. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FAIRY WHISPERS, played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A remarkably brilliant, pleasing, and effective piece. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MORNING REVERIE, played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A most charming composition rich in beautiful and delicate melody. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DEUXIÈME GRAND TRIO. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A thoroughly vigorous, flashing, brilliant, and telling piece. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE CŒUR. Grand brilliant Waltz. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A splendid, brilliant composition. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MASANIELLO. A most effective and brilliant Fantasia on the best Airs in Auber's picturesque and spirited Opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

KUHE'S PILGRIM OF LOVE. A most beautiful and expressive song, sung by Mdlle. Piccolomini Enthusiastically, for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

BOYTON SMITH'S NEW SONG, BIRD OF THE WILDERNESS, by the Composer of the most beautiful words this is considered to be immensely the best. Price 3s. ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square. Just ready.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Mdlle. Parepa at the Crystal Palace and other Concerts with great success. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop, "One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season." Illustrated London News. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and FARAY, 18, Hanover-square.

MAGENTA MARCH and LUDWIG-BRUCHNER GALOP. By C. COOTE. Each 3s. Extremely effective Arrangements of "Ludwig-Bruchner Galop," Song, 3s. 6d. "Ludwig-Bruchner Galop" for Harmonium, 2s. 6d. "Lucia." WILLMER'S Easy Quadrilles, Waltzes, Polkas, &c. Price 3s. each. ART.—Polka Mechanic Galop Brunette. 3s.
ADDISON and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street; and 24, Tottenham-court-road. Brighton: A. Ollivier, New-road.

THE CHIMES OF NANTES. "O love there'll be a rest bye'm'. Song. 3s. | s. d.
"O, would that my love." Song. 3s. | 24 Sacred Melodies, 2s. 6d.
"Thorn ere who wept me, loved me." Song. 3s. | 24 Sacred Duets, 2s. 6d.
"Bonnie Dundee." Song. 3s. | 24 Sacred Trios, 2s. 6d.
"Bonnie Dundee." Song. 3s. | 24 Sacred Quartets, 2s. 6d.
EUREN FANTASIA, "Amazone of Nantes." 4s. 0d.
BENEDICTUS—"Amazone of Nantes." 3s. 0d.
TREVELLI'S FANTASIA, "Amazone of Nantes." 3s. 0d.
"Amazone of Nantes" complete for Harmonium, 2s. 6d.
ADDISON and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street, London.

H. R. BISHOP'S ADMIRED MELODIES, now selected from his Popular Operas. Arranged for the Pianoforte by A. HALLIDAY. Each 3s. "Home, Sweet Home." "Bid Me Discourse." "Should He Upbraid." Song. H. Smart. Price 3s. "Lo, Here the Gentle Lark." "Bid Me Discourse." "Should He Upbraid." Duet by G. Linley. Sung by Madame Lemmens-Sherrington. Price 4s.
ADDISON and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street, London.

NEW SONG.—"THE SEA IS BEFORE US." Composed by GEORGE LINLEY. Price 3s. 6d. Sent at half-price. This is one of Mr. Russell's best songs, in the style of "The Ivy Green." "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," and "Excelsior." Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves. Duff, Oxford-street, and 63, Queen-street, Cheapside.

NEW VALSE.—THE ANGLO-DANISH VALSE. By E. L. HIME. Solo or Duet. Price 4s. (less at half-price). This Valse is most universally admired, and may be had as a Solo or Duet for Pianoforte, and in Parts for Septet or full Orchestra. Duff and Hodgson, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG. BIRD OF THE WILDERNESS. By BOYTON SMITH. Sung by Mr. KENNEDY. Price 3s. 6d. (less at half-price). This charming Song is the composer's best. Duff and Hodgson, 65, Oxford-street.—Duff and Hodgson, 10, Oxford-street.

LA PRIERE EXAUCÉE (the Prayer Answered). Transcription de Concert pour le Piano par CHARLES HALLE. Price 4s. (less at half-price).
DUTTON and CO., 37, Baker-street, Portman-square.

MUSIC HALF-PRICE and POST-FREE. All full-price Music and Musical Works are sold at three-quarters or one-half of stamps. The trade supplied to sell at half-price. Catalogues gratis and postage-free.—JULLIEN and CO., 214, Regent-street.

PIANOS for HIRE, 18s. per MONTH.—No Hire Charged if Purchased in Six Months.—The most celebrated and Cheapest Pianos in the Kingdom. Lists of Terms sent to Hire one-tenth option of Purchase if approved of the Manufacturers, CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, London.

BUTLER'S BRASS-BAND INSTRUMENTS, Drums, Saddle-flutes, Bugles, Trombones, Cornets, Drums, Fifes, &c., are all manufactured on the Premises, and sold at prices much under those of any other House. Lists of Prices and Drawings forwarded with every instrument. Manufactory, 26, Haymarket, Piccadilly. Catalogue gratis and post-free.

MAPPIN AND COMPANY, 67 and 68, Lombard-street, City, Manufacturers of DRESSING BAGS and CASES, filled with their improved articles, and every description of luxury and convenience for the Toilet.
Dressing and Travelling Bags.
Size. | Morocco | Wide | Morocco | Wide
Morocco | Leather | Leather | Opening
Leather Travelling-bag | 12 | 8 | 5 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0
Ditto, with writing-case | 13 | 9 | 5 | 15 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0
Ditto, with writing-case | 14 | 9 | 6 | 5 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0
The Gladstone Bag | 15 | 9 | 6 | 15 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0
The prices of Dressing-cases supplied are regulated by quality and size.
Ladies' Wood Dressing-case | 1 | 0 | 9 | 0 | 4 | 0 | 0 | 0
Gentlemen's Ditto | 1 | 0 | 9 | 0 | 4 | 0 | 0 | 0
Gentlemen's Ditto, with writing-case and Secretaire | 2 | 0 | 14 | 0 | 6 | 0 | 0 | 0
Ditto, with writing-case and Secretaire | 3 | 0 | 14 | 0 | 7 | 0 | 0 | 0
Mappin and Company thoroughly recommend these goods. The public may find in the manufactory, 67 and 68, Lombard-street, a selection of the choicest in the Trade. An inspection of the Stock is a pleasure, and not the slightest pressure to purchase is made.
71 and 72, Cornhill, City, and 77 and 78, Oxford-street (opposite the Pantheon).
Manufactory, Royal Cutlery Works.
Illustrated Catalogues post-free.

OAK PLANTATIONS.—No Charge.—MAPPIN and Co., 71 and 72, Cornhill, City; and 77 and 78, Oxford-street, opposite the Pantheon, Manufacturers to the Queen and Royal Family, make no CHARGE for superior OAK PLATE CHESTS and CASES, fitted with their improved articles for travelling, home, and military. Orders can be given and prices quoted from lists of the Fitted Illustrated catalogues post-free. Please address as before.
71 and 72, Cornhill, City, and 77 and 78, Oxford-street.

EVAN'S PRIZE KITCHENER.—This first rate nickelled Kitchener obtained a Prize at the Exhibition of 1862, and is recommended by the Jurors as a most useful article. Also, large sizes for Hotels, Taverns, Private and Public Schools, Clubhouses, Hospitals, Unions, &c., with Steam Apparatus, from £20 to £100. Illustrations free.
Silversmiths, 39 and 34, King William-street, London-bridge; Manufactory, 19, Arthur-street West, adjoining.

100,000 PLATES of all the NEW MANTLES and DRESSES for the Season. A single copy sent including Coloured extract taken from entire free on application.—NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 58, St. Paul's-churchyard.

100 PATTERNS POST-FREE of all the New Mohairs, Challis, Opbicks, Chalies, Grenadines, Barege Anglais, &c., Now Satin Striped Fortunios, 7 yards wide, 10s. 6d. the Dress.—NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 58, St. Paul's-churchyard.

1000 DOZEN CAMBRIC HANDKERCHIEFS, at 4s. per Dozen. Sample Half-dozen sent on receipt of Stamps.
NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 58, St. Paul's-churchyard.

100 PATTERNS SILKS, POST-FREE, including those for Young Children, and some great bargains in Moire Antiques.
NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 58, St. Paul's-churchyard.

100 PATTERNS SILKS, POST-FREE, of Rich Glacé Poplins, Marvellous Quality, bought much under value.
NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 58, St. Paul's-churchyard (corner of Cheapside).

UNINFLAMMABLE SILK DRESSES, 12 yards for 18s. 6d., or 1s. 6½d. per yard, all colours. Warranted all fast colours. Patterns free.
NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 58, St. Paul's-churchyard.

DO YOUR WIFE AND CHILDREN WELL DRESSED?—Buy Existberd's Suits in Cloth, from 10s. 6d., Trousers, from 4s. 6d., at the Corner of the Chaise, Hookney for Measurement, and at Engravings of New Patterns, post-free.—EXISTBERD'S, 50 to 53, St. Paul's-churchyard.

100 PATTERNS SILKS, POST-FREE, All the New Coloured Silks for Spring, plain and figured, 12s. 6d. the Dress.
NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 58, St. Paul's-church-yard, post-free, from 1 guinea the Dress. "Moire Imperiale" 42s.
NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 58, St. Paul's-churchyard.

NOTICE.—Messrs. NICHOLSON beg to state that their Address is (and has been for twenty years) 50 to 58, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD (corner of Cheapside). They have no connection with any other firm.

NOTICE.—BAKER and CRISP have REMOVED to their NEARLY OPPOSITE COMMODIOUS PREMISES, 198, REGENT-STREET.

PARIS KID GLOVES, 1s. 9d. per pair, unwashed, and 1s. 6d. for 2½ stamps.
BAKER and CRISP'S new Premises, 198, Regent-street.

1500 BLACK SPANISH LACE SHAWLS, at 15s. 9d., 18s., and 1 guinea; last year's price was 1 guinea, 1l. 5s., and 1l. 10s.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

SUMMER DRESSES, &c.—Patterns free. The New Grenadine Mohairs, 9s. 6d. to 1l. Pull Dress. The New Fancy Grenadines, 1l. 1s. to 1l. 10s. Pull Dress. The New Barège Anglais, 8s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

SILKS.—SILKS, SILKS. The New Plaid, Striped, Checked, and Fancy Silks, from 1l. 1s. 6d. Full Dress.
Black Silks, Bright, Wide, and Durable, 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.
Yard-wide Glacé, 4s. 6d. and 7s. 6d. per yard.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

NEW MUSLIN Patterns free. Plain French Organdi Muslins, the largest variety in the Kingdom, from 1l. 1s. to 1l. 10s. Full Dress.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.
Patterns of Mourning Muslins. Full Dress.

MOURNING, PATTERNS POST-FREE. Black Barège, Balzarines, Mohairs, Grenadines, Challies, Cambrics, Cashmeres, Chambrays, and Muslins, from 9½d. to 1s. BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN BY APPOINTMENT.
LADIES' WEDDING OUTFITS
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post.
CAPPER, ROPE, and CO., 49, Cheapside, London, E.C.

Sent post-free, Descriptive Lists of COMPLETE SETS OF BABY-LINEN, for the Nursery, throughout the Kingdom free of carriage.
UNDERCLOTHING for LADIES and CHILDREN, for VOYAGES to the COLONIES, and for INDIA.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN BY APPOINTMENT.
Established in 1778.
BABIES' BASSINETS
Trimmed and Furnished
ready for Immediate Use, free of carriage.
FAMILY BASKETS
Trimmed and Furnished complete.
CAPPER, ROPE, and CO., 49, Cheapside, London, E.C.
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post.

MARRIAGE TROUSSEAUX and INDIA OUTFITS.—The Home and Foreign Outfitting Department affords an inspection of their extensive and reasonably STOCK, ready made, of every article of Ladies' and Children's Underclothing, and materials for which they have the most unique assortment of qualities and prices. Chemises and Nightdresses, 1l. 1s. per half-dozen.

FRENCH EMBROIDERIES, LACE, &c. SEWING MACHINES, with Book of the late Miss A. Devine, 4, Rue Vide Gousset, Paris, containing all Instructions for Practising, Cutting, and Making Underclothing.
Handkerchiefs, Collars, Sleeves, Flounces, Bands, Insertions, and Rail-squares, &c., will offer them this and following days at 40 per cent under their value for the purpose.—SPRING SILKS, Patterns free.
New Colours in Checks and Stripes,
Rich Glacé Silks, 1l. 1s. 6d.
New Gros-grain Striped Silks, 1l. 1s. 6d.
42 Yds. 6d. for 12 yards.
Rich Moire Antique, 1l. 1s. 6d.
JOHN BARRY, 261, 262, 263, and 264, Goldsgate-hill.

FARMER and ROGERS, India Shawl Warehouse, 171, Regent-street, W. Ladies visiting Wales, beg to announce the completion of their NEW FASHIONS for the present Season.
The following are a few of their exclusive novelties:—
The "DERBY," of rich Cross Grain Silk, handsomely trimmed, and lined throughout.
The "DERMARK," of rich Cross Grain Silk, handsomely trimmed, and lined throughout.
The "ELLESMERE," of rich Cross Grain Silk, richly trimmed, in several new and beautiful materials, from 2 guineas.
The "ANGLESEA" Shawl, in Silk, from 12s. 6d. to 1l. 5s.
The "ANGLESEA" Shawl, in Wool, from 7s. 6d. to 10s.
The "ANGLESEA" SHAWL, 35s. 6d.
The "ANGLESEA" SHAWL, in INDIA, FRENCH PAISLEY and NORWICH SHAWLS.
171, Regent-street, W., and 179, Regent-street, W.

HOWELL'S, 79, Gracechurch-street, Corner of Sherborne-lane.
Howell and Co. beg an inspection of their assortment of Spring Goods, comprising Rich Glacé Silks, Checked and Striped ditto, Fancy Materials, Grenadines, Mohairs, Barèges, and Muslins, at very moderate prices. Also a large assortment of Fashionable Dress Trimmings, Ornamental Muslins and Lace Goods.
Howell and Co., five minutes' walk from London Bridge Station.

LADIES' UNDERCLOTHING of best make, at moderate prices. A stock always on hand of Chemises, Nightdresses, Petticoats, Morning Robes, &c. Price-books by post. Address "Ladies' Department," WHITELOCK and SON, 186, Strand (opposite the Church and Somerset House).

WEDDING or INDIA OUTFITS supplied on the most moderate terms, at much less than the usual charges. Detailed price-lists by post.—WHITELOCK and SON, 186, Strand (opposite the Church and Somerset House).

MOIRES ANTIQUES. GEWELL and CO. have the largest selection of MOIRES ANTIQUES in White, Black, and all the new Colours, at 4l guineas the Dress.
COMPTON HOUSE Frith-street, Soho W

DICH SILKS, COURT TRAINS, &c., GRANT and GASK are exhibiting most superb Novelties in Rich Silks, exclusively manufactured with Needle, Crystallised, Satin, Moiré Antique, &c., for Court and Dinner Dresses. Also an immense purchase of Rich French Glacé Silks, which will be sold at 2l guineas the Full Dress. Patterns free.—GRANT and GASK, 58, 59, and 60, Oxford-street, corner of Princes-street, W. Two doors from Regent-street.

Lists of Departments for Shawls, Mantles, Made Skirts, Dressing Dresses, Muslins, Fancy Dress Fabrics, Prints, &c., contains also the most select novelties for the season.
Special Attention is solicited to the Ladies' and Gentlemen's most French Kid Gloves, at 1s. 6d. per pair.
The Glove Department, as heretofore, is completed on the premises by experienced Workpeople, on the Actual System.
Illustrated Fashions and Patterns forwarded to the country.
GRANT and GASK, 58, 59, and 60, Oxford-street, corner of Princes-street, W. Two doors from Regent-street.

BLACK GLACÉ SILKS (warranted to wear) and POPLINS. GRANT and GASK are selling upwards of 1000 Dresses of their celebrated BLACK GLACÉ SILK, at 1l. 1s. 6d. the Dress of 12 yards, 1l. 5s. 6d., and 1l. 10s. 6d. per yard; also 500 pieces of the very best FOULARD SILKS, in all the new Colours, at 1l. 1s. 6d. the Dress of 12 yards, 2s. 6d. per yard, which, or any length cut as 1s. 6d. per yard. Both of these lots are fully worth double the present prices.
GRANT and GASK, 58, 59, and 60, Oxford-street, corner of Princes-street, W. Two doors from Regent-street.

Patterns every requisite for Family and Complimentary Mourning.
Lists of Prices and Patterns forwarded to the country. Parcels above 20s. carriage free.
GRANT and GASK, 58, 59, and 60, Oxford-street; 3, 4, and 5, Wells-street.

JAMES PRICE and CO., 114, Regent-street.—NEW MATERIALS for SPRING DRESSES. SILKS, &c. New Mohairs, Grenadines, Barèges, and Muslins, in great variety. Patterns free post-free.
JAMES PRICE and CO., 114 and 119 Regent-street.

LADIES' ELASTIC HOUSE BOOTS, 3s. 6d.; Best-class Paris Kid Elastic Boots, fancy bue, military heels (for Ladies or Gentlemen), 4s. 6d. Gentlemen's Elastic Boots, Prussian Shape, Patent Leather in front.—THOMAS B. MARSHALL, 193 Oxford-street, W.

LADIES' WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS and CRINOLINES.—Manufactured expressly for Continental Organs. Patterns of materials and prices sent post-free.
THOMAS B. MARSHALL'S Depôt, 193 Oxford-street.

FORD'S RIDING-HABITS. — CAUTION. Mr. FORD, Tailor, 37, Edgware-road, begs to caution the public that his connection with any person of the same name. Established 25 years at the present address.—37, Edgware-road, London.

CRINOLINES.—The Patent Ondina Jupon allows the dress to fall into graceful folds. Illustrations, with Patterns, post-free.—THOMAS B. MARSHALL, 193 Oxford-street, W.

THE Is. HAIR-WAVER (the Original).—A simple invention for giving the graceful wave in the hair, as in the Portraits of Her Majesty. Sold in a few minutes by every hairdresser throughout the Kingdom. Post-free, with instructions, 14 stamps.—J. COCKBURN, 10, Great Marlborough-street, Regent-street, W.

ALEXANDRA HAIR-WAVER, for giving a graceful wave to the hair. Sold by all Hairdressers. Wholesale agents, R. SELL, the Princess of Wales' Perfumer, 150, New Bond-street, London, W.

HALKER'S PATENT PENELOPE and CROCHET NEEDLES have the word "Penelope" on each needle. Sold by all Berlin Wool Dealers. Manufactory, 14, Bartlett's-buildings, Holborn-circus, E.C.

JUDSON'S SIMPLE DYES FOR LADIES, of all the Colours required for one set, can be dyed without stain. May be had of all Chemists.

BULLY'S TOILET VINEGAR, for Preserving the Teeth, Purifying the Breath, and Beautifying the Complexion. Bully's Toilet Vinegar is recommended as well as for its highly-refreshing properties. To be had at the principal Perfumers and Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, 143, Strand, opposite Exeter Hall, and Colnaghi, 8, Haymarket and Regent-circus.

PESTACHIO-NUT TOILET-POWDER. Ladies who wish to preserve their complexion from the fatal effects of exposure to the sun, wind, and dust, and to avoid or arrest, sallow redness of the face and hands, are strongly by our Medical Men recommended to use PESTACHIO-NUT TOILET-POWDER. Court, the ball, or concert, it is indispensable, especially as it removes all shine from the face, and produces a delicate and transparent appearance. Sold in packets, 2s. 6d., by all Perfumers and Chemists, and wholesale by all fashionable Perfumers and Druggists in every town.—Sole Manufacturers and Exporters, BULLY and CO., 143, Strand, opposite Exeter Hall, and Colnaghi, 8, Haymarket and Regent-circus.

TO LADIES.—RICHLY-PERFORATED TISSUE, for Sleeve Aprons, 8 stamps per packet. Dress Tucks and Flounces, Insertions, Braids, Embroidery, and Lace Patterns, 6 stamps per packet. Catalogues, 2 stamps.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, used in the Royal Laundry, by Special Appointment to the Queen, and Sold by all Grocers, Chandlers, &c.

OSTEO-IDEON.—PATENT, No. 560. OSTEO-IDEON, the Patent Substitute for Cork, Sponge, Wool, and Hair, for Stuffing Saddles, Cushions, Mattresses, &c., and without operation. Prevent mercantile evil, at half the usual cost. Messrs. Gabriel, Cavendish-square; Messrs. Hall and Carter, Carvendish-square; and 34, Ludgate-hill, London; 154, Duke-street, Liverpool; and all Saddlers and Upholsterers. Price-lists and Samples on request from sole agents.
Gabriel's "Practical Treatise on the Teeth, gratis.

SKINOFHEAD DISEASES.—STURROCK'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a Liquid Solution of superwashed Bismuth, round Saint mica, Eruptions, &c., and No. 1 Wash, for Cleansing the Skin, Sold by all Chemists, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle. Glasgow: and Barclay, Farringdon-street; and Sanger, 150, Oxford-street, London; and all Perfumers and Druggists.

DR. DE JONGH'S
(Knight of the Order of Leopold of Belgium)
LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL prescribed by upwards of 1000 Physicians throughout the world as the purest, quickest, and most effectual REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, ASTHMA, RHEUMATISM, GOUT, GENERAL DEBILITY, DISEASES OF THE SKIN, GLANDULAR AFFECTIONS, AND ALL RICKETTY AFFECTIONS, is invariably taken by Children with Delight.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.
"Physician to Ordinary to the Queen in Ireland."
"I consider Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil to be a very pure oil, not at all nauseous, and a therapeutic agent of great value."
DR. GRANVILLE, F.R.S.,
Author of the "Spas of Germany."
"Dr. Granville has prescribed Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod-liver Oil extensively in his practice, and has found it pure, unadulterated, of pale colour, and that it does not cause the nausea and indigestion too often consequent on the administration of Cod-liver Oil."
EDWIN CANTON, Esq., F.R.C.S.,
Professor of Chemistry, &c., Middlesex Hospital.
"For several years past I have used in the hotel of practising Physicians Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod-liver Oil, and have found it to be a pure and unadulterated article, and a therapeutic agent which I have also employed with a view to test their relative superiority."
DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is sold only in Imperial Measures, capsuled and labelled with his signature and seal, without which no other is genuine, by respectable Chemists and Druggists.
Sole Consignees, ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO.
ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

ALBERT MEDICINE CHEST.—This is an excellent remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, and Indigestion, and as a mild aperient for delicate constitutions, 17, New Bond-street, London; and all Chemists.

LEET-OF CLOTHES, Gentlemen's Wardrobes, Theatrical Costumes, &c., of every description, Purchased, Sold, or Exchanged by Mr. and Mrs. LEET, 6, Cranbourn-street, Oxford-street, W. Ladies and Gentlemen waited upon. Parcels from the country remitted for by return of post.

CLOTHES, UNIFORMS, JEWELLERY, DIAMONDS, &c., of every kind, Purchased for Cash. Ladies and Gentlemen waited upon at their residences by Mr. DAVIS, 3, Crawford-street, Baker-street, W.; or, parcels being sent, 7s. orders remitted. Established 1830. Town Agent.

WANTED, LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms, Furniture, Miscellaneous Property, &c. The highest price from Ladies or Gentlemen waited on by addressing to Mr or Mrs. DAVIS, 27, Great Castle-street, Regent-street, W. Parcels from the country remitted for by return of post. Established 1760.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Mary-le-Strand, in the County of Middlesex, by JOHN LOVELL, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY MAY 16 1863.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Nos. 1204, 1205.—VOL. XLII. SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1863. TWO NUMBERS AND COLOURED SUPPLEMENT | TENPENCE

AFFAIRS ABROAD AND AT HOME.

An association which is known as the Peace Society has just held its forty-seventh anniversary meeting. Looking to the date of its establishment, it would seem as if its functions were more necessary now than at the time of its foundation. At that period, now verging on half a century ago, the world was just tasting the repose which had succeeded to we hardly know how many years of war; and a considerable time elapsed before there was any practical justification for the establishment of a society the mission of which was to circulate the doctrines of peace and amity amongst nations. Since the inauguration of that symbol of international friendship—the Exhibition of 1851—mankind has, with curious infelicity, taken care that the Peace Society should stand no chance of dying of inanition; and there was certainly no lack of material for the speeches of its members and supporters at their recent meeting. For, in taking a survey of the condition of affairs abroad and at home, the main interest centres on warlike proceedings; while, in considering the future, it is impossible to be blind to the fact that the sphere of hostile collision is more likely to be enlarged than contracted. In Europe Poland continues in arms against Russia; in North America the civil war rages hotly; in Mexico, invasion is resisted in a manner wholly unexpected; in China secession, or rebellion—according as the word is used by the different parties—still holds its own; while England is really carrying on a little war in that country, not so much on her own as on account of that Tartar dynasty which it has been her supposed mission for many years to dragoon into the pale of civilisation. Within these several belligerent situations there lies the germ of new warlike complications. No one can say how soon France may declare war against Russia, ostensibly on behalf of Poland, but with a sidelong glance at the Rhenish provinces of Prussia, if it should happen, as is not unlikely, that the latter Power should take part with the Czar. But it is well believed that it is the determined policy of the Emperor of the French not to enter on another contest with Russia, except on the same conditions as those on which he undertook the former war with that nation—namely, in alliance, offensive and defensive, with England. If the feeling of the English people is represented by the member of the trades' unionists who formed one of a deputation of that body on Monday to Lord Palmerston, and who desired that steps should be taken at once to give Russia a "thrashing," it is quite possible that such a combination for such a purpose may be brought about. The operations of the French in Mexico are now long be-gun-dertook on a large scale; and if the policy which is supposed to have dictated that expedition be carried out, it will involve a war between France and the Northern States of America, the former power becoming the ally of the Confederates. Even if such an event be thought somewhat remote, it can hardly be denied that where so many small causes of difference, if not of dispute, exist at present between England and the Federal States, they may at any moment take an aggregate shape and ripen into a casus belli. So much for the prospects of the future; a week or two now on actualities.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES IN ROTTEN ROW.

Probably at no period of the contest in America has more interest been felt than in the movements of General Hooker, the present commander of the Army of the Potomac. Unquestionably some sympathy is felt for a Federal General who exhibits at once boldness and skill. The tactics which Hooker adopted had enlisted them the elements of brilliant success; but the materials with which he had to work are apparently unfitted for such a system as he has pursued, especially when he is opposed to so wily and so daring a tactician as Lee and Jackson, ably seconded as they are by their singularly mobile troops. By a bold and unexpected movement Hooker, dividing his forces and crossing the Rappahannock at different points, succeeded in placing the bulk of his army on the road between Fredericksburg and Richmond, and, therefore, in the rear of the Confederates, leaving a corps under General Sedgwick to occupy the attention of the enemy by advancing upon the battle-field of Fredericksburg. Met in the heart taken place between Stonewall Jackson's counter movement, outflanked Hooker himself, and fell fiercely on his right wing; and for two days a series of obstinate encounters—a battle, divided as it were, into four or five acts—between the latest and the most able American there could be no doubt of Hooker's entire failure. On the third day he was standing on the defensive, intrenching himself, his front completely changed, no longer between the Confederates and Richmond. He had their whole army in his front across the river Rappahannock and Rapidan at the point where, while Sedgwick's corps, which had continued to threaten the Confederate army, was assailed, defeated with great loss, and driven back across the river. The position of the Federal General is such that he will be subjected to an attack in force by the Confederates; and, unless a military miracle is wrought, we do not see anything for him but a choice between capitulation and being driven into one of two rivers, according to his selection. Assuming his defeat, the question arises whether such an occurrence will be considered decisive of the war. We confess we think not. It would be quite possible for the Confederate Army to follow Hooker and march upon Washington, but it is much to be doubted whether such a course will be pursued. Apart from the perils of an attack on Washington, which would of course be defended by the concentration of all the Federal troops which could be got there, so that something like a siege would ensue, it is not unlikely that the Confederate statesmen would look at an assault on the capital of the once United States apart from a political point of view. The capture of Washington by the Secessionists would exasperate the Northerners and goad them to fresh efforts against the South; while, as amatter of policy, it may seem to Jefferson Davis and his advisers judicious to let it appear that the war is not aggressive on their part.

Glancing far south on the American Continent we find General Forey pressing on Puebla only by inches, and everything tending to show that if it is really intended by the French to conquer Mexico they must set about it in their usual fashion—that is, by propitiating fortune by the display of strong battalions, and operating with at least 100,000 men. The supposed military promenade through Mexico is proved to be a delusion, and a resistance akin to that of Spain in the years 1808 to the Peninsular War has been inaugurated with no little success.

The struggle in Poland assumes larger proportions. Temporary checks of the insurgents only cause new bands to spring up in new directions; and the National Committee is still supreme at Warsaw, and issues its decrees with all the sanctions of an established Government. In the meantime there come tidings of an outbreak in the Russo-Polish provinces of Volhynia, Podolia, and the Ukraine; and with these statements that Russia is fully alive to the extent and the gravity of the contest to which she has entered. In Prussia the dispute between the Government and the Chamber of Deputies remains unsettled; while the Upper House not only supports the King against the Lower Chamber, but encourages him in the policy which he has adopted with respect to Poland. The Austrian question is practically in abeyance; and it is uncertain still whether the solution of all difficulties which it is supposed would be found by the placing of a boy Prince on the throne will be effected. In Greece itself something very much akin to anarchy prevails, so much so that the English and French Ministers seem to be absolutely in a fright for their own personal safety. In France the farce of an election to the Legislative Corps is being played, with a liveliness and a variety of incident which are characteristic of our neighbours, although, probably, M. Persigny does not see the drollery for which he is unconsciously answerable.

While something like what has been stated above may be taken to be the condition of other countries, the inquiry naturally arises what are we doing at home. On the whole, we may venture to say not badly. Our Parliament has adjourned for an unusually long Whitsuntide recess, earned not so much by excessive legislative labour as by the production of a vast deal more talk than was predicated of this Session. The London season is in full swing, and, influenced by a reaction from the hypocrisy of the last two or three years, is showing immense vigour and continuity. We are fêting the Prince and Princess of Wales with unabated ardour and loyalty; we have waded through a wet and muddy Derby with less grumbling at the weather than might have been the case if the rain were not so welcome to the agriculturist; we are finding outlets for plethora of capital in new schemes in which the Stock Exchange rejoices; and we are hoping that the plan of the Government for providing employment for the operatives in the Cotton districts may improve and in the average, paving, and water-supplying of the towns in which they live, will do much towards averting a social calamity which has been steadily advancing upon us. At this moment, when the country is about to take one of its very few periodical holidays, and when, from a purely business point of the year, such a comparison as the above is far from discouraging.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The elections continue to excite much interest. It is finally decided that M. Thiers stands for the second electoral division of Paris, as well as for the sixth division of the Department du Nord (Valenciennes) and the third division of the Bouches-Du-Rhone (Aix-en-Provence). An electoral committee in Paris is formed, with M. Dufaure as its chairman. In their published letter of thanks to M. Thiers they express their intention to devote themselves to the object is to "form a great Liberal party on constitutional ground, to effect a serious control of the finances and develop gradually the political liberties of the country." M. Berryer will stand for Marseilles. Count Montalembert and M. Casimir Perier are also candidates.

M. de Persigny has struck a serious blow at the favourite assumptions of La France. That journal has just received a "first warning" for having affected to express the sentiments of the Government, and "distorted and travestied the policy pursued by the Government in the elections in a manner calculated to mislead public opinion."

It is rumoured that thirty batteries are to be added to the artillery of the Empire. Some of the Imperial farms lent out some time since by the War Department to the farmers are coming back quickly.

Prince Napoleon has returned from Constantina to Baiba, the Viceroy of Egypt, with the grand cordon of the Legion of Honour.

The siege operations at Puebla are proceeding very simply. A telegram comes from Cadiz states that on the 12th ult. the French had taken the ruburbs of San José, Guadalupe, and Loretto. General Lorencez had established the new batteries, and the first French shot at Vera Cruz to Admiral Bosse, and has arrived at Brest. The Admiral's news from Puebla is to the 1st ult., on which date it was asserted that the French had captured a redoubt situated at the corner of the Plaza de Armas.

SPAIN.

A Royal decree has been issued, creating a new Ministry for the colonies.

It is said that the Ministers intend to appoint new Prefects for the provinces.

Marshal O'Donnell, Duke of Tetuan, has met with rather a severe accident. His horse threw him, and he received considerable injuries.

The sentence having affected to express the feelings of piety against the Granada Protestants has been commuted into the same number of years' banishment. The European deputation is at Madrid.

PORTUGAL.

The King has returned from Cintra, and is now residing at the Ajuda.

The Duke De Braband has arrived in Lisbon; he was received at the Royal Arsenal, where he disembarked, by the Ministers and other high functionaries.

The frigate Don Fernando has arrived at Lisbon, after a voyage of three months.

A portion of the Crown diamonds are to be sold to realise the value of about £60,000.

The proposal to extended to Portuguese exhibitors at the London Exhibition have been presented. The King presided at the ceremony.

The loan of Portuguese capitalists legally payable to Austria Poland.

The Cortes have been occupied with the dispute respecting the election of Senator Latino Coelho.

ITALY.

Attention has been drawn in Turin to the late debate in the English House of Commons upon Naples and its prisons. In the Senate yesterday week, Signor Deforesta, pursuant to notice, brought the matter to the notice of the Chamber. The Minister replied. He expressed his thanks to the statesmen who had defended the cause of Italy in the English Parliament. He refused to enter into relative to the press, the prisons, and public safety made by those members of the English Parliament hostile to Italy. He added that economic improvements and judiciary and administrative reforms had been introduced by the Italian Government. The system and policy of the French Government against the accusation of duplicity which had been brought against it by a senator. "The exception," he continued Signor Farini, "which I do not by less painful for the Government of the Emperor than for that of King Victor Emmanuel, and it is impossible to attribute it to the policy of the Emperor's position." Signor Farini then demonstrated the complicity of the Italian Government in the late Neapolitan affair at Rocca. He further stated that brigandage had sensibly declined, and that the support of the country was secured to the Government, which, he said, "employed its every power to establish that should no longer protect the conspirators going on in Rome." In reference to the case of Mr. Elliot, Signor Farini said that Lord Perseni proved the legality of their condemnation. The Italian Government, he continued, made no difference between natives and Italians. The Minister of Justice then spoke with reference to the assertions which had been made in the English Parliament relative to the administration of justice. Signor Deforesta declared himself satisfied with the explanations of the Ministry.

PRUSSIA.

There appears to be little likelihood of the early settlement of the dispute between the Ministry and the Chamber of Deputies. Indorsing the recommendation of the Budget Committee, the Chamber, on Friday in their sitting of yesterday week, resolved, by a vote of 293 to 29, that the Ministers and Ministry do not share the responsibility of the disciplinary authority of the President of the House. The President, Herr Grabow, proposed to give the Ministers time until Monday, and then, considering the importance of the Question, to resume the attendance at the sittings of the Chamber. Herr Forckenbeck, however, proposed that a deputation should be at once addressed to the Ministers to be present at the sittings of the House, in accordance with article 60 of the Constitution. The latter proposition was agreed to by 167 to 138 votes. The Ministers did not appear, but made a show of yielding, in a letter read to the Chamber, which concluded by stating that the Ministry has not abandoned the Presidium should relinquish his right of interrupting their speeches, but only that he should declare that he has no disciplinary privilege, especially that of calling the Ministers to order." The Chamber replied to this by passing a resolution refusing to make any alteration in their resolution of the 15th inst. The Chamber further resolved that, until the Ministers removed their scruples, they would not proceed with the question of the reorganisation of the army, and resolved that the debate on the address to the Crown should be placed upon the order of the day for the next sitting.

A telegram from Berlin, of Wednesday, states that the Ministerial representatives from the Marine Department made their appearance at the meeting of the Committee on the Budget, where their unexpected presence created surprise. The impression among many seems to be that the Ministers are rather inclined to stand on high ground which they so readily took up. Nothing certain, however, is known as to the course they mean to follow.

At the sitting of the Upper House, on Wednesday, a vote of thanks was passed to the King for the attitude he has in the Government had taken on the Polish question. Some members of the House seized the opportunity to make attacks of the most vehement and extravagant character upon the Chamber of Deputies. The Prince and the War Minister were present, but neither took any part in the discussion.

Herr von Bismarck was present at Thursday's sitting of the Chamber of Deputies, and read a loyal message, in which the King says:—"The Ministers have my confidence and support in the conflict in which, which was violation of the constitutional rights of the Ministry. Such a position for the Ministers does not correspond with the dignity of the Crown. For this reason I have refused the Ministers the resignation such a state of things, in order that the business of the House may be continued." Herr von Bismarck then left the House. Herr Virchow moved that the Royal message be referred to the Committee on the Address, as the Ministers had misinformed the King. Herr von Sybel and Count Schwerin seconded this motion, which was unanimously adopted by the House.

The Progressist party of the Chamber of Deputies has prepared the draught of an address to the King, in which the whole of the present situation is examined. The document concludes as follows:—"The Chamber of Deputies approaches the Throne at a moment when it hopes that a definite decision has been come to. It fulfils a conscientious duty in declaring, with the deepest respect to your Majesty, that it is obliged to refuse any co-operation in the present policy of the Government, and that it will make use of every constitutional means to ward off the greatest misfortune which could fall on the country and on the dynasty—a war about the dominators of the present system."

The Prussian Ambassador at Paris has officially denounced as false the letter published in the Gaz, attributed to the Prussian Commander at Inowrazlaw, which spoke of a Russo-Prussian movement of troops on the frontier. The Ambassador also points out other inventions of the same character, and complains of the practice indulged in of calumniating the Prussian Government.

AMERICA.

By the arrival of the steamer Persia we have received New York journals to the 6th inst.

WAR NEWS.

At six o'clock on Saturday evening, May 2, General Stonewall Jackson, with his whole corps of 40,000 men, threw himself impetuously on the extreme right of the Federals, forced Major-General Howard's corps. That corps consisted entirely of German troops. After waiting for a single volley from the Confederates, the corps abandoned their positions behind their breastworks and fled panic-stricken, towards head-quarters. To retrieve the day General Hooker sent his own staff officers to the commander of General Berry. This corps succeeded in checking the advance of the therefore-victorious troops, and for them had driven back the entrenched position lately vacated by the German troops. The Confederates captured twelve pieces of cannon. The Federals lost General Berry, and the Confederates are reported to have lost General A. P. Hill in the engagement with General Berry's corps.

On the next day, Sunday, General Jackson continued his attack. He commenced the onslaught at 5.30 a.m., and the battle raged until 11.00. At the close of the day the Confederates had driven about a mile and a half of ground, and had driven General Hooker from Chancellorsville, which had been his head-quarters. A correspondent of a New York newspaper writes of this day's fight in front of Chancellorsville as follows:—

The engagement lasted about six hours, but had been the most terrific of the war. Our artillery had literally slaughtered the enemy, and many of the companies had lost all their officers and sergeants, but the men fought well. The enemy has gained some ground, it is true, but at the sacrifice of the flower of his force, five of his regiments having been cut to pieces in the effort, and over 6000 of them having fallen into our hands.

In the afternoon several fierce charges were made to force the Federal lines, but they were repulsed by the Federal artillery. General Hooker was personally engaging with the enemy. Monday intrenching his present position, and was confident of his ability to hold it against the enemy. Monday was a very quiet day throughout the lines.

On Sunday there was fighting in front of the batteries which crowned the Heights of Fredericksburg. After the fighting General Sedgwick, by a brilliant charge, captured the Confederate guns, including the latter's Washington Artillery Company, which had figured in every engagement on the Potomac and the Rappahannock.

On Monday the Confederates above Fredericksburg were reinforced by General Longstreet's column, which had just arrived from Suffolk. The force attacked the Federal position on the right of the day had lost the day previous and to drive General Sedgwick across the river. This hazardous operation was accomplished between midnight and two o'clock on Tuesday morning. The Confederates raked the bridges, creating much confusion and causing considerable loss of life. They also pressed the Federals so hard that they discovered his retreating, and harassed it incessantly. With the remainder of his corps he marched off to join General Ford to gain the main army under General Hooker.

The Federals crossed the Nansemond River at Suffolk, and again four miles below that place. They encountered the Confederates and captured eight guns.

General Banks has occupied Opelousas and Washington, Louisiana. The Federal attack on Grand Gulf failed.

RECONSTRUCTION.

Mr. Vallandingham, the leader of the Northern Peace party, has been arrested at his residence in Dayton, Ohio, by a detachment of soldiers, who battered down the doors of his house to reach his room. His friends rang the town fire-bell, collected a mob, and endeavoured to rescue him, but were dispersed by the police, who took their prisoner to Cincinnati. General Burnside is said to have ordered his arrest for making seditious speeches in Ohio.

Mr. Redgate, one of the owners of the cargo of the Petrolhoff, has filed in the Court of Admiralty a petition to testify on her behalf. The Court refused the application, on the ground that Mr. Redgate, being a citizen of Texas at the time of the Secession, must be regarded as at an alien enemy. The sentence of the Court condemns.

CALIFORNIA.

On the 27th ult. the steamer Ada Hancock, while plying in the harbour of San Pedro, in the southern part of this State, exploded her boiler, killing forty out of eighty passengers. Among the first, save seven. Among the killed is Hiram Kimball, the Mormon missionary.

INDIA.

The news brought by the Bombay mail comes down to the 20th ult. All India was engrossed on the occasion of the marriage of the Prince of Wales. The Government had fixed the 1st of May for the commemoration of the event in the Bombay Presidency, and preparations were being made for the day with great splendour.

The Viceroy and Governor-General of India had reached Simla, where he was supposed that he would remain for some weeks.

The formal opening of the Bhore Ghaut Railway Incline by the Governor of Bombay took place amidst much rejoicing on the 21st of April, at Lanowlie, in the cool incline. There was a public holiday in Bombay on the occasion, and special trains conveyed the directors of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company, and a large number of the European and native inhabitants, to the scene of the opening ceremony.

The Government general order announcing the abolition of the Indian Navy was issued on the 22nd of April. On the 30th of April the Indian Navy was to cease to exist as an effective service. The officers receive honorary promotion on retirement. The dockyard establishment, is to be maintained till further orders. Captain John Young, I.N., is appointed Superintendent of the Dockyard and of the Bombay Marine.

At Herat matters up to the 6th ult. were in state quo, but there was a report of the serious illness and even death of the Dost.

CHINA.

We have news from Shanghai, by telegraph from Suez, to April 9.

Fohin is quiet. The rebel bands have been driven away from the vicinity of the entrenchments at Yien-Tien. Reinforcements are supposed to have been sent to the relief of Foochan. Saigon and Japan are both reported quiet.

The Reminiscences of Ariadne publishes some interesting news from China to the 31st of March. Prince Kung, yielding to the repeated recommendation of the Europeans representatives, had resolved to reorganise the Chinese army. That army, which, according to official reports, should consist of 1,000,000 infantry and 300,000 cavalry, has not a cer-tenth of the number under arms. It is composed of Tartar troops exclusively employed in the guard of the Emperor's person, and in the defence of the principal towns. These troops are, moreover, badly armed, badly officered, badly organised, and devoid of all military discipline. They are quite incapable of resisting the Taepings, who would have possessed themselves of Pekin long since had it not been for the European troops. Prince Kung, yesterday at length that such a state of things cannot longer be continued, and being entrusted with a full belief by the Emperor his nephew, who pretends that the safety of her son is identified with that of the dynasty, has resolved to create an active army, while retaining the old one as a reserve. The new army is to be organised and armed after the European fashion, and commanded by European officers. The native officers will be educated by French professors. This native school, to which none are admitted but young Chinese who show a disposition for a military life, will, it is expected, produce officers capable of contending with the Taepings.

NEW ZEALAND.

The yield of gold in Otago, says the Otago Times of March 18, is fast approaching that of Victoria, and probably in the course of a year or two will become gold country will be the leading producer. Judged by the comparison of the number of persons relatively employed, the Otago fields are many times more productive than those of Victoria. The gold is much more easily obtained, and without the enormous outlay for machinery which has characterised the Victorian gold-seeking during the last few years. The Otago goldfields are probably the richest that have ever been discovered. During the thirteen weeks they have been opened they have yielded over 107,000 ounces, exclusive of amounts brought down by private hands to a population scarcely more than 7000 souls. Truly wonderful.

The health of the Governor is occasioning some little anxiety, his Excellency having lately suffered considerably from severe indisposition; and by his advice he was last week absent from Official advices from New Zealand state that the bodies of fifty of the officers and crew of the Orpheus had been recovered, including those of Commodore Burnett, Lieutenant Jekyll, R.N., Rev. H. Hazlewood, Mr. Lillman, secretary, and Mr. Bertram, engineer. The remains of the Commodore were interred at Auckland with much pomp.

THE POLISH INSURRECTION.

The area of the Polish insurrection is extending to a very serious degree. With the exception of two districts, the whole of the Ukraine is in a state of insurrection, and a provincial insurgent chief has been proclaimed. In four districts of Podolia the revolutionary spirit has manifested itself, the peasants, however, remaining quiet; and in Volhynia the insurrection has not yet declared itself in opposite. The amnesty has been spurned on all sides, and the Revolutionary Committees are bold and active.

The revolutionary Town Council of Warsaw, in order to prevent the emigration of despondent citizens, has issued a proclamation forbidding any one to leave Lodz without a passport, signed by the National Government.

The telegram from Warsaw represent the National Committee as becoming daily more bold in the issue of proclamations regulating the affairs of the country. One of the latest proclamations orders the whole government of the country, and declares all financial acts and ordinances of the Russian Government to be null and void; and another forbids the Russian Minister, Alexander Lamb, accepting the presidency of the Warsaw Bank. The Lithuanian Provisional Government has issued a proclamation emancipating the serfs, and declaring, and assuring to them religious liberty and the partition of all landed property.

M. Grabowsky, a Councillor of State, has been appointed Director of the Interior in the Administration of Poland, in place of Count Keller, who has been called to Finland.

Private letters from Poland state that the Russian Government has ordered the civil and military authorities throughout to send hostages when without delay into the interior of Russia.

The Academic Senate and the municipality of Helsingfors, in Finland, have refused to sign an address of devotion to the Emperor of Russia in relation to the Polish insurrection. The inhabitants of Abo, the second capital of Finland, have also refused to sign the address recommended to all the Russian provinces by the military Governor. A decree of the Minister of War has been issued ordering the formation of new regiments for the occupation of the fortresses of Finland, and the placing of eight battalions on a war footing in that province.

Pressure has been used at Constantinople to induce the Government to join in remonstrance to Russia with reference to Finland. Even the Shah of Persia has been asked by France to join in the diplomatic protest. The Turkish Government has declined to do so, on the ground that Turkey was not a party to the treaties of 1815. In consequence, however, of a renewed request, the Shah has decided to take part in the matter, and has dispatched a note to St. Petersburg.

The Emperor has issued a rescript to the Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaievitch Nikolaievitch to manifest their sympathy with the Poles at the same time according to the Prince a most enthusiastic reception.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Another batch of Lancashire emigrants left Manchester last Saturday week for Australia. They took passage by the Southern Ocean.

Mr. O'Hagan, the Attorney-General for Ireland, was yesterday re-elected without opposition to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Captain Daniel O'Connell.

The formal commencement of the construction of a line between Lewisham and Tunbridge Railway took place on Saturday last, and a festive party assembled to do honour to the occasion.

The inhabitants and other inhabitants of Radnorshire have determined to perpetuate the memory of the G. C. Lewis in some tangible form. It is proposed to erect a memorial to him at Kington.

A master mariner and a ship carpenter have been committed for trial by the Liverpool magistrates on a charge of scuttling the Earl of Derby, missing since, off the coast of Ireland.

At the opening of the Cheshire adjourned Sessions on Monday, the chairman announced to what he considered the most sincere of crime in the district. The cases, he said, were both serious in number and nature. There were eighty-seven in all.

The Hastings life-boat, belonging to the National Life-boat Institution, went off in a gale of wind on Thursday from the east, and saved, under perilous circumstances, the crew of a fishing-smack which was driven on the rocks off Hastings.

A full report on the relative precedence of the Corporations of Dublin and Edinburgh has been made to the Lord Lieutenant by Sir Bernard Burke, Ulster King of Arms, and has been transmitted by his Excellency to the Secretary of State for the Home Department. "There is reason to believe," says the Dublin Evening Mail, "that this report establishes beyond all question the superior rights and higher precedence of Dublin."

During a brief but violent thunderstorm which passed over the Staffordshire Potteries yesterday week the tall and handsome spire of St. Mary's Church, Burslem, was struck by lightning, and the upper part of the framework of the topmost portion was destroyed. The falling masses of stone crashed through the roof of the church, destroying a number of pews. A number of palisades in the churchyard were also broken, together with the recently erected wires of the United Kingdom Telegraph Company, which had been carried close by the church.

On Wednesday evening the Mayor of Salford (W. Pearson, Esq.) gave the annual soiree, at Peel Park, in celebration of the reopening of the Museum and the opening of the Exhibition of Works of Art. The exhibition of pictures is in the south gallery, and consists of contributions from many of the principal patrons of art in this district. Among the company were the Mayor of Manchester, many members of the Corporations of Salford and Manchester, and several clergymen and ministers. The number of ladies and gentlemen present was upwards of four hundred.

An influential meeting of cotton spinners was held in Manchester on Tuesday, at which an association was formed to protect its members resident in Oldham, Rochdale, and other districts, against the practice, it is said, of certain unfair trade firms, seriously adulterate their cotton, and as the dealers in Liverpool have determined that no allowance for false packing shall be made in future for "moisture in the yarn," the spinners find themselves without any remedy to offer against the newly-formed association against fraud. An instance is given where a mule 10 lb. weight was found in one bale of cotton, and the owner was fined in it at the rate of 6s. 6d. per lb.

The reports of Mr. Farnall and Mr. Rawlinson to the Poor Law Board of the results of their inquiries in Lancashire as to the employment of the operatives, were published in the Manchester Guardian on Saturday. Mr. Farnell reviews distinct by district, the state of trade, and shows that the number of unemployed in each of the districts, in each place, but does not summarise the results; while Mr. Rawlinson says that what seems would be more to the point, and what could be more advantageously borrowed for that purpose, the works are chiefly overcrowded and disorganised, and consequently slow. The works are chiefly overcrowded and disorganised, and consequently slow. The works are chiefly overcrowded and disorganised, and consequently slow. The PLANTER'S RESIDENCE ON THE CUMBER RIVER, SOUTH CAROLINA.

In describing the sketch from which this Engraving is taken, our correspondent writes:—"Though we are in mid March here, the climate is most temperate and beautiful, resembling very much the warm sunny days of June at home. What the heat will be in the summer time you may readily imagine. After May, however, the planters residing on the river banks remove with their families to the 'pine barrens,' or upper country, the malaria arising from the swamps and rice lands making it dangerous for whites to remain during the hot months in the neighbourhood of the river. The trees to the right of the Engraving are three of the loftiest palmettos I have yet seen. The dwarf plant at their foot is the aloe, which blooms once or twice only in a century."

Our other Engraving, from drawing by the same hand, represents the old negro servants of the planter's family among his children. However repugnant slavery as an institution must be to the English mind, no useful purpose is to be gained by keeping the eyes shut to the undoubted fact that, where the slaves are well treated, many of them grow accustomed to, and happy under, their servitude. This becomes easier when it is recollected that the children of the family grow up among the negro domestic servants, and often learn to regard them with as much affection as they show their own parents.

DOMESTIC LIFE IN SOUTH CAROLINA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE FRENCH INTERNATIONAL DOG SHOW.

(From our own Correspondent.)

THE gardens of the Zoological Acclimatisation Society in the Bois de Boulogne have recently served, during eight days, as the rendezvous for deputations from nearly all the families of the canine race. From the fact of this being the first Exposition de Chiens ever attempted in France, the curiosity of the Parisians was aroused, and from the 2nd to the 10th of May the show increased in popularity, twenty thousand daily having paid for admission. On the third day the Emperor paid a long and attentive visit to the dog show, which appeared to interest his Majesty very much. As a matter of course, the following days witnessed crowds of the aristocracy "going to the dogs" in their elegant equipages, which thronged the avenues leading to the entrance of the Jardin d'Acclimatisation, where, following the Emperor's example, many made purchases at very liberal prices.

So far as the show itself was concerned, nothing could have turned out better. But the want of proper arrangements for the reception of the dogs before the show, the delay in the judging (which took place after the inauguration of the Exposition), and the impossibility of getting the catalogues printed in time in consequence of the confusion prevail ing from the outset, leave a certain stigma on the generally-recognised talent of the French for organisation which nothing but a second show more ably conducted can efface. A very valuable dog belonging to one of the exhibitors died in the garden from the effects of the cool night air; and this misfortune acted as a warning to many of the owners of fancy dogs, who adopted the plan of calling for their delicate pets after the close of each day's show.

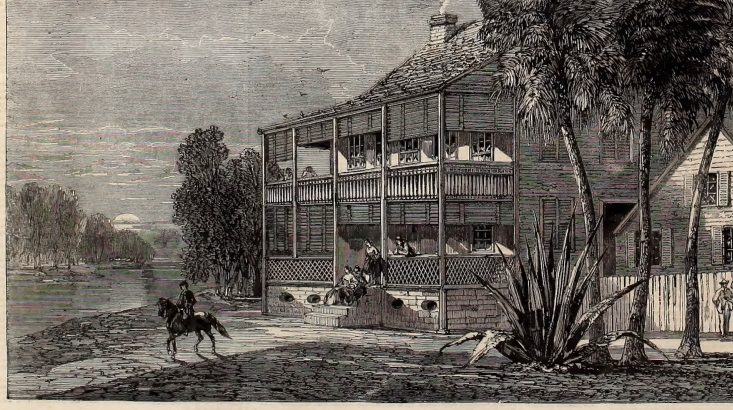
The entire collection of dogs exhibited was divided into six categories and thirty-two classes. The first category (useful dogs) comprised ten classes; the second (hunting dogs), seven classes; the third (pointers, setters, and retrievers), seven classes; the fourth (harriers), two classes; the fifth (fancy dogs), five classes; and the sixth (foreign dogs), one class. There were various prizes allotted to the different classes, and valuable medals of honour to the best dog in each category. The judging lasted several days; and amongst the jurors appointed to award the prizes were some of the most distinguished sportsmen of France, assisted, for England, by Mr. Walker and Mr. Matthias Smith, both of Halifax, to whom we are indebted for valuable information not otherwise obtainable in the absence of anything like a timely official report.

The retrievers as a class, though small in number, were excellent in quality. Mr. J. T. Riley, of Halifax, Yorkshire (who again carried off honours with his famous Rose and Royal, winners of first prizes also at Holborn, Islington, London, Sheffield, &c.), exhibited several admirable specimens of this description. At the Emperor's visit, on Tuesday, Mr. Riley had the honour of an introduction to his Majesty, who graciously expressed himself much pleased with the pair of retrievers (by Royal and Rose) recently presented to him by Mr. Riley.

The kennels of the French foxhounds were admitted by the judges to be superior to anything we have in England, both for scent and speed; but so much cannot be said of the deerhounds and greyhounds, which were mostly inferior.

The St. Bernards generally were also weak in number and quality, only one dog deserving praise. The Labradors and the Newfoundlands may be cited as superior in the two classes to any ever before exhibited in Europe. Among the bulldogs there were few deserving particular remark; however, we noticed one of very superior quality, belonging to Mr. M'Donald, of London. With regard to bull-terriers, the French have a great deal to learn as to the points of breeding.

The pointers, though largely entered, were ordinary in quality compared to those exhibited in England. The celebrated dog "Ranger,"



PLANTER'S RESIDENCE ON THE CUMBER RIVER, SOUTH CAROLINA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

1, 2. The Baron de Rahbi's Pure French Hounds of Gascony. 3. French Dogs of Barbet, for Duck-hunting. 4. Japanese Dog. 5. Knight's Harrier. 6, 7. Mr. Riley's Retrievers. 8. M. Gaisner's French Griffon.

WINNERS OF PRIZES AT THE INTERNATIONAL DOG SHOW, PARIS.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

the champion of England, belonging to Mr. Newton, of Stanford, Lincolnshire, carried off the first prize in his class. We may here make the remark that the French pointers are too light for their work, and incapable of undergoing great fatigue. Of the setter class generally, we have only to say that they were but of ordinary merit, and presented no remarkable specimens; but the Russian barriers were a splendid lot, and such a collection as no Englishman ever yet saw at a dog show.

The toy terriers were but few, though first-rate in quality, and principally from England.

In the inquiry of chiens de luxe the King Charles and Blenheim spaniels contributed by Mr. M'Donald were very fine, as were also two pugs exhibited by Dr. Gordon; and Mr. Turnbull's still is but two pugs exhibited by Dr. Gordon; and Mr. Turnbull's still is but just to mention the very beautiful Maltese dog, "Fido," exhibited by Mr. Mandeville, of London, who took the first prize at the Jardin, as he has previously done at Birmingham, Holborn (twice), Islington, and Ashburnham Hall.

The models from packs of hounds were exhibited in a booth set apart for that purpose, and divided into suitable compartments, so arranged that the dogs could be conveniently seen through the rails on either side. The draughts were sent principally by noblemen and gentlemen who had determined to take advantage of Napoleon's desirous of giving éclat to the exhibition, the Duke d'Osmond, the being en route for Spain, followed by those belonging to the Comte d'Osmond, the Rochefoucaulds, &c. The most beautiful as to form and colour were M. de Lavergne, Lateur's Couchant, of third rate merit. Mr. Rowland's so famous in the eighteenth century. They were nearly all alike—black, fawned, and white—with long and very pendulous ears. The old French critic, "their general appearance and qualities must have caused a feeling of envy in the breast of the late Beaufort," the ancient ancestors of whose pack have not left in France a very favourable impression of his Grace's hounds.

Out of the six categories of dogs just exhibited at the Garden of Acclimatation we have selected a few for illustration, from photographs taken on the spot for the society by Mr. Henry Bedford.

Our selection cannot, however, do justice to a show composed of nearly a thousand specimens of the canine race.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 30.

SUNDAY, May 24.—Whit Sunday. The birthday of Queen Victoria, 1819.

MONDAY, 25.—Expulsion of the Bonaparte family from Napoleon III.) from this prison at Ham, 1845. The Princess Helena born, 1846. Moon's last quarter, 5h. 47m. p.m.

TUESDAY, 26.—St. Augustin, the first Archbishop of Canterbury (died about 610). Victory of the Spaniards at Bailen, whereby they drove the French from Sicilian, 1734. The first Handel commemoration, 1784. Napoleon I. incorporated Idiswell King of Italy, with the crown of Lombardy, at Milan, 1805. Victory of the Poles over the Russians at Ostrolenka, 1831.

WEDNESDAY, 27.—Earlier words, "Ascension Day." Habeas Corpus Act passed, 1670. St. Petersburg founded by the great Czar Peter, 1703. Corfu and its fine Bath revived, 1726. Quebec taken by the British, 1759.

THURSDAY, 28.—Battle of Sedlitzwitz Bay: the Dutch fleet defeated by the Duke of York, afterwards King James II., 1665. Peninsular War, 1811. Peninsular London, consecrated, 1776.

FRIDAY, 29.—Constantinople taken by the Turks, 1453. King Charles II. born, 1630; restored to his throne, 1660.

SATURDAY, 30.—Joan of Arc burnt as a witch at Rouen, 1431. The Austrians defeated by the Sardinians, at Palestro, 1859.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 30.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M.	A. M.	A. M.	A. M.	A. M.	A. M.	A. M.
0	0	0	0	0	0	0
30	1	2	3	4	5	6
7	8	9	10	11	12	13
14	15	16	17	18	19	20
21	22	23	24	25	26	27
28	29	30	31

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.
Lat. 51° 29' 0" N., Long. 0° 18' 0" W. Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF			THERMOMETER.			WIND.	RAIN in the Day.
	Barometer Corrected at 32°.	Dew Point.	Humidity. Saturation = 100.	Highest of Temp. in the Day.	Mean of Temp. in the Day.	Lowest of Temp. in the Night.	Direction and Force.	Inches.
	Inches	32°·0	45·3	°79	53·1	41·3	S8W. WSW.	·410
14	29·866	51·0	42·0	°73	59	46·0	S8W. WSW.	·426
15	29·901	52·3	39·0	°77	61·2	46·0	S8W. WSW.	·353
16	29·901	47·2	44·2	°76	59	42·1	S8W.	·332
17	29·876	47·1	44·2	°76	59	42·1	S8W.	·190
18	29·875	50·1	44·5	°81	59·5	41·4	SE. SSE. E.	·213
19	29·850	49·9	47·3	°74	57·5	41·4	SE. SSE. E.	·279
								·303
								·276
								·327
								·276
								·427
								·327

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the Shore days, to cellar, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected	29·326	29·361	29·737	29·813	29·850	29·876
Temperature of Air	50·0	50·0	50·0	50·0	50·0	50·0
Temperature of Evaporation	42·0	50·0	52·0	57·0	52·0	52·0
Direction of Wind	...	E.	E.	W.	W.	W.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—The greatly successful comedy of FINDING, or, Spy and Counterspy, is announced for this evening, with Mr. Buckstone, will appear Every Evening as a Quarter to Eight. After which, the Farce of THE LOAN OF A LOVER. Concluding with the Comedietta of MARRIED FOR MONEY. The Box Office of Prince of Wales is open daily.

THEATRE ROYAL, LYCEUM.—MONDAY, and every Evening during the Week, A RUDDIGORE ATTACK—Messrs. Shore, Gardini, Widdicomb, Miss Rosina Wright, and Miss Lee. After which, the Burlesque of ROBERT THE DEVIL; or, The Nightmare and the Ninepins. Concluding with the Ballet of the Romantic Dryads, in Three Acts, and Prologue, entitled THE NUTCRACKER AND THE KING OF THE MICE. Music by Tchaikowsky. Principal Characters by Mesdames Vandenhoff, Bonfanti, Broughton, Wilkinson, Lavenu, Cavalieri, Charles Gordon, Raymond, and Dewsnip; Misses Carlotta Leclercq, Kate Terry, E. Lee, Cavalieri, Lavenu, Gordon, Wilkinson, Broughton, and Bonfanti; Messrs. Charles Gordon, and Mr. Walter Montgomery and engaged. Box office will be given of their first appearance.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. ALFRED WIGAN. Every Evening at Seven, the ANGEL OF THE ATTIC. At Eight, MR. WIGAN'S NEW BURLESQUE, entitled ROBERT MACAIRE—Mr. R. Wigan as Robert Macaire; Mr. Addison as Bertrand; Mr. Paul Bedford as Jacques Strop; Mr. H. Cooper as Jacques Dumont; Mr. Frank Matthews as Jacques Durand; and Mr. James Bolton, Lucy, and Isaac, and DOMESTIC ECONOMY. Commence at 6 o'clock.

COLOSSEUM, REGENT'S-PARK.—Re-embellished, under New Management. Re-open for the Season on Whit-Monday. PANORAMA of LONDON and PARIS, and MAGNIFICENT DIORAMA of LISBON. Suites of Orchestral Music. Vocal Concerts. Ascent of the Great Pedestrian Tower. Exhibition of Models of Modern Locomotives. The Juvenile Ostrich's Miscreant, Mrs. Johnson. Cleanery, the eminent Swiss Gymnast. Sole Venetian, Mrs. Stewart Howard. Solo Performances on the Zither. All the world-famed specialties of the day. Open Daily, Twelve to Five and Seven to Ten. One Shilling; Children and Schools, half price.

The Duchess of Inverness will be honoured with the company of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales at dinner, on Monday next, at Kensington Palace.

The Duchess of Somerset has returned to town from Bulstrode Park, Bucks.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Lansdowne and the Earl of Rosslyn left Lansdowne House for Bowood Park until after the Whitsuntide recess.

The Earl of Winchilsea has arrived in town from Rastwell Park. The Countess and family will return to town on the 30th inst.

The Countess of Ashburnham and family have arrived in Lower-street for the season. His Lordship remains at his seat, Ashburnham-place, Sussex.

Lord Bingham has arrived in London from Cannes.

Lady Chelmsford has arrived at the family residence in Eaton-square from Tunbridge Wells.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

It is rumoured that Bishop Trower is likely to be the new Bishop of Gibraltar.

The Rev. William Obe Cleave, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Jesus College, Cambridge, has been elected Principal of Victoria College, Upper Canada.

The Equitation papers record the death of Mr. George Edmondson, the Principal of Queenwood College, in Hants.

The clergy of the diocese of Armagh, in conjunction with some of the laity, are about to fill the window in the south transept of the cathedral with stained glass, in the highest style of art, memorials of their late diocesan.

The Governors of the Corporation of the Sons of the Clergy elected, on Wednesday, twenty-two widows of clergymen (out of thirty-seven applicants) and twenty-three aged unmarried daughters of clergymen (out of forty-one) to candidates) to the enjoyment of the annuities and privileges of the charity, to those who were unsuccessful. The number of ladies elected on Thursday afternoon, 7th, to the anniversary of the society, was upwards of 300, and the number when there was a full choral service by the whole choir in Merchant Taylors' Hall, after which the Lord Mayor presided at the dinner in Merchant Taylors' Hall.

The parish church of St. Peter's, Little Wittenham, in the Archdeaconry of Berks, was reopened, with full choral service, on Thursday, having been entirely rebuilt, with the exception of the tower. St. Michael's district church, Wyfold, erected mainly through the liberality of the Rev. C. Hall, who gave the site and £1000, was consecrated on Tuesday week.—St. John's Church, Keighley, after a thorough restoration, was reopened on Sunday last. The Bishop of Salisbury preached.—On the following day the Bishop consecrated the new churchyard of Brotherton, in the West Riding of Yorkshire.—On former the pious gift of the late Miss Armitage of Headley, and the latter of the Rev. Earl of Mexborough.—Ecclesfield Church, Lincolnshire, was reopened on the 7th inst.

The record reading of Mr. Beverley's "Act of Uniformity" bill is fixed for Wednesday, June 24. It proposes "To repeal so much of the Act of 13 Elizabeth as relates to disabling such persons from holding benefices or living." The declarations now required are recited, and the bill proceeds:—"Whereas it is expedient that so much of the said declarations as remains unrepealed should not be required of any fellow or tutor of any college, but that a form of declaring be made for such fellow or tutor:" "That after the passing of this Act no fellow or tutor of any college, hall, or house of learning shall be required to make or subscribe the declarations in the said declaration, nor shall any such person suffer any penalty or forfeiture by reason of not making or subscribing such declaration."

The Incorporated Church Building Society held its annual meeting on Friday in Sackville-street. Many encouraging facts were made in aid of the following objects:—Building churches at Odd Rode, in the parish of Astbury, Cheshire; Wednesbury, Staffordshire; Cheltenham, Gloucester; rebuilding the churches at Sutton, Surrey, and Newchurch, near Chepstow; providing or otherwise increasing the accommodation in the churches at Ringstead, near King's Lynn, Norfolk; Bramhall, near Alvanley, Cheshire; Bromley, near High Wycombe, Bucks; Bramfield, near Hertford; Horton, near Chippenham; Ickham, near Sittham, Cambridge; Maidenwell, near Lincoln; Ockbrook, near Langley Mill, Derbyshire; Ossington, near Newark; Ringstead, near Thrapston.

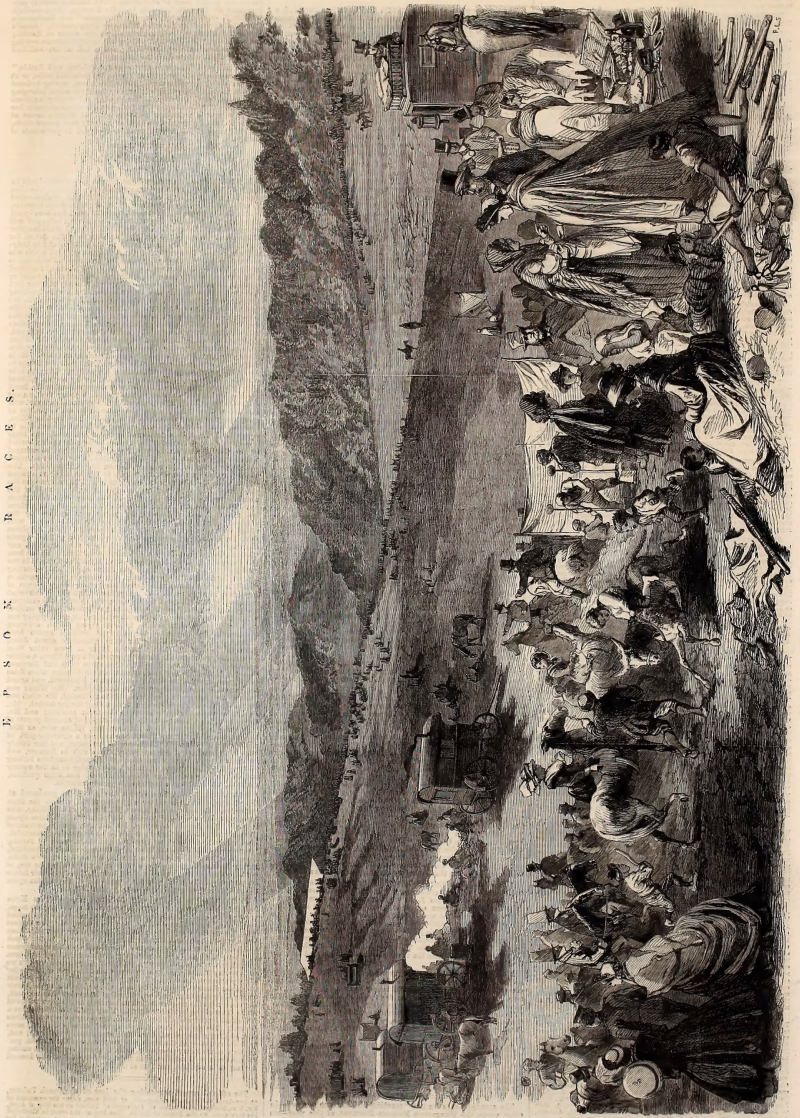
An influential meeting of the clergy of the rural deanery of Southwark was held yesterday week, under the presidency of the Rural Dean, to consider the propriety of taking steps to secure a larger share of legislative attention for the metropolitan portions of the county of Surrey upon the reconstruction of the see of Winchester. The meeting was unanimous in its desire for a division of the diocese: and men of all parties and shades of opinion in the district were present about the great and ever additional number of Bishops. The meeting agreed to petition the two Houses of Parliament to the effect that part of the revenues of the bishopric under the Act passed in the reign of William IV., was to be transferred to the diocese of London in order that there might be a new standing order of the Houses to formed into an independent diocese, or that at least the county of Surrey, or the metropolitan portion north of the Thames, should be the exclusive charge of one Bishop. The question of funds ought to prove no difficulty in the way of forming such a see, as the revenues at present accruing to the Bishop of Winchester would be more than sufficient for both dioceses.

Her Majesty in Council has disallowed the ordinances of the Durham University remembrancers, appointed in 1861, which ordinances have recently been voted by commissioners of the Durham University. The commissioners have declined to amend their ordinances, so that, practically, their ordinances will have to be set at nought, pending the decision of Parliament in the result. The commissioners recommended that there should be a school of theology, which was to confer a two years' course of study, and degrees of "Master of Theology" and "Bachelor of Theology," and provided that "no such or similar degree shall be required for admission to any office or place of the University; but every person proceeding to a degree in the school of theology shall on first taking that degree sign a declaration that the Church of England and Ireland as by law established." In addition to the schools of theology, there were to be schools of arts and physical science, which conferred the degrees of B.A. and M.A., and of B.S. and M.S., for which no religious qualification was required. The management of the University was to be distributed to a senate and convocation, the duty of the senate being to provide for the statutes of the University, and that of convocation to approve the statutes for this purpose as they think fit, provided that no Diocesan shall be required to be a member of the Church Convocation. Convocation was to have a professor of divinity, a professor of Hebrew, and other professors as convocation may from time to time determine, and to have the power of the various boards of secular learning. The senate, with those of convocation, with, and the endowments of them, together with those of the various other scholarships, prizes, fellowships, &c., were to be converted into exhibitions. The proposed ordinances had the cordial support of the Bishop of Durham.

Both Houses of Convocation assembled at Westminster on Tuesday for the transaction of business. In the Upper House the Archbishop of Canterbury presided; and there were present the Bishops of London, Winchester, St. Asaph, Oxford, St. Asaph, Lincoln, Llandaff, Worcester, Llandaff, and Chichester. It was ordered that an address should be presented to the Prince and Princess of Wales on their marriage. The petitions were then presented in reference to Bishop Colenso's book, and praying the House to take speedy action in the matter. A petition was also presented from the clergy of foreign chaplaincies, and the advisability of appointing a Bishop for their superintendence. In the Lower House there was a large attendance of members. A report was brought up from a committee appointed to investigate the question of Bishop Colenso's book, which recommended that no further notice into the contents of the book, with a view to the censure of the author thereof, should be taken, but that the matter be conveyed to the Upper House.—The Upper House was engaged on Wednesday in a discussion on the Bishop of Natal's book. In reply to the answer to the report of the Lower House on the subject, the proposed by the Bishop of Winchester, the Archbishop of Canterbury gave expression in character and subversive of faith in the Bible, but added that, as Convocation had no reason to believe that the book had been submitted to the judgment of an ecclesiastical court, they declined to take further notice in the matter. The Bishop of Oxford moved that the declaration as to the dangerous character of the book on the ground that no reasons were given for the conclusion arrived at. The Bishop of Lincoln objected to the second part of the answer on the ground that Convocation ought not to wait for the action of an ecclesiastical court before entering on the matter. Eventually the answer was adopted. The principal business in the Lower House on Wednesday was a discussion on the best mode of relaxing the stringency of the Act of Uniformity.

THE CHAPTERS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. J. W. Jones, Rector of Heveringley, to be Archdeacon of Bangor; the Rev. L. J. Barrington to be Rural Dean of Hackney; the Rev. T. Woodyard to be Rural Dean of Ely; the Rev. W. D. Morrice, Vicar of Longstanton Berewell, to be Canon of Lyne Regis, in the Cathedral Church of Sarum.—The Rev. Thomas Bowdler Chandler, B.A., to be Chaplain to the Forces

EPSOM RACES.



EPSOM DOWNS ON A DERBY MORNING.

SALE OF A WINNER ON THE RACE-GROUND.—SEE PAGE 564.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

It is always a symptom of reviving energy in the House of Commons when discussions grow personal in all senses of the term. Not long ago, in endeavouring to fix a character on a then featureless Session, we ventured to designate our collective legislative wisdom the "polite Parliament." Of a surety that title no longer appertains to the Lower House, for everybody seems to be getting very rude to everybody. This assertion we will proceed to illustrate presently, when we come to consider certain personal explanations which have recently taken place. Then, too, a favourite pastime of the House has been revived, which consists in setting to work individual and bodily upon a Member. Hours Members assemble than when the debatable ground. Some Members are shown up by one side and laid to their undertakers by the other. Each party seems always provided with that taste for chasing something which we are told is natural and innate in man. Again, on occasional occasions, but chiefly for the same purpose, a sensible and more or less obscure member have been very angry with Ministers on account of illiberal Parliamentary treatment, and minikin bluster has accordingly been rife. For the benefit of strangers, it may be said that the petulance of the Irish Member, Royal, whose name—Middleton adds—have been worth attending, at any rate by those who come to witness them only once or twice a year.

Even to the three-sodden habitué of the House of Commons of a quarter of a century's standing there has come a novelty. Thank Heaven for the Home Department, who had charge of the bill which was in hand, is a member for a Welsh constituency, and has the most intelligent spirit of the natives of the Principality was gloriously brought out. For they did spirituality and intelligence into the English language when they got angry, which every one of them did the moment they opened their mouths. It was not only what they said, but the tone in which they said it, the fury, the storm, the hurly-burly, and one point only in the first clause of the bill had been dealt with, and we are not nearly disposed of, when Mr. Hennessy, who is therefore insensible, English member hinted at an adjournment, but received no significant rejoinder to the effect that the Irish and Welsh members were together at that moment, and as it was not likely that such a proposition would have the slightest chance of success, Mr. Roe it is indeed nobody seems exactly to know; but the bill stands for discussion again, and if it is debated in the same way it will be hard to particularly to lengthen the Session. Certainly, in that same evening there was a regular set-to between the Corporations of the city of London and the Metropolitan Board of Works by their respective champions in the House. Each came out in a special strength, as it was the last night but one of the debate. What may be called its fervour was singularly different from that which usually pervades the House. Why do not speaker-reporters and redundant writers of letters—those may be found elsewhere in the House—but of an indescribable something which pitilessly was characteristic of the combatants on the occasion? Whether the two bodies was their respective fitness for doing certain metropolitan improvement, the House, in the language of the law, have returned a special verdict couched in the phrase "Arcades ambo."

Every now and then in the dull season newspaper readers are amused by the appearance of an ex cathedra decision on some question of European politics by Lord Palmerston, "Downing-street" or "Printmakers." Some of these are in Sheilish, and some, we believe, in Cheverish; but in their leading characteristics they resemble each remarkably. Well, consciously or unconsciously, as the case may be, this system has been imitated in the House of Commons. At the head of the Foreign Affairs Committee there is the noble Lord, Unfortunately for Ministers, the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs was himself, when out of office, one of the most type—type of a class of gentlemen who settle diplomatic complications with marvellous ease and celerity, and personify a well-known saying about certain persons reaching an unexpected intelligence quicker than a clock. Mr. Layard has not yet been trained by office out of his former characteristics, and is always getting in dangerous positions, where he is obliged to be covered by the sevenfold Tchemonian shield of Palmerston. This time the row was once more about the slip which the Government are not keeping members together who don't want to stay to hear paroductory orations from little men on Friday night. Mr. Liddell, who has hitherto declined himself gracefully upon the subject of steam pinnaces tolls and details of shipping law, crammed into him by local constituents, suddenly appeared in the character of the great expounder of our relations with China. To this everybody made him quite welcome, as it would be had some dozen men with a practical knowledge on the Pragmatic sanction, the expectation probably being as strong in the one case as in the other. And, accordingly, he was allowed to deliver, for a couple of hours, a by no means dull lecture, which one very creditable to his industry, and to illustrate his oratory by his special resources, the chief of which was a pocket-full of coins of the statues of the Flying Mercury, and the revere attitudes of Nydeon at St. Martin's, when he was particularly wrapt up in Mr. Hallam Lowe. He was followed by Mr. Baillie, who dropped his caustic sentiments upon slow distillation from Leith, and by a large number of members in the house varied from seventeen to twenty. Amongst them were Mr. Cobden and Mr. Henry Seymour, who were evidently in great wrath. At long last, about eleven P.M., Mr. Layard looked about for somebody to follow in vain, and the most indulgent of Speakers at length put the question, which was carried without a cry, and the subject lapsed at once. Then up got one after another the members who might have spoken had there been the slightest hope, premature extinction, but did not, and implied that it was the business of Ministers to fill up the dull time of the evening and to talk to empty benches. That may be their duty, and it was not denied; but Mr. Layard's excuse was that, there being several other motions on foreign affairs on the paper, it was not worth put the question that the House go into Committee of Supply, and which he would have to notice, he was not in his impudence aware, the great, lumbering King of the Vale, and over both of them jumped King of Utopia and Fantastic, alighting almost on their noses, and being lengths at a moment when inches were about of consequence.

Once fairly over the rank, and Fordham came along on the upper side of the course, apparently about half a length in advance of everything; the ever-cautious Challoner stealing along the lower ground, and hoping his time. Long before the distance, there began the thunder-bouts of "Macaroni!" "The favourite wins!" "Challoner!" "Fordham!"—hoarse and man-on can undefined Babel: and on on to the Stand, where Fordham got a pull, to enable him to rise the last hill. But it was Challoner's turn now, and, taking the hold of the Two Thousand winner on the Rowley, he settled on him with whip and knee, caught the six-hound-guinea colt, who rode a slight attitude in the very last stride, and sailed the Derby for "Naylor and Newmarket" by a short head. So close was the victory of the first four that till the signals for it went up no one on the hill knew for a certainty which had won; but still a positive certainty that even over such a deep course Lord Calder's ridden more tenderly, would have beaten everything for speed. Challoner's handling of Macaroni was, as it always is, a model of patience and tact, and he well deserves the honour of having carried off the Oaks, the St. Leger, the Two Thousand, and the Derby in succession, and three of them for Mr. Naylor. As an little England is up in the Oaks, the result leaves matters very rosy as regards the St. Leger, for which, after this latter disappointment, Lord Calder will no doubt be prepared to put Macaroni in subscription. Not only, although Lord Stanford cannot have a cut at the fallen crook with Lady Augusta, but, unfortunate, if there are no more to be run, unlucky to do battle for him. Whether John Scott can change old lamps into new this year we cannot say readily doubtful, but Mr. Naylor's stables are all in it; and so are Scarbarometer and King of the Vale, whose "knock out" at Scarborough Corner leaves their chances very much as with Macaroni a mere question—at least to their owners. And so ended, in rain and gloom, the eighty-fourth edition of the Derby Day.

EPSOM RACES.—TUESDAY.

Craven Stakes.—Adventurer, 1. Isolino, 2. Comet, 3.
Heathcote Cup.—Livingston, 1. Miss Jolin, 2. Weiland, 3.
Brighton Stakes.—Drummer Boy, 1. Libellous, 2. Ellerton, 3.
Woodcote Stakes.—Fife d'Ar, 1. Red Rover, 2. Lady Hermit, 3.
Rous Stakes.—Wingrave, 1. Axe of Clubs, 2. Prince Plausible, 3.
Horton Handicap.—Jim Clegg, 1. Donat I., 2. Scholastic, 3.

WEDNESDAY—THE DERBY DAY.
Epsom Town Plate.—Selection, 1. Merry Maid, 2. Libellous, 3.
DERBY STAKES.—Macaroni, 1. Lord Clifden, 2. Rapid Rhone, 3.
Blue Maiden, 4.
Manor Plate.—Birt Cheap, 1. Glance e., 2. Scathall, 3.
Banstead Plate.—Sunbeam, 1. Ellerton, 2. Lady Hermit, 3.
Epsom Cup.—Atherstone, 1. Zetland, 2. Buckstone, 3.
Walton Stakes.—Mysterious Lady, 1. Surbiton Boy, 2. Levington, 3.
Grand Stand Stakes.—Rubicon, 1. Millionaire, 2. Amy, 3.
Tattenham Stakes.—Lucifer Wood, 1. Shearing ramp.
Queen's Plate.—Caller Ou, 1. Berchestina, 2. Necklace, 3.

THE FARM.

A PORTION of the farm stock of the late Sir Tatton Sykes, including the two-shear Leicester wethers and some of the cutted rams, were sold at the Aldbrough Farm, near Malton, last week to a splendid good price. The remainder of the Leicester flock will, we hear, be sold about May 17. "The thick and thrifty Leicester sheep" was what the late Baronet followed. He had been a breeder for seventy years, and the flock now consisted of 7 shear rams, 5 shearling rams, 282 breeding ewes with about 300 lambs, 162 grimmer hogs, and 95 wether hogs. The sale of the stud will occupy the Messrs. Tattersalls three days, viz. Aug. 15-16-17. Shorthorns and Cotswolds head the catalogue, which will comprise about 300 lots, 60 of them being breed mares, all foals by the above horses and their dams. All mares will be about 11 hread mares, by 18 distinct sires—46 of them sired by Sir Tatton Sykes, 3rd baronet, 3 by Sir Tatton Sykes, 4th baronet, while Sir Tatton had of late years bred most of his winners; and there are also 7 Andrewses, 5 Casters, 10 Daniels, 8 Farmers, 3 Foxes, 3 Hobsons, 3 Stones, and 3 Tomlinson fillies have been put to the stud, but the five fours, and three by him alone number about forty. There are some maidens among eight years old, and among the rest are several sold in an own sister to The Lawyer. The fifty-one yearlings comprise nine fillies and seven colts by Fashionable Strain, and the nine colts are by Colsterdale, and eight fillies and six colts by Daniel O'Rourke. For extent and size it will be the most remarkable sale that has ever been known in England, and racing men, breeders, farmers, hunting men, and dealers will all find something to their mind. The catalogues will be ready, and the stud will be open to inspection, by previous perusal to the sale.

Mr. Edward's ponies were sold, as usual, on Monday, and, both for looks and action, were generally allowed to be the nicest lot he has brought up to "The Corner." Two old favourites were the chestnut thoroughbred mares, which had carried Mr. Milward over Leicestershire, and went back there for 80 gs. and 70 gs. respectively, to Lord Rendlesham and Mr. Chapman. The other ten averaged 60 gs. Lord Dudley gave the top price, 110 gs. for Marigold; and we believe that both for the late arrival of the Queen's Jubilee Pony Marigold and Heartsease would have become the property of his Lord ship, at considerably higher figures. Lord Rendlesham bought Keswick, who looked strong enough to carry 18 stone, at 56 guineas, and Lord Yarborough got Guardian for 50 guineas.

The North Essex Agricultural Society held their meeting on Thursday, at Basingstoke; and we must remind the owners of stock that June 1 is the last day of entry for the Royal Show, which is fixed at Worcester, and the International show at Hamburg.

The Mansion House meeting dazzled by their Common Pleas failure to overturn the steam-plough verdict against them, are about to carry the case into a Court of Error. The magistrates held that no toll was payable in consequence of the 1st and 2nd William IV., cap. 25, and 3rd George IV., cap. 126, enacting that no such animal should be charged toll when they were on their way from one pasture to another. On the part of the appellant, it was contended that the intention in charging the animals from field to field was simply to "freshen" them for market, and not to pasture them within the meaning of the statute, and, therefore, that the defendants from toll did not apply; but the Court held that no toll was payable.

A SMITH'S association as an extensive scale is announced at the Hanover-square Rooms on June 2, in aid of the National Hospital for Paralysis and Epilepsy. The chair is to be taken by the Archbishop of Canterbury and Princess May.

At the inauguration of the Ancona Railway last week, Prince Humbert, son of Victor Emmanuel, was received with the greatest enthusiasm. The Prince, accompanied by the Ministers of the line, will visit the Abruzzi, returning to Middle of next week.

The Cassells papers mention that the Red River settlement have petitioned the provincial Parliament for the opening of a road from the Lake of the Woods to Winnipeg, in the Red River and Saskatchewan regions, and the establishment of a telegraphic line.

It is estimated that there are thirty tons of American silver remanded in Toronto, Hamilton, and Montreal in Canada. The following placard is hung up in the Canadian merchants' stores—viz., American silver taken at par—Canadian silver.

In the Federal army there are 74 Major-Generals, whose pay is 7,500 dollars a year, and 328 Brigadiers, who receive 5,000 dollars, whose pay is 1,000 dols. each. There are 24 Brigadier-Generals, whose pay is 5,000 dols. each. The number of Brigadiers-General on the retired list pay is 1,600 dols. each.—New York Tribune.

The Bituminous Coal Refuge Union, which represents the coal-mining companies throughout the country, has been honoured by the approval of the Prince of Wales, who has intimated to the committee his willingness to accept the office of patron. The Union has purchased a donation of £10 to the funds of the society.

The annual distribution of prizes to the students at King's College took place on Wednesday evening in the rooms of the college in Somerset-street. The Right Hon. W. H. Gladstone, M.P., presided, and addressed the students on the advantages of education, and congratulated them on the success which had attended the institution. There were 1,000 students paying most of them with a kind sent to the recipient. There was a large attendance of the parents and friends of the pupils. The Rev. Mr. Barrow was the Dean of the evening classes department, gave an account of the rise and progress of the institution. They comprised a large number of pupils—many of them—matriculated students and unmatriculated students. They opened with 200 students, and last year there were 1,000. The number of the day following rose to 104, and at present there were 92. The number of unmatriculated students had risen from 117 to 235, and at present there were 610 attending evening classes.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

THE directors of the bank of England have found it necessary to increase their minimum quotation for money on Saturday last to 3½ per cent, and as the open market rate of discount has been steadily rising during the week, nearly one million sterling in gold is on passage from America, the public have had to pay 4 per cent for accommodation at the Stock Exchange. In some instances there has been a slight improvement in them. The Unfunded Debt has been reduced £28,900 on the week ended to-day.

In all quarters there has been an active demand for accommodation, but to-day's return shows the lowest figure for the best commercial paper as follows:—

Thirty day bills,	..	..	3½ per cent.	Four months'	.. .. 4½ per cent.
Two months'	..	..	4 ,,	Six months'	.. .. 4½ ,,
Three months'	..	..	4 ,,

In this week the Directors of the Bank of England further advanced their minimum rate of discount to four per cent.

The Bank of England has raised the bonuses are now giving 2 per cent for money at call, and 2½ per cent if with seven days' notice of withdrawal.

The Bank of England has raised the bonuses are now giving 2 per cent for money at call, and 2½ per cent if with seven days' notice of withdrawal.

The following are the quotations in gold and silver bullion:—

	Bank rate.	Open market.		Bank rate.	Open market.
	per cent.	per cent.		per cent.	per cent.
Paris	3	2½	4 months	3½	3½
Vienna	4	3½	6 months	3½	3½
Berlin	3	2½	Hamburg	3	2½
Frankfort	3	2½	Petersburg	6	5

The import of the precious metals here on a very moderate scale. The second of the month has been a dull one, and the price of silver in the Indian bazaars quoted at £154,750, and £50,000 in gold has been forwarded to Constantinople.

The latest advices from New York bring the exchange at 16⅛, and the premium on gold at 1¼ per cent. Gold is coming to hand from the American exports of gold to this country.

The Bank of England has sold on India took place on Wednesday. The applications for 20 lakhs were for upwards of £1,000,000. The rates were 1s. 1 11-16d. per rupee on Calcutta, and 1s. 11¾d. on Bombay and Madras.

The Indian Council have disposed of drafts to the amount of £1,000,000 sterling. The Bank of England have realised £4 to £, of the London Audit, 1½ to 2½, and of the London Chartered Bank, 2½ to 3½ per cent.

On Monday National Stocks were inactive; nevertheless, the quotations remained firm. Consols were done at 98¼ to ⅜ for money, and 98⅜ to ½ ex. Reduced and New Three per Cents, 98⅛; Bank Stock, 352 to 354; India Stock, 350 to 352; Exchequer Bonds, 1894, 101 to 101½; ditto, 1895, 101 to 101½; India Bonds, 1½ to 1⅝ prem. Exchequer Bills, 4s. dis. to par. The Australian Stocks were quiet and steady. Victoria 6 per Cents, for Tuesday, 93¾ ¼; ditto, for Time, 92 to ½; Bank Stock, 212 to 216; Queensland 6 per Cents, 103 to 104; Land Bonds, 230 to 232; Ditto Five per Cents, 102½ to 103; Rupee Paper, 105½ to 107½, and 111½; India Bonds, 1¾ to 1⅞; Land Bonds, 1¾ to 1⅞, to-day's rate for money, 2½ per cent. On Wednesday Consols, for Money, were 98⅜; ditto, for Account, 91 to ½; Bank Stock, 352 to 354; India Stock, 350 to 352; Rupee Paper, 105½ to 107½, and 111½; India Bonds were 1¾ to 1⅞ prem.; and Exchequer Bills 4s. dis. to par. The Australian Stocks were quiet, although without alteration of the market. Consols, for Money, sold at 98⅜; for Account, 92½ to ⅝ ex div.; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 98⅛; Bank Stock, 352 to 354; India Stock, 350 to 352.

The leading feature in the Foreign House is an advance in Confederate Scrip to 1¼ prem. Great bonds, in the early part of the week, were offered for sale, but of late there has been a better demand, and the Stock Securities have ruled inactive. Brazilian Five per Cents have marked 92½ to ⅝; Chilian Six per Cents, 1885, 104 to ½; Ditto, 1886, 104 to ½; Egyptian Unified, 99 to ½; Greek, 1881, 69½ to ¾; Ditto, 1884, 69½ to ¾; Italian Railway 7%, Mexican Three per Cents, 34 to ⅜; Ditto, Five per Cents, 1885, 94 to ½; Portuguese and Warrants, 21 to ½; Ditto, 1888, 65½ to ¾; Ditto, 1889, 65½ to ¾; Ditto, 1862, 69½; Russian Old Five per Cents, 1870, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1871, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1872, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1873, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1877, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1878, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1880, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1884, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1885, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1889, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1890, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1891, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1892, 101 to ½; Russian Old Five per Cents, 1862, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1864, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1866, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1867, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1868, 101 to ½; Ditto, 1869, 101 to

NEW ITALIAN CHURCH, ST. PETER'S, HATTON-WALL.

This beautiful Italian church was opened on the 16th of April by his Eminence Cardinal Wiseman, a large number of persons being present. It is principally for the accommodation of those foreigners who are located in the neighbourhood of Hatton-garden.

The church has been erected from the designs of art, under the superintendence of Mr. John M. Ryan, architect, and at present is capable of holding 2000 persons. As, however, some of the arrangements are only of a temporary character, the building, as soon as some contemplated changes are effected, will accommodate 3400.

The walls are constructed of grey stock bricks, with iron hoop-bonding, at intervals of every six foot in height, laid in cement, all round the building. The triforium arches are supported by York-stone columns, of the Ionic order, in the ancient Basilica style. Great care has been observed, we learn, in laying the stones on their natural quarry bede.

In the basement there is a crypt capable of holding 300 persons. This is entered from the body of the church, and also through the presbytery fronting Back-hill. There is also in the basement a large room, 100ft. long by 13ft. wide.

The church, at present, is 138ft. long and 70ft. wide, the height from floor to ceiling being 56ft. The side aisles are 88ft. long, 17ft. wide, and 20ft. high. The chancel is 72ft. long and 27ft. wide. The transepts are 88ft. long and 10ft. wide, having small rooms at the side for keeping the valuables connected with the church. The body of the church is lighted by clerestory windows, each containing a design in the shape of a cross made of iron and wood. The chancel is lighted by windows of the same design. There are three entrances to the church—from Hatton-wall, Back-hill, and Saffron-hill. When the church is completed, the principal front will be in Saffron-hill, with a portion of cut stone.

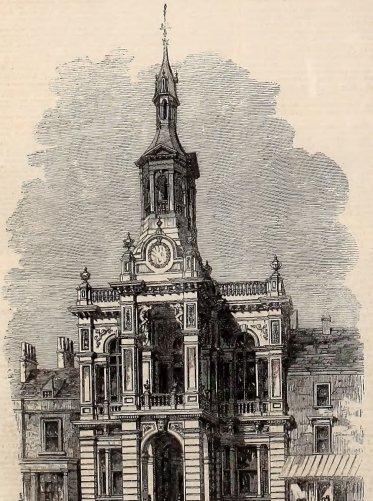
There are four altars. The high altar and two side-altars are of marble, and there is a fourth of wood, gilt. The high altar has four black and gold columns standing on pedestals with caps and bases of the Composite order; surmounted by a cornice, wreaths and crown with cross. These, when completed, will be white and gold. The ceiling is in a series of panels, having ventilating flowers affixed thereon. There is a portion of a tower built on the south-west end of the church. This tower will be carried up to a height of 96ft., for the purpose of hanging the large bell, of four tons weight, which was purchased from Messrs. Vickers and Co., and exhibited at the International Exhibition last year. Statues of the Four Evangelists are placed in niches at the sides of the chancel.

NEW ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH FOR ITALIANS, HATTON-WALL.

CORN EXCHANGE, LEIGHTON BUZZARD.

In the early part of the year 1861 a project was conceived to erect a Corn Exchange in the important agricultural town of Leighton Buzzard, Bedfordshire, and, by the exertions of a few spirited individuals, the object has been successfully accomplished.

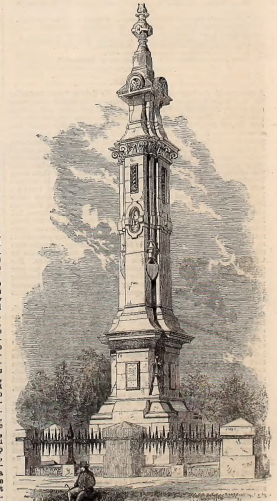
The Exchange is a very handsome stone structure, situate in a commanding position, at one end of the market-place, with a good frontage. The Exchange-hall is spacious, and decorated with Ionic pilasters, cornice, and recessed arched windows at the sides; the ceiling is formed into sunk coffers by enriched stiles, supported by coved ribs; the most essential points (light, sound, ventilation, &c.), for night as well as by day, have been well tested, and are found good. The design throughout is chaste and original, the front being designed in the modern Italian style of architecture, and consists of two stories of three light Venetian windows, with deeply moulded and carved pilasters at the quoins, the whole surmounted by an open balustrade, with piers and carved urns. In the centre is an open tower, projecting over the pavement, the lower story of which is arched, and the upper one has carved caryatides, supporting a deep frieze and bold modillion cornice, over which a beautifully-proportioned octangular turret rises to a total height of about eighty-five feet, the whole forming a most imposing façade and an interesting ornament to the town. The basement story consists of cellars for storing wine, &c. Through a wide entrance corridor (with various offices on each side for merchants), and rising by a broad flight of stone steps, the level of the assembly-room is attained, which is entered from a spacious landing. Attached to the assembly-rooms are retiring-rooms, which, with it, occupy all the space over the entrance and offices. The architects were Messrs. Bellamy and Hardy, of Lincoln. The cost of site and buildings was about £7500, and the works have been executed by Messrs. Osborne Brothers, builders, Leicester.



NEW CORN-EXCHANGE, LEIGHTON BUZZARD.

MONUMENT TO ISAAC DISRAELI.

During the sitting of Parliament last year a monument was erecting at Hughenden Manor, Buckinghamshire, the seat of the Right Hon. Benjamin Disraeli. As it progressed the neighbourhood evinced considerable curiosity as to the purpose of an erection of such importance. Conjectures were rife, but no information could be elicited from the workmen, who were not informed of its purpose; nor was its object known until, the Session over, the Lord of the Manor, passing through his domain, for the first time saw this tribute—erected without his knowledge—to the memory of his father, the late Isaac Disraeli. The inscription is as follows:—"In memory of Isaac Disraeli, of Bradenham, in this county, Esq., and Hon. D.C.L. of the University of Oxford, who, by his happy genius, diffused among the multitude that elevating taste for literature which, before his time, was the privilege only of the learned. This monument was raised in affectionate remembrance by Mary Anne, the wife of his eldest son the Right Hon. Benjamin Disraeli, Lord of this Manor, Chancellor of the Exchequer 1852, 1858, 1859, and now, for the sixth time Knight of this Shire." The monument is placed prominently on the summit of a high hill, flanked by woods, opposite to the elevation upon which the manor-house stands, and can be seen from many places at a considerable distance. The situation is most judicious and picturesque, and commands many extensive and interesting views. The monument, in the Renaissance style, is a great ornament to the manor and neighbourhood; it is built of Bath stone, upon a rustic base. In the centre of the shaft there is a medallion of the elder Disraeli. The monument is 50ft. high, and is the design of Mr. E. B. Lamb, architect, of Hinde-street, Manchester-square.



MONUMENT AT HUGHENDEN MANOR, BUCKS, TO THE LATE ISAAC DISRAELI.

THE SULTAN'S RETURN FROM EGYPT: THE ROYAL YACHT PASSING UP THE BOSPHORUS. —SEE PAGE 566.

THE FIRST INDIAN TRAMWAY. MADE BY A NATIVE PRINCE.

(From a Correspondent.)

ALL those who are acquainted with India and its affairs must recognise a new "sign of the times" in the fact that a native Prince has at last constructed a railway at his own cost, and has thus, we may hope, inaugurated the investment of native capital in great public works. The Times of India Summary of Feb. 28 notices the event as follows:—"It is not very creditable to European enterprise that the Baroda Prince has been allowed to take the start of us in this matter. On the small 2ft. 6in. tramway between Mesgaum and Dashol, now being constructed by the Guicowar, whose intelligence in thus initiating this enterprise is truly admirable, loads of six tons, exclusive of the waggons, are to be seen drawn by single pairs of bullocks with greater ease and speed than we can now convey half a ton over any Government road in the district. So much is this tramway appreciated, we are told, by the people along the line, that during the monsoon of last year, when a small part of it only had been completed, no less than three rupees per bale were offered and given for the conveyance of cotton for a distance of eight miles. The transport was otherwise impossible from the state of the roads."

Thus new prospects seem to be opening for Gujerat. The rude native cart, with its lazy bullocks and drowsy driver, are, we may now expect, soon to be replaced throughout this rich province by these busy little tramways—so cheap and so admirably adapted to serve as the byways of its traffic and feeders to the great trunk line of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway. British rule has hitherto contented itself with drawing large revenue from this most fertile of India's districts and doing little or nothing in return. If the Manchester men could see with their eyes the hideous ruts of the old road they would no more wonder that the cotton should be so deteriorated after lying, as it does, for weeks together in the rain and damp, and trampled down in the earth to keep it from blowing away, while the wretched owners wait till the tracks are passable. It was under such circumstances last year that the inhabitants of the villages near this tramway came in crowds, offering any sum to have their bales of cotton taken by the ballast-waggons. And out of pity for them some were thus conveyed, till the proceeding was stopped as irregular.

His Highness has ordered small engines for this line; but he will probably find animal power better adapted to the traffic, which is exclusively in native passengers and goods. One pair of bullocks will draw five loaded waggons with the utmost ease at from two to three miles an hour. The passenger trains may be worked either by country ponies or trotting bullocks. The enterprise was first undertaken on the judicious advice of the Resident at Baroda, Colonel Wallace; but it is now reported that the Guicowar intends to extend the line, permitting the shares to be taken up by his subjects, instead of keeping it, as hitherto, exclusively in his own hands.

INDIAN TRAMWAY CONSTRUCTED BY HIS HIGHNESS THE GUICOWAR OF BARODA.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

BIRTHS.

On the 17th inst., at 74, Manchester-square, the wife of Henry Eyre, Esq., Hampton Manor, Notts, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 21st of April, at St. George's Church, Toronto, Canada, by the Rev. the Provost of Trinity College, the Rev. Charles Ruttan, Rector of Cobourg, son of the Venerable the Archdeacon of Toronto, and Canon of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, to Jessie Mary Mary, daughter of the late Lieut.-Colonel Fortescue, R.A., H.M. 43rd Light Infantry, of Grove Vale, Toronto.

On the 19th inst., at Seaford, by the Rev. Christopher Whitcombe, Rector of Alverley, assisted by the Rev. Hermann Jacobson, Rector of Bishopstone, Vicar of Seaford, Sussex, and Prebendary of the Isle Chapelle in York.

On the 19th, at Knockyn, Shropshire, by the Rev. Edmund Bayley, assisted by the Very Rev. the Dean of Clogher, Leopold Cust, Esq., only son of Lieutenant-General Cust, Sir Edward Cust, to Isabel, fourth daughter of the late Vice-Admiral the Hon. Charles Orlando Bridgeman.

On the 20th inst., at Houghton-on-the-Hill, Norfolk, by the Rev. W. Bolding, assisted by the Rev. W. Hunter Morgan, Edmund, youngest son of Thomas Malcolm, of Godalming, Surrey, London, to Sarah Ann, second daughter of the late Sewell, Esq., of North Pickenham, Norfolk. No cards each.

DEATHS.

On the 14th inst., at her residence, 97, Gloucester-place, Portman-square, the Dowager Countess of Cornwath aged 68.

On the 16th inst., at No. 1, Park-place, Cheltenham, the Rev. Lancelot Alexander Wyvill, M.A., in the 92nd year of his age.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS. Founded 1831 on the New Society of Painters in Water Colours. THE ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, Admission, 1s. Gallery, 53, Pall-mall (opposite Marlborough House). JAMES ORROCK, Hon. Sec.

FRENCH GALLERY, 120, PALL-MALL. — The TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of PICTURES by Contributors of Artists of the French and Flemish Schools is NOW OPEN from 9 till 6. Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The FIFTY-NINTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN at their GALLERY, 5, Pall-mall East (next door to the National Gallery), from Nine till Dusk. Admission, 1s. By order, JOSEPH J. JENKINS, Secretary.

GEORGE CRUIKSHANK'S Great Picture, "THE WORSHIP OF BACCHUS (drawing based upon Hogarth), her Majesty's Inspection at Windsor Castle), is now on Exhibition, with upwards of 100 Original Designs, illustrating Twenty Food Reform Old Fairings, &c., at the Cruikshank's Picture Gallery, Bruton Hall, 6pen for a few days longer, from Ten a.m. to Six p.m. Admission, 1s.

RAPHAEL.—Remarkable discovery of one only of the great Raphaels of Charles I., all round of which had been painted over, and which is now on view at the Gallery of Arts, and being sold for the Benefit of the Widow and Children of the late owner. It is the most important Italian picture ever publicly exhibited. OPEN DAILY and ALL SUNDAY, from Ten to Seven. Admission, 1s.

A MORNING IN MEXICO,—Magnificent and complete EXHIBITION of CERAMIC STATUETTES, representing a Mexican Fiesta, now on view at Doulton's Gallery, Italy from Ten till Dusk. Gallery, 26, Rennie-street, Oxford-street, Lambeth. Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d. Sole Agents, Howell, James, and Co.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED, with MR. JOHN PARRY, in their CHARMING COTTAGE, EVERY EVENING, at EIGHT, and MATINÉE every SATURDAY, at THREE. Sole Lessee, Mr. GALLOWAY. ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA, Sussex.

CALEDONIAN BALL,—SCOTCH DANCING.—Grand Scottish Dancing Tuesday by a Scotch Band. Apply to Campbell and Co., Scottish Musicsellers, 11, Argyll-place, Regent-street.

MR. HAROLD THOMAS'S MATINÉE MUSICALE.—WILLIS'S ROOMS, MAY 30, TUESDAY, at 3. Artists: Mdme. Antoinette Sterling, Mdme. Patey, Miss Thirlwall, Miss Damian, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Santley, Mr. Maas, Mr. Charles Lunn, Mr. Hilton, Mr. Alfred Gaylord, Mr. Harold Thomas. Single Tickets, Half-a-guinea; a series of Four, One Guinea. At the principal Music-sellers. At the place, Mr. Harold Thomas, 37, Maddox-street, W.

ST. HELIER'S MATINÉES MUSICALES. St. Thomas's Hall, Hanover-square. TUESDAY NEXT, MAY 26, at 3. Madame Antoinette Sterling will make her first appearance at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS (under his only appearance at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS (under his only appearance at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS (under his only

NORTH LONDON RAILWAY COMPANY.

The DIRECTORS are PREPARED to ENTERTAIN APPLICATIONS for ALLOTMENTS of the NORTH LONDON DISTRICT RAILWAYS STOCK created under the powers and by virtue of the Act of last Session, at the Rate of £17 per cent. per annum, and extending to the ensuing date of the Dividend.

The Stock bears a fixed and perpetual yearly dividend or interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, cash dividend or interest declared at a fixed days on the halfs and undertaking, and taking priority of payment of all other dividends or any share stock or shares of the Company.

Any amount of stock, not being a fraction of a pound, can be subscribed for. Forms of application will accompany from the allotment of the money by the Secretary, and will be posted to any party on the receipt of a letter addressed to the Secretary at the Company's bankers, which will be followed by the address of such engineered gratuitously.

Communications on the subject to be addressed to

ROBERT S. MARSH, Secretary.

Euston Station, London, N.W., April, 1863.

ARMORIAL BEARINGS—All persons Desirous of ASCERTAINING their Right to Arms should forward a correct DESCRIPTION, or Sketch, of the Crest required, when the Search will be made, and the Result forwarded with the Fee, 5s. 6d.; in Heraldic colours, 10s. 6d. Engraving, and Metric heraldry painted with hereditary description, 12s. Information obtained direct from the College of Arms. Plain Sketch, 2s. 6d.; Coloured, 5s. 6d. Family Quarterings, Pedigrees, Seals, and Metric heraldry painted with hereditary description, 12s. Information obtained direct from the College of Arms. Plain Sketch, 2s. 6d.; in heraldic colours, 5s. 6d. Crest on seal or ring, 7s.

SOLID GOLD SIGNET RINGS, 18 Carat, 35s. Hall-marked, Best Work, engraved with Crest, Initial, or Cipher, and Registered on Seals or Rings, in real heraldic style. Mr. H. J. SAVORY, Jeweller, by Special Appointment to her Majesty, 53, Cranbourn-street corner of St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

NO CHARGE FOR ENGRAVING DIES with Arms, Crests, Monograms, or Address, if an order for Note Paper or Envelopes is given. Steel Dies, 5s. 6d. Best Wedding Cards, 50 for 4s. 6d. Visiting Cards, 50 for 2s. 6d. Crest, Monogram, or Address, on Envelopes, 1s. per 100. Arms, Crest, and Address, 1s. extra. Observe the only address, 25, Cranbourn-street, London, W.C. (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

WEDDING CARDS, Printed and Stamped in Silver, a Copperplate engraved in any Style, and 50 best Wedding Cards for 4s. 6d. Crest, W. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street corner of St. Martin's-lane.

MARK YOUR LINEN with CULLETON'S PATENT SELF-INKING PLATES.—By means of this invention a thousand pieces of linen can be marked within three minutes with ease. Initial Plate, 1s.; Name Plate, 2s.; Set of Numbers, 2s. 6d.; Crest, 5s.; Set of Alphabets, 5s. Directions for stamp. T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, London, W.C.

MONOGRAMS, &c.—New Sheets in Colours for the Season, of Facts, the Cocoa used by the British Navy 8 Sheets, the Crests used by Registrars of the Law 1 Sheets, the Monograms used by Registrars of the Law 1 Sheets, the Arms of Peers, Peeresses, and Baronets of Peerage, &c. 1 Sheets, the Arms of Bishops 1 Sheets, Arms, &c. of every Marquis 1 Sheets, the Arms, &c. of every Baronet 1 Sheets, the Arms, &c. of every Knight 1 Sheets, the Arms of Exile Baronet, and Exile Companions 1 Sheets, the Arms of Knights of the Garter 1 Sheets, the Arms of Knights of the Thistle 1 Sheets, the Arms of Knights of Saint Patrick 1 Sheets, all colours in each sheet; or 12 sheets for 8s.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street corner of St. Martin's-lane.

FOR FAMILY ARMS—the LINCOLN'S INN HERALDIC OFFICE—and Name and County, Arms found, Sketch, 2s. 6d.; Painted in Colours, 5s. 6d. Pedigrees of Families traced.—H. SALT, 62, Chancery-lane.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—Engraving by the Lords of Letter Kings-at-Arms. Crest on Seal or Ring, 7s. Arms Painted and Quartered, Sketch, 2s. 6d.; Coloured, 5s. Crest, Motto, Cipher, Initial, and Name, with Steel Die, 10s. 6d.

YOUR CREST, ADDRESS, or MONOGRAM Stamped on Paper and Envelopes, in any Colour, without Charge for the Die. HENRY RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly (37, Oxford-street, two doors from Regent-street). Highly-glazed Note Paper, 4s. per ream, unequalled for quality.

SPECTACLES.—The patent TINTED SPECTACLES are patronised by the nobility of the nobility, and by the most eminent of the faculty, as the most perfect aid to sight and a great preservative, and defective vision. The adaptation of spectacles to imperfect vision, by experienced persons in person, of vital importance to the eye, for which purpose the most complete and genuine attends to this branch only.—S. and B. SOLOMONS, 39, Aldermanbury-street, Regent-street, Opposite the York Hotel.

OPERA, RACE, FIELD, and general outdoor GLASSES, with Patented Power MOUNTINGS and SHIFTING LENSES, and Improved Eye-pieces, for Short Sight and Long Sight, at 42 and 63 guineas. They have been tested at the School of Anatomy, Hyde, and a testimonial received stating that it is the best glass for the purpose for which it is intended.—S. and B. SOLOMONS, 39, Aldermanbury-st., Piccadilly (opposite the York Hotel).

DEAFNESS.—Most SUCCESSFUL MAGNIFICENT and INVISIBLE VOICE CONDUCTOR, a newly-invented instrument for the relief of Deafness. It fits the head so as not to cause the slightest inconvenience, and is worn in the head, and enables deaf persons to hear distinctly in church and in all public assemblies.—S. and B. SOLOMONS, 39, Aldermanbury-street, Piccadilly (opposite the York Hotel).

MAGIC LANTERNS of the highest character and most perfect construction, by DUBOSCQ and SOLEIL, Paris, and may be had of the sole agents,

NEW MUSIC.

FAUST.—GOUNOD'S Celebrated OPERA, now in rehearsal at both the Italian Operas—The scenes of this Opera on the French and Italian stages viewed as the most perfect rendered. Pianoforte and Vocal Arrangements of all the principal airs, duets, trios, and choruses, ready. The opera complete, with Italian or French words, price 24s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DENMARK QUADRILLE, Dedicated, by Special Permission, to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and respectfully dedicated to the Princess Alexandra of Denmark, by CHARLES D. BLAGROVE. Beautifully illustrated with a Photograph of H.R.H. the Princess Alexandra. Price 4s., Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S WAVING LILY BELLS, Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA VOIX CELESTE. Reverie for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA BELLE MARIETTE. Valse Brillante pour Piano. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA PRIÈRE D'UNE MÈRE. Reverie pour Piano. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S THE ANGELS' HARP. Rhapsodie for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S ROYAL WEDDING MARCH for the Pianoforte, splendidly illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NATIONAL MELODIES FOR THE PIANOFORTE.
No. 1.—"The Harp that once through Tara's Halls." Price 3s.
No. 2.—"Let Erin Remember the Days of Old." Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S SEMIRAMIDE. Grand Fantasia on the most favourite Airs in Rossini's Opera, for the Pianoforte, by this popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASANIELLO.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia for the Pianoforte on Airs from this charming Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on Favourite Melodies from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the above composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co. 50, New Bond-street.

NAVA'S DANISH NATIONAL SONG and HYMN, arranged for the Pianoforte. Beautifully illustrated by Brandard. Price 3s. each.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE TUTOR for the PIANOFORTE. The best, newest, and cheapest of all Instruction Books containing elementary instructions, exercises, scales, and a great variety of the most favourite and popular progressive lessons. Sixty pages, full music size, in boards, price 2s. 6d. The Brinley Richards' Popular Pieces will be sent on application.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular song arranged as a very pleasing drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s. Also as a Duet, 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. This popular Spanish song arranged so as easy and effective drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' GOD SAVE THE QUEEN. "As a drawing-room piece, we are disposed to think that Mr. Brinley Richards' new arrangement of the National Anthem achieves the task."—Review, Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

EFFIE DEANS QUADRILLE, on favourite Scotch melodies. By R. COCKS and HUTCHINSON. Illustrated in Photograph at Mrs. Bonnelain, Miss Edith Stuart, and Mr. Ryder. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW and IMPORTANT WORK for the HARMONIUM. Just published, MODERN HARMONIUM PLAYER, arranged complete for the Harmonium, with the most recently improved Stops, by HENRY SMART. Price 4s., or in Two Books, 2s. 6d. each.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S MONTHLY COMPANION for the SMALL HARMONIUM, with or without Accompaniment Stop. A Selection of Favourite Pieces, Sacred and Secular, arranged expressly for the popular instrument by R. F. HERRMANN. Price 1s. each Number.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SACRED WORK for the HARMONIUM.—Twenty-six Full, or CONCLUDING VOLUNTARIES for the Harmonium, selected from the works of Mozart, Haydn, Handel, &c. and expressly suited to small Churches and Chapels. By HERMANN. Price 4s.; in cloth, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S 100 PSALM and HYMN TUNES for HARMONIUM, selected from the most eminent Church Composers. Price 4s.; in cloth, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S 200 CHANTS by the best Church Composers, ancient and modern, selected from the works of the various Cathedrals, and arranged expressly for the Harmonium. Price 4s.; in cloth, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S 50 SHORT VOLUNTARIES for the HARMONIUM, expressly suited to small Churches and Chapels. Price 4s.; in cloth, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CLARIBEL'S SONGS.—"CLARIBEL" is the name assumed, in her publications, by a lady well known in society, and highly distinguished as an accomplished musician. Many of the very best songs published under this name are all marked by itinerary taste in the choice of the poetry, the gift of writing very pretty melody and skill in the accompaniment. Many have
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CLARIBEL.—JANET'S CHOICE and FANNYS BRIDAL. Two songs sung by Miss. Selina Dolaro at Cremorne. Price 3s. each. Many thousands have been sold of these ballads.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—FIVE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING. The most popular of all the Author's songs. Universally admired for the melody and words. Price 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—THE TWO NESTS. A beautiful little song for the present season. Very popular. Illustrated by the Author. Price 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—YOU AND I. Sung with immense success by Miss Rosers. The most popular new song of the day.—Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL LIBRARY.—Every Work published as Two Guineas reduced to One Guinea. Volume of Illustrated Music, and has the use of twelve pieces of music in the Musical Library pieces in the country. Subscription as One Guinea have the use of four pieces. Full particulars from 28, Holles-street.

THALBERG'S ART OF SINGING APPLIED TO THE PIANO. Cheap Edition of the Six Favourite Nocturnes as performed at the Author's last Concerts. With an Introduction on the Art of Performing, by THALBERG. This invaluable Work should be in the hands of all pianists. Price 2s. 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

O MOST MERCIFUL! as sung before the Queen by Madame Catherine Chapel, composed by ALBERT LOWE, and free for postage for 18 stamps.
LONDON: EVANS and Co., 67, Regent-street.

NEW MUSIC.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD'S MUSIC CIRCULATING LIBRARY for Town and Country. Terms—Two, Three, and Four Guineas per Annum.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD undertake the PUBLICATION of COMPOSITIONS for the Author.

HALF-PRICE. ALL FULL-PRICED MUSIC sent post-free at half the marked price by CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

NICCOLO DE' LAPI, Signor SCHIRA'S New Opera, has been produced at the Royal Italian Opera with the greatest success, and is now published by CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street; and may be had of all Musicsellers.

NICCOLO DE' LAPI.
New Opera. By Signor SCHIRA.
s. d.
"Quel di che t'ordire." Song by Mdme. Trebelli ... 4 0
"Ah! dolce amor." Song by Signor Giuglini ... 4 0
"Capricci, ghiribizzi, e fole." Song by Signor Ronconi ... 4 0
"Ah dagnori, prontol, and expressive piece of writing, in the style of Donizetti." Song by Signor Tagliafico ... 4 0
Bel volto lusinghier." Song by Mdme. Bosio ... 3 0
"Ah! dolce amor." Duet and Chorus. Sung by Signor Ronconi ... 4 0
"La bella rosa." Song by Mdme. Trebelli ... 4 0
"A spasimi and vezzi deigli grazzi eleganti." Trio, Sung by Mdme. Trebelli, Signor Giuglini, and Signor Ronconi ... 4 0
"Gemi Dio." Chorus and Finale. Sung by Mr. Santley ... 3 0
"Io ti dovro ma." Song by Signor Ronconi ... 4 0
"Di questa speranza!" Song by Mdme. Bosio ... 3 0
"Ah! dolce amor." Grand Finale. Sung by Mdme. Titiens, May 11. 6 0
"Udiam a sentir." Song by Signor Giuglini ... 4 0
"Oh, qui sosta." Song by Signor Giuglini ... 4 0
"Ah, sento." Song by Mdme. Bosio ... 3 0
PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
W. H. Callcott's Selection ... 6 0
Brinley Richards' Selection ... 5 0
E. Kinsbury's Arrangement of the Overture ... 3 0
W. Kuhe's "Fantasia Elegante" ... 4 0
B. Richards' Arrange-ment of Signor Giuglini's favourite Romanza, "Ah! dolce amor" ... 3 0
A. Mellon's Arrangement of the Overture ... 3 0
Performed at the Crystal Palace.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

FARFALLETTA.—Signor ARDITI'S New MAZURKA, as sung by Mdme. Alboni with brilliant effect at the Philharmonic Concert, and at Her Majesty's Theatre, "Ballo in Maschera," sung by Mdlle. Parepa at Her Majesty's Theatre, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

CIRO PINSUTI.
ROSINA MAZURKA. Sung by Mdme. Rudersdorff in "The Barber of Seville." Arranged for Piano-forte. Price 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

JACQUES BLUMENTHAL.
"Le Parfum." Words by M. Scribe ... 3s. net.
"Le Papillon." Words by Mdme. Gay (op. 51) ... 4s.
"Bolero." Words by Mdme. Gay ... 4s.
"Les Alpes" (in the press)
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ENGLISH SONGS.
Britts from the North ... Arthur S. Sullivan. 3s. 0d.
Her mother never blames Flowers ... Ditto ... 3s. 0d.
Johnnie Gray ... French Moir ... 3s. 0d.
Lady Mary Wortley ... Arthur S. Sullivan ... 3s. 0d.
I went from beautiful Isles ... Virginia Gabriel ... 3s. 0d.
Ladye Maisi ... Virginia Gabriel ... 3s. 0d.
Thy morning cloud-ward ... Arthur S. Sullivan ... 3s. 0d.
She is a maiden of artless grace ... C. E. Horsley ... 3s. 0d.
Sweet Spring ... C. E. Horsley ... 3s. 0d.
Hastening with speed ... C. E. Horsley ... 3s. 0d.
Wayward wind ... Francesco Berger ... 3s. 0d.
When first we met ... Francesco Berger ... 3s. 0d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ITALIAN SONGS.
"Ah! vivere non posso." Song by Mdme. Bosio ... 3s. 0d.
Come la rosa in boccio." Song by Mdme. Lemaire ... 3s. 0d.
Quel di che t'ordire." Song by Giuglini ... 3s. 0d.
Ah dolce amor" (sung by Mdme. Alboni) ... L. Arditi ... 3s. 0d.
La Farfalletta (sung by Mdme. Alboni) ... L. Arditi ... 3s. 0d.
Il Bacio (sung by Mdme. Alboni) ... L. Arditi ... 3s. 0d.
Non t'accostare all'urna (sung by Mdme. Alboni) ... L. Arditi ... 3s. 0d.
Sento Nostra" (sung by Mdme. Bosio) ... C. Pinsuti ... 3s. 0d.
Senza amarti (sung by Mdme. Bosio) ... C. Pinsuti ... 3s. 0d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

NEW SONG.—"THE SEA IS BEFORE US." Composed by EDWIN HOLMES, with a ball-room and hall-priest. This is one of Mr. Bennett's best songs, in the style of "Maiden Fair to See," and "Come into the Garden." Price 2s. Post-free for twenty-four stamps.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

NEW VALSE.—THE ANGLO-DANISH VALSE. By ALEXANDRE RIDER. Solo or Duet. Price 4s. Just published, a Set of Quadrilles on Danish Airs, which can be had as a Solo or Duet for Pianoforte, and in Parts for Septet or full Orchestra.—DITTY and EDGOOSE, 30, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG. BIRD OF THE WILDERNESS. Composed by EDWARD LAND; Poetry by Mrs. KENNEDY. This charming song is a bird-priest for a graceful Song in the contemptuous favourite in the Entertainment on the Subject.—DITTY and EDGOOSE, 30, Oxford-street.

NEW BALLAD.—THE HAWTHORN-TREE. Words by D. S. BERRY. Music by E. SOUTHWELL. Price, as Duet, 4s. Solo, 3s.—DITTY and EDGOOSE, 30, Oxford-street.

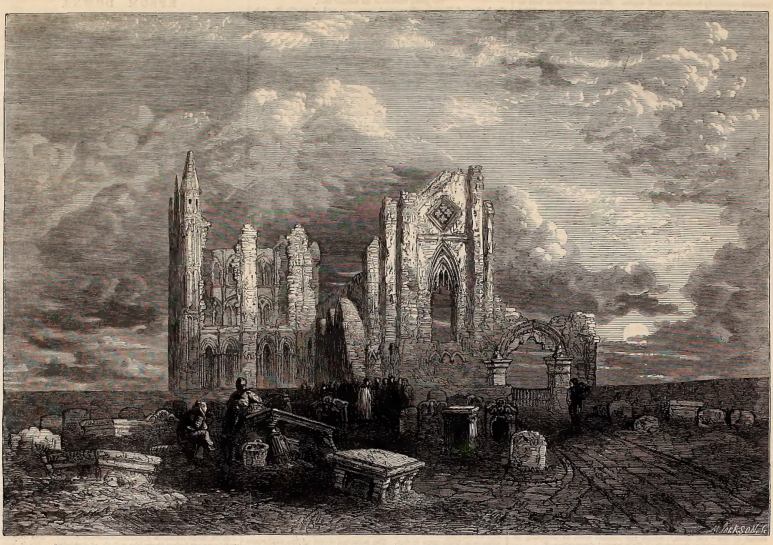
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD'S PIANOFORTE DEPARTMENT is the largest in Europe.

Every Instrument sent out by them is tried in all its parts by a competent Pianist, and warranted to stand in all climates. Pianofortes from the stock,
Manufactured by all the eminent English, Continental, and American Manufacturers.

EASY TERMS OF PURCHASE.—CRAMER and CO. supply special arrangements with those desirous to PURCHASE a PIANOFORTE by Three Years' System. Terms may be known on application at the Gallery, 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S ENGLISH PIANETTE, 37 guineas. Cramer and Co. have much pleasure in calling the attention of the public to the above Instrument. It has all the qualities of the best Pianoforte—thick wrest-plank, overstrung, check action, and all the latest improvements in the trade. In practising in this Pianoforte the fingers of the player will find the touch perfectly even throughout, and the tone will be found equal in the top and wrest to any Pianoforte in the world. It guineas; in walnut, 35 guineas.
Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this instrument has not the common or single action, but the double or check action. Cramer and Co. are the only manufacturers of it in England.

CRAMER'S DRAWING-ROOM COTTAGE. Cramer and Co. manufacture a Cottage Pianoforte of the best class, and of the very best workmanship. The tone is full, rich, and vocal. The touch is agreeable, rapid, and effective. This instrument is made in rosewood, with fret front, trichord, and check action, in cases of wood, and grained oak, with fret front, trichord, and check action, in cases of wood, and grained oak, with fret front, trichord, and check action, in cases of wood, and grained oak



"WHITBY ABBEY, FROM THE CHURCHYARD," FROM A PICTURE BY GEORGE DODGSON, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

"WHITBY ABBEY, FROM THE CHURCHYARD."

THERE is a subtle, a latent poetry in some of Mr. Dodgson's drawings which is very apt to escape the notice of visitors who only cursorily examine the works in the gallery of the Society of Painters in Water Colours, where they are exhibited. We do not allude to his frequent representations of river scenes or wooded landscape in full daylight, for few drawings can be brighter or more attractive than these; but to those works of a more sad, dreamy, and, so to speak, subjective character—those in which the "feeling" of the artist is paramount. In the latter the painter resigns the ordinary sources of effect, and his peculiar execution, always apparently indeterminate and uncertain, becomes nervously tremulous and vague. His drawings then look as if painted half unconsciously and in a manner approaching to a fitful mood of visionary absence that renders nature only through a deeply-coloured mental medium—that interprets the natural world in a Wordsworthian spirit, giving its effect upon heart and mind rather than upon the mere visual organs. To indulge this feeling, the artist frequently chooses subjects of vast, mystic, and misty shadow, or of shimmering moonlight, or mystic twilight, or later and still more mysterious dusk, or—as in the drawing we have now engraved—that transient time of such strange, spectral loveliness, when, as Byron sings, "The moon is up, and yet it is not night." Nothing could be more poetically appropriate in a drawing of the impressive ruins of Whitby Abbey, seen from the ancient churchyard, than this particular effect. And yet Mr. Fahey can assuredly still fitfully fleck the clouds which lie in shapeless masses or sour in beautifully contorted wreaths of dappled dark-and-light, and still linger on the ruinous piers and transept and front walls of the crumbling abbey, leaving the shadows to hover in solemn, lifeless shadow. To the left the misty horizon is lost in the low slaty cloud shadow, but to the right the full-orbed moon is shining ghostly, but pure, and the clouds harden to form round about a silvery pavilion. Some, however, lie off before her as if in troubled but silent prescience. The charge would not remain long unanswered, for to make it heightened even by the very tombs and headstones, which, as it were, all of their long task of sheltering, look creeping towards their sullens for support. The sentiment of the place and hour finds its natural climax in the burial not yet performed—in the sable mourners, white-robed minister, and silent spectators. The words of the burial service, "Earth to earth and dust to dust," seem at this last moment of the dying day to be read over the grave of the ancient central tower fell in 1830; the existing ruinins consist of the choir, the north transept (nearly entire), and part of the west front.

"THE OLD HALL, HARDWICK, DERBYSHIRE," FROM A PAINTING BY WILLIAM BENNETT, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

"THE OLD HALL, HARDWICK, DERBYSHIRE."

THE drawing in the Exhibition of the Institute of Painters in Water Colours, from which we take our Engraving, is at once a favourable example of Mr. Barrett's picturesque art, and of the best kind of English scenery. It shows to advantage the artist's broad but truthful mode of descriptive treatment, and his fine sense of the less unwonted richness of colour. The scene is one similar to that which may be found in any of our ancient manorial demesnes. An old, little-used road, with no jealous fence or hedge, fringed and almost overgrown with luxurious grass and herbs, affords a delightful foreground with rising emerald, buds, in easy curves, through a pleasant, irregular, beechen grove. There is nowhere any modern formality to mar the picturesque effect. The cattle are suffered to feed at their roadside, and lie and ruminate amidst the rich, long grass under the slope to the right, where the artist has introduced a fine specimen of playful light and colour. The trees are scattered about on knoll or level with that irregularity which is Nature's own. The sky, as is frequently English as the rest; the soft depth of limpid azure is veiled here and there with light, fleecy clouds, and, of course (as being essentially characteristic), it seems, as it ought to be, ever ready to drop up for a slight shower. Of this the sagacious rooks have, in all probability, some suspicion; for are they not collecting on the old battlement of the "Old Hall," above the loftiest trees, to compare, in animated discussion, the results of their morning's labour?

The ruins of the "Old Hall" in Hardwick Park, Derbyshire, are adjacent to the "New Hall" (not in our Engraving), the spacious and stately seat of the Duke of Devonshire, built by Bess of Hardwick, as by Elizabeth, Countess of Shrewsbury, since which time the "Old Hall" has been a ruin.

THE RETURN OF THE SULTAN FROM EGYPT TO CONSTANTINOPLE.

(From a Correspondent.)

NOTWITHSTANDING the many ominous prognostications to the contrary, the Sultan has paid his long-promised visit to the Viceroy of Egypt, and the Ottoman Empire has displayed sufficient of its "ancient barbaric vigour" to have enabled his Imperial Majesty to make the excursion in comparative comfort, and to return to his capital in perfect safety. It is true that this little tour of Eastern celebration has cost 60,000,000 piastres, or about half a million sterling, and that why should the Sultan fear to be "sailing into the vast ocean of a figurative uncertainty," when the enlightened Khedive and his Anglo-Egyptian Government seem only too happy to supply him with funds without even demanding security for the munificent loans which from time to time are generously raised for his use?

Placing, however, such weighty considerations aside for the moment, we proceed to give a faint idea of the splendid pageant accorded to his faithful subjects to Sultan Abdul-Aziz on his return from Egypt to Constantinople. Having, on Saturday last, entered the royal yacht, the Feiz-Djehad, off Khalid, one of the Prince's Islands, in the Sea of Marmora, the Sultan, with a few favourite Ministers on board, attended by a numerous retinue of the Egyptian Anglo-Mejidie, Tsaf, and Redaudjie, entered the Bosphorus at half-past ten o'clock on the morning of the 14th of May. At the same time the battery of the Seven Towers at Yedi-Koulé announced to the expectant multitudes that the Imperial fleet had passed Seraglio Point, and Topkana that their august ruler was approaching. This salute was quickly followed by the roar of cannon from the whole line of musketry and the cheers of the populace on both the European and Asiatic banks of the Bosphorus; and for upwards of an hour, without intermission, did the thunder of artillery reverberate, until the hills reverberated with the sound, and the very ground seemed to tremble beneath the feet.

Amidst this concourse welcome the Feiz-Djehad slowly steamed by Seraglio Point, and—passing the Golden Horn—came to, with its crowd of vessels gaily decked with the flags of all nations—took up her moorings off the magnificent marble palace at Dolma-Bagtche. Here the Sultan disembarked, and, attended by his staff, and the Ministers who had preceded, amidst the myriads of caiques which shimmied over the calm waters of the Bosphorus, he was received by a royal salute.

The smoke of the cannons, &c., gently lifting with the soft northern breeze, disclosed at this moment a scene of surpassing beauty. In the harbour every vessel was dressed with the flags of its peculiar nationality, including the convoy of steamers from the arsenal, the Turkish men-of-war and guard-ships, the Egyptian, Greek, and Italian gun-boats—the Psyche, Inkerman, and Aquila. Added to these were boats of every possible size and description, filled with gaily-dressed spectators; while the thronging multitudes on each shore, the marble palaces which line the banks of the Bosphorus, and in the distance the undulating hills of Asia, bright with the purple flower of the Judas-tree, formed a scene of real magic to be forgotten.

The Sultan, after remaining about one hour at the palace, mounted his favourite Arab, and, escorted by his bodyguard of Zouaves, with their military band, and a long cortège of Pashas and Officers-General of State, glittering with their innumerable decorations, proceeded to the palace at Dolma Bagtche, passing under beautiful arches still waving banners embroidered with the Turkish crescent and star, whilst an enthusiastic crowd pressed eagerly on all sides and cheered him loudly as he passed along.

On arriving at the Palace the various batteries at Soutari and at Tophana again fired a Royal salute, whilst the Turkish men-of-war moored off Dolma Bagtche soon became enveloped in the dense smoke of their deep mouthed volcanos.

To an English eye there was but one drawback to this display of Oriental magnificence, and that arose from the point of observation, well selected though it was for viewing the arrival of the Feiz-Djehad from the Sea of Marmora into the Bosphorus, happening to be situated in the English burial-ground at Soutari. Here, on all sides, lay the bodies of English officers and men—navy, and of gentle English nurses, too—who fell and died during the late Crimean War; whilst Baron Marochetti's huge and unsightly Egyptian obelisk tells of a nation's grief for the loss of its brave sons.

But, turning from these sad thoughts to the passing events at the Sultan's reception, it cannot be denied that the Turk, as a nation, possess the power of rendering their capital and its charming environs, on such occasions as the present, almost a city of enchantment. As soon as the sunset gun had been fired, the Bosphorus became a glittering scene of terrestrial and celestial light; and, as well as all the public buildings in Stamboul, Galata, and Pera, being instantly illuminated with millions of miniature lamps, whilst the Sultan's steamer, the Turkish men-of-war, and the vessels lying in the Golden Horn were lit up from the water's edge to topmast with similar sparkling lamps.

The mosques and minarets were also bright with coloured lights, and the beautiful palace of the Sultan, reflected in the clear waters of the Bosphorus, had > its fairy-like windows all alight,

> As if with rubies and with gold bedight.

A brilliant series of rockets and other fireworks were displayed from a British man-of-war, which, together with the various forts of Asiatic shore, in the display of their ornamental illuminations, vied with each other in thus welcoming the Sultan on his return to Constantinople.

AUSTRALIA.

VICTORIA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, March 25.

Parliament has been engaged during the session in considering the Electoral Act Amendment Bill, which was read a third time and passed on the 19th inst. It is now before the Upper House, the second reading being fixed for a night or two after the publication of this bill are novel. Public nomination of candidates is abolished—nominations to take place privately by writing; no candidate to be recognised unless he be nominated by twelve electors. Candidates must make a cash deposit with the returning officer—aspirants for seats in the Council, £100; for the Assembly, £50. This money is to go towards defraying the electioneering expenses. Each elector has a choice in the number of candidates from one to four. Electors must apply for what is designated an "elector's right." This certificate, which is to bear the name, address, and signature of the voter, is only to be granted after questions are answered satisfactorily. Electors' rights to be granted to persons on the parish rates. The poll-clerk is empowered to demand the signature of every elector on presenting himself for the purpose of voting; and the Chief Secretary has it also sure to do so, it will materially interfere with the franchise as it now exists. Universal suffrage will become a thing of the past if this bill should pass. It is not likely to do so, however. No sensible man who has watched the political history of this colony during the last few years can doubt that this is a retrograde movement Bill as a much-needed step in the right direction.

The Imprisonment for Debt Bill of last session and the Legislative Assembly the other night. The object of this bill is to organise the necessary machinery for spending a large sum of money in enduring emigration during the next three years in this colony.

A Russian corvette, the Bogatyr, bearing the flag of Admiral Popoff, visited Melbourne during the month of February. The object of the vessel open for the inspection of the Melbourne public, who were not slow in availing themselves of the opportunity.

His Excellency Sir Henry Barkly was re-elected President of the Royal Society of Victoria on Monday last.

The International Conference consisting of delegates from South Australia, New South Wales, Tasmania, and Victoria—commences its sittings at Melbourne on Tuesday next. The object of the Conference is to secure a uniformity of tariff in the colonies; but other subjects, such as transmission of letters, &c., will be brought under discussion.

In the Legislative Assembly, last night, an address to her Majesty against the renewal of transportation to any of the Australian colonies was unanimously adopted, as was a motion expressing regret at Governor Denman's departure.

Some vacancies in the Governor's Executive have occurred, and no precedents for the course taken by his Excellency. The report of this committee, which was laid on the table of the Assembly last night, enters fully into the question of the Executive, and, while it generally declares that his recent conduct was unconstitutional, and recommends a reprimand, it should not be punished.

The resignation of Major-General Pratt has, it is understood, been accepted. The appointment of Lieutenant-Colonel Anderson to Lieutenant-General Cameron has also been recalled from New Zealand. The military head-quarters are to be removed altogether to that colony, the Governor-in-Chief being also Commander-in-Chief, Colonel on the Staff.

The advices from the winter season in New Zealand has had the effect of somewhat checking the rush of diggers from Victoria to that colony. In every respect the latest advices look favourably.

Trade is in a healthy condition, and the returns from the gold fields keep well up.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

The advices from Adelaide extend to March 26. His Excellency the Governor has received from the Victoria gold-fields, in company with Mr. Hargreves, the original discoverer of gold in Australia. The latter has been commissioned by the Home Government to examine the various localities in which gold is likely to be found.

Parliament met on February 27, and Mr. Hawker was re-elected Speaker. The House adjourned from March 5 to 17.

In addition to the £2000 to which Mr. Stuart is entitled for having crossed the continent, he has received from the colony from £500 to £100 to the members of his party.

The Government is considering the detachment of the 40th Regiment to Adelaide, has received orders to join head-quarters in New Zealand. He will be relieved by Brevet-Major Bowdler.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

We have Sydney papers to the 23rd of March, but they contain little of importance. There has been a slight change in the Ministry, owing to the migration of Mr. Parkes from the Colonial Secretaryship to the bench of the Supreme Court. A representative of the Queensland Cotton Growing and Selling Company has arrived in Brisbane by the Chile, with the object of purchasing 1000 bales of cotton, if he can dispose of operatives. They intend growing cotton out here and preparing it for the English market.

QUEENSLAND.

We take the following from the Queensland Times of March 18:—"Very large numbers of the Polynesian labourers, who, for years past, and great injury has been done to the agricultural interest. The traffickers in the trade in the interior has been impeded and business interrupted. The Everton, Marania, and Golden Cup, sugar-ships, have arrived during the past months, having experienced unusually short passages on board during the voyage. A strong feeling exists in the colony against the bare idea of a proposal to establish Chinese labour. Saturday last, Mr. Lilley was entertained James Cockle, Esq., has arrived in Brisbane, bean sworn in as Chief Justice of Queensland, and has been invited to the lunch of the Supreme Court. A representative of the Queensland Cotton Growing and Selling Company has arrived in Brisbane by the Chile, with the object of purchasing 1000 bales of cotton, if he can dispose of operatives. They intend growing cotton out here and preparing it for the English market."

Some successful excavations have been made in the territory of Prince Doria, on the Via Pamfolia, seven miles and a half from Rome, outside the Porta del Popolo. On this spot, a picturesque eminence overlooking the Tiber, the Empress Livia, wife of Augustus, had a villa called ad Gallinas, from a miraculous vision she once had there of white hens. The excavations undertaken on this classic site have already produced three well-executed and well-preserved busts of persons not as yet recognised, several bodies taken with the name of Tiberius Cæsar, many bricks with interesting stamps on them, and beautiful fragments of marble and terra-cotta ornaments. But the most valuable treasure exhumed was a colossal statue of Augustus clothed, of excellent workmanship and preservation. The figure wears a cuirass, and has a dolphin and a cupid at its feet.

EPSOM DOWNS.

THE DERBY DAY.

HE who has never seen Seville is declared by the Spaniards never to have seen a marvel. All natives labour, more or less particularly, under the delusion that their own particular capital is the most wonderful and magnificent to be found in the wide world; and egotism when aggregated is far from being offensive. It is only when isolated and individual that it repels and disgusts. The selfishness of a whole people is patriotism. Thus, then, we are perfectly willing to admit that Seville is marvellous; that Constantinople is incomparable—according to Byron's idea of comparison; that Naples is unapproachable—according to the Neapolitan theory of perversion; and that nothing can be finer than the view on a bright summer's day at Niagara. Nay, we will go further, and concede that the villagers of Monte Pincio are quite as right in their generation when they assert that theirs is the prettiest ruin of Rome as the Londoner is when he will forbear to quarrel with the Marseilais, who are so enamoured of their principal street that they call it "La Cannebière par excellence." Paris would be but a little Marseilles. Everybody has a clear right to be conceited about the thing which he knows to be supremely and supremacy of the country he belongs to, or the thing which he happens to have "written in the solar of my boots," is reputed to have said the famous Transatlantic statesman, Colonel Crockett. Interiority, "and I am prepared to prove them boots to be the best in creation."

Granting any number of self-glorifying postulates on the part of our neighbours, we trust that a corresponding measure of toleration may be extended to us when we declare Epsom Downs on the Derby Day to be the most astonishing, the most varied, the most picturesque, and the most glorious spectacle that ever was or ever can be, under any circumstances, visible to mortal eyes. We are speaking, we know, in the sense of the thousands of those who will see the sight in question will, we are confident, confess that our estimate is devoid of exaggeration. Of the race-courses and race-meetings of all over the United Kingdom, and in the colonies and dependencies of this great empire, Epsom is of course the largest as it is the one that takes place during almost every month in the year. Nay, the taste for racing has spread all over the Continent. The French institute those newborn sprigs of nobility, the Duc de Gramont-Caderousse, at Vincennes, at La Marche, and at the Bois de Boulogne; and English precisians who look upon Goodwood as the very Temple of Vice, or Jockey Club prize of twenty thousand francs, was run for on Sunday, in the seventeenth century. Florence has its carnival of races, with English horses ridden by English jockeys; and very recently the apathetic Orientals were ridden to throw away their chibouks and their cross-legged dignity, in order to be the spectators of Pharaoh, in the presence of his Imperial Highness the Sultan. Only imagine the descendant of the Prophet and Mahomet's Vicar Apostolic surveying the field of "cracks" through a double-barrelled opera-glass! "Right Ho!" exclaims the Sultan's head groom, "he says the Turkish proverb, "there grows no grass;" but this is the age for proverbs to belie themselves and for traditions to become mockery; and the Commander of the Faithful, the Padishah Padishah, the Padishah of Roum, the stern Abdul Aziz has "cross on the turf." There are, we are aware, Mahometans who, like Mr. Disraeli, and "slaves" of "the ring," who, arguing from a purely moving point of view, would feel disposed to call the Derby a "fast" day; in search that undue prominence has been given to the great May meeting over other equine contests equally if not more important. According to these gentlemen, the Derby is the Goodwood Cup, the meeting is only an apology for the si petite of the metropolis to treat themselves to an outing—a day's fun and frolic, and finally, to make a rush to the railway station and squeeze into the first open carriage on the platform, as also drive home by road, wedged up in a throng of vehicles of almost every conceivable description. And the next morning, to be very feverish and slightly repentant, to have a very bad headache, and a painful sensation of weariness in the region of the eyelids, and yet, after all, to be glad at not having missed the confusion, the crowding, the disreputable, and the delights of the Derby Day.

But all this, we are still quoting the doctrinaires, has little or nothing to do with genuine sport. The "of days" at Epsom frequently give the go-by to those on which takes place the real festival itself. The Oaks Day is more scientific; but for real, solemn, business-like, and thoroughly genuine enjoyment, the Derby, or, especially, to Newmarket. There the racehorse is to be found in all his glory, and there the real connoisseur is to be found established in their his capacity for speed and endurance can best be tested; there, in fact, the much-talked-of "amalgamation of the breed of horses" can be carried out to perfection—by "amalgamation" is meant "crossing" being absent, and the perilous attractions of "Norman and Manx" hampers and impedes the progress of genuine sanguine coursing-and-running rank.

The virtual rejoinder to this, on the part of the public at large, is that they regard horseracing not as a business but as a pastime. To them the talkistic inscriptions in betting-books are illegible as conform emptions of Egyptian hieroglyphics. They do not care a "pin" anything on the favourite." They have no intention of laying against the native field for the "pot." They do not advise any one to "hedge" for the "double event," to "stand to lose," or to "stand on velvet." They have no more knowledge of the technicalities of these than they know Tattersall's yard, and they wouldn't know what to do when they got there. There is no use in talking to them about "lengths." They don't know what "running" is. Speak to them of a "match," and they will stare with astonishment. Of the betting-ring and the price-ring they have a tolerably accurate idea. Of the names of the favourite and of a few leading horses in the betting-list have been dinned in their ears for months past during the week previous to the race that they must perforce remember some thing about them; but beyond this and a vague idea of Fordham, Grimshaw, Sam Rogers, Aaron Jones, Aaron Brothehill, and Mr. Tom Brook, and Sir Joseph Hawley, and Mr. Payne, are very great men on the Turf, and that Eclipse, Flying Dutchman, and Voltaire were celebrated racehorses, Touchstone racehorses, and Chifney, Flatman, and Bartholomew very adroit jockeys, the public know little or nothing of the technicalities of the profession and the mysteries of betting. And the public, we take it, ought to be cordially grateful for this state of ignorance which is indeed a bliss. Considering the lamentable fate which so often befalls the "knowing ones," we hold that, so far as "horsey" sapience is concerned, it is indeed better not to be wise.

A great English wit was once asked if he had ever backed a horse for the Derby, and he answered that he had not, but that if he had he did, he knew perfectly well the name of the animal on which he should put his money. Interrogated on this head, he replied that the only horse to back was Fortnum and Mason. We are not ourselves disposed to regard an excellent cake as any the less purveyor of comestibles, but we have always thought a well-packed hamper, plenty of champagne, a good store of ice, pleasant companionship, a comfortable barouche, careful postboys, and fine weather to be decidedly the best things connected with the Derby Day. That public of whom we spoke just now is apparently of the same opinion. The number of those who wish to convert a great festival into a mere gambling speculation, and to make that which should be a season of unmixed and harmless relaxation subservient to the basest purposes of rapacity and cupidity, is happily limited. If the passion for gambling is too innate and too deep-rooted to be eradicated from the human mind, if the inclosure of the Grand Stand and the subscription-room at Tattersall's are to be mere antechambers to the Stock Exchange, and the Demon of Play, banished by rigid police regulations from Pall-mall and St. James's-street, must needs find refuge on the green turf at Epsom, we may be glad that, on the present occasion at least, no one is not called upon to gaze upon the rage intensity, the twitching nervousness, which mark the countenances of the betting fraternity. Let them bet, and badger, and "put the pot on" as they choose. Let them win or lose their hundreds or their thousands in as much peace and tranquillity as they can command. Let them swallow mushroom fortunes, to be spent as rapidly and as recklessly as they are gained, or be reduced to beggary at a moment's notice as a stranger has been swindled on a benighted stable-boy his administered half a pail of water to him before starting. The non-betting members of the community may turn their backs the next day upon the whole concern, and may then throw himself with as much heartiness as ever he chooses into the manifold and innocent amusements of the Derby Day. For we must not look on Epsom Downs in no cynical spirit and with no jaundiced eyes. It is by all artists and purposes, a pretty sight. Even the people in the very few where Englishmen are to be seen under sprightly and genial conditions, and when the mercury is rather inclined to bring a smile than a frown, the genuine people no longer holds good. The old medieval society of the Continent, as "assumed civilisation," as the more conventional foreigner spoke of the English as assumed civilisation, is now gone, but on Derby Day, at least, our amusements have nothing melancholy in their conduct, and assume, on the contrary, the guise of hilarity and jollification. On the Derby Day the Englishman puts his pride into the pocket of his gossamer palmet, and is perfectly ready to be but fellow well met with the lowliest of the workaday classes. On the Derby Day the Peer is elbowed and "chaffed" by the plebeian and the peasant, and bears the rough usage with a good humour with perfect good humour. "Give and take" is a law of universal acceptation on Epsom Downs. None, save the most illconditioned of misanthropes, lose their temper on that occasion. The most retired and practical, levelled at them on the course, on the hill, or pair or inharmony on the road. To the unprejudiced eye of the dispassionate, good taste and an appreciation of the fitness of things have, indeed, not come limits. If the party of humourists who make the journeys have not a shower of dolls, or pincushions, or whistles, into yours, all that you are called upon to do is, with a smiling countenance, to accept with the utmost complaisance the proffered gift, with courtly alacrity and unerring aim, to hurl back all the said missiles, with no more ado of your own to you have by your side. Indeed, you choose to retain the former as lawful spoils of war. But there is a boundary to Derby Day patience: there is a point which must not be passed. Some people are patient enough to hold over-ripe oranges and empty lobster-claws as trifles light as air for pelting purposes; but it is considered unpardonable to hurl the latter at door or hatchdown eye; and when the volley of projectiles includes such objects as cork-water bottles, pie-dishes, and the full of stale mixture, it is held by severe Vatels and Puffendorfs who have written on the jus gentium to be carried to the extent of that you are justified in storming the carriage containing the persons who have used you in so unhandsome a manner, and either in defending personal chastisement upon them or giving them in charge to the nearest police-constable, to be dealt with according to law. However, such demonstrations of discontent on the part of new scripts of the Derby Day are becoming rarer year year, and may soon, we hope, be reckoned among the obsolete things of the past. Little practical joking may be barely tolerated, but that is all; and we should be much better off without any of it. Of a comparatively harmless nature, and unlimited impunity as to throwing champagne-corks has been known to end in throwing champagne-bottles. Was it not little Dundee, the lad, who began by pelting the flies with lighted straws and ended by burning the house down?

Our old friend Alfred Hunt, in his grand chromatic cartoon of Epsom Downs on the Derby Day, has done well, we think, to choose the pleasanter side of the course in preference to the Grand Stand. The readers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will derive far greater gratification from the spectacle of a popular holiday, of that wonderful carnival in full wheel at such a moment as the artist and man and woman kind are mingled in a temporary submarsha of social equality, than from the contemplation of the crowd which is to be found gathered of desperate speculation, and its pervading impression of the shadow of the Golden Calf. In the hill we see the various manner whose investments in the race do not extend beyond a half-crown sweepstakes for the Derby, or—if the speculator be a lady—but a half a dozen of gloves. The great betting event of the day is shadowed forth with sufficient strength by the Grand Stand, thronged with the habitués of spectators, fashionable and unfashionable in this distance. Then on the course itself we can see the practical racehorses and their little jockeys taking a canter previous to the momentous trial of bone and muscle, and wind and stamina, called a race; but the real interest, after all, is to be found who rest waiting of the state of odds, as contemplated on the hill. In the amphitheatre of old Rome there were, we doubt it not, hundreds of sporting young gentlemen of a "fancy" turn of mind, who "put the pot" on betting events which were to "come off" With some the Nubian lion may have been a favourite; others may have backed a tiger to back the Indian tiger to the extent of any number of sesterces. Six to four may have been laid on this gladiator, and a hundred to eighty on that Christian martyr. But high up, far above the benches of the "knowing ones," there must have been thousands who only looked on the lower scene as a spectacle and a recreation, to eat and to eat drank, and laughed and shouted, and clapped their hands without venturing the smallest coin on the chances of the race or combat below.

In painting the varied humours of the "hill," Mr. Alfred Hunt has ventured on perilous ground; but few will deny that he has acquitted himself in a highly satisfactory manner, and produced a most graphic and lifelike picture of scenery of the most characteristic worthy phases of modern English civilization, for the Derby Day as we know it, as a plant of purely recent growth, is not yet old enough to remember when the world went to Epsom races exclusively by the road; when the attendance was limited to the few who ventured out to the professional sporting community, and when the middle and humbler classes seldom resorted to the Derby in any appreciable numbers. The Derby Day of twenty years since used to be thought a pretty fair muster. Fifty thousand became unusual; fifty thousand, pleasant. Sixty, perhaps, double that number, ought to be wofully under the mark, and fifty multiplied by three is now thought a very moderate estimate of the number of persons who made the Derby Day of 1856—when the Crimean War was at its fiercest, when vast numbers of the most military regiments in the country were abroad, and very many families belonging to the upper classes were in mourning for relatives lost at Inkermann or Sebastopol—was one of the greatest on record; yet, although it was, there were overs and beneath thousand persons present. The prodigious increase in attendance is obviously due to the facilities of communication of railway communication between Epsom and the metropolis. The road is an exception to the rule. There are still the same picturesque cavalcades of every kind of vehicle, drawn by every kind of horse and filled with every kind of people. Still, at Cheam and Ewell, at Tooting and Clapham-common, and Kennington-common, there the same blocks, the same dispurgations of frantic postilions and vociferous and frantic policemen, the same fraternisation of rival pancis; but the pleasure-seekers on the road, innumerable as they would seem to be, are but as drops of water in the ocean compared with the enormous tide of humanity that, in successive freshets, rolls from the railway stations and pours over the Epsom Downs, and rages in turbulent billows when the "lethamia games" are over. The road is responsible for its thousands; but for the tens, and the scores, and the hundreds of thousands, we must look to the railway. Let us visit multitudes of persons now who habitually attend the Derby, who, twenty years ago, would not have dreamt of a trip to Epsom. The distance to be traversed, the time to be consumed, the expenses to be incurred, would have been insuperable obstacles to the accomplishment of such a design had they ever, in the wildness of imagination, ventured to harbour it; but the rail has chased away all such difficulties, and made an excursion to Epsom as easy as one to Hampstead. The expenditure of a very few shillings will cover your charges for the day. You may go to Epsom in a ridiculously short time, and, with tolerable luck in catching a train with room in it, and not getting your hide broken in a crush at the station, you may return to town and reach the bosom of your family before the occupants of the brave carriages on the hill have succeeded in persuading inebriated posthops and helpers to put their horses to.

No one is so accursed by fate,
No one so utterly desolate,
But some heart, though unknown,
Responds unbidden unbidden sighs.

Such is the cheerful and comforting doctrine inculcated by Mr. Longfellow in his "Voices of the Night." Without desiring to set faith to it, we may express our own and analogous opinion that few persons are left in such thorough desolation as to be unable to find some one to sympathise with them to wander about the course and the hill on the Derby Day without somebody to ask them to lunch.

In comic—for there is room for all in the free,
The crown of all humanity,
In silence or in glee,
To meet the elected one.

This is what Mr. Longfellow says about love. With a distinction that is not to be found in his verse, we may apply the pleasing location to an elemcentary lunch. Yes, it comes—"the beautiful, the free," the crown of all humanity—the Derby-day equivalent for "alone and alone," but accompanied by the chattering of knives and forks, the clinking of glasses, and the popping of champagne corks! "Sir," "to seek the elected one"—that is, to enchant the palate and warm the cockles of the heart of the roving bachelor who has been long without a home, and who, for the nonce, is in search of a well-appointed hamper. There are many estimable but economical men who have a sovereign objection to luncheon. "Why eat a chail when it nothing; for who requires a set dinner in town after the succulent pleasures of a Derby lunch?" they run down by train to Epsom, or, more economical still, walk across the fields from Kingston—calm, confident, smiling, and clean-shaven. They have breakfasted on a cutlet and a cup of coffee apiece, who on detaching weighty panniers from the backs of rumbles. They spy the ices among the swoodus and the seeking, and they say, "Ah, that looks refreshing. Bottomless, I dare say." They murmur impossible wishes for fowls to have six legs apiece. Their imaginations are fired by the sight of pale straw glasses with veracity when they think of veal-and-ham pie. They are universal philanthropists, and would take a glass of sherry with all the world. Faith, hope, and Charity are in them embodied; for they infinitely believe that they will be asked to lunch before the day is over, and they have hopes that they will be asked. But the invitation may come in five minutes, in five of ten; and when they have long had, for positive, they will be glad to take a glass of sherry to melting charity," and they will fling half-discreet lobsters and equilateral triangles of pigeons to the winds with boundless charity about the company wheels. It is the fashion to be very generous on the Derby Day. "Le plaisir," says the Frenchman, "rend l'âme si généreuse." There is a kind of Derby-day benevolence which begins meeting at eventide to compare notes on the day's almsgiving. "Interpret that the charm of the season," the sunrise cries; "I got nothing;" "And I," says beggar number two, "at the house where I was never known before I got two pence." The benevolent inclination of Monsieur Savarni's philosophy may be seen on the Derby Day. People don't look twice at a shilling when they are going to Epsom Downs. They are ready to throw sovereigns about as if they were handed. They throw halfpence to the tattered boys who run by the side of the carriages, and they throw the rain which threatened to take their change at the turnpikes. They often treat the postboy to a glass of beer when he has done nothing but drink a glass of liquid refreshment. They are so liberal in dainty fare and sparkling wines to their servants, that you might fancy they were to be such friends for ever and ever. The scrunders who yell for their delectation participate in their bounty. They are eager to cross with them, and to pay the toll-keeper's demand. To the acrobats they give a prodigal largess. The money flows. The generous impulse is strong upon them, and, in a manner, it is good. That some dashing young bucks of the period have not taken to pelting each other with half-crowns on the Derby Day, and to fighting battles royal for blackeyes with a silver effigy of her Majesty would be a novel "sensation." But, lucking even this length of folly, the generosity is the rule and the folly the exception. Derby Day is a day of universal expenditure. The improvement of the Derby, from the racehorse owner who tells his jockey that if he wins he shall have a present, to the boy who tells his mother that he will make him a present of that sum if he wins the race, without the slightest intention of doing so, is the rule and

"SAYING GRACE," FROM A PICTURE BY KATE SWIFT, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF FEMALE ARTISTS.
SEE PAGE 570.

"GIRL TENDING CATTLE, DALECARLIA, SWEDEN," FROM A PICTURE BY AMALIA LINDEGREN, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF FEMALE ARTISTS.—SEE PAGE 570.

"ALEXANDER THE GREAT."

THE fine marble statue, by Mr. Sherwood Westmacott, from which we have taken our Engraving, is, or will shortly be, erected in the Egyptian Hall of the Mansion House, and a cast of the work is now in the exhibition of the Royal Academy. This is certainly one of the best of the long series of statues so liberally commissioned by the Corporation of the city of London for their noble hall. Merely as (we believe) the first "heroic" work by a young and very promising member of a most distinguished family of sculptors this statue would be interesting, and deserving of respectful consideration; but it will be found, on inspection, entitled to high praise on the ground of its intrinsic merit. It is a decided advance, especially in execution, upon any previously exhibited work by the same hand. Technically, indeed, it would be hypercritical to pretend to find an obvious fault. The modelling throughout indicates mature knowledge of anatomy in the living subject; and even in the little drapery introduced may be seen a descriptive propriety in every fold seldom found except in the works of those Continental, and especially German, artists who make this important branch of art a separate study. The character of the head, and of the forms of the figure generally, is very appropriate, poetically considered, to "Philip's warlike son." The face is not precisely like that of Alexander found on Greek coins; but as the statue was designed not as a portrait, but as an illustration of Dryden's glorious ode of "Alexander's Feast," Mr. Westmacott very properly gives a more generalised Greek type. The sculptor intends to illustrate that portion of the matchless ode in which Alexander, overcome with love and wine, and the Lydian measures of Timotheus, sinks a "vanquished victor" on the breast of "lovely Thais;" and the musician, with the loudest strains of his golden lyre, wakes him to renewed frenzy by demanding that he should avenge the manes of the Grecian slain by firing the > Persian abodes,

> And glittering temples of their hostile gods.—
> The Princes applaud, with a furious joy,
> And the King seized a flambeau with zeal to destroy.

It may be objected that Mr. Westmacott's figure has hardly so much fire and animation as the Alexander of the ode. There is some force in this objection; but it may be fairlyreplied that it is always perilous, and, many say, even questionable in taste to attempt to give uncontrolled excitement or violent action in the cold, inert material of marble. Better, assuredly, err on the side of moderation than melodramatic exaggeration. Although this figure does not attitudinise, there is much energy in the face—in the dilated nostrils and the corrugated brow. Moreover, Mr. Westmacott seems to have intentionally anticipated this objection by placing the cubera of wine in the hand of Alexander. The sculptor may have intended to suggest that he seizes the wine to stimulate his "zeal to destroy," or to make a libation to the

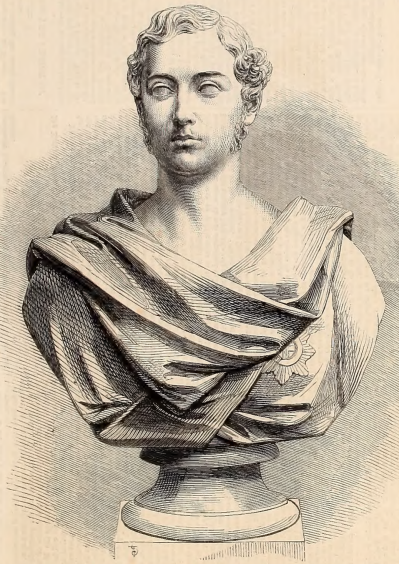
> Grecian ghosts, that in battle were slain,
> And unburied, remain
> Inglorious on the plain.

have a spirit and vivacity very appropriate in a stirring and romantic poetical episode, but of difficult attainment in the heavy, cold, and rigid material of marble. The chief difficulty in this group—the artistic difficulty of conveying an idea of movement and animation—Mr. Munro has successfully surmounted. The more mechanical difficulty of representing standing forms, foreforces, &c., in marble it was, of course, quite impossible to conquer entirely with the chisel. Admitting, however, the propriety of such accessories in marble, the sculptor has rendered them—and also the texture of the staghound's coat—with sufficient closeness for the purposes of his representation, and with much skilful carving and "under-cutting."

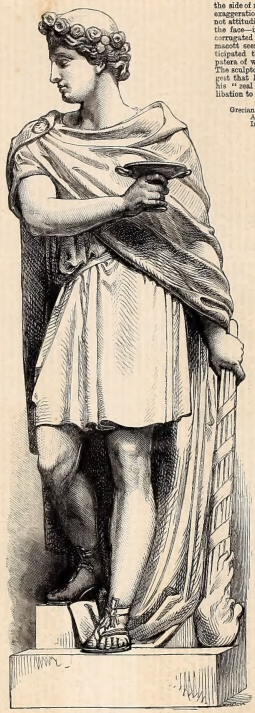
The subject of the group is taken from one of Wordsworth's poems of "Sentiment and Reflection," entitled "The Force of Prayer." This poem, like the "White Doe of Rylstone," is based upon a tradition connected with Bolton Priory, in Yorkshire, and was composed by Wordsworth after his visit, in 1807, to the beautiful country in that neighbourhood. Mr. Munro only quotes the following verse in illustration of the sculpture—

> Young Romilly, through Barden woods
> Is ranging high and low;
> And holds a greyhound in a leash,
> To let slip upon buck or doe.

The poem goes on, however, to tell that the youth arrived at the famous



COLOSSAL BUST OF H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, BY MARSHALL WOOD, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.



"ALEXANDER THE GREAT," FROM A STATUE BY J. S. WESTMACOTT, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

"YOUNG ROMILLY," GROUP BY ALEXANDER MUNRO, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

"YOUNG ROMILLY."

ALL Mr. Munro's works of fancy are distinguished by grace and refinement of feeling; but in the small group we have engraved there is, in addition, an unusual degree of animation. The action of both boy and dog

"Bird," as it is called, formed by the rocks overhanging the River Wharf; that he escaped to leap it, as he had done perhaps a hundred times before, but the greyhound hung back, and, checking him in his leap, he fell into the "strangling arms of Wharf." The lady, his mother, found in prayer and in nursing the stately Percy the only consolation for her grief at his loss.

BUST OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.

THE original by Mr. Marshall Wood of the cast we engrave has been already reviewed in our pages. We inspected and praised the size of the clay model upon its completion at Buckingham Palace. This is the only bust of the Prince of Wales taken from life since the first, by Mr. Sheill, of Edinburgh, when he left School, now more than seven years last year. The size of the present work is colossal, and several duplicates in marble are commissioned. The Lord Mayor has at present one, to be placed in the Council Chamber, Guildhall. As a companion, Mr. Anderson has promised a bust of the Princess of Wales for the same place. Duplicates are also to be set up in the Townhalls of Manchester and Liverpool. A fourth bust is destined for the Guild College, Montreal, the chief collegiate institution of Canada. The sittings for this bust were given immediately before the marriage of his Royal Highness.

We can only repeat of the cast now in the Exhibition of the Royal Academy what we said of the original model. Any number of fine portraits in oil only moderately successful as likenesses, and not of any high merit as paintings; among several attempts to produce a resemblance of the Prince in sculpture (some of them even worse failures), not among a number of trashy engravings from photographs hastily produced to meet the demand, this is really the only work that has yet come once a faithful portraiture and a valuable work of art. It is very rarely indeed that we can so unreservedly commend the success of the first commission as in this instance. We have already remarked that in this bust a strong resemblance may be traced to both his Royal Highness's parents, and it even recalls the portraits of other members of the Royal house. Mr. Wood has fully appreciated the value and dignity of truth in the enhancement of representations of royalty. Like King. He has eschewed any approach to what is mistakenly called "fancy" in art, "trying" for the attire, modes of treatment, and even the truths of character which become a public nuisance when applied to personages of historical importance. It reflects great credit upon the manner of our young Prince that he has expressed his entire satisfaction with this singularly honest and faithful specimen of sculptured portraiture. We do not by any means wish to depreciate bust of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales. From the greatly beauty of Mr. Wood's "Princess," we augur that, when we have no doubt he will be equally successful in modelling a head which, we may perhaps be permitted to say, is more in accordance with the sculptor's strictest canons of ideal form and proportion.

Our Engraving is from a photograph taken by the London Stereoscopic Company.

"SAYING GRACE."

We remember few pictures that find their way to the heart more directly, or awaken deeper sympathy with lowliness than the picture by Miss Kate Swift we now engrave, and which, with another by the same lady, of a pair of Cleveland Lasses, is exhibited at the present time at the Dudley Gallery.

Miss Kate Swift has evidently been painting in Holland, probably on the Scheldt or Rhine country. We see the Dutch style, even of the poor interior, in the massive, carved wood table and stool, and projecting mantlepiece (with its green hangings); and in the fashion of chins that to the side of the fireplace and the cooking pot. There is a very pleasant mode of ornamenting, or "coving," we believe it is technically called, the "chimney piece" in the Low Countries of England—like other Dutch fashions; is still retained in many parts, and there has been recently an attempt among us to revive the tiles so placed are at once more agreeable to the eye than grimy metal; more cheery, cleanly, and economical: for they retain the heat as well as the choicest play and sparkle of the flames. There is another suggestion of Holland in this picture: the well-worn stump of broom—worn, like the old shoe thrown after a bride on the last extremity—reminds one of the extraordinary passion for washing, and brushing, and scrubbing, and scouring, of Dutch housewives. The poor old woman, seated by her dull fire of twigs, is a "mailetotte," as we perceive from her dress, the full basket, and the country gossip and resource for a lonely woman of her age. The scant fire and the formal saying grace over a small basin of soup or broth, as if it were a purgatorial meal, offer a piteous contrast to the more cheering evidences of former comfort, and indicate a and reverse of circumstances. There is a touch of gentle resignation about the old woman's bent formed desire to render lowly comfort in that prettily, fair-haired child, leaning so gently against her knee, and folding its little hands so reverently placed together, the blue eyes turn heavenward, and she repeats the words of prayer and thanksgiving, taught her as soon, probably, as she began to lisp. The bowed head of the old woman—the thin, grey hair, the time-worn and weather-beaten face, the features grown almost with that hard, strong look fastened on them and furrowed over them by the long battle of life—form a most touching contrast with the fresh and innocent face and child. All these things are plain in the picture; but its crowning merit is to us a something deeper and still more touching. It is a softened look of heart-repose—a look that seems to fall like a blessing upon the words of the little one, but that, burdened with care, sorrow, and bereavement, the poor mind has involuntarily wandered long ago to happy time, or follows a ray of hope from a brighter and better world.

"GIRL TENDING CATTLE—DALECARLIA."

THIS second picture which we engrave, from the Exhibition of the Society of Female Artists, represents the simple occupation of watching the flocks and herds at evening in Dalecarlia (properly Dalarne, the valley country), a province of Sweden, lying in the north-west, where one constitutes the Falun Lion. The flocks or herds that may have become during the day far dispersed among the mountain pasturages, turn at the familiar sound of the evening call, and are soon seen winding through the mountain passes and slowly converging towards the town in clouds of dust, or, if rain has fallen, in mire.

This picture must to a Swede suggest many pleasant recollections of home. His will recall, with pleasure, the simple notes he has so often heard in his native valleys. But, besides representing in characteristic national costume, the picture illustrates the Swedish costume and gives some indication of climate. The cold grey, misty evening tone is nothing unlike the manner of the Dutch. The waterfowls, however, in regard to their gaiety of colour, more resemble those of the tropics than those of the northern regions. They are in the water all in summer or winter, indulge in all sorts of worsted fancy, which they knit themselves. The poor knitgirl before us, an inhabitant, we understand, of Orkwick, in Dalecarlia, has a stripped petticoat on the second, and soon seen winding through the mountain passes and slowly converging towards the town in clouds of dust, or, if rain has fallen, in mire. has been represented.

Dalecarlia is the country of many pleasant recollections of home. His will recall, with pleasure, the simple notes he has so often heard in his native valleys. But, besides representing in characteristic national costume, the picture illustrates the Swedish costume and gives some indication of climate. The cold grey, misty evening tone is nothing unlike the manner of the Dutch. The waterfowls, however, in regard to their gaiety of colour, more resemble those of the tropics than those of the northern regions. They are in the water all in summer or winter, indulge in all sorts of worsted fancy, which they knit themselves. The poor knitgirl before us, an inhabitant, we understand, of Orkwick, in Dalecarlia, has a stripped petticoat on the second, and soon seen winding through the mountain passes and slowly converging towards the town in clouds of dust, or, if rain has fallen, in mire. has been represented.

The costume we have seen as the days of Gustavus Vasa, who worked in the famous copper mines of Falun, the chief town of Dalecarlia. In this province the usual domestic animals are reared, but its produce is insufficient for even the food of the inhabitants, and, especially during the long winter months, the tender bark of pines is mixed with the bread and also used as fodder for cattle and hogs. The Dalecarlians are distinguished by their stature, courage, frankness, and love of independence; and they always remained a free part that took under Gustavus Vasa in liberating their country from the tyranny of Christian II.

Mdlle. Amalia Lindegren, the painter of this picture, was a conspicuous contributor to the Swedish school in our International Exhibition. After studying in the Academy at Stockholm, she became a pupil of Leon Cogniet, at Paris, and the special advantage of academic training is shown in the excellent drawing of all her figures.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

MY ESCAPE FROM SIBERIA. By RUFIN PIOTROWSKI. Routledge, Warne, and Routledge.

No more opportune time than the present could have been chosen for the publication of this book. The Polish question is, in fact, adapt to give Kings and Kaisers credit for qualities which they ought to possess, and of this Alexander of Russia has reaped the benefit. So far as it was the fashion to regard his father as the incarnation of despotism, as has it been the fashion to regard Alexander as a man of mild temper, liberal mind, and good intentions. It is well, therefore, that every scrap of evidence that can throw light upon the character of the Czar and that of the people which he governs should at this juncture be produced and carefully weighed.

Beyond doubt, an Emperor of Russia possesses a subtle, generous quality that belongs to man, and imbued with but one idea—the happiness of those over whom he is set to rule, would find any policy but that of laisser faire a dangerous and difficult one. To begin with, he must set his shoulder to the task of uprooting a system of administration so completely corrupt that he would at the outset make an enemy of every public official in Russia beneath him. The Emperor Nicholas was so well aware of this that when a German savant commended upon it and remarked to him how great a service he would render the country by putting down so flagrant an abuse, his Majesty is said to have replied, "Why, to get such a project into action I must begin by bribing my Prime Minister."

But it seems to be evident that however much the possession of good intentions may be conceded to the present ruler of Russia. It is asserted that the Polish insurrection of the year 1831 alienated the Western Europe with respectful admiration for Alexander II., was at once a manifestation of sympathy with the Polish people that, moreover, it was prompted by the desire to deprive the nobles—who, with certain exceptions, have adopted the better influences of Western civilization, and have become intelligent and liberal citizens of their country—of one great source of their power, and hand them more completely under the yoke of the Czar. Whether the Czar has proposed efforts of the present Emperor to elevate his subjects be explained as they may, the fact remains that the great mass of the classes from the bliss of ignorant and brutish habits of life in which they are sunk. Intemperance is the curse of the peasantry in Russia, and the Government, not yet, quite recently, when steps were taken to suppress drinking, the Government issued an angry proclamation against them. It is not surprising that the people, so ignorant and interfered unjustly and tyrannically with individual liberty, but really because such measures deprived them of the solitary means of obtaining liquors, and that to check their consumption would be to impoverish the nobles of the State. So much for the wisdom of the ignorance of the people upon his estate, proposed to found schools for their education, the Minister referred to for permission replied, meaningly, "Why do you want to educate your people? Is there a for a visit to Siberia." But plainer evidence than all we have in the Czar's own words, in a speech which, it is said, he has since regretted of him, in his famous address to the Poles at his coronation :—

"It is asserted that I am the friend of the people. I hope that I shall be the continuance of his." What blessings the reign of Nicholas brought to the Poles this spirited book shows but too clearly. We have no reason to doubt the truth of the facts that it has to relate; deserver, but its perusal has left us filled with admiration for a people who, with the knowledge that they were about to be crushed out by the light of patriotism burning brightly and hopefully, amid so many discouragements, and hundreds of Polish refugees have found will be found to be a continued history of stubborn resistance to national extinction, and enthusiastic disregard of individual life. Robbed, degraded, hunted down, massacred, the Poles have lived and died in the fens and forests, hunted from village to village by the Russian soldiery. One by one the chiefs of the Polish secret national societies have gone under the axe, musicus, and the gallows, or to a secret martyrdom, so that the cause they suffered for might be the more firmly cemented in the hearts of the people.

But the Russian power has at its command a punishment more fearful than death, and it is the punishment of transportation to exile in Siberia will never be known until the day when all secrets will be revealed. It is most rarely that a corner even of the thick impenetrable curtain which conceals this fearful punishment from the gaze of Europe is uplifted. The last hand that did so was the hand of Rufin Piotrowski, who was condemned to the same fate previously distributed once the year 1771, nearly a century ago.

Rufin Piotrowski was a native of Lithuania, and fought for their country. His grandfather, who dwelt at Prague, had four sons. The eldest joined the rebellion headed by Kosciusko, and soon fell. Joined in the uprising of 1794 began by Sawarrow, and only sought refuge in the Ukraine, and our hero's father took a small farm, married, and brought up his family in peace and quietness. Rufin, the hero of the young Rufin was little likely to withstand the temptation of joining in the insurrection of 1863. Besides which he was a student of law, suffering many privations; and at last, with the primary object of assisting the cause for which he had suffered so much, and not a little, perhaps, from home-sickness he hurry upon him, returned to his native land. Although he took every precaution to conceal his movements, he had many friends in Poland, and, in them, the police were soon upon his track. They followed it, drawing fearful lines of misery, suffering, and agony, but not to the end escaped, but in doing so he would have exposed those who had shelter and food and intercourse with him to the knout. He did not hesitate to await the worst, preferring every peril to dishonour.

We have not space to follow the wretched exposé through all the steps which led to his capture, trial by court-martial, and at last sentenced to a living death. The sentence was carried out to the Russians, from which many shudder to read, is appended. But, fortunately for him, he fell into the hands of Prussian officials, who had been, we should hope, present to be sent back to the scene of extradition treaties to the letter. Sheltered by them and the university sympathy of the townspeople, when the story of his unexampled escape and journey to Germany is known, he was enabled to pursue his journey and reach Paris in safety.

THE STRANGE ADVENTURES OF CAPTAIN DANGEROUS. By GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA. Tinsley Brothers.

Captain Dangerous will scarcely recall the number of Mr. Sala's readers, although it will certainly strengthen the high opinion already entertained of him by his more judicious admirers. Happily, Mr. Sala can afford to write a book (once or twice a year say) for a somewhat more discriminating audience than the general run of novel readers who support Mr. Mudie's library. In all probability, to judge of the future by the past, they will not have to wait long for their turn again. Mr. Sala's experience of the public taste is such that when Captain Dangerous to our notice is very likely by this time deep in the unfortunate story that may occupy the whole of the winter of "The Seven Sons of Mammon." Meanwhile, those to whom plot is a book is of little consequence, and who find enough sensation in real life to dispense with it in fiction, will be found sufficiently numerous to ensure to Mr. Sala's last work a fair degree of popularity and successful reception.

John Dangerous, Captain by virtue of several commissions, English and foreign, writes his memoir in his own house. No. 100, Hanover-square, whither he has retired to die peacefully after sixty-odd years of an adventurous life, in the course of which he has been soldier, sailor, merchant, spy, slave among the Moors, and a Bashaw in the service of the Grand Turk. It might well be that these avocations were found all too small for the full portrayal of so long and busy a career, and that, therefore, there have been most unnecessarily employed in introducing certain characters which have nothing to do with the action of the story, and which serve at their shame in the midst of what into the world renders them worthy of notice, much of his later history is told in comparatively few words. But the judicious reader will forgive any failure in proportion that preserves for him at the outset an hour's occupation as he will find among the hundred and fifty pages of the book. Here he will find the little tale of mysterious grandmother and the story of her youth and age.

It will be found that Captain John Dangerous does not tease his story at a time when it is drawing to a close, and that he brings his experience of his long and varied life to bear upon the incidents which he narrates. Quaint—quite as this may be as an artistic point of view, it possesses this attraction, that we have the opinion of John Dangerous, since Mr. Sala, upon a very great variety of subjects, expressed with the frankness and straightforwardness of the old roving Captain, who doubt out words like brown, knowing that, no matter from what quarter they may be quoted, they are sure to be worthy. Thus, speaking of a schoolmaster, who, in the days of John Dangerous's little life, we have the following burst of very natural passion against those pedagogues—happily they are few in number now—who consider blows and stripes the best means of implanting knowledge into the mind of youth:—

Flesh and Blood! Have you ever thought upon the wrongs your pedagogue has wrought upon you, and longed to meet that wretch, and wheel his flesh with the same instrument that he has wielded you, and make the rattan bowl for mercy? Mercy, quotha! did he ever show you any? A. preaching against the sin of cruelty, and forming part of a committee for rescuing pauper chose, and illustrated by the cane that he used to cast you, and to spread your tender flesh with blood? Oh, you good-hearted, soft-headed, sentimental simpleton! Do you suppose that little fellow, we have the pleasure of knowing, who was to denounce him?), might treasure him for his barbarity. All those! I had ever caught him in the street I'd give him a good slip of mine! Aha! knave, if John Dangerous would not have dubbed himself the inventor of gunpowder, and have blown you sky-high with a good talis of three-strand cord, with triple knots in each, and the brine-tub afterwards. Ah, you old villain, you would have had a good deal to do. But, alas! I have. He must have been but five-and-forty years old when I first knew him, and he died full forty years agone. And at a hundred and five the cruellest tyrant is past cudgelling.

Captain Dangerous has better and kinder words than those to say. The following are specimens of the style of the world in a book all to come upon three men together in it, but that one is good and moreful." He speaking of a gentleman who were good and faithful to him in a boyish scrape, he tells us in his gratitude, "Sare there are hearts of gold among those broadbrims and their straightlaced relations. Many a time have I benefited by the money-bags that for the sake of Mr. Barnibal Shapcott; many a fair woman have I interrupted from my own fair self in the acceptance of the good that was shown me in the old time by that pale, strait-gowned Wingrave gender, with the drab shawl and the grey cap. But that, I, who am old and battered, and black as a Guinea negro with sins, I would go join the Quakers now—never mind their broadbrims and their-ing and their-ing—I tell you, they have been a soft set to me, and a soft butter, and that they do you good in a day than my Lord Bishe; with his cambric sleeves and his lawn. Ah, I do! I do! I've said enough, no doubt, to interest the reader's curiosity in the old sea captain who has lived so many volumes, some of them of strange adventures which, in a less lavish hand, would have been made to provide material for half a dozen novels.

THE HORSES OF THE SAHARA AND THE MANNERS OF THE DESERT. By E. DAUMAS. Translated from the French by J. CAREY. Hurst and Blackett, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

THE HORSES OF THE SAHARA AND THE MANNERS OF THE DESERT. By E. DAUMAS. With Illustrations by GUSTAVE DORÉ. Translated from the French by JAMES HUTTON. Allen and Co., 1863.

A book upon the Arab and Bedouin is so much of a novelty that one is not at all surprised upon opening General Daumas's original and interesting work to find that it is by no means a perfect novelty in the treatment of his subject. Having served for sixteen years in Africa, and been intrusted with missions which brought him into close and daily intercourse with the chiefs, he has had an information respecting their life and manners which he has published at intervals, and at different periods of his long life in the out of France, the best known and most popular. According to some authorities, writes Gustave Doré, the Arabs are the best horsemen in the world; according to others, they butcher their horses. Towards enabling us to form an opinion for or against the Arab's horsemanship General Daumas has enjoyed the facility of fairly watching the horse before us; and in doing so he is careful to disclaim any responsibility.

"I am not prejudiced in favour of the Arab horse," he writes, "if I say simply, right or wrong, this is what the Arabs do."

To begin with, the Arab horse is a native of all the best kind of the high estimation in which the Arab holds the horse. Chief among the many to whom our author appeals for information is Emir-el-Kader, who, in a letter from his native land, still retains his memory of, and respect for, its traditional love. "You are like," writes the Emir, "the Arab who has in a land distant by his side, and which no amount of rain, however abundant, will ever be able to wash away. Remember, as far as possible, your horse. In your knowledge, I will go back to the very head of the fountain. Know, then, that among an Arab tribe, called Beni Azlah, there lived a man of the name, as he created Adam out of mud. When Allah willed to create the horse, he said to the south wind, 'I will that a creature should proceed from thee.' 'And what shall be,' said the south wind, 'its nature?'

Subsequently, the Emir expresses his preference for a dark chestnut. Horses with coats of a light, pale colour are held in little esteem by the Arabs. Every horse, however, that colour will change according to the soil on which horses are bred.

According to Arab taste, the thorough-bred horse should be well proportioned; it should have a small head, short ears, a large massive, his chest meagre, his nostrils wide as the throat of a lion, his eyes bright and full of fire, his forehead like the head, his tail, he chest full, his withers prominent, his loins well knit, his haunches strong, his back flat, his belly full, his sinews abundant, and his flesh firm. Possessed of a colt which shows promise of qualities such as these, the Arab proceeds to train him with the greatest care, and the age of eighteen months begins his education. The colt is mounted by a child, who takes him to water, goes in search of grass, or leads him to the tent. He is taught to turn up a bucket, and the colt acquires early the habit of carrying a weight proportioned to his strength. He learns to lie down, to rise, to kneel, to wait for his rousan, say the Arabs, that they never have restive horses.

A few months later the colt is saddled and bridled. Previously his mouth has been carefully accustomed to the bit. The rider mounts without spurs, and with a light cane in his hand, which he uses as a whip. Gradually the colt is taught to gallop, to trot, to amble at which, should he prove victorious, the young horse will certainly suffer some injury. It must not be supposed, however, that the Arabs are unfamiliar with the use of severity in the training of their horses. Of such a kind can be no question. But the Arab has shown symptoms of evil habits, the discipline applied, according to General Daumas, seems to us unnecessarily harsh and severe. The colt is not allowed to eat, to drink, to rest, to be perfect, and the trained horse—the disciplines of his education over—has little to complain of. In time of peace, he leads, with his master, a domesticated life. In time of war, or on travel, he receives every care. The women, particularly, make their husband's steeds their especial care. They bring them food, caress, tend, and groom them. These every-day attentions and kindnesses render the horses so gentle that their neigh at the approach of the women, and in many ways evidence their affection. As to their speed and endurance, General Daumas gives us many wonderful proofs and authority, some marvellous stories. Abd-el-Kader, too, affirms that his horses, and those of his tribe, will accomplish as much as 120 miles in a day. As a rule, he writes, a horse sound in limb, that eats as much barley as his stomach can contain, can do whatever his rider asks of him. And he adds that it is no outrageous requisition on his owner's part that he shall carry him fifty miles through the cross or four months without fatigue and without tying by a single day.

THE WATER BABIES. By C. Kingsley. Macmillan and Co.

Like a gallop on springy turf; like a sail on a breezy sea; like a row on a dancing lake; like a plunge in a limpid stream; like all that is manly, healthy, and fresh is a course through the pages of Mr. Kingsley. He is elastic and airy, vigorous and pure; he has a delicate touch for children's dirty-faced, ragged, and neglected ones; he has a noble sympathy with all that is, or would be, clean, and truthful, and strong; and he has a noble pity for all that is dirty, and wicked, and untruthful, and weak. But let not the feeble family uncles and unfruitful aunts be alarmed. Their sympathy, man or child who is conscious of, but does not like, Mr. Kingsley. Mr. his own fireside, cannot expect indulgence from Mr. Kingsley. Mr. Kingsley will hand him over to the fairy. Mrs. Bo-done-by-a-you-did. We quoted in the first number of this publication to be worthy to be admitted to the gracious presence of the fairy Mrs. Do-as-you-would-be-done-by, and was duly and delightful double of the other fairy. For this is a fairy tale; it is said to be "for a land baby", but it is as well in some respects for a water-baby. Tahiun likes to be found in basements, or in the poor man's substitute for basement. We all of us know babies six feet high, with manly cares with a manly burden but no growth of goodness in either heart or mind; and to them the "Water Babies," if only they can comprehend a small portion of it, or can get some one to read and explain them, may do infinite service. In fact, the author speaks, as the grave farmer he is did not disdain to speak before him, in parables. And, by the allegorical story of Little Tom, the chimney-sweep, who served the harsh taskmaster Grimes (and a very delightful set of sturdy rogues), and, horrible to say, by the accidental glimpse he caught of his nasty face in a looking-glass, fell into the river, and was supposed to be drowned, but really became a water-baby, was thoroughly cleaned and purified and chastened and instructed, and ultimately went home and lived a life on Shakspeare's principle "since work days too," and, became "a great man of science," he shows all babies and all men that it is necessary first to be cleanly how pray, not nasty, and then they are to be humble; then to bathe in the living waters till they become clean of hand and pure of heart, to make love to Mary Vale through the medium of Ellie, and then their lives according to the dictates of that "new commandment" which was added to the decalogue, and by which to convince themselves that—

He prayeth best who loveth best
All things, both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loves them all.

Mr. Kingsley's fairy tale endings are happy to say, to introduce scenes from nature, in painting which, whether in prose or verse, he excels. Here we go one. He is familiar with the sights of the heaven above, of the earth below, and of the waters under the earth; and his pen reproduces them with a faithfulness and an elegance which astonish and charm. No more truthful picture could be given than that of Mrs. Vizen, with her white tagged brush, lying upon her back in the bright sunshine, with her face in the tube jump over her, and run round her, and nibble her paws, and lay her about by cell, to her mighty enjoyment; nothing more graphic can be imagined than the mutual fear of Tom and the grosser-cock when the bird "rose off" with a "white-pool-punt-cock-cock-bird;" nothing more natural than the wild excitement he raises the grouse-cock and his wife, which is ended by the sharp-tempered sweetheart's successively rating her husband for his cowardice, the spiders—go and catch spiders—kick!" and nothing more picturesque and melodious than the chaining, thinking river's song, which begins thus refreshingly:—

Clear and cool, clear and cool,
By laughing shallow, and moaning pool;
Cool and clear, cool and clear,
By shining shingle, and dripping weir;
Under the crag where the ouzel sings,
And the ivied wall where the church bell rings,
Undefiled, for the undefiled;
Play by me, bathe in me, mother and child.

We have read nothing equal to this since Mr. Tennyson's "Brook." We would have Mr. Kingsley and Tom down by the river, spend on the way the kingly salmon, with his silvery sheen and crimson dots, bowled over, curling like a serpent, and leaping into the full moonlight on the rippling river, be startled by the sudden red plare, hear the struggle and the splash when the noble fish is speared, and witness the high upon the river's bank and listen to the crash, and the gurgle, and the hiss, as Grimes, the salmon poacher, torch in hand, is hurled by a keeper into the rapid stream. But there is no space here. Mr. Kingsley we would say a few words upon the satirical portion of his book. It has been called Rabelaisian, and there is a sense in which that, so far as external resemblance of style is concerned, in the heaping up of epithets and synonymes, and in the arrangement of objectionable matter, or what is in parallel cases objectionable, &c., there is a certain likeness; but we think the likeness stops there; at any rate, we have a hardihood to say that there is in Mr. Kingsley's coarseness is conspicuous by absence. Mr. Kingsley, however, has "a rod for the fool's back," and applies it unsparingly to the vices which have crossed our mind, which we shall make bold to give utterance to. One is what we called the book is not ratified as a proper reading for babes (for Mr. Kingsley undoubtedly has the instruction and amusement of children chiefly in view); and the other is whether in a fairy tale allusions to fashion and politics of the day are not out of place. Who, for instance, will in a few years understand the nonsense about "Sir Lucre" and "Sir Buzfuz," and transformed into "Squeaky," the "Pumplighter," the "Narrow, Narrow Way," the "Hills of the Chatteroths," and the "Vale of Tempe Twaddeley," even granting it is worthy of Mr. Kingsley to sneer at theses books and their authors? It would be unpardonable did we close our remarks without expressing admiration of the two exquisite illustrations by Mr. Noel Paton.

In order to suit the convenience of the Oxford and Cambridge Universities, the Henley-on-Thames Regatta is postponed to June 25 and 26.

The Tupin Memorial Committee, having raised a fund of £2,000, have resolved to place it in the deposit of the British Artists, in trust, for the establishment of a Students' Travelling Fund, under certain conditions.

The Manchester, 980 tons, belonging to Messrs. Joseph Fenwick and Son, of Liverpool, and commanded by Captain Bibbenhead, was lost, for by stress of weather off South Wales, with 366 Government emigrants, composed of 82 married couples, 109 single men, 39 single women, and 81 children, under the care of Mr. Colin Campbell, superintendent, appointed by Mr. Adderley.

A Parliamentary return shows that £1,205,000 was paid in to the Exchequer in general to the Government of India during the National Debt during last year; and the total amount in the hands of the Commissioners on account of the Post Office Savings Banks on the 31st December last was £1,603,234 12s. 9d.

Kennett Court, built in the reign of James I., who founded the Epsom meeting during his residence at Norwich, its immediate locality has been removed to the county of Surrey, and is now the property of Mr. Edward Woodhamstone in Lambert's Oaks, formerly an inn, but latterly a place of some interest to the Jockey Club, since it was the favourite resort of the late Mr. Epsom races. The house, which stands high and commands very fine views, was erected by a society called the "Merlord Club," which met at the Oaks, Lambert family. It afterwards became the residence of the unfortunate Lambert family. It afterwards became the residence of the unfortunate Lambert family. It afterwards became the residence of the unfortunate

"SUMMER ON THE THAMES," FROM A PICTURE BY W. W. GOSLING, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF BRITISH ARTISTS.—SEE PAGE 574.

"AN ARMY ON THE MARCH, THE REARGUARD WITH THE BAGGAGE-WAGGONS," FROM A PICTURE BY JOHN GILBERT, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

"AN ARMY ON THE MARCH: THE REARGUARD WITH THE BAGGAGE-WAGGONS."

A critic has remarked of the very spirited picture by Mr. J. Gilbert, now in the exhibition of the Royal Academy, which we have engraved, that it is "confused," and the remark is made seemingly in disparagement. Now it appears to us that such an observation is very simply, very naively or very flippantly. We would only be made either naively or very flippantly. We wonder if art-critics are ever "confused" in their own ideas? In this instance the "confusion" complained of was certainly not great also in the artist, and is certainly by no means great of his picture. Has the rearguard and the baggage-waggons of any army, we would ask, ever been free from confusion? Did Mr. Kinglake find perfect order here when accompanying the armies in the Crimea; find perfect order here when following the Federals in America? Are our Mr. Russell when following the Federals in America? Are our Mr. Russells when following the rear troop, when on the march in large numbers, though not much impeded by baggage-waggons, among the struggles and confusion in the rear? Is it likely that a Cavalier army such as Mr. Gilbert represents, often irregularly composed, "braves of the Bastard sons of Whitehall" such as Dr. Lyon Playfair would and his discipline as they notoriously were, would have a well-ordered rearguard, or find their baggage-waggons in a very well-ordered rearguard, or find their baggage-waggons in a very well-ordered rearguard, or find their baggage-waggons in a very

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

WAR-OFFICE.

1st Life-Guards: 2 E. W. T. Marquis of Granby to be Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant, vice Lascelles: Staff Surg. R. F. Andre to be Surgeon.

7th Dr. ngns: Capt. J. Bayley to be Major.

9th Foot: Lieut. and Adjt. J. Hamilton, R. Forrest to be Lieutenant: Qr.-P. Pritchett to be Quartermaster: H. Noble to be Ensign.

2nd Foot: Lieut. A. Baird to be Paymaster, vice: Lieut. E. Lewis to be Captain: Ensign J. E. Dunford to be Lieutenant: R. M. Gibson to be Ensign, vice Dunford: Ensign G. S. Close to be Assistant-surgeon, vice Gibson: Lieut. and Adjt. J. Hamilton to be Captain: Lieut. C. Baird to be Lieutenant, vice: Lieut. F. J. Granville to be Adjutant, vice Hamilton: Ensign J. Forbes to be Lieutenant: R. Forbes to be Lieutenant: R. Quin to be Ensign. 7th: Lieut. J. C. F. Grice to be Lieutenant, vice Hall: Ensign J. Hall to be Lieutenant, vice Grice: Ensign J. Bowen to be Lieutenant: Ensign Bowen, Lieut. W. H. Kingsley to be Captain: Serjeant J. Bowen to be Lieutenant: C. T. Lyon to be Ensign. 40th: Lieut. G. Coates to be Lieutenant. 74th: Ensign J. Bradford to be Lieutenant: A. H. Forbes-Gordon to be Ensign. 84th: Capt. J. A. Hay to be Major: Lieut. and Capt. H. H. W. Trevenen to be Lieutenant.

Royal Marines: Lieut. J. Hall, R.N., to be Instructor of Musketry.

MEMORANDUM.—The Gazette of September 5, 1862, Lieut. R. Yeats and E. M. Shaw to be Staff Surgeons.

Militia.—Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. C. H. Ellis, C.B., to have the honorary rank of Brigadier-General while he commands a brigade: Major A. J. Peel to have the honorary rank of Lieut.-Col. while he commands a battalion: Capt. and Brevet-Major J. Riggs. The following Gazette of 20th inst. to be cancelled, so far as relates to Major Riggs: The following are the Re-gulations of the Royal Warrant of October 31, 1856, Lieut.-Gen. J. R. Ogilvy and T. H. Fitzherbert to be Generals.

MILITARY STORE DEPARTMENT.—Assistant-Commissary-General Thomas Gibson, C.B. dead.

Orders have been received at Devonport to put in commission the screw-sloop Merlin, 17, with a complement of 175 men.

The troop-ship Middlesex has arrived from Calcutta, Jan. 27, and 26, Hobart, April 6. She brings the 2nd Highlanders from Calcutta, under the command of Colonel Lockhart.

All the screw-corvettes, as well as the larger vessels fitting for the Pacific station at the Chatham steam reserve, are to be supplied with an auxiliary engine for working decks, weighing anchors, and other purposes.

The Board of Admiralty has directed that the same arrangements at Woolwich be extended so as to hasten the completion of the armour-cased ship Caledonia.

In consequence of the success which has attended the newly-invented ventilating arrangements on board the iron-clad screw-frigate Royal Oak, Sir Baldwin Campbell, Bart., Surveyor of Shipping, has informed the Admiralty have decided on introducing a similar system on board the other ships now under the inspection of the surveyors of shipping.

The Prussian sailing-frigate Gefion, Captain Klatt, arrived at Spithead on Saturday week from the West Indies, and on Monday exchanged salutes with the Victory, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir M. Seymour, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief in the Channel, and subsequently with the Foley, flagship of Rear-Admiral Sidney C. Dacres, C.B., flying at Spithead, and which is second battery of the garrison.

Her Majesty's screw steam-frigate Leander, Captain Thomas Harvey, was one of the final trial of her machinery and sailing qualities off Maplin Sands on Thursday week, in charge of Captain W. K. Hall, C.B., of the Chatham steam reserve. The vessel attained an average speed of nearly ten knots per hour, although the force of the wind was from five to six, and the tide was very much. The trial was considered very satisfactory, there being no entire absence of hot bearings or priming.

On Wednesday week new colours were presented on Mount Wise, Devonport, by Mrs. Hutchinson, wife of Major-General in Chief of the Western District, to the 76th or Staffordshire Regiment, quartered in the Raglan Barracks at Devonport. This regiment was stationed for a long time throughout the whole of the mutiny. It was one of the first encamped before Delhi, and remained until the capture of that city. The colours were presented with the usual ceremonial, and were handed over to the keeping of the senior officer present, on behalf of the garrison. After three years' service the regiment returns to England from the Mediterranean. The regimental colours being worn and shattered, new colours were prepared by the authorities at the Tower of London. The 76th Regiment is now stationed locally in the north of Scotland, in the year 1787, by Colonel Robert Abercrombie.

The annual return of harbours of refuge states that at Peterhead in Aberdeenshire, of which Admiral Sir Leopold M'Clintock is Chief Commissioner, the breakwater is now 1,000 feet in length, and £40,000 will be required to be voted now, leaving £41,000 of the estimate to be voted next year. The work should be completed in November, 1864. At Portland the eastern arm of the sea and harbour walls of the western breakwater are now 1418 yards from the shore, or 148 yards short of the limit ordered. The new arm of the breakwater extends to 1648 yards from the shore; 12,000 tons of stone have been deposited in the new harbour now nearly completed. The dry dock and entrance to the basin works, and a vote of £80,000 will be required this Session; the estimate was £120,000, but £40,000 has been saved in contingencies, leaving £80,000 to be voted. Queenstown, on the Cove of Cork, is a harbour of refuge. The breakwater extends to 1648 yards from the shore; 12,000 tons of stone have been deposited in the new harbour now nearly completed. The dry dock and entrance to the basin works, and a vote of £80,000 will be required this Session; the estimate was £120,000, but £40,000 has been saved in contingencies, leaving £80,000 to be voted. Queenstown, on the Cove of Cork, is a harbour of refuge. The breakwater extends to 1648 yards from the shore; 12,000 tons of stone have been deposited in the new harbour now nearly completed. The dry dock and entrance to the basin works, and a vote of £80,000 will be required this Session; the estimate was £120,000, but £40,000 has been saved in contingencies, leaving £80,000 to be voted. Queenstown, on the Cove of Cork, is a harbour of refuge.

MILITIA.

The 3rd Regiment of Royal Surrey Militia, numbering upwards of 900 men, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel C. B. Challoner, was inspected on the 12th inst., in Bushy Park, by Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar. After a short inspection in the field and in barracks, Prince Edward Weimar expressed his great satisfaction at the efficiency and appearance of the regiment. The Lord-Lieutenant (the Earl of Leveson) also complimented the Colonel and officers upon the discipline of the regiment and the general good conduct of the men in quarters.

The West Suffolk Militia, which has been undergoing its periodical training and exercising at Bury St. Edmunds, was inspected yesterday week. Previous to its being dismissed, the regiment was inspected by Colonel Davies, C.B., commanding the 4th district of infantry, Colchester, who expressed himself in highly complimentary terms as to efficiency. The regiment has now its full strength.

The West Kent Light Infantry Militia, under the command of Colonel Sir E. M. Wilson, was inspected on Monday last, in the Cavalry-square, Maidstone, on the 14th. The regiment mustered as present 570 rank and file, exclusive of officers. After having undergone a close and quick time they went through various battalion manœuvres, at the conclusion of which the General addressed them, expressing his high opinion of their appearance. The regiment has come up well, having only thirty-four absentees mustered for.

The Oxfordshire Militia completed its annual course of twenty-one days' training on the 14th inst., after having been inspected on the Monday previous by Major-General Crealock, who expressed his satisfaction in the highest terms. The regiment mustered very strong in men, there being about 650 on the parade present.

The Denbigh Militia was inspected on the 11th inst. by Colonel Edwardes, Bt., who said he was much pleased with the soldier-like appearance of the men. Four men only were absent. The manner in which the several exercises were performed reflected much credit upon them, and attributed their healthy appearance to the system of messing adopted in the regiment since the formation in 1852. The number of men put down averaged four, the total strength being 468.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

The annual ball of the London Rifle Brigade will be held at Willis's Rooms on the 8th of June, under the patronage of the Duke of Cambridge, Honorary Colonel of the Brigade.

A grand brigadier field-day of the Oxford University Rifle Corps will take place on June 8, on the occasion of the rector University reception visited, and when the 4th battalion will be commanded by Colonel M'Murdo. On the visit of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, at the Commemoration, the corps will act as a guard of honour and escort their Royal Highnesses from the Great Western station to the deanery. Great interest is being taken during the visit of the Prince and Princess of Holstein, given to the corps, with other prizes, will be presented to the fortunate recipients by Prince Alexandrina, who has graciously promised to do so to Great Tom Quadrangle, Christ Church.

NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

The general meeting of members was held yesterday week, at Willis's Rooms, Mr. Alderman Cubitt, M.P., in the chair, and read letters which he had communicate further than to report that the arrangements for the meeting at Wimbledon on July were complete. The number of members of the Association was 42612 including the ladies' prize fund of £410. The names of the ladies' committee would be published hereafter. He regretted to say that the annual subscriptions had not increased to the extent that had been hoped, and he begged once more to remind them that the Council were anxious to render the association which conducted its proceedings from year to year, more than those subscriptions were considered necessary, and he was difficult to know what to do. In other respects he hoped the committee had met the wishes of the volunteer body in every respect, and he was sure that a strong feeling that the rank and file arm of the volunteer should be brought more prominently forward, and the committee in the new arrangements had established prizes for the next competition which he hoped would effect their object. There would be sixty prizes, restricted to rifles of the bona fide Government pattern, carrying 577 bore ammunition, with a minimum pull of thirteen six pounds. There would be an "Alexandra" prize given in honour of the Princess of Wales, restricted to rifles of bona fide Government pattern, also carrying 577 bore ammunition. It was intended to hold the meeting this year, as before, and it would take place on the 16th of July. The entries for the three prizes amounted to 1,979, and he hoped every effort of the committee there would be an increase. Forty officers and 140 men had got down their names for interding to avail themselves of the camp at Wimbledon. The officers' tents would accommodate two each, and the privates' tents four each; but parties who preferred to do so would be allowed to pitch their own tents. The general rules have been amended, which, together with the new by-laws, would be printed shortly.

Colonel Digby Seymour, and Sir R. Hamilton advocated the adoption of the amended rules.

Some discussion followed, in the course of which Captain Temple and others, while admitting that the council had liberally met the wishes of the general body, contended that the Enfield rifle ought to be allowed an opportunity in the approaching competition of proving its capabilities at 800 or 1000 yards; and also that the number of competitors should be limited to 1000 instead of 500, to which it was replied that General Hay and others held that the Enfield could not be depended upon at those distances, and that 500 prizes had been given and no further steps as to handicapping until the result of the experiment now going on through the country was known.

To a question put by Lord Truro,

Mr. Alderman Cubitt replied that the annual subscriptions were 7000 guineas, and there was a small amount—but only a small amount—invested in the funds, the remainder being kept at the bankers. The expenses of the prize for rank and file arms, was proposed and lost, and the rules and report were adopted.

A vote of thanks to Her Royal Highness the Chairman concluded the proceedings.

THE NEW VOLUNTEER BILL.

The bill introduced in the House of Lords by the Under-Secretary for War provides, in the first place, for the acceptance by the Crown of services of corps of volunteers, and for the formation and for the formation and re-organization of corps on that basis. The permanent Staff to be attached to every volunteer corps is to consist of an Adjutant (commissioned), and for battalions and of so many sergeant-instructors as may seem fit. Officers, except such as are on the permanent Staff, are to be elected by the members of the corps, subject to the approval of the Crown. Non-commissioned officers are to be appointed by the commanding officers of the respective corps at the prompest of their respective ranks; and with officers of the corps, and subject to the approval of the Crown, are to be appointed by the respective forms. The acceptance of a commission in the volunteer force is not to vacate a seat in Parliament. Corps are to be enrolled for the purposes on which a volunteer may, unless on actual military service, quit his corps, are to be those of actual military service, quit his corps, are to be those of actual military service, quit his corps, are to be those of

ENTRANCE TO THE CAVE OF ELEPHANTA, IN THE BAY OF BOMBAY.

THE CAVES OF ELEPHANTA.

(From a Correspondent.)

THE celebrated Caves of Elephanta are situated in the island of the same name, called by the natives Gara-puri, lying in the Bay of Bombay, about seven miles from the fort. These caves form one of the most favourite resorts for pleasure and pic-nic parties, the sail across the bay, the coolness and seclusion of the caves, combining to render a trip to them most enjoyable. It has been thought by many, judging from the nature of the statues that are ranged along the sides of the cavern, to the number of some forty or fifty, and which, although standing prominently forward, are not detached from the main rock, and from the religious symbols which meet the eye continually, that these caves are not of so remote an origin as tradition speaks of. Until, however, they are more closely investigated they are likely, among the natives, at all events, to retain their reputation of being many thousand years old.

INTERIOR OF THE CAVE OF ELEPHANTA, IN THE BAY OF BOMBAY.

The entrance to the large cave—which we have engraved—suddenly meets the visitor's eye after a steep ascent of one hundred stone steps. A lovely view of the bay beneath and the distant hills is obtained from the summit.

Our other Illustration depicts the interior of the large cave. It is about 130 ft. long and 135 ft. broad, and originally rested on twenty-six pillars and sixteen pilasters. Several of these, however, have given way. They are about 18 ft. high, and carved out of the solid rock, some few of them still retaining ample evidence of no unskilful hands having been employed upon them.

NATURAL ARCH IN SIND.

(From a Correspondent.)

ABOUT sixty or seventy miles north of Jacobabad, Sind, is a range of hills, inhabited by tribes who formerly gave us much trouble by their plundering propensities, but who have now learned from experience that the English cannot be treated in the same way as the tribes of the plains.

In 1839-40 a force under Major Billamore penetrated the hilly country which they inhabited, and, notwithstanding its difficult nature, conquered them on their own ground. In 1845 Sir C. Napier's campaign took place against the much-feared robber chief "Beja," whom he pursued from one place to another, until he finally entrapped him in a curious natural stronghold called "Trukkee," and brought him to submission.

Since that time the hills have been repeatedly visited, and have become well known to the officers of the frontier field force.

But I have not to do, at the present time, with the historical events connected with these mountains. I wish to confine myself principally to a very remarkable arch, which is found near the stronghold of "Trukkee," and which, as far as I know, has never yet been made public.

On the north side of a large valley (called the Sungseyla Valley) is an irregular range of hills, consisting chiefly of sandstone, though here and there of solid rock, and in some places of alabaster. Through these, in a south-easterly direction, runs a mountain stream, dignified by the name of the "Sungseyla River." Unlike most of the streams about those hills, it does not dry up entirely at any time of the year, but varies from a swollen torrent to a trickling brook (as at present), which may be easily crossed by means of stepping-stones.

REMARKABLE ARCH FORMED BY THE SUNGSEYLA RIVER, NEAR TRUKKEE, SIND.

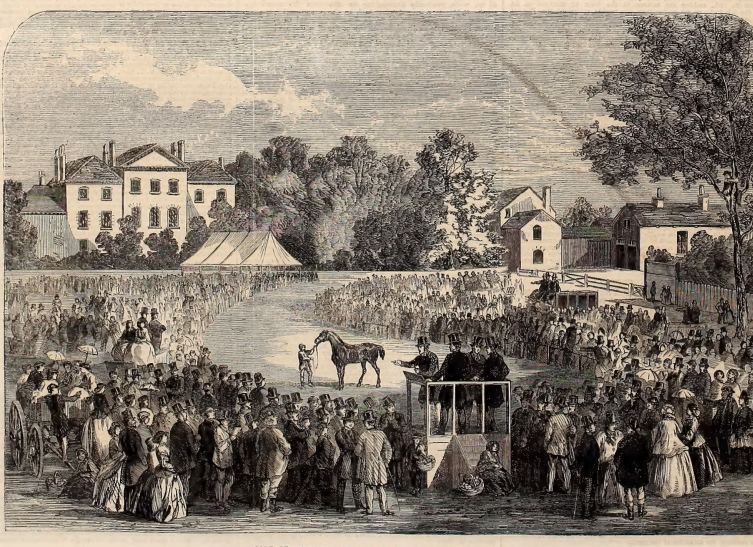
In former times a hill of earth and stones mixed together appears to have formed an impediment to its egress into the valley. How the difficulty was overcome it is impossible now to say; but in some way or other the water has found its way, not over nor round, but through the rock, which at this place at the present time is about 50 ft. or 30 ft. in thickness, and originally must have been much more. Subsequently portions were no doubt loosened, and, falling in from above, were washed away by the stream, until at length was formed a beautiful arch of upwards of 90 ft. in height, of which I send you a drawing.

The general scenery of these hills is extremely wild and grand; there are no trees of any size, but magnificent passes and ravines intersect the rocks in every direction, offering subjects of interest alike to the soldier and painter. There are plenty of ibex and wild sheep in the hills, and pigs, &c., in the valley, for the sportsman; and the geologist will find ample scope for his favourite pursuit.

SALE AT QUORN.

Of all the sports for which England is so famous, foxhunting stands pre-eminently foremost. In England alone there are at the present time fifty-five packs of foxhounds, regularly hunted, comprising about 2500 couples of hounds, each of which have their fair share of supporters; and, to take a low average, there cannot be for short of 20,000 horses employed during the five months devoted to foxhunting. In Leicestershire we cannot fail to be struck by the large studs kept solely for hunting, by the number of hands employed to look after the horses, and by the great care bestowed upon them. The metropolis of the sport (like Newmarket of the turf) is Melton Mowbray, which for many years has maintained its supremacy from the fact of its being situated in a fine grass country, where foxes are well preserved, and being, in addition, the centre of four of the best packs of hounds in the kingdom.

We give these few remarks in connection with our Illustration of the great sale of hunting-horses at Quorn kennels on Saturday the 9th inst., which was probably the largest gathering that ever took place at a sale of the kind. A finer lot of perfect hunters was never brought to the hammer. The Quorn hounds have for many years held a first-class reputation in connection with the Melton hunt, and the mastership of these hounds has always been held by very first-class sportsmen—the late Assheton Smith, Esq., and Sir



SALE OF THE EARL OF STAMFORD'S HUNTING STUD AT QUORN.

Richard Sutton, to wit. Sir Richard it will be remembered, died almost, seven years ago, at the beginning of the season, and he was succeeded by the late master, the Earl of Stamford and Warrington, whose reign of seven seasons has been marked by unbounded liberality and determination to show sport. When Sir Richard Sutton took to the hounds he abandoned the subscription, and defrayed the expenses out of his own pocket, keeping a larger stud, and carrying everything out in a manner which, with justice, caused him to be looked upon as the best man Quorn ever had. His sudden removal was a source of distress to a world-wide circle of friends, and the fortunes of the Quorn seemed wrapt in mist. Earl Stamford, who had been previously hunting in Staffordshire, took the hounds, and, on the same terms as Sir Richard had the country until the close of the present season in a most princely style, having, during the last two seasons, found everything, carver-card included—a matter which had previously been paid by the regular frequenters of the hunt. The hounds were disposed of to the Earl's successor, Captain Clowes, Lord Stamford heading the subscription-list with £500. But it is with the sale of the horses that I have to do the hunt that we have more immediately to do; and these who visited the stable at Quorn last week saw a sight they will probably never see again; for there, in perfect condition, and looking their best for a hard season, with no frost to give a rest, were eighty horses, which had been got together regardless of expense, of first-class quality.

Quorn is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Soar, about nine miles north of Leicester, and within half a mile of Mid-land Company's main line and station at Barrow. The hall is a large pile of buildings, having a frontage on the south, with lawn down to the water's edge, and to the north looking towards Loughborough. The stabling and kennels lie close to the hall, on the west side, and the long range is pleasantly sheltered by a row of fine trees.

It was originally intended to conduct the sale in a large square yard at the back of the stables, and a raised platform, covered with an awning, and capable of holding about a thousand people was prepared; but it became evident that this place would not hold a quarter of those present, and Messrs. Tattersall decided, like on the occasion of sale, to move out into the open space, which was hastily prepared for the occasion. Some 6000 to 7000 people were present, comprising most of the leading sportsmen in England, and a large number of the nobility. The complete list would be a very long one; but I may mention, in passing, that during the week and on the day of sale there were present the representatives of the Prince of Wales and the Emperor of the Perch, the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort, Lord Middleton, Sir Watkin W. Wynn, Lord H. Bentinck, the Marquis of Hastings, Lord Chesterfield, Lord and Lady Zouche, W. F. Haynes, Esq., and Mrs. Heyrick; Lord Archibald St. Maur, Sir. J. Johnstone; W. Craven, Esq.; W. H. Gilmour, Esq.; Major Morgan, the Earl of Lonsdale, Lord Gardiner; T. Cradock, Esq.; E. B. Farnham, Esq.; and that fine old sportsman, Sheldon Orade, Esq., who, though unable to get into the saddle now, can boast of having attended the first meet of the Quorn for fifty years without missing. The crowd was composed of most of the well-known dealers; and there were also several hundreds men and retired huntsmen present.

At half-past twelve Mr. Tattersall, after a short and pithy address, commenced with the whips' horses at low figures; but no sooner did he reach the long stable than up went the price, and the first out of it, Bentinck, a very fine chestnut gelding, was knocked down for 500 gs., and was followed by high prices throughout, the highest being made by Eliot, likewise a chestnut, which fetched 610 gs. There was but one reserve out of the whole lot, and that was £600 on Trumpeter, a bay horse, very perfect, and as no one advanced upon it, he was taken back. Several made £400 and 450 gs., and the proceeds of the sale of the eighty-one horses, saddlery, and clothing, amounted to nearly £16,000; and, if we may reckon the hounds, it is evident that Lord Stamford had not much less than £30,000 employed in sustaining the reputation of the Quorn hunt.

The principal purchasers were the Prince of Wales, Lord H. Bentinck, Captain Chaplin, the Marquis of Hastings, Lord Middleton, &c.

THE DISTRESS IN THE NORTH.

The usual weekly meeting of the Central Executive Relief Committee was held in the Yorkhill Parish Schoolroom, Glasgow, Mr. Alexander Stephen in the chair. Mr. J. W. Maclure, hon. sec., stated that during the week twenty-two parcels of flour, one hamper of meal, and four packages of clothing had been received, and that the receipts for the week were £1178 9s., making the total amount received to date £15,000 0s. 6d. On the 9th inst., as we gather from the weekly return of Mr. Farnall, 102,264 persons were receiving assistance under the Poor-law, a decrease as affected by the cotton famine—a decrease of 3071 as compared with the previous week, but an increase of 275 per week as compared with the corresponding period in 1861. The average percentage of pauperism on the population of the unions referred to on the 9th inst., was 9·2, whereas in 1862 it was 9·6.

At the meeting of the Manchen Hoom Committee yesterday week the following grants were made:—Shaftsbury, £1000; Alexandra, £1000; Bishop of Rochport, £500; Tonistiles, £500; Chorley, £100; Rochport overlookers, £100; Oldham overlookers, £100; Bury Mechanics, £50; Bridge, £50; Litchday Field, £40; Bury, £40; Tonge-cum-Alkington, £30; Birch, £25; Rochdale, £25; Barnoldswick, £25; and Walmsley, £20.

Taking into consideration the improved condition of the labour market, and, consequently, diminution of distress, have resolved to close early next week. Last night, instead of meeting, the total amount received up to Thursday evening was £402,127. The total amount of the subscriptions which were received during the past week was £740, of which £339 was from colonial sources. The sum already remitted for distribution was £1000, and the amount in hand to account for emigration, is £402,356.

Mr. Rowlinson, overlooker who was sent by Government into the manufacturing districts to report on the condition of the towns with a view to employment for the distressed operatives, has made his report, in which he states the various towns that are in want of drainage, paving, and improvement of streets, waterworks, parks, &c., at which the operatives could be profitably employed if Government would lend the money and the local authorities would pass a short Act to remove the difficulties in the way of the towns accepting it. Mr. Rowlinson reports that the men are willing to work and will be willing to accept this kind of work, and he calculates that after a few weeks' employment they would earn enough to support themselves and their families. Mr. Rowlinson's report has been received at the Poor Law Board and promoted to Parliament.

A deputation from the Corporation of Blackburn has waited on Sir George Grey with a memorial, praying for a loan sufficient to enable the town to employ. The Town Council of Blackburn have also applied to the Corporation of Blackburn, and adopted a memorial to the Government, praying that steps may be taken for the immediate relief of the distress, owing to the local authorities in the cotton-manufacturing districts, for the purpose of enabling them to carry out public works on which the operatives may be employed.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—The despatch addressed by the Sublime Porte to its representatives in London and Paris, and to the Ottoman Consul-General at Cairo, when the Sublime Porte first considered the question, to reserve the right to construct fortifications on the line of the canton, and declared his desire to see a preliminary understanding established between the two maritime Powers of Europe, the object of which the opening of such a channel demanded. No such understanding had been come to; and, in order to put an end to the doubts which Egypt as to how he is to regularise his position in reference to the canton, the Sultan has felt it his duty to call the attention of the contracting to which the authorisation of the Sublime Porte has always been subordinated. The Porte has on former occasions declared that it would require a guarantee of the neutrality of the canal and the protection of his interests. These two facts which are of the most important character from the beginning—first, the employment of forced labour, duly chronicled, and, secondly, the construction of fortifications, to the existence of which the Porte cannot sanction; and, secondly, the cession of territory adjoining the canals, wherever they may be necessary for the defence of the company those give them the towns of Suez, Timsah, and Port Said, and land for the establishment, on improved conditions, of the necessary workmen of the canton. This claim in the contract will never receive the sanction of the Porte, which considers more be indissolubly connected with the execution of the three following questions—namely, the neutrality of the canal, the sovereignty of the territory adjoining the canal, and the rights of the Porte to encroach for fresh water supplies and the necessary fortifications for the canal. The despatch proceeds to say that the company cannot complain of the delay in the contract itself under the approval of the Porte indispensable, and M. de Lesseps, in stipulating subsequently for further privileges, promised to obtain that consent within eighteen months, but had never done so. Although, then, the company, having commenced the works at their own risk and peril, could not complain of the works being stopped without compensation, yet, on account of the private interests involved, the Porte is willing to take the necessary measures for returning the money the company have spent, in the event of their not wishing to proceed without advantages which cannot be granted. The company would, of course, surrender the property and the works in return for the repayment; and in that event the Porte, in concert with the Viceroy would adopt such measures as might be most appropriate for realising the execution of the work.

PASTORAL STAFF FOR THE BISHOP OF CENTRAL AFRICA.

The pastoral staff of which we give a representation was manufactured for Dr. Tozer, Bishop of Central Africa. It is formed of ebony, ivory, and gold, and its total height is 7 ft. 2 in. The crook is of ivory, an irregular octagon in section, about 10 in. long and 5½ in. wide, gradually diminishing in size from the commencement, and ending in a flowing leaf, in the eye of which is a six-foiled convolution flower, 3½ in. in diameter, formed in basswood silver, having two similar faces, in the centre of which are large and beautiful carbuncles. On three faces of the crook are likewise carbuncles, gradually diminishing towards the end, to the same number of twenty-seven, set in silver mountings. The crook springs out of a silver cap, octagonal in form and 8 in. high, enriched with stiff-leaved foliage, where it joins the ebony staff, all the other parts being hammered out, moulded and chased with pomatical patterns and the sacred monogram, thus covering the entire surface. The diameter of the octagon at its largest part being nearly 3 in., eleven carbuncles are set around, and the centre is crowned by a diamond of great value, surrounded with eighteen smaller ones. The ebony staff is 11 in. between the cap and boss, or knop, which is of silver, and about 4 ft. between it and the spear-point, likewise formed of silver, and both constructed on other parts. The whole of the silver is parcel-gilt. The staff separates into three pieces, fitting into a case constructed to receive it. It was designed and superintended in its construction by Mr. Wilkes, architect, the manufacturers being Messrs. Keith and Stiff, church plate makers.

More than 2000 foreign firms are about to take part in the great shooting match at Chaux-de-Fonds (Switzerland). The majority of them are from Germany, but several English and French shots have signified their intention to be present.

Colonel Colson, who was deputed by the French Minister of War to examine the Metz fortifications, and to report if the French were fit or Schnetzer are interred, has returned to Paris. It is said that he found the fortresses in a state of the most perfect order. Fresh air and sunlight were thrown down and profused. The Russian authorities caused themselves on the ground of the impossibility of discovering the perpetrators of this acts of vandalism. The French Government, it is said, is now determined to collect the remains of Schnetzer and Klein, and to give them a public funeral, a decision to be erected to their memory. The entire is to be lectured by a solid wall, and an officer will be placed in the Cathedral to watch the monument.

LITERARY INQUIRIES.—In the course of the year 1862 Messrs. Longman and Co. published a catalogue of manuscripts relating to public records 2443 times. The list of the subjects concerning which they contained there were 1,000 entries. It comprises "Life of Philip Henry; memoirs of the Perrots family; to make tracings of certain ancient maps of Ireland; to correct errors contained in Sir R. Glad and the Lord Mayor's Show of the 17th century; to collect materials for memoir of Jane Dormer, Duchess of Feria, wife of Spanish Ambassador in Queen Mary's reign; to collect materials to take impressions of seals; history of Anglesea and Beaumaris; to inspect the letters of Queen Elizabeth; to verify a passage in Lord Clarendon's History of the Rebellion; Right of the Earls of Tyrone and Tyrconnell, and memoirs relating to the Irish Parliament; to collect materials for a history of the Abbey; history of Corby; particulars relating to the River Humber and places on its banks; to collect materials for a history of the Barons; history of the Militia; history of commerce and navigation at Bordeaux; History proposes connected with the Isle of Man; history of the town of Ivry, in Normandy; researches relating to Shakspeare; new edition of Wilkie's "Picturesque;" history of the Channel Islands; researches illustrative of political economy; life of Sir James Graham; history of the Baptists; researches into military history; to examine letters at Bishop Hall; history of the office of Lord Great Chamberlain; history of the Long family; colonial history; to copy Irish papers of the reign of Henry VIII.; to inspect domestic papers, Charles II.; history of loss; history of Monmouthshire; Liverpool privateers and the volunteer force; to copy Irish papers; parochial histories of Wilts.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

THE AFFINITY OF NITROGEN FOR METALS has been further shown by some researches of MM. Brieg ch and Geuther, which show that nitrogen combines with magnesium, forming a stable compound containing 28 per cent of nitrogen. They obtained it, by heating magnesium to redness in a current of ammoniacal gas.—Zinc heated to a dull red in a current of nitrogen is covered with a grey coating which shows traces of ammonia when heated with caustic potash; iron powder, reduced by hydrogen, takes up a little nitrogen when heated in a current of that gas; aluminium, in a similar position, takes up about 2·16 per cent; and chromium absorbs 15·7 per cent of nitrogen. The above-mentioned chemists have experimented with tungsten and molybdenum, and found that these metals do not combine directly with nitrogen at a red heat.

NATURE OF COTTON FIBRE.—Mr. C. O'Neill, of Manchester, has communicated to the Philosophical Society of that city a note upon the appearances presented by the transverse and longitudinal sections of some of the reagent termed by bowrier's solvent (oxide of copper and ammonia), under the action of which the cellulose fibres are said to swell to many times the diameter which true cell-wall or cellulose matter; 2, spiral vessels dissolved either in cold or outside the external membrane; 3, the true cell-wall or cellulose; and, 4, a more medullary matter. The spiral vessels are unmistakably apparent, running round the fibre in the manner of two parallel and continuous spiral ribbons, and parallel, and at other times double and in opposite directions, or again remaining single, and then forming a tube with a single groove or cylinder. They are in the spherical swellings or beads, but are prominent at the points of transparence of long curves, as they are in a coil of wire when loosely stretched. They collect in a close mass, forming a lustrous, and are frequently ruptured, the ends projecting from the side of the fibre. It has been calculated that there are about 30,000 spirals to an inch of fibre.

FORMATION OF HAIL.—Under Sanna-Salaro has laid before the Academy of Sciences at Paris a new theory respecting this meteor, the formation of which has hitherto baffled inquiry. The process, he observes, that hail is formed in the atmosphere by successive incrustations upon a nucleus. He believes that the nucleus is always a drop of water, nearly in the state in which they fall; that congelation begins with the exterior; that the liquid in contact with the first crust of ice instead of at once freezing, absorbs the caloric—this latter finally bursts the shell, and the congelation of a new layer takes place. This latter is formed of two parts—a layer of air and a layer of spherules, the other containing bubbles of air and vapour. If the bubbles reach the ground before they have congealed there will remain a nucleus of air, water, and icicles; but if the congelation be suddenly completed the nucleus will be made up of air and ice. The layers of different qualities of water in conchoteur envelope quite true parent, and states that he has obtained artificially hail of all the characteristics. M. Sanna-Salaro has also natural and artificial hailstones the only difference is that the number of the layers, for the former, is much greater than for the latter. This is in the manner which is printed in the Comptes Rendus, with interesting meteorologists, whatever opinion they may form upon the author's conclusions.

A METHOD OF ENGRAVING BY ELECTRICITY is described in Les Mondes, from the communication of M. Fontaine, and of M. Fellenan, an artist. A well-polished plate of zinc is covered with a layer of white, slightly hot wax, and then with black wax; by pressure on wood. On this white layer is drawn a portrait with a special ink, and the plate is then suspended in the bath of copper, and is covered by a deposit of sulphate of copper, whereby the inked portion of the drawing is covered with a coating of copper. When the plate is taken from the bath and separated and separated to the positive pole in oxidised water. The acid consumes and hollows out the parts not drawn with wax, and the zinc plate is ready for use. The operation is complete in a few hours, and a plate obtained fit for printing from, a fine specimen of which is given in the sketch from these notes are extracted.

GLACIERS OF GREENLAND.—In the new Number of the Proceedings of the Royal Geographical Society is a note by Dr. Rink, of Greenland, on the discharge of water from the interior of that country through springs underneath the ice. He calculates the yearly amount of precipitation on Greenland, in the form of snow and rain, at 1000 cubic miles, and the total output of ice by its glaciers at two inches. He considers that only a small part of the water which falls as rain is carried off by evaporation, and argues that the remainder must be carried to the sea in the form of sub-glacial rivers. Copious springs of water issue from the ice-cliffs at the front of the glaciers that advance into it, and their positions are conspicuously pointed out by flocks of sea birds which hover over them to feed upon the smaller fish. A lake adjacent to the outfall of a glacier into the sea has an irregularly intermittent rise and fall, which Dr. Rink ascribes to springs alternately when it sinks they burst out afresh, showing a direct connection between the springs and a sub-glacial river. A phenomenon which has been observed in the Alps, Dr. Rink concludes that an amount of glacier water is equivalent to ten inches of precipitation on the whole land is not unreasonable. Arctic hypothesis, and to accounts for its presence partly by the translation of icebergs from the Polar Sea, and partly by the fact that the Polar Sea is not a frozen basin as commonly supposed, but a great ocean, of which the pole itself never reaches it. The land melts the surface snow into water, which percolates the ice, and by the pressure of the column of water in the fissures of the glacier, whose thickness exceeds 2000 feet. At the time Dr. Rink's communication was sent home, the Danish Government was carrying on borings in relation to the geology of Scotland, the northern part of which had been in precisely the same condition as Greenland is now, and would be when the ice-sheet had frozen masses, which advanced towards the east and engulfed themselves by glaciers; and Greenland, which was now in the state in which the rest of what was going on in Greenland, there would inevitably be a great many phenomena not nearly equal to those described.

SOLAR ECLIPSE PHENOMENA.—A recent number of the Proceedings of the Royal Astronomical Society contains some remarks on the fringes of light observed during the total solar eclipse of May 6, 1883, by the eminent German astronomer Hermann Goldschmidt, in a letter to our astronomer Royal. On May 6, 1883, the day of the eclipse, Herr Hermann M. Goldschmidt had some conversation with a Spanish countryman, who stated that before the eclipse of 1860 he had seen, in the form of a long parallelepiped, yellow spots were seen fitting over their white clothes from east to west. He compared the appearance to that of a number of yellow ribbons floating one on the road. The confirmed M. Goldschmidt's own observation of the direction of movement from east to west, and added that he had seen a sketch of this in his description of the eclipse of 1860. We give some particulars of the phenomena in his own words:—"On the 6th of May, 1883, I was in bed at 5 o'clock in the morning, and suddenly I saw many spots only from my father's, when the darkness of the night was at its height. The spots were of a yellowish colour, and came from east to west with great velocity, and moved in a direction parallel to the sea, covering the large and deserted street and passing under my feet. Their movement was so rapid that I could not make up my mind to have perceived distinctly with the eyes so nearly fixed on them. The movement was not rapid. The spots were in the form of bands, and only the projection of the shadows which accompanied the bands, and only the projection of the shadows which accompanied the formation, like inner spaces particularly, filled with round spots, softly moved from east to west. The whole of the spots had the appearance of the phenomena a somewhat mysterious appearance. Thus, looking to the paved streets, these closed spots were not visible, and rather my feet felt a slight group of men near my father's house, after having made one hundred steps in contemplating the phenomena, I met a group of men who were coming from my father's house, and I was told by the gatekeeper of the shadows which have compelled it to seek a retreat in the midst of the frozen seas. This opinion is now shown to be correct, and the observations of the whalers which visit the coast of the Cape in June to bring forth their young, and return to the high seas in August or September, are of the greatest interest to the inhabitants of the northern whale to for a similar purpose. This, however, is not considered to be the case, the observations of the whalers being eliminated as useless, and especially to the transport of ice into Baffin's Bay. It is thus entirely in the midst of plenty that the Greenland whale, the only species now found in the north during summer. The whale-bony has diminished in numbers, and is already a rare animal. It is also stated that the whale-bone has been visited the North Atlantic Ocean is a totally different species—viz., the one formerly found in the Arctic Seas, and known as the Greenland or Right Whale; and by the Icelanders, Nordkaper, or Sletbag, a much more active and powerful animal than the Greenland whale, with a finer whale-bone and less rich in oil. The fishery for the latter could towards the end of the last century be carried on profitably as far south as the Azores. The Right, or whale, with its fins, appeared before St. Sebastian, in the Bay of Biscay; the mother remains but the young one continues on the coast of the skeleton MM. Beneden and Richard are convinced that it belonged to the species known as the Greenland whale. It may now be assumed that the name "Balæna mysticetus" has been applied collectively to various species of whale.

SCOTCH KJÖKKENMÖDDINGS.—By the last number of the Natural History Review we learn that the Rev. G. Gordon has published an interesting account of some heaps of refuse, agreeing closely with the Kjökkenmöddings found in Denmark, which have been met with on the coast of Elgin. Mr. Gordon says:—"By far the most striking, if not the most valuable, remains found in the Kjökkenmöddings are those of the bone axe which lies within a small wood on the old margin of the Loch of Spynie, and as a sort of promontory formed of those raised shingle beaches so well developed in that quarter. This mound, or rather these two mounds (for there is an intervening portion of the ground that has no shells), must have been of considerable extent. A rough measurement gives eighty by thirty paces for the larger, and twenty-six by thirty for the smaller portion. The former is abundant shell to be perviable. We have a large piece in their hall of the oyster, which, as well as those who look for a bargain in their shell of Sure, few pearls will find, is of fine size. Here lie some of the nooks of our fish, as the periwinkle, whelk, and Arab, we know not where a small dish of them can be procured. As third in order in this mound is the mussel, and then the cockle. Each of these epochs, however, bears but a small proportion to either of the former ones." Similar refuse heaps, found all round the shores of the Mersey River, have no doubt been carried away by the farmers to serve as manure. It is to be hoped that the Scotch antiquaries will promptly examine those which remain.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

PROFESSOR ANSTED'S Fifth Lecture (on Thursday, the 14th inst.) was devoted to the Mechanics of Geology. He began by stating his conviction of the inability of accounting for the present appearances of the surface of the earth and the position of its strata, except by the assumption of a force perpendicular, by any of the theories which assume the interior of the earth to be in fluid state, with a thin crust covering it. He then mechanically shown that this crust must be almost two hundred miles thick, or the mass, from the enormous pressure of the fluid below, would rise, and endeavour to explain our investigation of certain facts connected with the laws of gravitation, and the mobility of matter. Earthquake action is said to be limited to about the depth of thirty miles, and volcanic action takes effect near the surface; but the mechanical forces act very effectually, although very slowly, and these effects appear in the contortions, cooling, heating, depression, and elevation of rocks mechanically deposited. By reference to these forces the Professor explained the phenomena termed faults, and the lamination, foliation, and cleavage of rocks; and he especially referred to the erosion and denudation of rocks by water during their slow elevation, and the occupying and excavating action of glaciers on mountain sides and valleys, and the consequent formation of lake and river valleys, such as those in Switzerland. The subject was amply illustrated by drawings and diagrams, all tending to show the evidence of the operation of the mechanical forces in the original history of a country.

DR. W. ODLING, F.R.S., gave the Friday evening discourse on the 15th inst., his subject being The Mineral and Thermal Waters. His object to the great change in opinion which had taken place during the last dozen years in relation to this question of great interest. He considered, to the effect that the molecule of water, which had formerly been represented with its single combining proportion of two atoms of hydrogen, was frequently represented with two combining proportions (in conformity with the opinion of Frey, Cayley, and others). So far as regard this question was entirely one of experiment. If the degrees of water the same capacity, and, consequently, its molecule was represented with the same atom-quantity, as the molecule of hydrogen, it was experimentally distinct two proportions. If it must consist of at least two atomic proportions. He showed that in the case of marsh gas the hydrogen was replaceable in four successive stages; and that in the case of ammonia it was replaceable in thirds or three successive stages: whence chemists were necessary to represent the molecules of marsh gas and ammonia with four atoms and with three atoms respectively. He then contended that the hydrogen of water was replaceable in halves at two successive stages; and that, consequently, its molecule ought analogically to be represented with four atoms of hydrogen. Indeed, the binary replacement was even more decided than the ternary replacement in marsh gas and quaternary replacement in marsh gas. In muriatic (or hydrochloric) acid the replacement of hydrogen took place at one stage only, and, consequently, the molecule was represented with but one atom of hydrogen. This series of formulæ is warranted by a very remarkable physical coincidence—namely, that with equal volumes of marsh gas, ammonia, steam, and hydrochloric acid, the marsh gas yielded four times as much, the ammonia three times as much, and the steam twice as much hydrogen as was yielded by the hydrochloric acid. Among many other experiments, Dr. Odling exhibited on a large scale the properties of the spontaneously inflammable gas, known as silicated hydrogen, which had been prepared for the lecture by Mr. Baudrimont, assistant of the professor in the manufacture. Sir Henry Holland, Bart., F.R.S., vice-president, was in the chair.

PROFESSOR MAX MULLER'S tenth lecture on "The Science of Language," given on Saturday last, the 16th inst., was on the Turanian languages of the ancient religions, more especially the Greek, the Etruscan, and the Scythian. He showed that the Greek mythology had been too severely condemned, and that they were preliminary stages, and quoting the Apostle Paul's sermon at Athens in corroboration of his views (Acts xvii.). The monotheistic character was also shown by extracts from Homer the evidence of the knowledge which the Greeks possessed of the existence, omnipotence, and omniscience of Zeus, named Zeus, the god of the sky. He referred to the similarity between this word and the Sanskrit name for brightness of day, Dyaus, and between the Latin word for sky in Chinese, Flemish, and other languages is also used for God, and we worship when we kneel. Between Heaven (a name for God) and the nations is found the nomen numinis, the perception of a God, representing what the Israelites call "the name to us, and to our children for ever." Jehovah, says Ancient says, "We are his offspring." Among the illustrations given from Homer, Plato, Aeschylus, and Sophocles, including the Greek words for God, wisdom, power, and goodness of one God, was a prayer containing the assertion, "I know who thou art, O Zeus, and what is the sense of Zeus." PROFESSOR MAX MULLER will give the Friday evening discourse on the 29th inst. on "Vedic, or the Sacred Books of the Hindus."

PROFESSOR WILLIAM THOMSON, F.R.S., will commence a course of three lectures on "Electric Telegraphy" on Tuesday next, the 26th inst.

THE EARTHQUAKE AT RHODES.—A correspondent of the Temps gives the following particulars of this sad calamity, under date Rhodes, April 28:—"On the 23rd inst. we felt the shock of an earthquake, such as had never been felt before. Not a single building in the town or in the island has escaped uninjured. The great tower of St. Michael's gave way, and the bells rang out their own funeral knell. Almost all the houses in the town have fallen, and the numerous towers and minarets which rose on all sides of Mosques, recently converted into a prison; the walls of the town are more or less damaged, and almost all the cisterns. At Trianda the houses are almost all standing. Twelve other villages have been completely destroyed. There have been in all 200 persons killed and as many dangerously wounded. Of all the villages Mansari has suffered most. Out of 46 families only 25 persons have been saved, and they are more or less injured. The day at Mansari the second day after the catastrophe; 120 dead bodies had already been collected. Several families were still missing from whom entirely their houses had occupied could no longer be recognised. Five dead bodies were taken out of the ruins which I was there. On the 24th inst. shocks were heard to my memory the sad scenes of the explosion of 1856. Lindos has suffered much. We continually hear that the fear of the people is rapidly decreasing. We hope that tranquility will soon be restored. By a providential mercy all my friends and acquaintances have been saved. Only a few persons were killed in the town and in our suburb. The Vice-Consul of France and Italian Vice-Consul have unfortunately lost their wives, and the latter himself has suffered but little. To complete our misery, three days after the earthquake a dreadful rain came down, so that some persons who had escaped hoped to save have been utterly lost. It is very cold for the season, and the unfortunate people have neither shelter nor food. Everything is destroyed—houses, furniture, clothes, cattle, silkworms."

EASTBOURNE RACE-COURSE.—The following is taken from an interesting communication by MM. Melchior de Vogüe and Waddington upon the geographical order of their voyage in the Mediterranean, in the steam-yacht Isaigne:—"I ask permission to take you with us into the mountains between Antioch, Aleppo, and the Aamanus, on the right bank of the Orontes. Many of the country are designated under the names of Di-Illus, Dj-ala, Dj-Alagn, and Dj-Sandjak. It is not this that it is desired to point out to your notice, but it will be compared with those which the ruins of these districts present. I am nearly tempted to refer to the name of Antioch, to the number of churches found, and whose view transports the traveller to the midst of a lost civilisation, and proves to him to say, to us, all the words, which are not exploring, inhabited those abandoned courts, those portiones in which the vine twines around mutilated columns, the impression is felt similar to that experienced in Pompeii. This feeling is indeed less complete, for the climate of Syria has not preserved the treasures of wood sculpture, nor the frescoes, nor the mosaics which make of the civilisation there contemplated is less known than that of the period of Augustus. We will observe that, to the number of more than 700, is added one from thirty to forty square miles, form a whole from which the spectator is deeply impressed. Here are churches, monasteries, tombs, and houses, and, to the right, that of the primitive, Christian, and Byzantine epochs. Nothing is more curious than to see the Syrian peasant in transported into the midst of Christian ruins—not the Middle Ages, but the Christianity of the first centuries—and the Middle Ages existence which is generally inhabited, but a few, opulent, to-day's large stone house, large, spacious, and commodious, with vaulted balconies, sandstone gardens planted with vines, presses for making wine, cellars and other cisterns for containing the liquor, stables, magazines, and stables; in squares, surrounded with porticoes, are elegant baths, magnificent ornamented churches, with towers, and domes, and surmounted by splendid tombs; crosses and monograms are sculptured in relief on the doors and numerous inscriptions may be read, Christian sentiments; from a feeling of Christian humility, which contrasts with the vain display of Pagan inscriptions, which generally contain only names and place sentences, passages from the Scriptures, monograms, and dates. The rest of these inscriptions indicates a period not distant from the triumph of the Church; for on account of victory is perceptible which raises the humility of the man, and animates every line, from the vers of the Psalmist engraved in handsome red letters upon a doorpost covered with sculpture to the screw of an obscure painter, who, in decorating a tomb, has, to try his brush, traced upon the sides of the rock monogrammes of Christ, and, in the enthusiasm of an emancipated Christian, writes the great words in Greek, Iesus nika—This prevails! From one of these phenomena, at which the East offers such frequent and striking examples, when we have abandoned on the same day, probably at the period of the Mussulman invasion, and since then they have not been touched. Without the earthquakes which have overthrown so many walls and columns, nothing would be wanting but the tidings and footings of the inhabitants."

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

H. LYLE.—We have not heard that play has been resumed between Messrs. Morphy and De Riviere.

The two prizes just awarded in the match by correspondence between Edinburgh and Paris, for the Problem Tourney, and the Match itself, appear, with scores, in the next article of this column.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 1060 (by Adolphe). P. R. Newton, Perdita, S. M. F., Smallboy, Alma, W. R., Jupiter, Rex, Ajax, Rev. J. Wayte, Alpha, Beta, Gamma, Delta, Epsilon, Zeta, Eta, Theta, Iota, Kappa, Lambda, Mu, Nu, Xi, Omicron, Pi, Rho, Sigma, Tau, Upsilon, Phi, Chi, Psi, Omega, Nemo, Rook, Lionel, R. S., P. T., V., Miranda, P. S. Worthington, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Wayte, Rev. J. Wayte, Jun., Rev. J. Wayte, Jun., Rev. J. Wayte, Jun.,

NEW BOOKS.

This day, New Editions at all Booksellers and Railway Stalls throughout the country.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "NO NAME."
THE WOMAN IN WHITE. 6s.
THE DEAD SECRET. 5s.
ANTONINA. 6s.
HIDE AND SEEK. 5s.
QUEEN OF HEARTS. 6s.
BASIL. 5s.
Each Volume forms a handsome Square 12mo. cloth, with a Steel Engraving from Drawings by John Gilbert, Sir. Cole.
London: SAMPSON LOW, SON, and Co., 47, Ludgate-hill.

Ready this day at all Libraries.

WAYFE SUMMERS. A Novel. By THOMAS ARCHER. 3 vols., post 8vo. £1 11s. 6d.

ARABIAN DAYS AND NIGHTS. A Narrative. By MARGUERITE S. POWER. Post 8vo. 10s. 6d.

THE YOUNG MAN. A Novel. By E. HOLL. Esq. 3 vols., Post 8vo. £1 11s. 6d.
London: SAMPSON LOW, SON, and Co., 47, Ludgate-hill.

DECALCOMANIE.—Instructions in this new and fashionable Art, by which Designs may be instantly transferred to Velvet, Silk, Satin, Wood, Glass, Paper, or any other surface, free of cost. Direct, STANLEY WINDUS (Graduate). Instructions post-free, 3 stamps.—WILLIAM BARNARD, Artistic Repository, 56, Cannaught-street, London, W.

Just published, 7th Edition, price 2s. 6d.; post-free, 32 stamps.

HUNT ON THE SKIN.—Tenth Thousand.—A Guide to the Treatment, and Preventive and Remedial Use of the Skin Illustrated by Cases. By THOMAS HUNT, F.R.C.S., Surgeon to the Hospital for Diseases of the Skin, Author of "The Diathesis-cause, Forms, Stages, &c." Mr. Hunt has beautified these diseases from the incurable class to the curable.—London: J. CHURCHILL, 11, Princes-street, Cavendish-square.

NO CHARGE MADE FOR ILLUSTRATIONS.—PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, or Monogram plain. Superior Cream-laid Envelopes, 4d. per 100; Note-paper to match, full size, five quires for 4d. At H. RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

WEDDING CARDS and ENVELOPES Printed and Stamped in Silver with Arms or Crest, by the latest fashion. Card Plate elegantly engraved and 100 Superfine Cards printed for 4s. 6d. At HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS. Drawing-room, Travelling Bags, Dressing-cases, Writing-cases, Envel-cases, Mounted and Unmounted Notes on the Writing Table, and a choice variety of useful Ingenuities suitable for presents, at RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

CARTE DE VISITE PORTRAIT ALBUMS from 5s. to 21 guineas. Carte de Visite Portrait of the Queen, Family and Distinguished Persons of all nations. Single Portraits, 1s. 6d.—ALFRED RUDD'S, Manufacturing Stationer, 192, Piccadilly.

PENCILS, BLACK LEAD, and COLOURED CRAYONS. A. W. FABER'S POLYGRADE LEAD PENCILS, Sold by all Stationers and Artists' Colourmen. Each Pencil Warranted, and Numbered, 5, Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

SPRING SILKS, Patterns free.
New Colours in Checks and Stripes,
Rich Glacé Silks,
Rich Colours in Silk Cords,
42 in. wide, for 12 yards,
New Chalet Walking Silks, small patterns,
36 in. wide, per yard, very bright,
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 6, Ludgate-hill.

NOVELTIES for SPRING and SUMMER.—Specialities in Muslins, Plaids, and Cambrics of new and elegant designs.
New Cord, Brocaded, and Fancy Silks in great variety.
Cloaks, Mantles, Bournous, and Opera Cloaks in new and fashionable materials.
ASHDOWN and SON, 13, Baker-street, Portman-square, W.

HEWELL and CO., Complete House, Print-street, Soho, W.

MARGE THOUSEHOLD LINEN AND OUTFITS.—CHRISTIAN and RATHBONE respectfully submit an inspection of their extensive and exquisitely-fitted Show-Rooms, with the convenience and dignity of material hitherto only known in the best houses. Illustrated Price-list free.—Horrocks, Christian, and Rathbone, 11, Wigmore-street, W.

FURNISH SILKS, SATINS, CHINTZES, and MUSLIN CURTAINS.
HEWELL and CO. have now on sale the most extensive and extraordinarily cheap. A magnificent collection of French and English Cretonnes at the old prices. Special lots of Lace and Lace Curtains below the manufacturers, cost.
COMPTON HOUSE, Print-street and Old Compton-street, Soho, W.

MORRIS ANTIQUES.
HEWELL and CO. have the largest selection of MORRIS ANTIQUES in the World, Black, and all the new Colours, at 44 prices below the Trade.
COMPTON HOUSE Print-street, Soho W.

100 PATTERNS SILKS, POST-FREE.
All the new and beautiful Coloured Silks for summer wear, Plain and Figured, from NICHOLSON'S, 50 and 51, Pall-mall, Manufacturers,
Established 30 years.

100 PATTERNS SILKS, POST-FREE.
Rich Figured Glacé coloured Check in every shade, and some great bargains in fancy Checks and Moire Antiques.
NICHOLSON'S, 50 and 51, Pall-mall, Manufacturers.

5300 YARDS BLACK FRENCH GLACÉS.
5300 Yards Black Gros Grain Silk (very durable), 36 inches wide, 2s. 6d. per yard, worth 3s. 6d. This is one of the most useful Xmas purchases. Patterns free.
From 9a. 11d. to 10s. 6d. per yard, next post-free. Some of these goods are a great bargain.
50 to 52, St. Paul's-churchyard. Established 20 years.

UNINFLAMMABLE SILK DRESSES, 17 inches for 2s. 6d., or 24 for 25s. per yard, all colours. Warranted all goods. Patterns post-free.
JAMES SPENCE, 20 to 22, St. Paul's-churchyard.

NOTICE.—Messrs. NICHOLSON beg to say that their Address is and has been for many years 50 to 52, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD (corner of Cheapside). They have no connection with any other firm.

LADIES' ELASTIC HOUSE BOOTS, 5s. 6d. to 7s. 6d.—A first-rate Patent Kid Elastic Boots, fancy tops, military heels. Elastic Side, Dressing Slippers, Gentlemen's Elastic Boots, Patent Elastic Steps, invaluable in gout.—THOMAS D. MARSHALL, 160, Oxford-street.

LADIES' UNDERCLOTHING of best make, at moderate prices. A stock always on hand of Chemises, Nightdresses, Petticoats, Morning Robes, &c. Price-books by post, Address "Ladies' Department," WHITELOCK and SON, 165, Strand.

WEDDING or INDIA OUTFITS supplied in few days, at much less than the usual charges. Detailed Price-list free.—WHITELOCK and SON, 165, Strand, opposite the Church of St. Clement Danes.

MAY NOVELTIES.—Silks, Fancy Dresses, &c. 350 pieces of elegant and useful Striped, Checked, Brocade and Corded Silks, bought extremely under price, are now being offered at 2s. 9d., 3s., 3s. 6d., to 5s. 6d. the Full Dress. A most choice assortment of Fancy Dresses, Muslins, Barèges, &c., at Alexander, Grosvenor, Cavendish, and Regent-streets. Patterns free. 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, and 55, Rathbone-place, W. and 61, 62, and 63, Newman-street. Established 17 years.

DO YOU WISH YOUR CHILDREN WELL DRESSED? — Say's Knickerbocker Suits in Cloth, from 10s. 6d., Useful School Suits, from 7s. 6d., Patterns of the Stocks, Directions for Measurement, and 45 Engravings of New Dresses, post.—NICHOLSON'S, 50 and 51, Pall-mall, Manufacturers.

BONNETS.—MARKS and GAVELL, 107, Oxford-street, have the largest stock of GUIPURE BONNETS, in Silk, Crape, French Straw, &c. Also a large assortment of Flowers, Feathers, and Millinery. Patterns sent free from Town and Country.

SHIRTS.—Morning and Evening Shirts of every description, fitting with precision and ease, at moderate prices. Directions for self-measurement and patterns sent on application.—CAPPER and WATSON, 30, Regent-street, London.

ALEXANDRA HAIR-WAVER, for giving a graceful wave to the hair in the fashion worn by H.R.H. the Princess of Wales. UNWIN and ALLEN, Court Hairdressers, 24, Piccadilly. In the post; by post, 14 stamps.

NEW MUSIC.

NOTICE.—HALF-PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage-stamps or Post Office order.
HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

ANOTHER GREAT SUCCESS.
COOTE'S ROULEDE GALOP. Price 3s.
The best dating of the day.
HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

Introducing the Danish National Air,
COOTE'S PRINCESS ALEXANDRA VALSE. Price 4s. Illustrated with a Portrait of Beautiful Portrait in Colours, respectfully inscribed to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

The Latest Excitement.
COOTE'S FAIRY VISIONS. Illustrated. Price 4s. Solo or Duet. Most charming and elegant Ideas. Sparkling and dramatic.—HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-st.

Just Published.
COOTE'S CURE LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Pilgrim of Love," "My Pretty Page," "Ah Sally my Dear," and "Nancy Dawson." Illustrated by John Brandard. Always redemanded.—HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S VILLAGE-BELLS POLKA. Price 3s. One of the very best published, and will assist in popularity the celebrated "Great Eastern," by the same Composer.
HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

Continued Success.
TINNEY'S SONGS OF THE WOOD VALE. Price 4s. each. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves in all the Bonds in the United Kingdom.—HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

COME WHERE THE MOONBEAMS GLINT. Price 4s. The melody is simple and beautiful and will be sung by all the principal vocalists. Lost by any the mass for 13 stamps.
HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW BALLAD.
SIGHING FOR THEE. By F. BUCKLEY, price 3s. 6d., is exceedingly pretty.
HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

SUNG BY WARWOLD, ALWAYS REDEMANDED,
I WAIT TO HEAR THY SWEET GOOD NIGHT. Sweetly. Sung by Mr. Warwold. Price 3s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW DRAWING-ROOM BALLAD.
WALTER MACFARREN'S ALPINE ROSE. At 24. DAY DREAM. 3s. 6d. LA DANSEUR GALOP, 4s. "Sweet as the Rose," 3s. 6d. Lost by half price.
HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

An exquisite Morceau.
KUHE'S SILVER MOONBEAMS. Price 3s. 6d. The most favourite piece by this celebrated composer.—HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

ENGLAND AND DENMARK. Maurice de Salve. By C. M. E. OLIVER. Price 4s. Beautifully illustrated with Portraits.
HOPWOOD and CRAW, 42, New Bond-street.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FEU DE JOIE. One of the most original and successful of the late unrivalled Planoforte Writer. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S UNE PERLE DE VALSES. The most charming selection of the quaint and thoroughly characteristic Polish Dances. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S L'OISEAU DE PARADIS. A most original and admirable piece. "Elegant, brilliant, really good."—Vide Press. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ROLIENNE, played by Sydney Smith at the Philharmonic and Crystal Palace upwards of 400 times with enormous success. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE JET D'EAU played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace with unbounded applause. "Sydney Smith's Jet d'Eau is a gem."—Vide Press. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FAIRY WHISPERS, played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A remarkably brilliant, pleasing, and effective Valse. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MORNING DEWDROPS, played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A most charming composition rich in beautiful and luscious effects. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DEUXIÈME TARENTELLE. Composed for the Crystal Palace. A thoroughly original, exciting, brilliant, and effective Piece in the style of the Tarentelle. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE CŒUR. Grand brilliant Waltz. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A spirited, exhilarating, and effective Waltz of great position. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MASANIELLO. A clever, bright, original Fantasia on the Opera. Price 4s. In Arbon's pianoforte and orchestral repertoire. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

KUHE'S PILGRIM OF LOVE. A most successful and effective Arrangement of Balfe's beautiful melody, for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

BOYTON SMITH'S NEW SONG, BIRD OF THE WILDERNESS. Of the numerous settings to these charming words, this is the most successful. Post-free for 18 stamps. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song, sung by MADD. Parepa at the Crystal Palace and other concerts with great success. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop, "QUI VIVE" is the most successful of the season. Illustrated London News. 12th edition. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

MDME. LIND-GOLDSCHMIDT, MDME. SAINTON-DOLBY, and Mr. SIMS REEVES, in New and Popular Songs, at C. LONSDALE'S Musical Circulating Library, 26, Cold Bath-square, Clerkenwell, E.C. Subscription, One Guinea.

NEW CONTRALTO SONG.
A WILD WET NIGHT. Composed by HYACTH GUERNSEY. Sung by Miss Dolby with great success. Price 3s. net.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THINE. By HENRY SMART. "This new and charming song is one of the most welcome of most recent date." Price 3s. 6d.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

VIRGINIA GABRIELA'S NEWEST SONGS.
SUMMER, LOVE, AND I. In C and in E flat. Price 2s. 6d.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SLUMBER, MINE OWN. Transcription for the Piano of this popular Song by W. KUHE. price 3s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

VIRGINIA GABRIELA'S NEWEST SONGS.
THE GARDEN OF ROSES. Words by WILLIAM HOWITT. Music by HUBERT. "Both the Words and the Melody are full of beauty."—Vide Morning Post. Price 3s.
THE WORLD by HAMILTON AIDE. Just sung by Mr. Sims Reeves. Price 3s.
METZLER and Co., 37, Baker-street, Portman-square, W.

G. GRETTON'S PIANOFORTE WORKS.
Ada and Rosamond. Two Barcarolles. 3s. Dew Waltzes. 4s. Pastorale. 4s. Caprice Pathétique. 3s. Tarantella. Fugue. 4s. &c.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, REGENT'S PARK.—THE SECOND EXHIBITION of PLANTS, FLOWERS, and FRUIT will take place on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3. Tickets can be had at the Gardens by orders from Fellows of the Society price, by the day of exhibition, 7s. 6d. each. The Exhibition of American Plants, Monday, June 1.

ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY. SOUTH KENSINGTON.
UNIVERSITY OF LONDON, ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF 1863, In the Presence of their ROYAL HIGHNESSES the PRINCE and PRINCESS of WALES.
Cards of Admission, price 21s., if obtained before the 27th of May; to be had of Fellows, 10s. 6d. on June 2.

THE FIRST GREAT INTERNATIONAL SHOW of SPORTING and other DOGS will be held at the AGRICULTURAL HALL, Islington, on the usual commencement, May 26, 27, and 28 (Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday), May 25 (after 4 p.m.), when the Fashionable will be judged in public in front of the great Orchestra.

Monday, May 25 (after 4 p.m.)	...	...	...	5s. 0d.
Tuesday, May 26 (before 9, to 6 p.m.)	...	...	...	2s. 6d.
Wednesday, " "	...	...	...	1s. 0d.
Thursday, " "	...	...	...	1s. 0d.
Friday, " "	...	...	...	1s. 0d.
Saturday, " "	...	...	...	2s. 6d.

Schedules, Tickets, &c., Poly Tickets, admissible for 14 days, 10s. 6d. Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, 5s. 0d. may be obtained on application to the Secretary, at the Office, Hanford-street, Upper-road, N.

THE QUEEN'S HOTEL, HASTINGS. Tariffs of the Manager.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—Messrs. Gabriel and Gentleman will bring this and the other Westminster Fine-Art Collections well first at the RESTAURANT WILLIS, 5, Percy-street, Tottenham-court-road (by Mr. Price's Railway Station), first-class Luncheons and Dinners, of which a trial is solicited. Wines of the finest vintages. Mr. Willis's long experience and personal superintendence of service will please even the most fastidious taste.

NEW ZEALAND.—REMITTANCES.—The Bank of New Zealand (incorporated by Act of General Assembly), Capital £500,000, grants Letters of Credit, and undertakes every description of Banking business between London and the Colonies.
Forms and particulars on application at the London Office, 90, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.
F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.

HEDGES and BUTLER, 155, Regent-street, W., London.—Wine, 30s. per dozen. Sherries, fortie stimulus to their varied stock of choice Old Port, consisting of Port of the vintage 1834 ... ... 48s.
Port of the vintage 1847 ... ... 42s.
Port of the vintage 1851 ... ... 36s.
Port for ordinary use, 18s., 24s., 30s., and 36s. per dozen.

HUNGARIAN WINES, direct from Oeconomy—ROTHSCHILD and COMPANY, 104, Oxford-street, W.; City office, 19, John-street, Crutchedfriars, E.C.

SAUCE.
LEA AND PERRINS'
WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE,
THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE
THE ONLY GOOD SAUCE.
Many genuine without the Name of Lea and Perrins on Bottle, and stopper. Sold by CROSSE and BLACKWELL; Barclay and Sons; and by Grocers and Oilmen throughout the World.

A New and Valuable Preparation of Cocoa.
FRY'S ICELAND MOSS COCOA, In Packets and Tins, labelled "Pure and Genuine."
J. S. Fry and Sons, Bristol and London.
Manufacturers to the Queen.

HORNIMAN'S PURE TEA CHEAPER. Full benefit of reduced duty obtained by purchasing HORNIMAN'S TEA. Strong, 2s. 4d.; rich, 2s. 8d.; and fine, 3s. "High Standard" at 4s. 4d. (formerly 4s. 8d.) is the best imported.

LETTERS PATENT 1825. PRIZE MEDAL 1862.
ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS is the most valuable preparation for making pure and delicious Arrowroot Blancmange, and is the best food in the World for Children and rich in nutriment.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY makes a delicious custard pudding, digestible as Arrowroot, and less given to Heat. Prescribed. It is appreciated as a non-inflammatory drink; is recommended by eminent Physicians. Both have gained prize medals for rearing children by hand.
KERR, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE and CO.,
Garlick-hill, London.

KEEN'S GENUINE MUSTARD.
Obtain KEEN'S genuine Mustard and full approval is guaranteed. Sold by the Grocers, Oilmen, and Druggists.
KERR, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.,
Garlick-hill, London, and Norwich.

OSWEGO
PREPARED CORN,
Puddings, Custards, Blanc-Manger, &c.
Most Delicious and Perfected by
T. KINGSFORD and SON,
Oswego Mills, Manchester, England.
It is the original Corn Flour, from the Zea Mays of maize, established 1848, commands the highest price from the trade, and offers the best value to the consumer.
It is a quarter stronger than any of the imitations, has a finer flavour, and is more delicious.
The Oswego Corn Flour produces golden tints, and not the chalk white produced by artificial process.
KERR, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.,
Garlick-hill, London.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, used in the Royal Laundry, and awarded the Prize Medal at the International Exhibition.

JUDSON'S SIMPLE DYES FOR LADIES, 6d. per bottle. Any one can use them. Ten brilliant colours. Sold by all Druggists.

EAU and POMMADE RÉPARATRICE DE PIVERT, a Parisian.—Certificate to prove the State to be genuine from Dr. Piver, Paris. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale and Retail, Wholesale Depôt, 76, LOMBARD and CO., 37, Cannon-street West, London.

BENZINE COLLAS removes grease, oil, or paint from every description of wearing apparel or apparel and furniture, without the least injury to the colour of fabric. In bottles, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 5s. each.—BENZINE COLLAS, 57, Strand. To be had of all Perfumers and Druggists in every town.—Sole Consignee and Wholesale Agent, 57, Strand, and 76, New Bond-street.

OSTEO-BIDON.—PATENT, No. 560. DARBY'S self-adhesive patent Indestructible MINERAL TEETH and PALATE.—Messrs. DARBY, Surgeon-Dentists, 64, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W., beg to call the attention of the public to the above method. Messrs. DARBY, the old-established Dentists, 64, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W., 34, Ludgate-hill, E.C., 4, Cambridge-terrace, Liverpool; and 32, New-street, Birmingham.—One visit only required to insert these Teeth.
Consultations free daily, from 10 to 4 o'clock.

ALL afflicted with WEAK EYES must obtain instant relief by using Dr. WARNERS EYE WATER, which removes all weakness, inflammation, rheum, dimness, cataract, specks—Sold in bottles, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., by Sanger, Oxford-street; Prout, Strand; Farringdon-street; Hooper, London-bridge.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA is an excellent remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a mild aperient for Infants, constitution, 178, New Bond-street, London; and all Chemists.

YOUNG'S 1s. BOX ARNICATED WHITE PILE OINTMENT and STYPTIC LOTION, for P. Young, Blackberry-place, Aldermanbury-street, E.C. The best relief to sufferers. Ask for Young's 1s. and 2s. box; by post, 1s. 6d.

BUTLER'S BRASS-BAND INSTRUMENTS, Cornets, Saxhorns, Circular Vibrating Slides, Drums, Flutes, &c., are all manufactured on the Premises, and sold direct, at rates below those of any other English house. A written guarantee given with every instrument. Manufactory, 26, Haymarket, Piccadilly, London. Prices and Drawings post-free.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO-GUINEA PIANOFORTE. FIRST, NICE, AND CHEAP.—The extraordinary power of this instrument enables it adapted to dance music, concerts, and the most accomplished style of performance. The touch, tone, and workmanship, accuracy, and general excellence observable. Illustrated Price List of Optional Instruments free of charge.—KEYZOR and BENDON, London.

A ROHRER.—A Lady's Superior Equipment, 21s.; Gentleman's ditto, 42s.; Dressing-Case, 21s.; Writing-Desk, 21s.; Tourist Dressing-Bag, 21s.; Cabinet Catalogue gratis.—CLARA ADSTEGOOD, 176, Oxford-street, W.

GUNS.—E. M. REILLY and CO. invite attention to their extensive stock of double guns and rifles, for Deer-stalking, Wild-fowling, Pigeon and Game shooting, breech-loaders, rook rifles &c.—39, and 40, Oxford-street, London.

THE NEW STUDIO EASEL, Very Portable and Strong,
WINSOR and NEWTON, Manufacturers,
Rathbone-place, London.

CHANDELIERS FOR DINING-ROOM and LIBRARY, Candelabras, Moderator Lamps, in Ormolu, Bronzed, Glass, and Glass. Batteries in Parian, Vases, and other ornaments.—DELEK, 45, Oxford-street, W.

OSLER'S GLASS CHANDELIERS, WALL LIGHTS, and Lustres, for Gas or Candles, Table Glass, &c. Glass Dinner Services for 12 persons, from £7 15s.
Glass Dessert Services for 12 persons, from £2 15s.
All articles marked in plain figures.
Ornamental Glass, Regilt and Porcelain, suitable for presents.
Glass, Regilt, and Furnishing Ironmongery.
London—Showrooms, 45, Oxford-street, W.
Birmingham—Manufactory and Showrooms, Broad-street.
Established 1807.

EVANS'S PRIZE KITCHENER.—This Kitchener received a Prize Medal at the Exhibition of 1862, and is the College of Hamilton, from 40 to 80 feet. Also, large sizes for Colleges, Hospitals, Barracks, Ships, &c. Apply to EVANS and GLASSPOOLE, 79, Upper Thames-street, London, E.C.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the Best.—The largest, newest, and most varied assortment in London. Moderator Table Lamps, from 3s. each. Engravings free by post. Gardners' Patent Moderator Lamp Manufactory, 453, Strand (corner of Northumberland-street), and 61, Oxford-street, W. Trafalgar-square; 1 and 2, Duncannon-street (adjoining), London.

GARDNERS' £2 2s. DINNER SERVICES. A large assortment of patterns of the choicest description. Breakfast, Dessert, Tea, and Toilet Services, and every article of the newest possible prices; table glass of the utmost brilliancy of colour; Glass Dinner Services, from £2 2s. Engravings free by post.—GARDNERS', 453, Strand (corner of Northumberland-street), and 61, Oxford-street, W. Trafalgar-square; 1 and 2, Duncannon-street (adjoining). Established 1751.

SECONDHAND FURNITURE.
Worthy of Notice.—An opportunity now presents itself to purchase a Drawing-room Suite, in rich Brocatelle, of the most perfect make, and in the best condition, the frames being carved and covered in rich silk, embracing every necessary, and including a handsome Chiffonier, Loo Table, a fine Cabinet Pianoforte, a Suite in fine Spanish mahogany, and covered in morocco leather. If required, the whole will be sent into the country free of charge.
Also, a Secondhand Brougham, by Hooper, in perfect condition. Either will be separated. On view at R. GREEN and CO.'S, 70, Mortimer-street, Regent-street.

OLD OAK FURNITURE.—A complete suite for a dining-room, comprising a magnificently carved antique sideboard, with plate glass back, a fine telescope dining-table, a set of carvepoint, and eight chairs in morocco, the whole to be SOLD for the extraordinary low price of 30 guineas. Also, a handsome Chiffonier, in Spanish mahogany, to match.—At ROBERT GREEN and CO.'S, 70, Mortimer-street, Regent-street.

FURNITURE, Carriage-free. — EBBUTT'S Improved PATENT SECRETAIRE and BEDSTEADS, with concealed mouldings, for £31 10s., including wardrobe, at Ebbutt's Depot, 30, Blackman-street, Borough. Illustrated makepapas post-free.

FURNITURE, Carriage-free. — EBBUTT'S Improved PATENT SECRETAIRE and BEDSTEADS, with concealed mouldings, for £31 10s., including wardrobe, at Ebbutt's Depot, 30, Blackman-street, Borough, and Crystal Palace. Illustrated makepapas post-free.

FURNITURE, Carriage-free. — EBBUTT'S Improved PATENT SECRETAIRE and BEDSTEADS, with concealed mouldings, for £31 10s., including wardrobe, at Ebbutt's Depot, 30, Blackman-street, Borough, and Crystal Palace.

CARPETS.—GOODE, GAINSFORD, and CO. In Original and Exclusive Designs, SEWING-MACHINES.—PRICE-LISTS.
Tucker, Armistice, and Ashtown Carpets.
Nos. 1 and 2, Ludgate-hill.

SUPERIOR BEDDING, BEDSTEADS, and CHAMBER FURNITURE,
of the most approved Construction and Elegance of Design.
BRASS and IRON BEDSTEADS of every size and description.
GOODE, GAINSFORD, and CO., Nos. 1 and 2, Ludgate-hill.

WEST-END FURNITURE GALLERIES, 144, Oxford-street (opposite Bond-street).
Drawing-room Suites, complete, from £15 to £36.
Dining-room Suites, complete, from £15 to £36. Dining-room Sideboards, with plate-glass backs, from £5 5s. Dining-tables, on the newest fashionable principle, from £4. Bedsteads in Bronze, from £2 10s. Bedsteads in Polished Brass, from £3 10s. Bedsteads in Iron, from 10s. 6d. Bedding, Mattresses, Blankets, Quilts, &c., in Mahogany and Oak, from 5 to 45 guineas; Chimney-Glasses in endless variety, from 10s. 6d. to 20 guineas. Pier-Glasses, Overmantels, Antique grates and fenders, at equally low prices. Illustrations freely forwarded on application.—144, Oxford-street (opposite Bond-street).

SUPERIOR REAY-CHAIRS and SOFAS. The best quality only made to any shape, on approval, at T. H. REAY'S Manufactory, 3, Newman-street, Oxford-street, and 4, Oxford-street, W. An Illustrated Priced Catalogue sent post-free.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE, 34, Ludgate-hill, corner of Old Bailey, E.C.
PURE WATER.—The New Filter.—Dr. Davis says:—"I strongly recommend all persons in London to adopt some means of filtering their water, as the present mode of collecting or making purposes without filtering is simply Dr. Davis's Domestic Filter, 10s. 6d., 21s., and 42s. each.—DAVIS and LITCHFIELD, 244, Strand, Temple Bar. Old filters reconstructed on the new plan.

W. F. THOMAS and CO.'S PATENT SELF-ACTING DRAWING-ROOM GRATE, the principles which the experience of fifteen years has proved to be sound and practical, and which are now adopted by numerous makers, combine the first requisites which they consider at their command, viz., the greatest heat with the least consumption of fuel, and the most perfect ventilation, with the best mechanical arrangements for durability, regularity, and durability.—6, Newgate-st., London, E.C.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, used in the Royal Laundry, and awarded the Prize Medal. Sold by all Grocers, Druggists, &c.

LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, UNIFORMS, Jewellery, Miscellaneous Property, &c., of every description, purchased to any amount, by Mr. and Mrs. DAVIS, 74, Mary-le-bone-lane, Oxford-street. Ladies and Gentlemen waited upon. Parcels from the country carefully remitted. Established 70 years.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY MAY 23, 1863.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1206.—VOL. XLII. SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1863. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE CONSTITUTIONAL STRUGGLE IN PRUSSIA.

HISTORY bears distinct testimony to the conclusion that there are initiatory stages in the life of nations during which their civil polity may be advantageously founded upon a military basis. Arbitrary authority, implicit obedience, exact, minute, and inflexible organisation—the principal characteristics of military rule—are, perhaps, the most efficient, as they certainly are the most available, instruments for rough-hewing the institutions of a people on their first emergence from barbarism. Public order is the great requisite in demand at this period of national development, and this, at least, a military administration is well fitted to secure. It is, however, a dire misfortune when, as in Prussia, the mind of a nation thoroughly qualified to appreciate the highest results of civilisation is cramped at every turn by a rigid and soldierly system of civil government, suitable only to rude and uncultured communities. We doubt whether there is another country in Europe in which there is so marked a contrast between the freedom permitted to individual intellect and the bondage imposed upon the public will as there is at this moment in the dominions of King William of Prussia. Hence, to a great extent, the present deadlock in the affairs of that State.

Prussian ideas of government have been derived mainly from a military source. The nation has been drilled as an army. Every man has been a soldier—has spent a portion of his life under martial discipline. Three or four generations trained to regard obedience as the best expression of national virtue, authority as the only source of national rights, and complete organisation as the highest form of national life, and, at the same time, left exposed to the transforming influence of intellectual light streaming in upon them unchecked from all quarters, have resulted in a peculiar national idiosyncracy, difficult for Englishmen to understand. The Prussian mind is daring in speculation ; timid in resolve. No authority can restrain it from soaring to any attainable height in the realms of thought—while in the legitimate sphere of action the word of the meanest policeman is deferred to as law. Prussia is full of liberal notions and of acquiescent habits. She incases all sorts of explosive maxims in a shell of loyalty which it seems impossible to destroy. In forming a judgment of what is now passing within her borders we have to make allowance for this peculiarity. The Throne and the people are at issue ; but Throne and people are alike modified in spirit by the influence exerted upon them by past training. The King cannot conceive of rights other than such as have their roots in Royal authority ; the people cannot conceive of action other than that which authority initiates and controls. Prussia is an army, the whole rank and file of which have become discontented, but whose habits of discipline place all combined movements under the practical direction of a corps of officers whom they despise. They are misled, and they know it, but they obey. Mutiny scarcely comes within their category of means. They see, they criticise, they protest, but, after all, the word of command, even from the mouth of a corporal, has a potency in it which they find it all but impossible to resist.

A people thus shaped, and that, moreover, by influences not amenable to their choice, are plainly destined to go through a different order of political schooling on their way to constitutional freedom than would be requisite or suitable under conditions less peculiar. It is not uncommon to regard their contest with the Crown as presenting a close parallel to that of the English people with the Stuart dynasty. With the single exception that it is a contest between the monarch and his subjects as to their reciprocal rights and duties, no two epochs present more diverse characteristics. English society had never been governed on military principles, Quakers had no standing army at his command, and his very Ironsides had about more forms, save as they embodied a free spirit. The religious sentiment entered largely into their political aspirations, and "the inexorable logic of facts" exercised a far higher influence upon their decisions than the logic of reason. In Prussia the case is very different. To the despotic tendencies of the Crown and the arrogant claims and exclusive privileges of a feudal aristocracy, must be added the all-pervading and all-penetrating element of a centralised bureaucracy, and the subduing effect of a large standing army, before the political position and capabilities of the people can be fairly estimated. No enthusiasm derived from the religious sentiment fires their blood. Within certain limits, they enjoy a more than common share of intellectual and ecclesiastical freedom. Perhaps the strongest motive by which they are impelled is the proud interest they take in the reputation of Fatherland; and, had King William but pursued a lofty foreign policy, it is questionable whether in domestic affairs he would not have been allowed to work his own will.

SCENE FROM THE NEW COMEDY OF "FINESSE; OR, SPY AND COUNTERSPY," AT THE THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Such is the people whom a King, full of mediæval notions on the subject of his Divine right, and employing the instrumentality of a Cabinet distinguished only by conceited and insolent mediocrity, is doing his utmost to drive into revolt. Happily, we think, he has not yet succeeded, and he may not seem likely to succeed; but no one can deny that the means he has stooped to employ are well adapted to bring about such a result. Here von Bismarck-Schönhausen, the Prime Minister (to say nothing of his colleagues), is qualified in every way for King a people into madness. His demeanour towards the Chamber of Deputies combines almost every conceivable characteristic fitted to inflict humiliation on a highly-cultured people. His international policy, the slavishness of which has made Prussia a by-word of contempt in the Chancelleries of Europe, is upheld against the immense majority, by which it has been distinctly condemned, by a succession of petty insults such as no English gentleman would offer to his groom. He is not, he says, in any way amenable to their judgment; he cares nothing for their opinions; he shall be present at their sittings when it suits his convenience; he can listen to their clamours, so far as he is interested in them, without leaving the apartment in which he transacts the business of the State; and his Royal Master will go to any extremity, short of civil war, deeming it necessary to ascertain their views of the matter. And, lest all this should not touch the quick of Prussia's representatives, he has got up a quarrel between the King and the Chamber on the score of a subordinate Minister less respected, if that were possible, than himself, and on grounds so petty, probably absurd than ever before constituted the battle-field of pre-negative against right.

A short time since, in the course of a debate on the Military Bill, Mr. Georg Eylad, in reply to some taunts made by von General Roon, the Minister of War, condemned him as having more than any other member of the House, contributed to bring about a violation of the Constitution. The Minister denounced this expression as "an unwarrantable assumption." The Vice-President of the Chamber, then in the chair, interposed to keep the debate within the limits of order. The General, however, refused to give place to him, and claimed a prior right as Minister of the Crown to the attention of the Chamber, whereupon the Vice-President, M. Beckon Delbi, asserted the supreme authority of the chair. That authority General Roon took upon him to repudiate. "It extended," he said, "to the Ministerial table, and no further." The Vice-President vindicated the dignity of the Chamber by putting on his hat and declaring the sitting at an end. Within a minute or two every Deputy had left the House, and General Roon, with the Royal officials, was left to offer his insults to empty benches. Who but M. von Bismarck would have seized upon such an incident as a suitable occasion for lecturing the Chamber and the Country on hostile collision? And yet, with a passionate impetuosity and a lack of judgment for the extent of which even he would not have found credit, he has not merely committed the King's Government, but also the King himself, to the assertion that the Ministers of the Crown, when acting as members of the deliberative assembly of the Prussian people, must be held exempt from all the restrictions by which deliberative assemblies are everywhere governed. Of course, the Chamber of Deputies decline to accede to any such unconstitutional demand, and have met the written messages, both of the Cabinet and of its Royal master, with a firm and dignified negation.

In any other country than Prussia the dead-lock to which the machinery of legislation has been thus wantonly brought would be speedily remedied by the near approach of a national explosion. But it is not anticipated that any such violent result will follow the constitutional struggle in Prussia. The solution of the perplexity will probably be left, as many others have been, to time and the chapter of accidents. Meanwhile, however, this domestic conflict must be regarded, both by M. von. Bismarck, coupled with his high monarchical and retrogressive foreign policy, is depriving Prussia of all weight in the councils of Europe, and is rapidly destroying her chance of assuming the lead of the Germanic States. How far the prospect of sinking into a third-rate Power, and of allowing Austria to take precedence in the guidance of the policy of Germany, may rouse the somewhat somnolent energies of the Prussian people remains to be seen. One thing only is clear—that, however philosophically they may endure the obsolete and medieval pretensions of the present occupant of the throne, Prussia will not eventually tolerate being drilled into insignificance. Nor is it easy to imagine that the Monarch will succeed in establishing his overweening and puerile claims. But by what course of action he will be compelled to recognise the limits of his own authority, and substitute realities for dreams in his political programme, outside observers have not the requisite materials even for a rough conjecture. All that they can conclude with certainty is, that William of Prussia is not the style of man likely to put back the clock of the world.

"SPY AND COUNTERSPY."

The comedy of "Fiesco" promises well for a prolonged run. It certainly does not lack the elements of success and justice has dawned from the first scene writer of this country. There is much of the spirit of "The School for Scandal" in the new play, and more than one passage in the dialogue that indicates earnest thoughtfulness as well as wit. The first scene between Chalmers, and an old lady, where Poppleton makes his appearance from a sleeping-chamber at the demand of the guard who are sent in search of the counterspy. In this scene a pathetic situation has been sacrificed to the genius of Thalia, and somewhat also to the exigencies of the story. The pathos of the situation is not fully realised by the incident, and the stage well filled with the pomp and circumstance of war, is dull. Moreover, in this scene the structure of the drama suffers from the moral tone of the scene and the feeling of the audience being here in conflict. Had the son of the Spanish lady been placed concealed in the chamber, and an interview somehow contrived between the persons afterwards, as that the appearance of Poppleton would have no surprise, the two conditions required by the story and its proper stage structure would have been fulfilled. The first scene, novel as it is now is, would have been still more effective, and liable to no objection. As it stands, it provides Mr. Buckstone with an opportunity of being exceedingly humorous, and thus compensates for the anxiety felt for which we have hinted. That fault will not at all interfere with the success of the piece; for audiences like a good deal of "fuss" in the course of the comedy they are provided with many. There are, of course, a few lines that are not altogether pure in a theatre's acceptance in advantage the talents of the best artistes at "The Little Theatre!"

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Empress is quite recovered from her indisposition and has resumed her drives in the Bois de Boulogne.

Their Majesties received a visit from the Duke of Brabant on Wednesday.

A dinner party was given at the British Ambassador's on Sunday in honour of the Queen's birthday, at which Lord Stratford de Redcliffe was present, other guests and the usual staff of persons attached to the Embassy.

There is little stirring in Paris except the elections. M. de Persigny, in a letter to the Prefect of the Seine, denounces M. Thiers to the electors as having been the author of the famous word impossible at the end of the empire; the writer concludes by saying that France, now possessing universal suffrage, will not oppose the Government which has restored to her the glory, the abyss in which the Bourbons had permitted her to fall. An article in the Constitutionnel denounces M. Thiers in the same way, and declares that the Government has summoned him to explain his conduct as a deputy from Paris, without deeming it necessary to ascertain their views of the matter. And, lest all this should not touch the quick of Prussia's representatives, he has got up a quarrel between the King and the Chamber on the score of a subordinate Minister less respected, if that were possible, than himself, and on grounds so petty, probably absurd than ever before constituted the battle-field of pre-negative against right.

The Empress is quite recovered from her indisposition and has resumed her drives in the Bois de Boulogne.

Their Majesties received a visit from the Duke of Brabant on Wednesday.

A dinner party was given at the British Ambassador's on Sunday in honour of the Queen's birthday, at which Lord Stratford de Redcliffe was present, other guests and the usual staff of persons attached to the Embassy.

There is little stirring in Paris except the elections. M. de Persigny, in a letter to the Prefect of the Seine, denounces M. Thiers to the electors as having been the author of the famous word impossible at the end of the empire; the writer concludes by saying that France, now possessing universal suffrage, will not oppose the Government which has restored to her the glory, the abyss in which the Bourbons had permitted her to fall. An article in the Constitutionnel denounces M. Thiers in the same way, and declares that the Government has summoned him to explain his conduct as a deputy from Paris, without deeming it necessary to ascertain their views of the matter. And, lest all this should not touch the quick of Prussia's representatives, he has got up a quarrel between the King and the Chamber on the score of a subordinate Minister less respected, if that were possible, than himself, and on grounds so petty, probably absurd than ever before constituted the battle-field of pre-negative against right.

A short time since, in the course of a debate on the Military Bill, Mr. Georg Eylad, in reply to some taunts made by von General Roon, the Minister of War, condemned him as having more than any other member of the House, contributed to bring about a violation of the Constitution. The Minister denounced this expression as "an unwarrantable assumption." The Vice-President of the Chamber, then in the chair, interposed to keep the debate within the limits of order. The General, however, refused to give place to him, and claimed a prior right as Minister of the Crown to the attention of the Chamber, whereupon the Vice-President, M. Beckon Delbi, asserted the supreme authority of the chair. That authority General Roon took upon him to repudiate. "It extended," he said, "to the Ministerial table, and no further." The Vice-President vindicated the dignity of the Chamber by putting on his hat and declaring the sitting at an end. Within a minute or two every Deputy had left the House, and General Roon, with the Royal officials, was left to offer his insults to empty benches. Who but M. von Bismarck would have seized upon such an incident as a suitable occasion for lecturing the Chamber and the Country on hostile collision? And yet, with a passionate impetuosity and a lack of judgment for the extent of which even he would not have found credit, he has not merely committed the King's Government, but also the King himself, to the assertion that the Ministers of the Crown, when acting as members of the deliberative assembly of the Prussian people, must be held exempt from all the restrictions by which deliberative assemblies are everywhere governed. Of course, the Chamber of Deputies decline to accede to any such unconstitutional demand, and have met the written messages, both of the Cabinet and of its Royal master, with a firm and dignified negation.

In any other country than Prussia the dead-lock to which the machinery of legislation has been thus wantonly brought would be speedily remedied by the near approach of a national explosion. But it is not anticipated that any such violent result will follow the constitutional struggle in Prussia. The solution of the perplexity will probably be left, as many others have been, to time and the chapter of accidents. Meanwhile, however, this domestic conflict must be regarded, both by M. von. Bismarck, coupled with his high monarchical and retrogressive foreign policy, is depriving Prussia of all weight in the councils of Europe, and is rapidly destroying her chance of assuming the lead of the Germanic States. How far the prospect of sinking into a third-rate Power, and of allowing Austria to take precedence in the guidance of the policy of Germany, may rouse the somewhat somnolent energies of the Prussian people remains to be seen. One thing only is clear—that, however philosophically they may endure the obsolete and medieval pretensions of the present occupant of the throne, Prussia will not eventually tolerate being drilled into insignificance. Nor is it easy to imagine that the Monarch will succeed in establishing his overweening and puerile claims. But by what course of action he will be compelled to recognise the limits of his own authority, and substitute realities for dreams in his political programme, outside observers have not the requisite materials even for a rough conjecture. All that they can conclude with certainty is, that William of Prussia is not the style of man likely to put back the clock of the world.

"SPY AND COUNTERSPY."

The comedy of "Fiesco" promises well for a prolonged run. It certainly does not lack the elements of success and justice has dawned from the first scene writer of this country. There is much of the spirit of "The School for Scandal" in the new play, and more than one passage in the dialogue that indicates earnest thoughtfulness as well as wit. The first scene between Chalmers, and an old lady, where Poppleton makes his appearance from a sleeping-chamber at the demand of the guard who are sent in search of the counterspy. In this scene a pathetic situation has been sacrificed to the genius of Thalia, and somewhat also to the exigencies of the story. The pathos of the situation is not fully realised by the incident, and the stage well filled with the pomp and circumstance of war, is dull. Moreover, in this scene the structure of the drama suffers from the moral tone of the scene and the feeling of the audience being here in conflict. Had the son of the Spanish lady been placed concealed in the chamber, and an interview somehow contrived between the persons afterwards, as that the appearance of Poppleton would have no surprise, the two conditions required by the story and its proper stage structure would have been fulfilled. The first scene, novel as it is now is, would have been still more effective, and liable to no objection. As it stands, it provides Mr. Buckstone with an opportunity of being exceedingly humorous, and thus compensates for the anxiety felt for which we have hinted. That fault will not at all interfere with the success of the piece; for audiences like a good deal of "fuss" in the course of the comedy they are provided with many. There are, of course, a few lines that are not altogether pure in a theatre's acceptance in advantage the talents of the best artistes at "The Little Theatre!"

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Empress is quite recovered from her indisposition and has resumed her drives in the Bois de Boulogne.

Their Majesties received a visit from the Duke of Brabant on Wednesday.

A dinner party was given at the British Ambassador's on Sunday in honour of the Queen's birthday, at which Lord Stratford de Redcliffe was present, other guests and the usual staff of persons attached to the Embassy.

There is little stirring in Paris except the elections. M. de Persigny, in a letter to the Prefect of the Seine, denounces M. Thiers to the electors as having been the author of the famous word impossible at the end of the empire; the writer concludes by saying that France, now possessing universal suffrage, will not oppose the Government which has restored to her the glory, the abyss in which the Bourbons had permitted her to fall. An article in the Constitutionnel denounces M. Thiers in the same way, and declares that the Government has summoned him to explain his conduct as a deputy from Paris, without deeming it necessary to ascertain their views of the matter. And, lest all this should not touch the quick of Prussia's representatives, he has got up a quarrel between the King and the Chamber on the score of a subordinate Minister less respected, if that were possible, than himself, and on grounds so petty, probably absurd than ever before constituted the battle-field of pre-negative against right.

A short time since, in the course of a debate on the Military Bill, Mr. Georg Eylad, in reply to some taunts made by von General Roon, the Minister of War, condemned him as having more than any other member of the House, contributed to bring about a violation of the Constitution. The Minister denounced this expression as "an unwarrantable assumption." The Vice-President of the Chamber, then in the chair, interposed to keep the debate within the limits of order. The General, however, refused to give place to him, and claimed a prior right as Minister of the Crown to the attention of the Chamber, whereupon the Vice-President, M. Beckon Delbi, asserted the supreme authority of the chair. That authority General Roon took upon him to repudiate. "It extended," he said, "to the Ministerial table, and no further." The Vice-President vindicated the dignity of the Chamber by putting on his hat and declaring the sitting at an end. Within a minute or two every Deputy had left the House, and General Roon, with the Royal officials, was left to offer his insults to empty benches. Who but M. von Bismarck would have seized upon such an incident as a suitable occasion for lecturing the Chamber and the Country on hostile collision? And yet, with a passionate impetuosity and a lack of judgment for the extent of which even he would not have found credit, he has not merely committed the King's Government, but also the King himself, to the assertion that the Ministers of the Crown, when acting as members of the deliberative assembly of the Prussian people, must be held exempt from all the restrictions by which deliberative assemblies are everywhere governed. Of course, the Chamber of Deputies decline to accede to any such unconstitutional demand, and have met the written messages, both of the Cabinet and of its Royal master, with a firm and dignified negation.

In any other country than Prussia the dead-lock to which the machinery of legislation has been thus wantonly brought would be speedily remedied by the near approach of a national explosion. But it is not anticipated that any such violent result will follow the constitutional struggle in Prussia. The solution of the perplexity will probably be left, as many others have been, to time and the chapter of accidents. Meanwhile, however, this domestic conflict must be regarded, both by M. von. Bismarck, coupled with his high monarchical and retrogressive foreign policy, is depriving Prussia of all weight in the councils of Europe, and is rapidly destroying her chance of assuming the lead of the Germanic States. How far the prospect of sinking into a third-rate Power, and of allowing Austria to take precedence in the guidance of the policy of Germany, may rouse the somewhat somnolent energies of the Prussian people remains to be seen. One thing only is clear—that, however philosophically they may endure the obsolete and medieval pretensions of the present

Ministers are as follow:—President of the Council, M. Rufer; Minister of the Interior, M. Lemidida; Minister of Finance, M. Remaucieres; Minister of Justice, M. Plato; Minister for Foreign Affairs, M. Delgarni; Minister for War, M. Estorzi; Minister of the Marine, M. Canaris; Minister of Public Worship, M. Californos.

The National Assembly has voted an address conveying its thanks to the three protecting Powers for the benefits they have hitherto conferred upon Greece.

PRUSSIA.

The dispute between the Government and the Chamber of Deputies has assumed a definite form, and has considerably enlarged its bounds. The King upholds his Ministry. It remains to be seen whether the people will uphold their representatives.

At the sitting of the Chamber on the 19th, Herr von Bismarck was present, and read a Royal message, in which the King says:—"The House has indirectly approved the conduct of its President, which was in violation of the constitutional rights of the Ministry. Such a position for the Ministers does not correspond with the dignity of the Crown. The King can only advise the Chamber to terminate such a state of things, and declares that the business of the State must be continued." Herr von Bismarck then left the House. Herr Virchow moved that the Royal message be referred to the committee on the address, as the Ministers had misinformed the King. Herr von Sybel and Count Schwerin seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted by the Chamber.

On the 22nd the debate on the address was brought to a close, after a discussion of eight hours. Count Schwerin moved an amended form of address, calculated to modify the strong language of the original. The House divided, when it appeared that the amendment was rejected by a majority of 257 to 41, and the original address, as drawn up by the committee, passed by a majority of 259 to 41. The address thus adopted declines to give the declaration required by the Minister; declares them responsible for the frustration of the objects of the Session, and requests the King to put an end to the continuance of a situation which contains serious dangers for the existence of the country. The deputation of thirty-seven to carry up the address was chosen by lot.

The King having refused to receive the deputation appointed to present the address of the House of Deputies, the document was forwarded to him as on the occasion of the last appeal of the House, through the Ministry. On Wednesday, the King's reply to the address was dispatched to the Chamber. It is very short, and merely of a reiteration of the Ministerial claims and a sharp lecture to the Deputies for their general conduct. A letter to the same tone of the King was summoned to the White Saloon of the palace, and there Herr von Bismarck read a speech from the King which scouted the Chamber of having by its debates upon foreign politics endeavoured to stop the action of the Government and endangered the safety of the State; of having in its Committee refused all co-operation with the Government, and committed sundry other crimes and misdemeanours, which in the absence of the Chamber's declaration was necessary. The Chamber was therefore informed that its Session had come to an end. The King announced that his Government reserves to itself the power of determining when the Chamber is to be called financial measures are to be arranged; in other words, that it will levy and spend money at its pleasure.

THE INSURRECTION IN POLAND.

Reports of skirmishes, some favourable and others disastrous to the Poles, continue to be received from Cracow, Lemberg, and Posen. Engagements occur almost within sight of Warsaw. According to reports from numerous quarters, the insurgents, under Count of Rows, on the left bank of the Vistula, ten miles from Warsaw, is occupied by 3000 insurgents, well armed and provided, under the command of Lewnewski, the latter having preceded by a large number of horsemen, approaches the gates of Warsaw without the Russians offering any resistance. The insurgents have mounted cannon at the barrier gates of the town. They are forming camps on the side of Prague and of Wola, the two faubourgs of Warsaw. Near the bridge of the Vistula cannon is also pointed.

On the 25th inst., according to a telegram from Cracow, the band of insurgents under Colonel Langiewicz, important from their numbers, have occupied Kielce, on the Pilica, in the government of Kielnch. Kielnch was attacked by a detachment of Russian troops, 500 of whom were killed and the remainder put to flight. A detachment of insurgent cavalry, under Colonel Krzyzanowski, has occupied and seized the treasuries. An engagement also took place upon the 23rd between Zurek and Trojejow, in which the Russians were defeated.

It is stated that the Polish Committee has declined an offer from Garibaldi to aid in fighting for Polish independence. The reason given for this decision is that Garibaldi's presence would excite the neutral and humane attitude of Austria that they did not wish to show the least sympathy with the insurrection; but, that they would by their gaining over to the Polish cause men whose names are connected with certain recent European events.

The National Government has issued a decree ordering the organisation of a general rising, to take place on the 1st of June.

The Russian Government are taking measures to provide themselves against the Polish tendencies of the functionaries, and have issued a decree for the re-organisation of the police and the dismissal of all functionaries who have not the confidence of the Government. Several arrests have been made, and domiciliary visits are frequent in Warsaw, which are supposed to be preliminary to the declaration of a state of siege.

Despatches on the Polish question appear to have been received at St. Petersburg from nearly every Power in Europe. Several fresh ones were published on the 27th, and those of the Journal de St. Petersbourg on Sunday, with the replies sent by Prince Gortschakoff. The Russian answers are in the French language, and the most polite terms, with acidity, however, is infused into the reply to the Portuguese note. The Russian Minister refers to the encouragement given to the insurrection by Portugal and terms the Portuguese Government that the Russian Emperor has no need of any suggestions except from his own heart and his sentiments of honour.

AMERICA.

By the arrival of the Montreal Company's steamer Norwegian, from Quebec, we have advices from New York to the evening of the 10th inst.

WAR NEWS.

On the evening of Tuesday, the 5th, General Hooker, finding his communications threatened, commenced his retreat across the Rappahannock, which was effected in a tremendous storm of rain. The south side of the Rappahannock was evacuated before noon on the 6th. Nearly all of the army had crossed the Confederates found out that the Federals were retreating, and then they brought up a few pieces of artillery, which the Federal cannon drove back. On this day General Hooker issued from his head-quarters at Falmouth, an order of the day, wherein he claims that the army of the Potomac had inflicted heavier blows than those they had received. He thus summarizes the achievements of his army:—

We have taken from the enemy over 5000 prisoners, captured several seven pieces of artillery, and placed hors de combat 18,000 of our foe's chosen troops. We have taken 3000 stand of arms, large amounts of stores, damaged his communications, captured prisoners within the fortifications of his capital, and fled the country with fear and consternation.

General Lee's report is dated the 5th, and is very brief:—

To President Davis.—Yesterday General Jackson penetrated to the rear of the enemy and drove him from the heights of Chancellorsville, situated on the one mile of Chancellorsville. He was engaged at the same time in front by a line of General Sedgwick. Many prisoners were taken, and the enemy's loss is killed and wounded is large. This morning the battle was renewed. He was dislodged from his position on several thousand troops, and driven back towards the Rappahannock, over which he is now retreating. We have again to thank Almighty God for a great victory. I regret to state that General Paxston was killed; General Jackson severely, and Generals Heth and A. P. Hill slightly wounded.

(Signed) R. E. Lee, General commanding.

The Federal wounded, 1200 in number, who were left behind on the southern side of the Rappahannock, have been sent across under a flag of truce. Some of the Federal wounded were burnt in the woods around Chancellorsville, they having been fired by the shells of both armies.

On the 7th the President and General Halleck visited the head-quarters of General Hooker, and had a long consultation with him.

General Stoneman's expedition is the most important achievement of the Federal cavalry during the war. The expedition consisted of 2700 picked men, and a light battery of six guns. Dividing themselves into detachments, and giving out that they were the advance guard of the main army, they penetrated safely within two miles of Richmond. On their way they destroyed railway stations, telegraph wires, and bridges; tore up 60 miles of railway connecting General Lee's army with Richmond, burnt large stores of food and clothing, and broke the locks on the James River Canal. On the morning of the 7th his whole force, having one officer and thirty-seven men, arrived safely within the Federal lines, having captured and paroled upwards of 1000 prisoners.

The women of General Jackson was grave enough to demand the amputation of the arm. Under the effects of this operation he said, on the afternoon of the 10th, General Lee commanded the wife of this redoubtable soldier in the following general order:—

Mrs. Jackson—Permit me to express my sympathy in the army the death of Lieutenant-General Jackson, who expired on the 10th, at 3.15 p.m. The darling child and loved companion of his parents, he was the light of his native Province, nay, more lost to us. But, while we mourn his death, we feel that his example and will inspire us to emulate his virtues, and sustained by courage and unshaken confidence by God as our hope and strength. Let his name be a rallying cry for victory. You have indeed been afflicted, but God may bless. Let officers and soldiers imitate his invincible determination to do their duty, and the defence of our liberties is certain.

(Signed) R. E. LEE.

General Jackson's funeral took place at 3 Richmond on the 12th, with great demonstrations of sorrow and respect. A Richmond journal says of that time the death of Stonewall Jackson is so similar event had so sorrowfully impressed the people of Virginia.

The Richmond Inquirer considers Chancellorsville the most bloody encounter yet fought, and estimates the Confederate loss at from 8000 to 10,000, and that of the Federals at from 25,000 to 30,000, including prisoners.

The Federals, under Generals Keys and Peck, estimated 12,000 strong, have occupied West Point, on York River, and driven the Rebels to the north bank of the Mattapony.

Admiral Porter has bombarded and captured Grand Gulf, said to be the key to Vicksburg. That place was a fortified camp on a bluff twenty miles south of Vicksburg. After the bombardment, the enemy evacuated the place, after blowing up their ammunition. The garrison was 4000 men. The Federals only lost eighty in killed and wounded.

General Grant officially reports that he and Sherman's 11,000 strong, four miles south of Fort Gibson, the capital of Claiborne county, Mississippi, and routed him, with the loss of many killed and about 600 prisoners, besides the wounded. The Confederate force was about 100 killed and 500 wounded. The Confederates retreated towards Vicksburg. General Grant also reports that his expedition has destroyed numerous railroad bridges, locomotives, and stores. Among those between Mississippi Springs and Jackson were destroyed. Also the state. The Governor calls every able-bodied man to arms. At last accounts General Grant was encamped near Black River, eighteen miles from Grand Gulf, awaiting reinforcements.

The death of Confederate General Van Dorn is officially reported. He was shot down by private altercation.

Ten Federal negro regiments have been organized at Memphis, Tennessee, and ten more are in course of organization.

General Thomas Francis Meagher has resigned the command of the Irish Brigade. He says that the assault against Fredericksburg on December last reduced the brigade to something less than a minimum regiment of infantry. He memorialised the War Department in vain that the brigade should be retired from duty for a season, and opportunity given to renew it self. That memorial was never acknowledged. The late appointments at Chancellorsville have reduced it to numbers. To remain in command of the brigade would be a public deception, as the military reputation of a brigade it would be involved. General Meagher, however, places his services at the disposal of the Government in any capacity they may appoint.

THE ALIEN AND THE CONSCRIPTION.

President Lincoln has issued a proclamation explaining the position of aliens under the draughting law. No plea of alienage will be received or allowed to exempt from the obligations of the conscription Act any person of foreign birth who shall have declared on oath his intention to become a citizen of the United States, or who shall be found within the United States during the continuance of the war, or after the expiration of sixty-five days from the date of this proclamation; nor shall any such plea of alienage be allowed in favour of any such person who has declared his intention to become a citizen of United States and shall have voted at any election with the right of suffrage, or any other political franchise, within the United States.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Captain of a Federal regiment has been dismissed the Federal service for witnessing the surrender of a friendly Indian in order to desertor and bringing him away from within the boundaries of Canada. The sentence has been discharged from the army.

The United States' Circuit Court at Cincinnatti has decided not to issue a writ of habeas corpus in Mr. Vallandigham's case.

One section of the Democratic party in New York has passed resolutions demanding the discontinuance of the war, and denouncing the forcing policy of the Administration in having placed the United States in a position "where even England dare not follow her." They declare that the Administration must be forced by public opinion to insult from England, and pledge every man and every dollar to resist that insult.

The New York Times is now printed on paper imported from Belgium, which costs there 53d. per pound. The duties and rate of exchange make it cost 7d. to the importer at New York. But that is less than the price of the same quality of paper American manufacture.

Since the first fugitive slave who was surrendered from Massachusetts, under the passage of the Fugitive Slave Law, was transported into the Federal lines from below Vicksburg, accompanied by his wife and two children. Negotiations for his purchase were on foot when the war broke out and put an end to them.

The trial of the Peterboff has been postponed. The Prize Court has decided to receive Mr. Hodgett's testimony.

CANADA.

On the 20th inst. the Ministry, headed by Mr. J. Sandfield Macdonald, was defeated by a vote of non-confidence by a majority of three votes. The Opposition had a majority of eight Lower Canadian, and the Ministry a majority of three Upper Canadian votes. Parliament adjourned on the motion of the Premier, and it is announced that a dissolution and general election will ensue.

INDIA AND CHINA.

There is very little interest in news from India and China.

The wedding of the Prince and Princess of Wales was celebrated at Calcutta on the 20th ult., in the Anglo-Indian manner. The Viceroy presided over the whole of the peninsula was in complete repose

In China the hostilities between the Taipings and the Imperialists continue on the boot terms, and no movement of any importance had been made by the rebels.

A fine land bookers out at the Bermuda Railway terminus, Bayly, to which many persons proceeded to witness the progress and other incidents to the sufferers by the conflagration, and ordered the house had been burnt down at his own expense.

The ship Mooresfoot, 1051 tons register, belonging to the port of London, has been totally lost off the Mauritius, while on her homeward voyage from Calcutta. She arrived off Port Louis on the 3rd inst., and afterwards a storm came on, which drove her on to the reef, and she broke up so rapidly that only light she was got ashore. Captain Bayly, with his wife and crew, including the captain and the chief and second officers, were lost.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.—The Camperdown, with the mail of the 1st inst., arrived at Plymouth on Thursday morning. The Cape Parliament was opened on the 16th of April. The state of the colonial finances was the principal topic of the Governor's speech on the occasion. He proposed additional revenue to the extent of £150,000 per annum, to be raised by means of stamps and increased duties, increased transfer and auction duties, and land tax. The policy of non-sale and the tithes of the colonists in South Africa was still strongly urged by the Government, but any measures on the subject would be postponed for another year. Abundant rain had fallen during the month, and agricultural prospects were good. Trade was improving. Bishop Zoot and party were to embark for Zambesi on the 20th of April, in the Government steamer Sesney to Dr. Livingstone the intelligence of the result of his expedition. The colonists with the warmest confidence and generosity. A portion of the present grant has been withdrawn from Tembekian territory.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

Colonel Fraser has been elected Commissioner of the City Police in the room of the late Mr. Harvey.

The first flower show of the season at the Crystal Palace was held last Saturday, and was considered by the judges to be the best and most extensive that has ever been held there. The azaleas constituted the principal feature of the show, but the pelargoniums, cinerarias, and roses were also in great abundance and rich beauty.

A bazaar, under the distinguished patronage, will be held on Monday next and the two following days, at the Wantingden Club, on behalf of the Royal Free Hospital. The proceeds of the present of the bazaar will be devoted chiefly to the establishment of a public laundry in connection with the above institution.

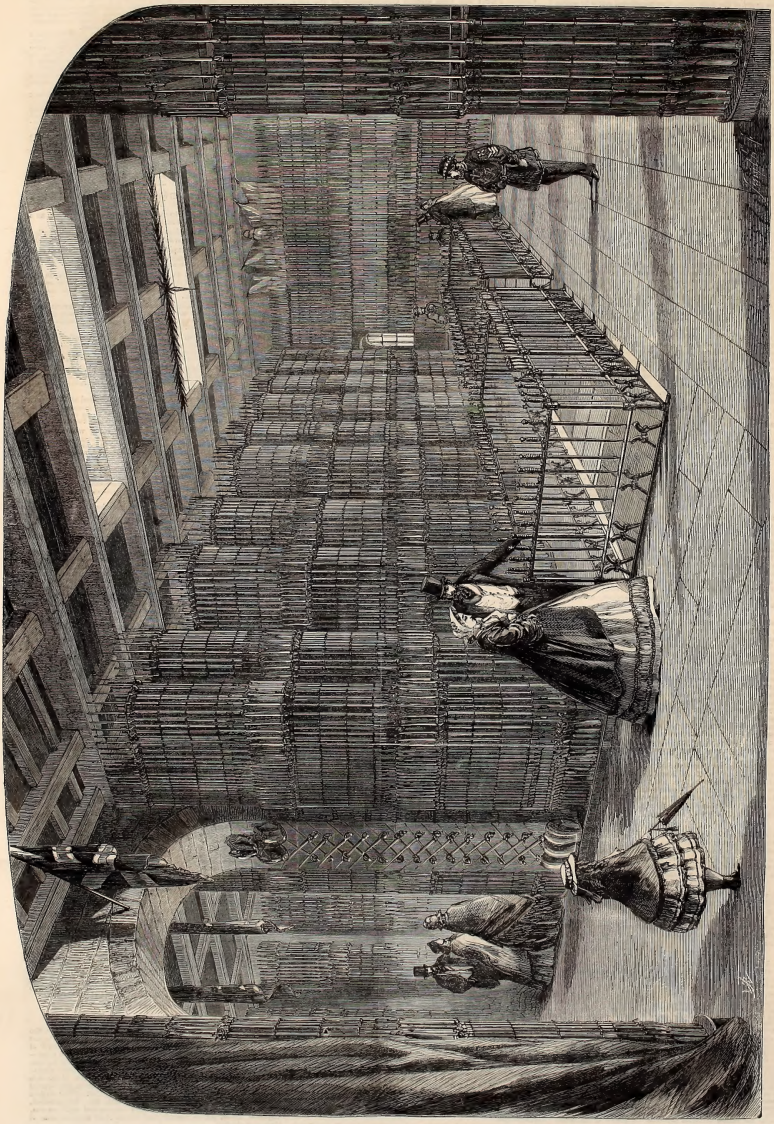
The Strand Theatre was closed on Wednesday evening, in consequence of the sudden illness of Mr. Swanborough, the manager, having, in a state of temporary insanity, committed suicide by cutting his throat. The deceased gentleman was a most estimable and kindly nature, and much esteemed by those with whom he came to contact.

A meeting of the Liberal Registration Committee in the City of was held on Thursday evening, at the Cannon-street Hotel, under the presidency of Mr. G. J. Goschen and Mr. T. Mackay. Mr. Goschen had a large majority of votes, and Mr. Mackay at once seconded by the Committee was appointed in his name to be put on Mr. Goschen's committee. It was then resolved to recommend Mr. Goschen to the suffrages of the City electors.

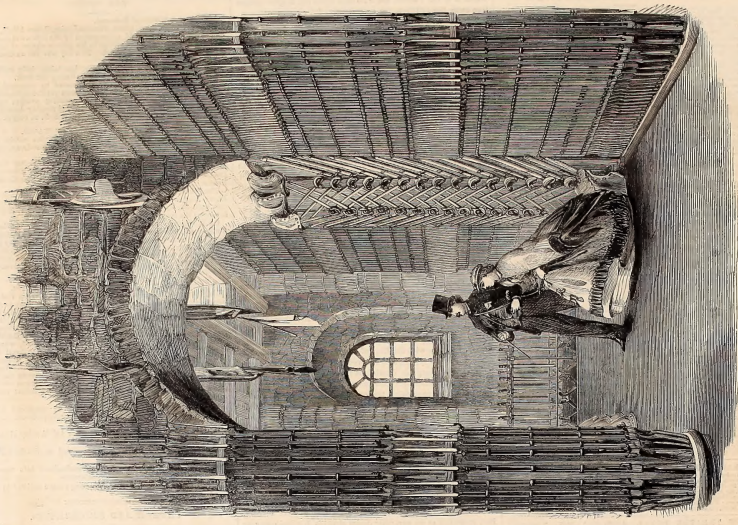
The annual May examinations of the pupils of science schools and classes of Mr. H. L. Swanborough, the manager, is being in a temporary inquiry, committed suicide by cutting his throat. The deceased gentleman was a most estimable and kindly nature, and much esteemed by those with whom he came to contact.

A meeting of the Liberal Registration Committee in the City of was held on Thursday evening, at the Cannon-street Hotel, under the presidency of Mr. G. J. Goschen and Mr. T. Mackay. Mr. Goschen had a large majority of votes, and Mr. Mackay at once seconded by the Committee was appointed in his name to be put on Mr. Goschen's committee. It was then resolved to recommend Mr. Goschen to the suffrages of the City electors.

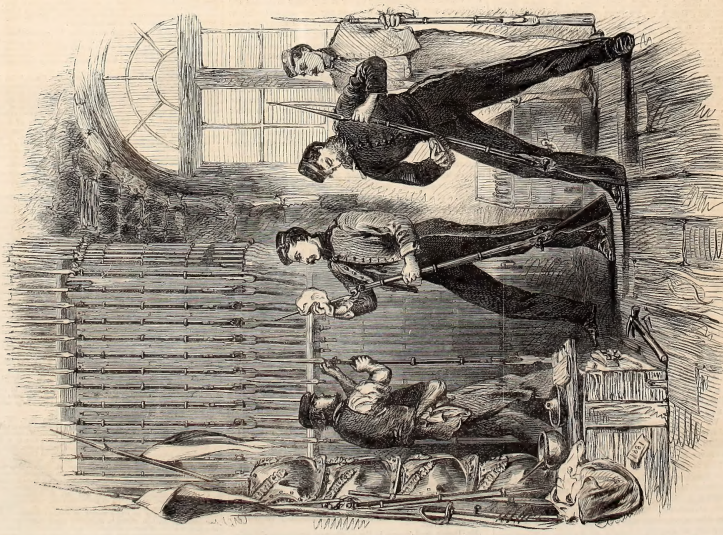
The annual May examinations of the pupils of science schools and classes of Mr. H. L. Swanborough, the manager, is being, in a state of temporary insanity



NEW ARMOURY, TOWER OF LONDON: THE COUNCIL CHAMBER.



NEW ARMOURY, TOWER OF LONDON: PASSAGE LEADING TO THE BANQUETING-HALL.—SEE PAGE 582.



NEW ARMOURY, TOWER OF LONDON: PLACING ARMS IN THE RACKS.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 6.

SUNDAY, May 26.—Trinity Sunday. The new Austrian Reichsrath, or Imperial Representative Council, meets at Vienna, 1860. Severe indecisive Battle of Fuentes, before Richmond, Virginia, U.S., 1862.

MONDAY, June 1.—Nicomede, Roman Presbyter and Martyr. Lord Nowe's victory off Ushant, 1794. The United States' Patric Clausepalace taken by the British Frigate Shannon in eleven minutes, 1813. Eclipse of the moon: full moon, 11h. 49m. p.m.

TUESDAY, 2.—The Dutch fleet under Van Tromp defeated by Monk, 1653. The Lisbon Riots against the Roman Catholics in London begun, 1780. Jenner received £30,000 for the introduction of vaccination, 1802.

WEDNESDAY, 3.—The Dutch fleet under Van Speiker defeated by the Earl of Sandwich, 1665. The transit of Venus observed at Dublin by Mr. Green, who called it the 'Transit of Venus Commemoration Day.'

THURSDAY, 4.—Corpus Christi. Battle of Marengo; the Austrians nearly annihilated by the French and Sardinians; the Emperors of France and the King of Sardinia were present, 1859.

FRIDAY, 5.—Boniface, Bishop of Mentz, the Apostle of Germany, martyr, 755. The new garrison of the Royal Horticultural Society opened by Queen Victoria, 1861.

SATURDAY, 6.—Falconer taken by Garibaldi, 1860. Death of Count Cavour 1861.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE, FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 6, 1861.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M 26	27	28	29	30	31	A 1
M 2	3	4	5	6	7	8
A 3	19	35	51	7	23	39

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Lat. 51° 29′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above Sea, 24 Feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER			WIND.	RAIN
	Barometer reduced to 32° Fahr.	Temperature of Dew Point.	Direct Force of Vapour.	Relative Humidity.	Minimum on Grass.	Maximum in Shade.	Mean of Minimum and Maximum.	General Direction.	Movement in Miles.	Inches.
	Inches	°	Inch	%	°	°	°
20	30·163	45·3	0·301	83	39	47·8	43·7	NNE. N.	210	0·210
21	30·165	48·8	0·372	74	40·1	55·2	47·6	E.S.E.	431	0·217
22	29·966	47·7	0·347	81	39·2	52·7	46·0	E.S.E.	337	0·000
23	29·936	47·7	0·347	83	40·6	51·7	46·2	NE. ENE.	273	0·003
24	...	...	...	...	38·9	52·3	45·6	...	264	0·000
25	29·964	47·9	0·349	83	40·9	53·8	...	...	336	0·000
26	29·878	50·6	0·403	83	41·9	56·8	N. NNE.	N. NNE.	348	0·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches reduced)	30·03	30·11	30·17	29·97	29·95	29·93	29·91
Temperature of Air	45·0	50·0	47·0	49·0	51·0	52·0	48·0
Temperature of Evaporation	42·0	47·0	45·0	47·0	48·0	50·0	47·0
Direction of Wind	N.	S.E.	S.E.	S.E.	S.E.	S.E.	S.E.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—The greatly-successful Comedy of FRIEND, or, Spy and Counter-Spy, by Messrs. Tom Taylor and Mr. Alfred Wigan, with Mr. Buckstone, will appear This Evening as a Quarter to Seven. Preceded by BUCKSTONE'S HOME, introducing Mr. William Belmore's Magnificent Panorama of the Tour of the Prince of Wales in the East.

THEATRE ROYAL, LYCEUM.—MONDAY, and every Evening during the Week, A DRAMA, OR GODDESS ATTAINED, with Mr Rignold and Mrs. Lee. After which, at a Quarter to Eight, THE TWINS, or TO DIE, TO LIVE, and THE SPECTRE BRIDEGROOM. Characters by Messrs. Rogers, Lyon, Rignold, and Addison, Mrs. Rignold and Miss Josephine. Private Boxes, Stalls, and Tickets may be secured at the Box-office, under the direction of Mr. Morris. Doors open at Seven; commence at Half-past.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER.—On MONDAY and every Evening, the NEW PANTOMIME, entitled HARLEQUIN AND THE SEVEN CHAMPIONS OF CHRISTENDOM, or, HARLEQUIN MAKE-UP. Mr. B. Webster and Miss Fanny Josephs. Concluding with the Grand Comic Pantomime

FINE ARTS.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

THE PORTRAITS.

THERE is nothing more easy than to rake up a number of smart truisms and purchase a cheap show of cleverness by disparaging the portraits in the Academy Exhibition, commencing, of course, with the stock observation that they are this year "more obtrusive than ever."

This latter, however, is certainly not the fact. Every portrait-painter, from the highest to the lowest, has felt the influence of photography; while many, indeed, have been driven from this branch of art altogether. We remember when the proportion was considerably larger; and there were scarcely any living but portraits in the days of Reynolds and the early exhibitions at Somerset House. No one we admit that they are, on the score of demerit, more than ever obtrusive; for the sane cause which has lessened the number has naturally improved the quality. On the contrary, there are fewer specimens of what went from of portraiture found in the correct and meretricious performances of the feeble followers of Sir Thomas Lawrence; and there are more portraits than usual even of honest and successful study of nature. Another healthy sign is that the stock properties, such as the pillar and curtain, are of much less frequent occurrence. There is, of course, much bad work still, and as there must always be whenever a number of examples of the most difficult form of art—all the fault of one year—are exhibited. We suppose that, could the annual crop of portraits of any period in the history of art be seen together, the proportion of bad to good work would be found not far different from that which now maintains. But a bad portrait finds its way, if not sooner, with more certainty, than any other kind of worthless painting, to the limbo of forgetfulness. The difficulty of portrait-painting must not, however, alone be borne in mind. It is one of the very noblest forms of art. A fine portrait ranks beside a work of high or historical art: it does indeed give the history of the individual. Very few but the best "historical" pictures can be recollected in perfuture; though it does not exactly follow that none but such should be regarded painters of portraits. We all know that Angelo, Moreau, Vandyke, Van der Helst, and others painted occasionally few historical or "subject" pictures. The converse of this would to much more true, for we do not remember a good painter of subject that was not a portrait-painter. The one, in fact, involves the other. Moreover, portrait-painting has also seen both the best and worst periods (such as these of the Commonwealth and the two Georges). The most dramatic in the history of the human mind. And, demonstrating and preserving it record of the human face—natures great masterpiece—is the most dignified as well as difficult task an artist can engage, as the desire to possess a representation of those near and dear to us, or of those we esteem, respect, and deem worthy of remembrance is entirely universal and commendable.

We can have no wish to conceal the fact that there are a very large number of portraits of little merit exhibited, and a great carelessness of seeing the art elevated. But the causes of the low position of this art are, we believe, mean destroyed, and it is often assailed unjustly. Unimportant portraits are scarcely more numerous, proportionate, eliminate, and common-place than contemporary incident painting—nature and habit happen, however, to make all of the latter of the former. The faults of both, in short, arise—to speak (as it is best always to do) in the plain truth—from carelessness and the absence of artistic education, from many painters being hardly more than an superior sort of artizan, and from the frequent deficiency of genius and literary and cultivation.

We have said that publicly-exhibited "portraits ought only to be estimated as works of art," and that "the best" portrait-painter is diminution of our demands on the portrait-painter, that he is not responsible for the eligibility of his subject. But he is also often compelled to introduce very unpictorial accessories. One thing, however, should be persistently demanded, whatever the subject—and it is that look of individuality of life which alone interests and affords delight above all parade of millinery, accessories, and even technical learning, and which distinguishes the true from that the resemblance is faithful though he never saw the original. This constitutes the highest artistic merit in portraiture, and is the point in the distinguishing merit of the Scotch school. Raeburn was the most eminent painter of this school; but his successors, though they have the same downright honesty, have not the masterly bold and vigorous style of handling. Sir Watson Gordon maintains his place at the head of the Scotch portrait-painters of the present day, and his portrait of "Archibald Bennet, Esq., Secretary to the Bank of Scotland" (125), intended for the hall of the bank, is a representation of a man actually looking up from his accounts with a Scotch shrewdness and animation which is very necessary to highly characterized. The figure alone has only the slightest trace of that blackness in the shadows generally found in Sir Watson's works. Two other portraits, though less striking and easy (so to speak) are full of consummate skill and character, "G. Baird, Esq., of Stitchem" (99), and "R.W. Bicence, Esq." (310). Messrs. Phillip, Macbeth, and Pickersgill are other celebrated painters of this school. We have already reviewed at length Mr. Phillip's noble portrait-picture of the Queen and the Princess, but we may say here that the artistic truth and vigour of that work is the quality with which were chiefly prominent in his early Scotch subjects before Mr. Phillip visited Spain. Mr. Macbeth is a thoroughly honest and conscientious painter; but he gives us, with almost unmodified minuteness, a hardness of execution, the most rigid and uncompromising side of Scotch character, typified in the portrait of that champion of the Free Church and Professor of Church History, the late "Dr. Cunningham" (256), to which the "antithesis" of Galilean open before him, turns upon the spectator a head bristling with unorganized hair, with beard, bold, and massive that few would challenge the possessor to a controversy on the deepest professional learning. Mr. Pickersgill's portrait of "Kenneth M'Leod, Esq., of Gruchernish," is an excellent example of the same school, but the horse against which the gentleman leans would hardly be equal to fifteen or sixteen stone. The group of a "Mother and Child" (64), by Pickersgill, is a plagiarism from a picture by Sir Joshua Reynolds, compels unfavourable comparison in accuracy of colour and grace.

Mr. Ross deserves the high place he occupies chiefly on negative grounds. He is a fashionable painter, yet he does not descend to those tricks and always elevated flattery, which are unpardonable to the vulgar, whatever their rank. His colouring is cold, poor, and thin, and his draughtsmanship is sometimes faulty; but his heads are always well-bred gentlemen, and his ladies have the retenue reflected from a pure and exemplary Court. Mr. Grant's best works this year are a very favourable portrait of Miss Grant, the daughter of the Speaker in undress robes passing through a corridor to the Commons (68), and the half-length of Lady Pike (107)—very graceful, natural, and unaffected. Mr. Grant's least successful work is the ill-drawn portrait of Viscount "O. Farry, Esq. (93), and a picture of a boy horse standing perfectly passive in cover, though the master has sounded his "Gone away."

Mr. J. Rant's numerous portraits this year incline to be unduly obtrusive, not so much from want of good taste in the treatment as from a too great and unbroken equality of power. His characterization is showy yet flat, and wanting in refinement and variety. These afford one of many proofs that command of the mere material is one of the most dangerous things in art. As of old, Mr. Smith chief excellence was with children—witness the "Daughter of Chose and Mrs. Richmond Jones (119), training a rosebush in a greenhouse, and the Children of H. H. Thornton, Esq. (385), playing at croquet. The half-length of a lady descending stairs with a rose in her hand and girl requisite to be subdued in several passages.

Mr. Watts's full-length of Lady Somerwell Lewis (139) is a very creditable, though wanting the vigour and freshness of the portrait in Mr. Phillip's picture. The full-length of Mr. Thomas (74), in pink, shout to mount his hunter, is the best work for manliness and rich, though slightly forced, colour we have seen by this artist. Smaller female portraits by the same hand are somewhat feeble and conventional.

Mr. J. C. Knight has more genuine painter-like qualities than any of the preceding artists, with the exception of Mr. Phillip; but a strong relish for colour and a dashing manner, which are, perhaps, a little too obvious in the "Portrait of a Lady" (59), in a manner. The portrait of the late Dr. Daly (69) is entirely satisfactory. Mr. Richmond has made a perceptible advance towards complete mastery of his new medium. In proportion as he seems to be losing some of his cunning in crayons (see the drawing of "The Earl of Shaftesbury") (708) he is rapidly acquiring the richness and brilliancy of oil. While retaining in his recently-adopted material his skill as a draughtsman, there is however, still a certain conventionality which always characterized his works. The otherwise admirable portrait of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury (675) has, for example, a still-too-smooth and not altogether in character; and something of the same is observable in the portraits of the Earl of Home and the Rev. H. Venn (310). Mr. W. B. Richmond, R.A., has also made a step in the way of pretty and ingenious portrait of a little girl (679). Mr. Wells is another artist who, formerly a miniature painter, has changed his medium. He is not, however, seen to nearly so much advantage this year as in the beautiful portrait of Miss Tippings (71), a full-length figure in the white dress and, and from the scene of thin final painting and pleasing—in the usual manner of Mr. Watts, and always a favourable one. The "Contemplation" (96) is also by Mr. Wells; but must also object to the posed air of the head, the flowers which are the elaborate finish of the picture, and the want of the attention from the head, and look studied for effect instead of nature, as intended. The portrait of General Ross (89), has the well drawn and characteristic, has, from the causes indicated, the brownness of an old painting. A crayon drawing of an elderly lady (1,000), by Mr. Wells, is all that we could wish, but the artist who has least justified his change of medium is Mr. Thorburn. Before the public as a miniature painter he has long held a high place (625), and even the sweet but vapid portrait of Lady Orde (313), who is also by Mr. Thorburn seems to be executed in miniature manner in which he so much excelled. We confess, too, we see nothing in Mr. W. H. Hunt's first-exhibited portrait of Dr. Lushington (619) to justify the artist should have abandoned the style in which he excels. The head has the superficial hardness of a painted carving. Nor does Mr. R. C. Leslie appear to advantage in his new character of portrait painter. The life-size portrait of B. Bond Cabbell, Esq. (294), is not worthy of the artist who painted "Autumn Leaves" and "Sir Isumbras at the Garrick Club, is neither a likeness nor a good painting. There is a large and conspicuously-placed, but, in fact, formal, and uninteresting portrait of Mr. Gladstone, painted by Mr. Pettie.

Among portraits of a more pleasing character we would call attention to Mr. Boxall's full-length portrait of the Princess Louise of Denmark, by Mr. J. E. Williams, and another excellent portrait by the latter artist of "Mrs. Gurney" (1,000), and another a very meritorious profile of "The Duke of Bedford" (350), by Mr. Pearce; a well-painted but rather attitudinized portrait of Mr. Pearce (472), by Mr. Johnson; and the admirable little portrait of Mr. Joseph Parks (209), by Mr. Roden—a name almost new to us. Mr. Roden has also contributed a characteristic portrait, by Mr. Tweedie, of Miss J. C. Mackay (614), looking up from her book. Mr. Tweedie has also a good portrait of the late General Sir James Outram (340), though injured by the heavy colour and want of delicacy in execution; and "Mrs. Alfred Mosler," Clay (507); a lifelike and excellently-modelled portrait of the Rev. A. Tidman (622), by Mr. Gush; and a characteristic and not "flattering" portrait of Professor Owen (1,000), by Mr. Herkomer, of that muscular Christian, the Rev. Charles Kingsley (614).

Mr. Millais has contributed to the exhibition of the present appointment to the small bird, by R. F. Sandys, of Mrs. Susanna Rose (55)—an elderly lady in a black dress, with a white handkerchief on her head-dress, yet without the least sacrifice of breadth, but especially admirable for its brilliancy and marvellously delicate truth to character in every touching of the picture, from the wrinkles which time has left on the broad depth in the background in the style of the early Flemish painters. Mr. Millais's other contributions are the portrait of "Mrs. Leslie Ywcombe" (666), turned to extreme profile, smoking marigolds, also exquisite for its delicate truthfulness and careful finish; and the head of "Vivien" (707), almost equally fine in colour, but not so satisfactory in drawing.

Two very remarkable portraits are sent by M. H. Lohmann—a half-length of Mosier James Hartmann (120), and a head in profile of Mrs. Hartmann (121). Both are in a very dark manner and background. These portraits have an academic correctness, a smoothness of the delicacy of execution, and a general appearance of a very past which are quite unique in this exhibition. All that can be said against such work is, that in the necessary "tormenting" of the subject into the style of the artist, he loses much of his freshness; that this sweetness of gradation hardly compensates for the loss of the bold and vigorous touch of nature, and that, in short, all this we do not see this artificial smoothness in nature. All this is true, but it is equally true that there is a very opposite and a very false and opposite side. At all events, we could wish that the consummate drawing and modelling, and the "keeping" in the colouring of these works were found in a more "natural" style. After all, these are mere protections, and somewhat are many "fashionable" portraits, with which the exhibition is filled, are mere pretensions. The principle on French scrap—the diminutive head and the attenuated, impossibly-slender figure, and the "fashionable" complexion, and the stiff, flippery breath, with its sprags as of forked lightning. Two portraits by Mr. Buchanan, and a feeble performance by Mr. Swinton, are happily, however, almost the only portraits to which these remarks apply with any force. And there are evidences in this exhibition that the painters have some appreciation of a purer and better taste, though not always accompanied by the highest technical skill. Among the best portraits are those of Mr. Gilbert Scott (1,000), and amidst expressions of the agreeably grouped "Duchess of White, by Mr. Herrick (1,000), and a lifelike portrait of the Duke of Newcastle (1,000), in rather thinly painted, but "characters," and the head seems inlaid in the dark background; and a portrait of Mr. Hall, the proprietor of "Punch," admirably captured at La Rochelle (655), in truer in character, colour, and effect than anything we have seen by the artist. Mr. Hall's head has a rather too warmly-placed but in other respects excellent portrait of Mr. Hall, the proprietor of "Punch," and sculptor (1,000). Two subject pictures by this lady, "The Danish Fishermen's Courtship," (1,000), and "Hens Christian Anderson, the Danish Poet, Reading his Story," "The Ugly Duckling" (65), both of which are charming, and the opposite drawback of being cold and dry in colour, yet both are admirably true to nature. Mr. Armitage's full-length portrait of another of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, are chiefly noteworthy in connection with the large and important picture of the Conference most deserving attention (besides those already mentioned) are the Earl of Shrewsbury (794), in coloured chalks, by Mr. Salomé, and the excellent portrait of Mr. Gladstone, by Mr. Lucy (1,000). And of the few miniatures the best are by Miss A. Dixon, and Messrs. Wells, E. Taylor, Story, Kipps, Thorburn, H. Mesnley.

THE SCULPTURE.

There is little improvement in the few ideal works of sculpture in the present exhibition of the Royal Academy, and, indeed, the appointment of portraiture, probably due to the greater favour and interest the public doubtless begin to show towards and feel in this noble branch of art. The steadily growing taste and appreciation of it increased it there were sufficient space for distributing the sculpture in the rooms to the advantage of the pictures and the statues. The natural advantages to paintings and sculptures gained by placing them together is shown in the Palaces of Italy and the great international galleries, and was very successfully exemplified in our International Exhibition.

The last year's approved and described three of the best sculptures in this collection—viz., Mr. Marshal Wood's colossal bust of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales (1,000), "Paul and Virginia," by Mr. Sherwood Westmacott; and "Young Romilly," by Mr. Munro. These together with Mr. Durham's Prince Albert, are unquestionably also destined to be placed in the Egyptian Hall of the Mansion House. There are "Eve at the Gate," by Mr. Bestherd's Cottage," by Mr. E. B. Stephens, and "The Faithful Shepherdess," by Miss S. Durant. Mr. Stephens has not by much invention or vigour and propriety of conception added interest to a rather unpromising subject. Admitting that a certain clownishness (as necessarily assumed by Alfred) in the position of expression, there may be a little more than reeling to counteract this in a somewhat petit maître elegance of limb, and the whole figure is rather too much in the same style. The noble statue of the "Earl of Lonsdale" (13) seated in a chair will also hardly sustain the expectations formed of this sculptor by his friends, especially in reference to the Wellington monument with which he is intrusted. The air of the head is easy and natural at this figure, but the extremities are not satisfactory, and it has, on the whole, little to recommend it. The model of a standing statue to the late Earl Fortescue, to be erected at Exeter, is more vigorous; but only a very exceptional "subject" would justify so much rigidity of attitude and rugged character of form. Allowance must, however, be made for the plaster cast: the marble bust of the Earl (1140), also by Mr. Stephens, is, as might be expected, more agreeable. Miss Durant has had, in her statue for the Mansion House, a subject less popular, if more suitable for the material, than that of Mr. Stephens. Few persons nowadays read the pathetic ballad of "The Babe's Redbreast," by Fletcher (Beaumont has been dead some years when it was composed), forgetful as it is, and although it was the model for Miss Durant's "Census." But for this drawback the heroine was not, however, altogether unsuitable, and those to whom the poem will remember that the incident Miss Durant represents—namely, that where Amorit (the Faithful Shepherdess) tries to convince her despairing lover, Perigot, who is mistaken for the murderer of Amaryllis), of their identity by pointing to the ring and bracelet he had given her, is very touching and interesting. Miss Durant has made the most of this incident, and the pleasure which the suggestion of a charming story affords is enhanced by graceful form and excellent execution. This is the first important commission for a public work of sculpture given to a lady in this country. Miss Durant has also an admirable medallion portrait in high relief of Mr Grote the historian (1135).

Mr. Durham exhibits models of "America" and "Africa," two of four allegorical figures, which, we believe, are still wanting at the angles of the monument commemorative of the Great Exhibition of 1851, which is now about to be set up in the Horticultural Society's Gardens, and which will be uncovered with a grand State ceremony on the 10th of next month. We cannot be unfair to criticise these isolated figures decisively before they are seen in their proper material and position. We may say, however, that both (but especially the African) are nobly designed and executed, and that the properties (cast and treated very judiciously.

Mr. Woolner, recently-elected Royal Academician, has sent a marble group of Miss Hastree and a greyhound, entitled "Play" (1040), which is exceedingly graceful in form, animated in expression. The finished modelling and little playfulness of the dog are especially noteworthy. The "motif" of the figure was probably suggested by the antique Diana. Mr. Woolner contributes two busts—those of the late Sir Benjamin Brodie (1058), distinguished by strikingly characteristic and true treatment for the "President of the Colleges of Surgeons (for whom the sculptor is also engaged upon a statue of Dr. Hunter); and that of Professor Goldwin Smith (1039), the late accomplished lecturer to the academy, powerfully modelled, but a rather ungainly "subject." This is a diploma work—i.e., the example of their art which each R.A. and A.R.A. is required to present to the Academy. Mr. J. E. Philip's three religious subjects, forming part of the series he is executing for the new Presbyterian Chapel, are examples of this kind, and show much mastery of the technical difficulties of abstractive. There is great expression in the head of "Mary Magdalene." Mr. Marshall's "Undine" is, compared to many previous works, rather empty and hard: the face and arms are not in good drawing and well-proportioned.

Mr. Munro, besides the spirited and graceful work we last week engraved, has sent a group of two lovers, executed in a style showing a characteristic bust of "A. S. Gladstone, Esq." (1035); another of "General Sherard Osborn" (1036), and a bust of Mrs. Munro (as a child in children) the refined resting of this sculptor is seen to peculiar advantage: these are "Miss Annie Leigh Smith" (1151) and "Mrs. Ludlow" (1153). Mr. Calder's artistic sketches of "Wounded or Mores" (1038), and "The Woman taken in Adultery" (1041), are full of the spirit and power of the Flaxman style of Michael Angelo; and rare dignity and impressiveness must be conceded to them. It might, as well, however, be said that Flaxman laughable caricatures of Homer, to remember that nothing but great genius will entirely carry off proportions so far removed from those of ordinary nature, and a mass of formless, folded drapery. Mr. Calder's bust of Professor Owen in these solemn effigies are the sprightly little statuette sketches, in terra cotta, by Mr. Bruce, as the "Lady" and Mrs. Millais, &c.; and the finest French specs, exaggerated liveliness, dandy airs, and tiny extremities, which may be all very well in the boudoir, but are unsuitable in the very objectionable on a larger scale and in a nobler material. Mr. F. F. Roubiliac has a relief of "The Good Samaritan" and a very clever little bust of the late Lord Chief Justice of Macaulay (1,000). G. G. Adams's plaster sketch, or study, for "A Nymph after the Bath" (1,000) is one of the most graceful female figures we have seen in ideal statue. This sculptor has, besides, a bust of "General Sir Thomas M. Pranks" (1010), having much character in the features for a posthumous work; another characteristic bust of "General Sir Edward Lugard" (1167), and impressions from dies for a medal of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Erichsen. There also are very delicate and refined examples of cipptic art. Other good specimens of die engraving are contributed by Messrs. A. B. Wyon, H. Wyon. Remembering for the ideal sculptures, we may mention a pretty child-group, entitled "Reckless" (1,000), by Mr. Theed, and "Cupid Disarmed," by Mr. Rabe—a very different version to that given in Mr. Millais's picture; Mr. Stevens's "Sleeping Boy" (1,000), and, perhaps, just, in which the modern female is out of keeping with the Farnese-like sculpture, and two beautiful and highly finished ideal busts of "Launcelot" and "Una," by Mr. Thomas (1,000).

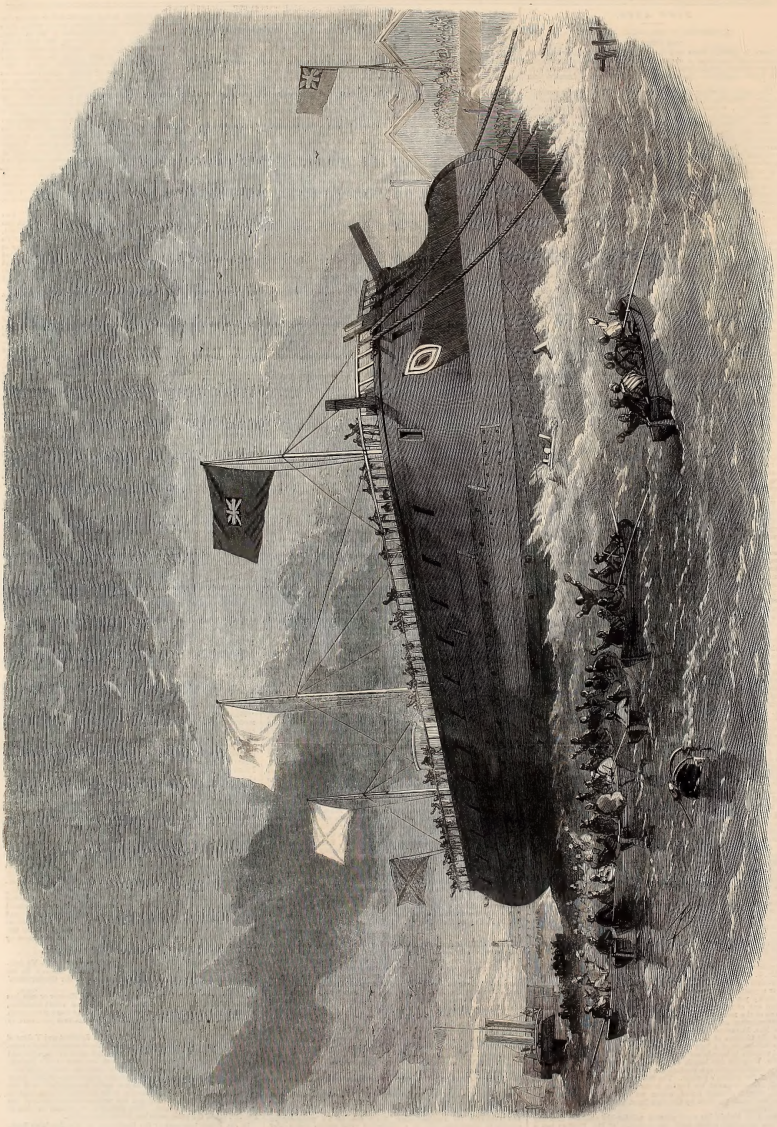
Among the portrait busts, conspicuous for merit as well as in consideration of the personages represented, are a very delightful "heroic" dimensions (being a little above life-size), of the late Prince Consort, by Mr. Theed—a sculptor's portrait in its breadth and excellent work of art, and two busts by the gifted wife of this sculptor, placed side by side, one of the Princess of Wales—already favourably reviewed in the Illustrated London News—and that the other of the Princess Louis of Hesse, which is, equally with its companion, full of the grace and truth of the original in expression. Other busts of marked merit not yet mentioned are "The Earl of Elgin" (1,000), by Mr. Noble, and "The Late Archdeacon Hare of the Liverpool Docks (1057), by Mr. Noble, both very artistically modelled: "The Hon. Mountstuart Grimstone" (1030), a posthumous work by Mr. Behnes, and Mr. Durham's unfinished and facile, a lifelike bust of H. C. Marshall, Esq. (1028), by Baron Marochetti; Mr. Thomas Fuel for a bust of Sir Joseph Paxton, and Mr. Henry Weekes's Felix Mendelssohn (1,000), by Mr. Butler; a manly and unaffected bust, by H. H. Weekes, of the late Mr. Thomas Brassey, the President of the Institution of Civil Engineers" (1133), "The Late Archdeacon Hare (1141), by Mr. Woolner—a commendably conscientious work, or apparently great literal exactness, but which from the quiet manner of nature look noticeable in the Tennyson and other busts by this sculptor—and "Lady Guillemot" (1,000), by Mr. Bruce. There are also excellent medallic medallion portraits by Mr. J. Adams; cases of others by Mr. Baxter, Mr. Bruce, and Mr. Thomas, and two in bronze by Mr. Armstead, of rare mastery in the workmanship.

Mr. W. S. Herrick has just completed two very creditable full-length portraits of the Queen and the late Prince Consort, in the robes of the Order of the Garter, for the hall of the Clothworkers' Company.

At a moment when the character of the old Elenore dresses has been adopted in the design selected for the national Albert memorial, it may be interesting to state that a very sweetly-toned photograph of the beautiful Gothic dress by Mr. Pugin-Powell has been published by Mr. Mitchell, of Old Bond-street.

Mr. T. J. Barker's picture, entitled "The Intellect and Valour of England," which contains the most lively portraits of eminent Englishmen now living or recently dead, has been worked upon by the artist and considerably improved since it was exhibited at the Royal Academy. The purpose for which the picture was, we presume, chiefly painted—namely, to furnish the subject for a popular engraving—will no doubt be accomplished. The likenesses are easily recognisable, and the engraving, by Mr. C. Lewis (shortly to be published), will, judging from the preparatory etching and the well-established merit of the engraver, be very acceptable. The picture is at present on view at Mr. M'Lean's Gallery, in the Haymarket.

In our notice last week of the landscapes in the Academy Exhibition we omitted to notice Mr. Danby's "Delilah Mocking Samson" (460) as among the number of noteworthy works; but a slight misprint occurred in the artist's name—it should have been "Henry," not "Isidore."



LAUNCH OF THE RUSSIAN IRONCLAD FLOATING BATTERY PERVENETZ, AT BLACKWALL.—SEE PAGE 596.

ALGERIAN SPAHIS IN JAILS.—FROM A SKETCH BY J. A. BEAUCÉ.—SEE PAGE 594.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

NEW MEMBER.—Mr. O'Hagan took the oaths and his seat for Tralee, in the room of Mr. D. O'Connell, resigned.

NEW WRITS were moved for the election of members for the city of London, in the room of Mr. Western Wood, deceased; for the borough of Kinsale, in the room of Sir J. Arnott, who has accepted the Chiltern Hundreds; and for the borough of New Ross, in the room of Mr. Charles Tottenham, who has resigned the Chiltern Hundreds.

THE PACIFIC SERVICES.—On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. Childers moved a vote of £1,000,000 on account of the navy for taking votes in Supply particularly in reference to the pacific services. Mr. Childers briefly explained the estimates, which, as an amendment, that all the words after 1868, in the resolution relative to Mr. Churchward's account, be left out.—Mr. Gray seconded the amendment.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER opposed the motion, and entered into a statement with the view of showing that the Government were perfectly justified in the course they had taken in the matter of Mr. Churchward's conduct.—After some discussion the Marquis of Hartington and Mr. Walpole's amendment was negatived by a majority of 270 against 101. The report of the Committee of Supply was then agreed to.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' DUTY.

The House having gone into Committee of Ways and Means,

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved the following resolutions:—

"That, in lieu of the duty now payable for and in respect of passengers conveyed for hire upon or along any railway, there shall be charged and paid in Great Britain a duty of excise at and after the rate of £10 per cent upon all sums received or charged for the fare or conveyance of all such passengers.

"That section 7 of the Act passed in the seventh and eighth years of her Majesty's reign, chapter 85, which enacts that no fare shall be levied upon the receipt of any railway company which shall exceed the amount of the fare not exceeding one penny for each mile by any such cheap train as in the said Act is mentioned, shall be repealed.

"That the exemption from duty granted by the 8th section of the Act passed in the seventh and eighth years of her Majesty's reign, chapter 21, in respect of the conveyance of passengers by cheap trains, shall not extend to any railway train which shall not be kept in motion running at the rate of 12 miles the week, or else a train running to or from a market town on a market day, and opposite to the Lords of the Committee of Council on Trade and Foreign Plantations as a cheap train, for the convenience of passengers to or from a market."

Mr. THOMPSON opposed the resolutions on the grounds that the railway companies were already taxed to the extent of 5 per cent on their receipts, and as a right hon. gentleman proposed to visit with the utmost wrath the poor man who travelled by the cheap trains, he should have thought that would sufficiently suffer for this trifling delinquency.

The resolutions were ultimately agreed to.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of the late Mrs. Pope, widow of Captain William Langley Pope, R.E.I.C. (who died in 1856), has just received probate. The personality was sworn under £14,000, and the testatrix appointed her friends, the Rev. Charles Waring Sexton, D.D., incumbent of Sandwood Chapel, near Whitchurch, Salop; Richard Wilde, Esq., Shrewsbury, and Thomas Lloyd, Esq., of the Inner Temple, George Williams Wood, Esq., of Lynn Regis, Mrs. Pope leaves to each of the former £100 for mourning and £50, in addition, to each of the legal advisers. To her only son, William Langley Pope, M.A., she leaves the entire life interest in the whole of the property (after the two executors of Lord left in legacies to members of her husband's and her own families), together with her collection of pictures, plate, and household furniture.

The will of the Right Hon. Henry Manners Cavendish, Baron Waterpark, was sworn under £12,000. The late peer, who died on the 9th inst. at Belfast, left his property to his wife, Lady Waterpark, the residuary legatee. The executor, the Hon. George Cavendish, M.A., is the testator's brother, having renounced the grant. The personalty was sworn under £12,000. The will bears date 1846, and a codicil, dated 1866, is appended. The testator leaves all his real estate, subject to the charge of £200 a year on his Irish estates, as an additional income to his widow, to her for the term of her life.

The will of John Allnutt, Esq., of Clapham-common, Surrey, was proved in London Court on the 13th inst. The personalty was sworn under £40,000. The executors and trustees are Mrs. Allnutt, the widow; Mr. Allnutt, the eldest son; Mr. Henry Gar. Esq., the son-in-law; and Robert Baxter, Esq., of Park-street, Westminster. The testator bequeaths to his wife the interest of £5,000 and the household furniture absolutely, and added five codicils, the last dated May, 1868. The testator, who was one of a family numbering fifteen children, has left to each of his children a portion of his estate. To his son he leaves his share and interest in the business of which he was formerly merchant, Mark-lane. To his daughters he gives the freehold premises, appointing his widow residuary legatee in trust for the estate, upon her decease, is to pass to his son.

Last week a woman died at Reay, after having attained the extraordinary age of 107 years.

The Panama Railway Company present all officers of her Majesty's ships which neither off Colon or Panama with a free ticket across the railway and back.

Prince Napoleon had paid several visits to the Sues Canal works, Prince Napoleon and Princess Clotilde left Alexandria on the 11th inst. for Cairo, and were to proceed to Upper Egypt.

Sir Henry Barkly has communicated to the Melbourne Royal Society a letter he had received from the Governor of Singapore offering £50 per pair for rose cuscus pigeons found on the Navigator's Isles.

The Hon. Percy Scholefield has purchased the gaol-house at Arpanilla, near Alva, the prison of Clackmannanshire, and the adjoining dwelling-house, and the first use made of this purchase has been to set up therein the privilege-press of Scholefield, for the publication of the Alva Examiner.

The Straits (Singapore) Times says that the island is more infested with tigers than ever, and that large numbers of Chinese woodcutters, who work in the jungle, are killed by these beasts. The population of the island is only fifteen miles square, and 100,000 persons live on it, it is not cleared of jungle. 100 dollars is paid for every tiger killed. Tigers are common on the Singapore from the Malay peninsula, which is only a quarter of a mile distant.

The Hon. Col. Lovett and Mr. Cotton on Thursday evening left Sydney for Privileges, and heard evidence in the Dr Scales, the Mordecai and Monkhorse, and the Da Willes grants. The Hon. Col. Lovett, in the Richard I. was produced in evidence, and it was stated to contain the earliest known autograph of any of the Kings of England. The Royal signature was across, followed by the words "Le Roy."

We have reports from Copenhagen of the proceedings at the Congress of Agriculture from Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, which assembled last week, for the purpose of promoting the alliance between the three kingdoms. The proceedings are described as having been of a most cordial nature, and much good is expected from them. An arrangement was made before separating that another meeting should be held in 1870.

The Government emigrant-ship Everton, which left Liverpool on 1 Jan., anchored in Hobson's Bay, Melbourne, on the 4th inst. Delirium tre. She was twenty-one days passing the tropics. The mean temperature during that period was 110 deg. in the shade, and 140 deg. in the shade. Her quickest daily run was 236 miles and her slowest 11 miles. The distance she traversed during the voyage was 14,000 miles.

The Swiss have established an Alpine club, under the title of "Schweizerischen Alpen Club," at Berne. Its object is supported by eminent men in that country, who are desirous of encouraging a taste for mountain pedestrianism as conducive to health, and to erect huts for shelter and scientific observation in the most interesting localities.

Sir James Brooke, the Rajah of Sarawak, left England in January last, entirely safety at Singapore on the 21st of that month. He proceeded thence in her Majesty's ship Coquette to his little territory, and was received by himself and the people with every demonstration of satisfaction and pleasure and affection. He found the country in a prosperous condition. The exhibition of pepper, betel, and gambier plants, which will probably be an important article for the market have been successfully set to work.

THE NEW POST OFFICE TARIFF FOR THE BRITISH ISLANDS.—After the 1st prox. mails for the British Islands will be made up at the General Post Office for conveyance by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's packets on every Monday afternoon as well as on the 15th and 29th of each month. The following are the rates of postage which will be charged thereupon:—Letters not to be forwarded.—Letters not exceeding ½oz. 6d.; above ½oz. and not exceeding 1oz., 1s.; above 1oz. and not exceeding 2oz., 2s.; above 2oz. and not exceeding 3oz., 3s.; above 3oz. and not exceeding 4oz., 4s.; above 4oz. and not exceeding 5oz., 5s.; above 5oz. and not exceeding 6oz., 6s.; and so on, increasing 1s. for every additional 1oz. Letters to be forwarded.—Not exceeding ½oz. 1s. and 1s. 6d.; above ½oz. and not exceeding 1oz., 2s.; above 1oz. and not exceeding 2oz., 3s.; for every additional 1oz. 1s. All letters for the Ionian Islands will be rated as sent to the seat of Government, unless directed to be forwarded by some other route. Letters, &c., addressed to be forwarded from Malta or Egypt, if posted leaving on Monday should be posted in or reach London not later than Friday evening, and those Islands or Malta if posted leaving on the 15th and 29th and 30th of each month should be posted in or reach London not later than the evening of the 14th and 28th of the month respectively, in order to be in time for dispatch, in which case they must be posted in or reach London on Thursday evening.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

Lost and Saved. By the Hon. Mrs. Norton. (Hurst and Blackett.) Imagine yourself two hundred and fifty miles from London, on the shore of lovely Tenby: Pembroke Castle towers in the distance; Carmarthen Bay is gleaming in the evening sun; and on the sands a joyous party is gathered, enjoying a simple festival. The group consists of an elderly gentleman, a widowed lady, two young ladies, the youngest sixteen and the other a few years older; a boyish midshipman, honour of whose shining blue jacket his family title is held; and a tall youth, of grave appearance, who is a friend, a neighbour, and more than a distant relation of Captain Brooke, the young ladies, and Mr. Midshipman Burke. The fete is not of a brilliant description, as fashionable people count brilliancy; it consists merely in drinking "the health of dear Aunt Somebody" in the sea, and then the usual play to inborn merriment of heart: in filling the glass vase which decorates the centre of the luncheon table with the sea-weed, and in Miss Beatrice Brooke's entwining with seaweed, a "for ever and ever" her bonny brown hair, which, in all her glory of wind-blown and placid evening, blushing sky, and sparkling sea. Aye, dancing over the sea, comes the prettiest of yachts; it stands as close in to the shore as its draught will allow, shakes sail, and gets off a little cockleshell of a boat, which touches at the stairs hard by the place where the merry party is gathered. The handsome passenger, dressed with chestnut curls large easily from the boat, advances to the group, and, raising his hat, asks to be directed by a short cut, which he believes there is thereabouts, to Trahenne House. And now you have had presented to you the characters of Mrs. Norton's tale; for it is Beatrice Brooke who is "the lovely girl," and Mr. Burke proves her nearest and dearest, and one of them is her betrothed husband. Gerald Trahenne, the handsome stranger, is the Lord of the Manor, so that it owes its origin to a conversation which she had with him, that Beatrice Brooke, who had heard of his wealth, beauty, and perfection in woman, and told him she "would some day create a heroine from that model, and bring her to grief in a novel." Of course, it is easy to "bring grief" to the ideal in a novel, but it is only disregard probability. It is more difficult if you proceed according to the rules of common, ordinary probability. Gerald Trahenne, who has made your acquaintance as the model, more cold-hearted, more contemptible because more intelligent than the rest of his kind, runs a course of destruction with any intention of being seduced) usually are, though you succeed in bringing the poor victim "to grief," you prove nothing whatever against the possessor in question of those qualities which lot to ruin in the particular instance. And thus, in our opinion, Mrs. Norton has made a mistake in the plot of her story. Essex's faith in his own "notions of charm and perfection in woman" is the management of Shakspeare, but Beatrice Brooke's character appears to us to be arbitrary; and her elopement with Trahenne, though charmingly described, is not probable. Mrs. Norton's previous development of her character had not prepared us for it. She had not seemed a young lady who would be tossed about from room to window, and from window to garden, by the force of a few hot words of merchandise. But Mrs. Norton is a woman, and, no doubt, understands her sex better than we do, and that the story of Lost and Saved is essentially one of high life. The villain is the heir to an earldom, and Captain and Mrs. Brooke are among the "old Welsh families"; consequently there are many pictures—of course, faithful ones—of life in the way in which Marchionesses and ladies live; and the majority of the characters are of high degree. Lords and their wives in their language, or conventional open-dances in their country seats, figure in the tale. But we are bound to confess that we do closely upon what it is considered improper to write about as actually in the days of Queen Anne, and we are glad that the man who has had the boldness to describe them in all their naked dishonesty in one so elevated, both by social position and literary reputation, as Mrs. Hen. Norton. The story is a good one, the characters are in rather too much of a vulgar Bluebeard, whose laziness, heartlessness, vanity, and love of "fun" are the chief features of his life: there is quite enough of a scheming mother, one Lady Patricia Wellington, and "Aunt Margery," the widowed lady of Sully Nichols, and her aunt Captain Brooke, who bears, both in his character and in his appearance, a striking resemblance to Shakspeare's Lord Stevecme: of Helen Wellingham, the fair and the fragile, and yet the bright and the courageous, the daughter of Mr. Wellingham, the kind-hearted, the sober-minded, the just, and the good. And poor Miss Parkes, the humble but tender and affectionate friend, be forgotten. We have not touched upon her character, but we could have easily dispensed with her prayer; for our impression is that under such circumstances as those in which she is placed she is not balanced periods. Mrs. Norton has brought to bear upon her novel her acknowledged powers of description, fancy, pathos and eloquence, and of wit and humour; indeed, there are few characters more humorous than where the Marchioness of Updown proceeds to her aunt's drawing-room, and where Mr. Wellingham, the magnate, and quotes poor John's most natural but unsyntactical letter of expostulation. Of the pathos we would quote the last chapter—and just; you feel as if you had escaped from an unwholesome atmosphere. If we should have to find fault with the last chapter but two and the fourth edition has come forward to attest the merits of Mr. Aird's new poem—the ordinary, did circumstances permit, take them one by one and analyze them carefully, to the bottom of the deepest thoughts, skim lightly over his shallower fancies, point out the faults of his style, and the want of finish in the truthfulness of his descriptions, and mark the carelessness of his versification. But, as this cannot be done, we must content ourselves with a general welcome, pleasing merely as random a handful of his flowers of fancy for the public to test their beauty and their fragrance. "A Summer Day" strikes us as one of the happiest of the new compositions and less ambitious than some of them: we may, therefore, begin with it. In this piece, it will be a fair specimen of Mr. Aird's style. And thus they run :—

But up from innocent sleep, how fresh to rise
The glorious morn! Ere yet the sun hath risen
Mingled by fairy walks and trembled lines
Of dewy hedges, and the sweet-briar rose
Hangs over brooks, bridge its trailing shoot
Of stems and leaves, and the wild-rose its prize
And wild love-token, at the mossy margin.
The speckled thrush, with many a varied note
Of joyous music, from the topmost spray
The rabbit rushes along the grassy path,
Leaves a moment's track, and is gone.
Arrest to listen; then, with glimpse of white,
Bounds through the bush, and is lost.

Thomson has worse lines than these. This, too, is picturesque :—

See how the noble bird,
Her bosom to the lark, goes round away
Against the distant sun, and, as she moves,
Through a rough cleft above, with busy bill
Feeding her young; and now returning leaves
Her bright grey, bright shimmering in the green
Of the tall fern, and the dark heath.

London Scenes and London People. By Aleph. (W. H. Collingridge). This is a book contributed originally to the City Press, which "Aleph" appears to have become a great favourite with the readers of that interesting newspaper, and it was therefore thought that a selection from the papers which "Aleph" had written for the columns of the City Press would be favourably received in a collected form. It has been attended by a result which must be highly gratifying to the author, as was completed a sufficient number of subscribers had been registered to exhaust an ordinary edition, and a work of "Aleph" is clear." Its readability is undoubted, and there are a great many persons who will derive information as well as pleasure from its pages. May we, however, hint to "Aleph" that he would do well to overhaul his authorities again before the next edition of his work? for we can answer for it that one of his papers—that upon Christ's Hospital—contains a great many inaccuracies. We would recommend him to compare his assertions with Mr. Hunter's more particularly in respect of the "Monday" and "Tuesday" breakfast, the days on which the "public suppings" take place, the "Bluecoat" boy exhibitions at Cambridge and Oxford. The name he gives as that of the secretary to the Governors is wrong, and the date of the print for John Silence, which, unless we are very much more mistaken than we should like to be, was his real name.

ECHOES OF THE FRENCH DERBY DAY.

It is a melancholy thing to be compelled—say through illness, inopportunity, or "urgent private affairs" abroad—to miss the Derby. Each failure in attendance at Epsom is a kind of blot on one's sporting escutcheon. To the genuine amateur of national pastimes there should be no cessation or discontinuity in his annual patronage of his favourite races. He should be able to enumerate the accidents by flood and field he has witnessed on every successive Derby Day for as many years as the roof of the hill has conveyed him to the Downs. Our own Derby experience dates from Teddington's year; an epoch as recent as to induce the idea that we are changing a locality we do not possess. We remember, it is true, a good many Derbies previous to Teddington's, but, before his time, we thought it wicked to go to Racecourses at all.

We have missed—with sorrow and shame do we avow it—the Derby of 1868, but we were there by proxy, and that in the flesh. We were eating macaroni au gratin, at Paolo Reggio's, in the Rue de Richelieu, when we were startled by the sudden sonic time that a Derby of Boccaroni was receiving its ovation opposite the Grand Stand, in Surrey. There is nothing more pitiable, more sad than the desperation from participation in the games called "Athenian." Only two days before the Derby a friend writes to us from London, "We hear you have drawn Lord Lyon's Derby ground lottery. If the ground floor first you will win a hundred; at all events, he will be 'placed,' and you will save your stake." Alas! our friend had given rise to the most unvenerous of rumours—the echo was illusory. On the day before the Derby the Lyon was drawn from a tawny agent.

Macaroni, first: Lord Cadden, second. Your driver King of the Vale, and the same interest.

Still is there an assuagement of agony in the sensation (even if it endure but for five minutes) of the hotel that you have won a hundred pounds. Even the reaction, when the macaroni and you haven't won anything, but have lost five, is most salutary. It is as good as a cold douche after the "Vale of Tempe" Waltzes. You did not pour John Day, recklessly speculating in the South Eastern, the pigeons have been fed of thousands? and did not he wake up and discover that, having failed to secure a prize, he had lost all?

Besides, at most race meetings there are the "Consolation Stakes," "le prix des vaincus." We have had our "consolation." Has not Mr. De La Rue succeeded in making a most consoling reason that the misfortunes of our dearest friends are not wholly unpleasing to us? It may have been, perhaps, a somewhat soothing and comforting to hear in Paris that the English Derby Day was a most turbulent and divisive in its social aspect; that the "kerseet cards" were reduced to pulp by the rain, and that mud and dogs' dirt on the course was heavy and eugy: that the roads were sloughs of slush and slime; that the "Hill" was a quagmire, and that Waterloo was a very common and blue veils at a discount; and that everybody and everything—horses, jockeys, and "noble sportsmen," all got thoroughly wet through.

A passable "consolation stake" this, but a richer one remains behind. Though the Derby was run on the Epsom Downs, at a railway wheel, assisted by the locomotives of the Chemin de Fer du Nord, pertinaciously and unceasingly, from 9 A.M. to 4 P.M., the result of the "Derby Français," otherwise the "Grand Prix du Jockey Club" of 300,000f., or about £12,000 sterling, was not known, the making altogether about £2000 sterling, which was run for with great vivacity in the presence of the elite of the Parisian fashion, on the 17th inst.

The Paris grand Derby, decided at the office of the Jockey Journal, in the Rue Reaugon, has just brought out a portrait of La Touques, a high-mettled racer, the property of M. Lupin, a banker, who is a member not only of the Chantilly Derby, but of the recent Prix de Boulogne, and of the Grand Steeple Chase de Paris. Lupin, little and mure, very badly dressed, as most of the French racehorses seem to be, is a man who has but little of the coquetry of satin coats, plaited manes, and besweated boots visible at English race-courses, and surprising equipages as a nation which pays so much attention to the arts of the toilet as do the French.

The course at Chantilly is not more than half a mile in length, but the horns go two circuits—a distance that severe trainers for the Derby, and a most remarkable start it was, sight of the horses having their heads one way and sight the other. Those, however, wheeled round and scampered off with the most admirable delight to the spectators, but with a defiance of discipline that would have convulsed Admiral Rous with rage and horror. Mr. M'Grigor tells us:

La Touques was ridden by an English jockey, a little lad named Doyle, who looked, indeed, more like a child; and many of the jockeys in the field were to be found the names of Bartholomew, Kitchener, Admiral, Flatman, and Chilmer. In their official programme, the Grand Prix de Boulogne is described to give the weight of the English riders. A French jockey is looked upon as an inferior being; and of the two or three who were riding, the only one who was being led into the inclosure of the Grand Stand, seemed fully sensible of the fact. He was a mere boy, and he was ashamed to be seen in his age; but he had on a man's great coat over his jacket and leathers. His horse was led by a tremendous French postilion, or groom, at least six feet high, and proportionately stout. At the entrance to the inclosure a tall gendarme, lengthily moustached, stopped the cavalcade, and the jockey's cart of mirrors was lowered. "Dit out yer card," quoth the little jockey to the big groom, who, with a grunt, produced a large pasteboard, which was duly inspected. "It's carda'ere, and carda there, and cards everywhere; and not one of 'em to be seen more about a 'orse than nothin'."

Let us do our kind-hearted neighbours across the Channel the justice to admit that in all matters relating to horseflesh they cheerfully concede the palm to Englishmen. Their horses are ridden by an English sire and dam—the Baron, out of Tapestry, and was ridden, as we have said, by an Englishman. The very name of the sire of Stamford's name in the programme made his winning with his bore Arrogance almost a foregone conclusion—not, however, borne out by the event. Again, in the appointments, the accessories necessary to the English element predominate. The "gentlemen sportsmanns" of the Jockey Club are to be found in the grand stand and on the course; English race terms are profusely used in conversation: and to complete the illusion, the Derby dinner, to its minutest details, was scrupulously copied by the most illustrious members of the French turf. The "Admiral" (who cured up done to his hot, when Mr. Leech loves so well to draw, and drew so admirably) was to be seen at Chantilly. The middle classes in France do not understand "Le Sport." They are not to be met with on the race-course, and their billiard-tables. Thus, at the Gallic "fashion games" you see only the aristocracy and the upper middle classes. Gentlemen who clip their hands and cry bravo! at the show whose origin and pedigree are known to everybody. The blood, also aristocrats, the members of the great cercles, the Jockey, the gendres; the Grammont-Caderousses, the Aumonts, the Delagrange, the Delamares, even the members of the upper family spaces, who look, in dress and mien, much more as Englishmen looked ten years since than as Frenchmen look now. The middle class, whose pencil takes up may remind the plainspoken equally of Frederic Barbarossa and the King of the Double Chin, and who are so well and humorously caricatured by the Upper Five Hundred of Chantilly. The odour of L'agyeetre Square" is altogether wanting. Newmarket-cut coats, drab cords tight fit, the low birdseye narrow, buckskin gloves, horrebine pins, sleeve-gipe bats, and short crooked sticks are then the only indications that the spectators are Gallic. It is good current.

But alone at Chantilly are the "gentleman sportsman's" in high relief. Events "have just come off" at the Bois de Boulogne and Vincennes; Fontainebleau and Caen are to come next, and on all the rails of Paris resound the cries of "Grand Steeple Chase de Paris!" above the modest announcement of the fête of Vaugirard, in honour of the Assumption, and the appointments of the Bureau of the Bosses at Nanterre, cut of countenance.

There are essential differences, however, between the English and French Derby days. As Albert Smith's engineer used to say, "Austria isn't England, and England isn't Australia, and you can't make 'em so; and that's where it is, Mr. Smith." France, we take it, is France, and England, England. The French Jockey Club has actually issued a code of rules for the conduct of the races at the Bois, with the stern tribunal whose members warn outspoken newspaper reporters of Tribunals of Honour. "Le Sport" is a misnomer to which you pay no chance, is not like the well-roped turf where Tom, Dick, and Harry may see the race for nothing. The "grand parrillon" and the "brûleur réservoir" are but a Swiss cottage kind of affair compared with our colossal stand. On the great day at Chantilly there were not probably five thousand persons present. There were no pickpockets. There were no "wolchers." Half a dozen sergents de ville fulfilled those duties, for the adequate performance of which we require a couple of hundred policemen at the very least. There were no mountebanks, no acrobats, no serenaders, and no pipers. Had any such diverting vagabonds presumed to show their faces on "Les Jeunes," they would have been at once hurried off to the Madelonnettes. On the course the only refreshments were a few booths for the sale of gingerbread, whistles, and dolls: but not a glimpse was to be caught of the ingenious gentleman who manipulates the three cards, or the more occult individual whose dexterity is devoted to the manœuvring of two little thimbles and one small pea.

Again a modern twinkle of the fashionable eaten down by railway, and there were not a dozen private equipages on the course. Here and there was an open chaise—but, then, it looked in vain for fours-in-hand or barouches and pair. The betting, we dare say, was heavy enough: but it was all done in the paddock, and on the private javelines of the jockey club. On the course there was absolutely no speculation beyond a lottery or two at a franc a head. We recognised one familiar British betting face, whose presence stood with Israel as a sure moodily surveying the unprofitable scene. He had come express from England prepared to bet against anything that could be named: and declined to back anything. The race was to them not a matter of business, but a rare show. Finally, the French Derby of 1863 was run on a Sunday.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE settling on the Derby and Oaks has been of the most satisfactory character, and, with the exception of a few trifling accounts, which stand over until Ascot, everything has been squared up. All bets, from £50,000 to £50,000, are understood to be "off" among the ringers; but one thing is certain, that he has generously presented his trainer, Goldsmith, with £1000, and Chaloner with £500. Old friends of Lord Glasgow are bitterly disappointed; and, with the exception of, perhaps, a few out-and-out Manchester men, there is a very jubilant among trainers, jockeys, owners—and, in fact, everybody, save those to see a race, that Fordham, after thoroughly executing his order, got well clear of anybody before Tattersalls Corner, and his victories—as many other young jockeys have done when they found themselves in front of a Derby field.

The heavy state of the ground did much towards bringing horses together; and it is curious that, when the Derby and Oaks are won under the judge's chair, Lord Clifden's head was down and Mucarone's up.

"Nimrod" has finished his letter on the Derby in the Times upon the post, and that this manœuvre just saved it from being a dead heat. Lord Clifden's race with Jamiceton on Friday has rather frightened his friends from backing him for the Oaks; but they have seen him out again. The race is, however, no criterion, as, to say nothing of the difference of weight, he was been "rot" or plated. He looked a couple of stone heavier than the Derby day, and was only very moderately fit. The Oaks mile was safely accomplished in 2 min. 90 sec., whereas 1 min. 45 sec. is good average time. Three of the best looking fillies in it were first, second, and third for the Oaks. Doncaster was by no means fit for work; Lady Augusta's legs were decidedly queer, and her noble owner had apparently told his friends that she was "all right" on the day, and the perpetual tall whisk of the pretty Miss Armstrong gave the admirers some qualms, which were fully realised. The quiet yellow clothes had made John Scott fancy that Queen Bertha would do again beaten by Amelia, and Alicroft thought little enough of his 50 to 1 mount. Both Derby and Oaks will be memorable for the brilliant horsemanship of the jockeys of the winners, as Alicroft nicked it by one of them "short heads on the post" that made up the great Jem Robinson such an imperishable name in the saddle. A match between one of the Vale and Rapid Rabbits was run off on the Derby, 9st. 10lb. each, A.F., on the Houghton Wednesday. John Osborne has had, as usual, a good haul at Redcliffe, where Dave Ann, bred by that rare old Scottish sportsman, Mr. Ayton, of Auchendinny, has twice scored. Ascot occupies the four middle days of next week, and is fully expected that the Prince of Wales and suite will attend in State. The Gold Vase, on Tuesday, has only an entry of ten, including Alabaster, Adventurer, Gamester, Caller Ou, Wingrave, Zetland, Hurricane, &c.; while the Cup entry, on Thursday, lacks the name of Asteroid, but contains those of Cremorne, Wheeler, The Marquis, Cariboo, Stradella, Buckstone, Zetland, Caller Ou, The Ranger, Lord Clifden, and seventeen others.

The ball at Shelsmore is deferred from Monday to Tuesday, and Saturday before Doncaster Races, a great change for the better. Her Majesty's and Mr. Saville's yearlings will be sent to the hammer (Saturday), and on Monday next sixteen of Mr. Mather's by Touchstone and Prime Minister, come up to Tattersall's. Could a Derby lot will be sold on Saturday, the 6th of June. They are by twelve different sires, and the dams of Paste, Lady Palmerston, High Treason, Governess Fair, Attaman, Sanderer, Shillelagh, Mendicant, Anvil, Neptune, G.E.D., Donna del Lago, Donne and Sappho, Commotion, Bohemia, Countenance, Tragedy, and Lady Feversham are among the forty-one. Sir Lydden Newman's fourteen yearlings average £179 gs. at Stockwell on Saturday, and the Baron is now in for the top lot, a very nice roan colt by Gemma di Vergy, from a Venison mare, and tired out John Day at 600 gs. Locke, the Earl Cadogan that ever came to the hammer, was well fit for his stud sale, too, because Mr. Naylor's at 300 gs. That gentleman also went to Sir Fancy, for Gemma di Vergy, to Mr. Cox, for Cavendish colt, 250 gs., among the nine Swaldcliffe yearlings, which average £94 gs. Five of them were sold at 100 gs. each.

The Dog Show at Islington has been on the whole a good souvenir. Never was a place more fitted for it; and if they would only allot the small dogs entirely to fashionables in future, the Battersea and Pimlico row, and by rigidly determining to put up the prizes and committee of each class to judge, do away with the "pulling" which so many visitors than they did this year, there will be nothing of the kind in England to compare with it. The Duke of Beaufort's pack of fifty couple of hounds were an immense attraction, and we understood from the huntsman that five couple and a half of them had been in the wolf hunt. Two other masters of foxhounds sent couples, and Mr. Mostyn, who was a capital second in the three-couple competition, and only beaten by the extra quality of the Duke's hounds, took the second prize. The "Old New Forest" black tans were a great deal looked at, and are said to be better than ever. The Scotch foxhounds of Wales were not successful with his harriers. Sea Foam and Gipsy Queen (a new Sea Foam) were second. The Duke of Beaufort were the winners in the champion classes for greyhounds, bloodhounds, and pointers. The show of pointers, generally, was not first class, whereas the greyhounds were never in greater force. Many were very good, and the retrievers very good; and Earl Spencer was great in Clumbers, but with none from Mr. Hutchinson's kennel. The Otter Togs made up a large and good show, but we were not especially struck with the bulldogs and newfoundlands. The great point of interest in some of the foreign classes was attend for by the beautiful groups of dams and puppies. The Prince and Princess of Wales visited the show on Monday; and on the following day Mr. Sydney and the directors—who were placed at a very serious disadvantage in the last moment by the inability of the superintendent of the dogs to attend—on the signal way in which they have wiped out all the unpleasant recollections of the disgraceful affair of last year, and placed their show on a really sound basis for 63.

The two Heaven sat on Lord's on Monday and Tuesday, the only time they will confront each other this season. There was no unfortunate difference between George Parr and The Oval management. Exactly £1,150 people paid their engagements to see the match—but thirty-eight less than last year. The result in favour of the United by 70 runs leaves All England one match a head on the balance. On the part of the United, Hearne (who made the top score, 44), Carpenter, Iddison, and Lockyer (not out either innings) batted admirably; but Griffith's bowling may be said to have won the match for the United, and it was aided by very admirable fielding throughout. With Carpenter and Heyward (30 and 14) and H. H. Stephenson (20, none of the All England men made much. Jackson's bowling in the first innings, was most effective, but in the second his hand was quite out: and Wilsher (whose delivery seems to us open to doubt) did good service. The state of the ground was considered by old cricketers to be a disgrace to "Lord's," and they looked out, with complete assurance, for flukes without number. The North have been so much for the South in their match, wherein Carpenter made a brilliant innings of 73. On Monday we have M.C.C and Ground v. Colts of England, at Lord's; U.A.E.E. v. Twenty and Two Bowlers, at Brighton; and A.E.E. v. Twenty-two at Halifax; and on Thursday, Surrey v. Yorkshire, at the Oval; A.E.E. v. Sixteen Manchester Gentlemen; at Lillie Bridge Professionals v. Old Etonians; and Kent v. Cambridgeshire, at Maidstone.

The long Lord's Yacht Club held their first race of the season on Wednesday. Vindex, 45 tons (A. Duncan, Esq.), won the first-class yacht race, and Pirpus, 55 tons, was second. The second class, Feliz, 12 tons (W. J. Furry, Esq.), won the first prize, and Alexandra, 15 tons, second.

LATEST BETTING AT TATTERSALLS—THURSDAY EVENING.

ASCOT STAKES: 5 to 2 agst Caller Ou (t); 4 to 1 agst Wingrave; 5 to 1 agst Captain Cuttle; 10 to 1 agst Knaresborough; 20 to 1 agst The Knave (t).

GOLD VASE: 5 to 2 agst Caller Ou; 4 to 1 agst Wingrave; 5 to 1 agst Le Toutou (t and c); 10 to 1 agst Knaresborough; 20 to 1 agst Alabaster (t).

It is semi-officially announced that Lord Grey is to have the Garter.

A Danish brig was run down in the Channel on Tuesday morning by her Majesty's ship Megæra. The brig at once went to the bottom, but the crew of seven hands and two passengers, with one exception, were saved.

The information in the case of the seizure of the Alexandra was filed in the Exchequer, and contains copies of the letters which have changed against the owners and builders of the vessel. The trial will take at Westminster, before the sittings of the Term.

The emigrant ship Lobelia, 823 tons, which sailed from Plymouth on the 7th of November last, arrived at Sydney, New South Wales, on the 19th of March, having on board 370 Government emigrants. Three births and one death only took place during the voyage.

On the 19th inst. Mr. Justice Willes and Her Majesty's ship Zebra took into St. Helena a prize schooner, name and nation unknown, which she had captured with a cargo of slaves.

The conduct of Lieutenant-Colonel St. John Neale, the British Chargé d'Affaires at Xeldo, in the Richardson tragedy, when he wisely prevented any further interference on the part of the British Legation at Yeddo against the soldiers and his followers who committed the murder, has met with the decided approval of Her Majesty's Government. Captain Vyse, the Consul at Yokohama, who differed from Colonel Neale on that occasion, has been removed to Hakodadi.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

Bank Parliamentary Return, week ending May 23.

THE transactions in all National Securities have continued on a very moderate scale; nevertheless, the prices of the leading descriptions of Government stock them have been tolerably firm. The amount of stock now in the hands of the jobbers is by no means large, and the fluctuations in the value of it, from day to day, have been very trifling. Exchequer Bills have been heavy, as from 5s. discount to par. There is a full average supply of money in the open market, and, in some instances, the rates have ruled rather lower. The Bank rate remains at 8 per cent. In the general market, the following is done as follows:—

Thirty days' bills ... 2½ to 3d per cent. | Four months' bills ... 4 @ 5 per cent.
Two months' bills ... 3 @ 4 per cent. | Six months' bills ... 4 @ 5 per cent.
Three months' bills ... 3½ @ 4½

The Joint Stock Bank and Discount houses are giving 1 per cent for money at call, and 34 per cent if with seven days' notice of withdrawal. The Bank of England has declined to advance money on bullion.

No change of importance has taken place in the value of discounts. We annex the rates for the leading bills:—

	Bank rate.	Open market.		Bank rate.	Open market.
Paris ...	3	3	Amsterdam ...	3	3
Berlin ...	6	5½	Trieste ...	5	5
Hamburg ...	4	3½	Brussels ...	3	3
Frankfort ...	4	3½	Hamburg ...	3	3
Vienna ...	5	5	Madrid and Cadiz ...	5	5

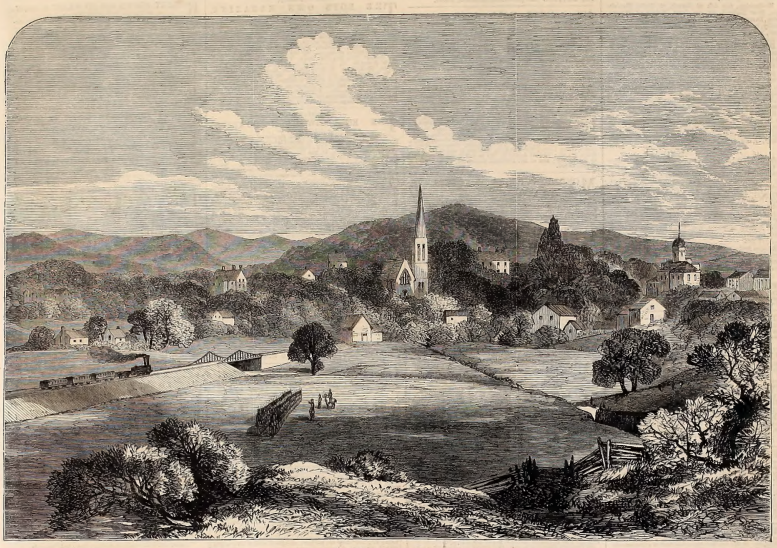
A new law for Turin has been introduced into the Parliament. It is in a recent yet clear form, and is to be in force from the 1st of July next, at 4.20 each. The interest and ranking fund are secured by the hypothecation of the country's property and by public sale of the same.

The imports of the precious metals have amounted to about £200,000, in the course of the week, and the exports to £100,000. The bullion in the Bank of England is £18,000,000.

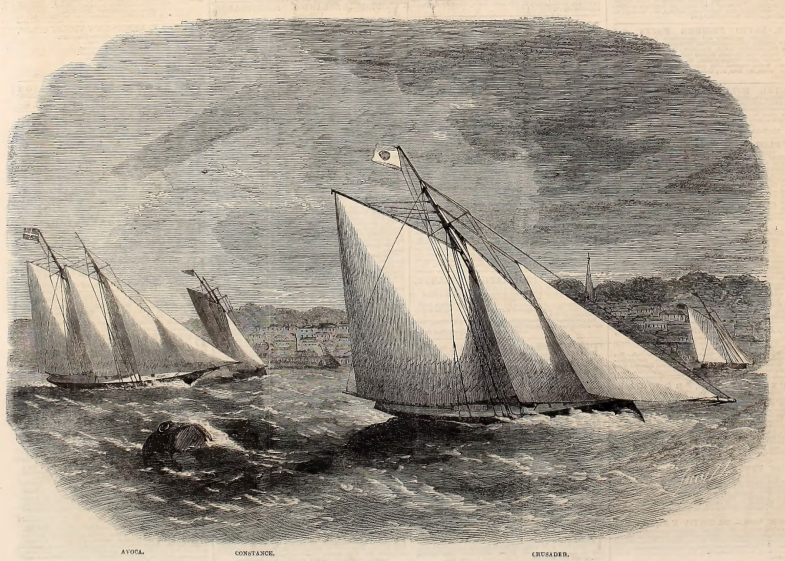
Most of the Continental exchanges are somewhat favourable, and there is still a large supply of disposable capital in the market. At the latest dates the premium was 50, and the exchange for bankers' bills 16.

On Monday the Consols for Money were 93¼; Ditto, for Account, 93¼; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 93¼; Bank Stock, 12; Bank Stock, 215 to 216; India Stock, 211 to 213; Ditto, New, 103; to 102; Bonds, New, 1st pd. and 1119; Ditto, 2nd pd. and 1119; Ditto, 3rd pd. and 91; Bank Stock, 213 to 215; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 93¼; Three per Cents, 1853 to 1863, 93¼; Ditto, 1863, 93¼; Annuities, 1885, 93¼; Long Annuities, 1860, 7 1-16

BULL-FIGHT IN THE AMPHITHEATRE OF NISMES.—SEE PAGE 598.



THE WAR IN AMERICA: WARRENTON, VIRGINIA.—SEE PAGE 598.



AVOCA. CONSTANCE. CRUSADER.

OPENING MATCH OF THE ROYAL VICTORIA YACHT CLUB, ISLE OF WIGHT.—SEE PAGE 598.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

MARRIAGES.

On Wednesday, the 9th of March, at Christ Church, Nelson, New Zealand, by the Lord Bishop of Nelson, Herbert Evelyn Curtis, Esq., Member of the General Assembly of Auckle, youngest daughter of the late Thomas Lintaker, Esq., of Westerham, Kent.

On the 23rd inst., at Methorne Port, Somerset, by the Rev. Edward Duke, M.A., assisted by the Rev. F. J. Gillham, Captain Frederick Hardy, Captain Royal Artillery, to Sarah Elizabeth Hodgson, eldest daughter of the late John Hodgson Hurst, Esq., of Bath.

On the 16th inst., at Christ Church, Ealing, by the Rev. Langton Clarke, assisted by the Rev. J. Williams, Reginald Tyrke, second son of the late R. Wynne Willson, Esq., of Appleyard Hall, in the county of Wilts, and nephew of the late Sir Thomas Tyrke, of Hollycombe, Sussex, to Charles Lewis, only child of William Hall, Chiswick.

On the 23rd inst., at Willesborough, by the Rev. T. Wilson Bolton, M.A., Rector of Ashford, eldest son of William Bolton, Esq., of Ashford, to Mary Ann Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the late John Theodore Bowyer, Esq., of Kenardington, Kent.

On the 24th inst., at Villa d'Este, Isle of Wight, Herbert Sarah Warburton, the youngest and last surviving son of the late Henry Bromley Smith, Esq., of Hill Court, Ledbury, in the 24th year of his age.

FRENCH GALLERY, 120, PALL-MALL.—The SEVENTY-SECOND ANNUAL EXHIBITION of PICTURES in the Consolidation of Artists of the French and Flemish Schools is NOW OPEN, from 9 in the morning till dusk.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS. Pending the Removal to their New Gallery, the EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN at No. 5, Pall-mall East, from 9 till dusk.—By order, JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

THE SECRET OF ENGLAND'S GREATNESS, illustrated by special permission at THE Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury—The splendid PICTURE of her Majesty the Queen, with the Prince of Wales and Prince Alfred, in the Turkish Costume, presented to the Earl by the Sultan, and painted by Mr. Phillip, R.A., R.S.A., is NOW ON VIEW DAILY at 10, Hanover-street, Hanover-square. Admission, One Shilling. Mr. and Mrs. JENNINGS'S GALLERY, 62, Cornhill. Hours from 10 to 6. Admission to Exhibition, 1s.

ROYAL COLOSSEUM, Regent's Park, 18, New Open, Re-embellished, Under new Management. Every Evening at 8 o'clock, the Lecture on London, Paris, and Vienna, illustrated by the whole Establishment. One Shilling. A. W. NORMAN, Acting Manager.

A MORNING IN MEXICO.—Magnificent and extensive EXHIBITION of PICTURES, Painted and Collected, illustrating Life, Manners, Customs, and Costumes in Mexico. Open Daily from 10 till 5. Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d. Gallery, 14, Haymarket, W. Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d. [Now.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED, with MR. CORNEY GRAIN, in their CHARMING COTTAGE, EVERY EVENING (except Saturday) at 8, and Tuesday and Saturday Morning at 3. ROYAL GALLERY OF ILLUSTRATION, 14, Regent-street. Admission, 3s., 2s., and 1s. Stalls, 5s. Sole Lessee, JOHN PARRY.

EGYPTIAN HALL.—The Canoe, the Rifle, and the Axe.—Mr. J. K. LORD, F.Z.S., "AT HOME" in THE WILDS of NORTH AMERICA and RUSSIA in his Canoe, Illustrating Hunting Adventures through the Primeval Forests of Russia, British Columbia, and the Rocky Mountains. Every Morning at Three—the Home of the Red Skins—the Trappers' Camp. Every Evening at Eight—the Russian Hunting Grounds. Every Afternoon at Four—Lecture for Youth. Seats, Stalls, 5s.; Area, 3s.; Gallery, 2s. Doors open half an hour before the Hall Time.

MR. DAVID FISHER'S FACTS and STATISTICS connected with the Commonwealth of David Fisher will appear EVERY EVENING (except Saturday) at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly. Saturday afternoon at Three. Sarah Jane Norfolk, Colonel Gay, Sec., Giovanni Belzoni, Mr. Pepper, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Wombwell, Mr. Cross, Mr. Van Amburgh, Mr. Batty, Mr. Macready, Mr. Charles Kean, Mr. Bunn, Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Tickets at Austin, 29, Piccadilly.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, Regent's Park.—The SECOND EXHIBITION of PLANTS, FLOWERS, and FRUIT will be on Wednesday, May 30, from 1 till 7 p.m. Tickets can be had at the Gardens, by orders from Fellows, price 5s. each. The Gardens are open every day, 6d. each. The music will be by the Coldstream Band.

Use Military Bands will attend.

The Exhibition of American Plants, Monday, June 4.

WELSH NATIONAL MUSIC, sung by MADAME CLARA NOVELLO, accompanied by a HARP, and MADAME SAINTON DOLBY, accompanied by a HARP and PIANOFORTE (Harmonised expressly for the Illustrations by BRINLEY RICHARDS), at the ST. JAMES'S HALL, on SATURDAY, JUNE 23, 1860, at Three o'Clock, with the kind assistance of Mr. Sims Reeves, who will sing Mr. Balfe's new Ballad, "The Maid of Mona Isle." Tenantry—the Misses Williams, Miss Ann Williams, Mr. Lewis Thomas, Mr. Rees Thomas, Mr. Jones Thomas, &c. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Reserved Seats, 5s.; Unreserved Seats, 2s. 6d.; to be had at all the principal Musicsellers. Programmes may be had at the Hall on the day of the Performance.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, JUNE 5.—Mr. CUMMINGS CONCERT.—Under the immediate Patronage of Her Majesty the Queen and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. His Royal Highness the PRINCE OF WALES.

Full Orchestra and Chorus. Pianos, Sims Reeves, Mesdames Sainton-Dolby, Lemmens-Sherrington, Weiss, Rudersdorff, Lascelles, and Cummings, Mr. Cummings (by kind permission of Mr. Sims Reeves) will sing Mr. Balfe's new Ballad, "The Maid of Mona Isle," composed expressly for Mr. Cummings's Concert. Conductor—Mr. Benedict. Sofa Stalls, 5s.; Balcony, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Tickets at Austin's, 29, Piccadilly, and at St. James's Hall.

MR. F. BRADERICK CHATTERTON (Harpist to her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester and to the Queen Dowager) has the honour to announce that he will give his GRAND HARP CONCERT, at the ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE, on THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 28, at Eight o'Clock. The Vocalists will be Madame Rudersdorff, Miss Dolby, and Mr. Santley. Mr. Macfarren will perform his Overture to "Don Quixote," composed by Mr. Frederick Chatterton, who will perform a Harp Concerto. Mr. Chatterton will be assisted by Mr. Lindsay Sloper, Mr. Lazarus, Mr. Carrodus, Mr. Cummings, Mr. Howell, and Signor Piatti. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Tickets, One Guinea each. Applications for Tickets to be made to Mr. Chatterton, 33, Acacia-road, St. John's Wood.

MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS, ST. JAMES'S HALL.—EIGHTEENTH NIGHT, MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 4. Pianoforte—Mdme. Arabella Goddard. Violin—Herr Joachim. Violoncello—Signor Piatti. Vocalist—Mdme. Rovera. Conductor—Mr. Benedict. Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Balcony, 2s. 6d.; Admission, 1s. Programmes and Tickets at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

BEETHOVEN NIGHT at the MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 11, at ST. JAMES'S HALL.

S. THALBERG'S FAREWELL SEASON. HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, in connection with Mr. Lucas's FAREWELL CHAMBER CONCERTS, on the Evenings of Wednesday, June 6, and Wednesday, June 13, at Eight o'Clock. The Pianoforte Performances will be confined to Compositions by Thalberg. Vocalists—Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, Mdme. Rudersdorff, and Mr. Santley. Violin—Herr Joachim. Violoncello—Signor Piatti. Conductor—Mr. Benedict. Sofa Stalls, 10s. 6d.; to be had at all the principal Musicsellers. Programmes may be had at the Rooms on the day of the Performance.

MR. SIMS REEVES will SING "Adelaida," composed by Beethoven, at the MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS, on the 11th June. Mr. JAMES BOOSEY has the honour to announce that Mr. Sims Reeves will SING Beethoven's "Adelaida" at the MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS, on JUNE 11. Programmes and Tickets at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street, and at Austin's, 29, Piccadilly.

MUSICAL UNION.—LEOPOLD AUER, the Hungarian Violinist, will play for the first time at the MUSICAL UNION, on Tuesday, June 5, at Three o'Clock.

MR. KENNEDY'S SONGS of SCOTLAND, STOKE-STREET MUSIC-HALL, Every Monday, at Eight, Assisted by Mr. Kennedy, Miss Kennedy, Mr. Gregory, Mr. Cooke, of the late "Alloa Minstrels," and "Auld Lang Syne" Quartett Club. Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Tickets at the Hall.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.

ANNIVERSARY MEETING.

On TUESDAY, JUNE 5, the ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL will be celebrated in St. Paul's Cathedral. Divine Service to commence at Eleven o'Clock. The Sermon will be preached before the Archbishop of Armagh. The full choir of the cathedral will be assisted by the Choristers of the Chapel Royal, St. James's, and Westminster Abbey.

The Treasurer and Secretaries of District and Parochial Associations are requested to attend the Service, and to meet in the Chapter House, St. Paul's Churchyard, at Ten o'clock.

The Annual Meeting of the SOCIETY, and ANNUAL DINNER of members, will be held at Willis's Rooms, on Wednesday, June 6, at Two o'clock precisely, the Lord Mayor in the chair. Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, may be had of the Secretary, 79, Pall-mall; and 32, Cornhill. The Lord Mayor will preside.

On THURSDAY, JUNE 7, the ANNUAL MEETING for the City of London will be held in the Mansion House, at Twelve o'clock precisely. The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor will preside.

On FRIDAY, JUNE 8, the ANNUAL MEETING for the Diocese of Rochester will be held in the Town Hall, Maidstone, at Two o'clock precisely, when the Lord Bishop of Rochester will preside.

NORTH LONDON RAILWAY COMPANY.

The DIRECTORS are PREPARED to ESTEBLISH ATTRACTIVE EXCURSIONS from the Stations of the North London Railway during the Summer Season.

Under the Company's Act of 1858, for the purpose of paying off the Debenture Debt, the Directors have power to create Shares.

The stock bears a fixed and perpetual yearly dividend or interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, and the holders thereof are entitled to a first charge on the undertaking, and to a preference over the holders of all other shares or any other stock of classes of the Company.

Any amount of stock, not being a fraction of a pound, can be sold by the Company, and will be transferred to the purchaser at the price realised by the sale. The Directors intend to sell £100,000 of the stock on the 15th January and 15th July, by warrants on the Company's bankers, which will be endorsed and delivered to the purchasers on payment of the purchase money, on the receipt to be addressed to THOMAS TRENCH, London Road Station, Shoreditch, Secretary.

BRITISH ORPHAN ASYLUM, Slough.—The Committee earnestly ask Contributions—the Expenditure of the Asylum exceeding the Income by £400 per annum. The Asylum has all the educational decorations so pressed for the Ball to Orphan Children by the Act of 1857. The Asylum is for the purposes of a BOARD SCHOOL for the District. The Asylum is open to the Inspection of the Public at all seasonable times. Contributions will be thankfully received by the Secretary, at the Asylum, and gratefully acknowledged in the Annual Report. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts and Co., Strand. Offices, 59, Threadneedle-street. By order, HENRY BOSANQUET, Secretary.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—Letter and Counters (stating that the day for which admission is required) are issued to Subscribers of One Guinea by the Secretary, at the Royal Academy, Trafalgar-square, from 10 till 4 daily. Each Letter admits Two Persons, and is available for the day specified only. Applications for Letters must be made in writing, and cannot be complied with unless accompanied by the Subscription. Letters will be issued in rotation as the applications are received.

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, Brompton, S.W.—Supported by Voluntary Contributions and earnestly requests its urgent wants to meet the current expenses of this charity.

Bankers, Messrs. Coutts and Co. HENRY DOBSON, Sec.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—Ladies and Gentlemen visiting this and the ensuing Exhibitions are respectfully informed that Mr. and Mrs. WILDE, 6 and 10, Regent-street, Waterloo-place, have a Show-room for Bonnets, Hats, Feathers, and Dresses, at which a trial is invited, and where the Public may be assured of the most moderate and general compliances of terms will please from the most fashionable.

NOTICE.—SMITH, BECK, and BECK, manufacturers of HIGHGRADE TELESCOPES, STEREOSCOPES, and OPTICAL INSTRUMENTS of every description, have REMOVED from 5, Coleman-street to 31, CORNHILL, E.C.

Our customers will find these new premises very superior in size, convenience, and position to those we have left.

SMITH, BECK, and BECK.

PENCILS, BLACK LEAD, and COLOURED CRAYONS. A. W. FABER'S POLYGRADE LEAD PENCILS, Prize Medal, Exhibition, 1851, and Paris, 1855. Specimens and Testimonials, Drawing Pencils, Colour Pencils, Pencil Cases, Holders, Rubbers, Pocket Inkstands, Pocket Penknives, Pocket Scissors, Pocket Rules, Pocket Compasses, Pocket Slates, Slate Pencils, Pocket Books, Pocket Memorandum Books, Pocket Diaries, Pocket Sketch Books, Pocket Drawing Books, Pocket Colour Boxes, Pocket Paint Boxes, Pocket Sketching Boxes, Pocket Drawing Boxes, Pocket Sketching Easels, Pocket Drawing Easels, Pocket Sketching Stools, Pocket Drawing Stools, Pocket Sketching Umbrellas, Pocket Drawing Umbrellas, Pocket Sketching Tablets, Pocket Drawing Tablets, Pocket Sketching Apparatus, Pocket Drawing Apparatus, Pocket Sketching Materials, Pocket Drawing Materials, Pocket Sketching Requisites, Pocket Drawing Requisites, Pocket Sketching Companions, Pocket Drawing Companions, Pocket Sketching Companions, Pocket Drawing Companions, Pocket Sketching Companions, Pocket Drawing Companions

ARMORIAL BEARINGS.—All persons desirous of having a genuine copy of their Family Arms should send name and county to CULLETON'S HERALDIC OFFICE. The Arms found, painted in their proper colours, with Crest, Motto, and Mantle beautifully painted with heraldic descriptions, 12s. Information obtained direct from the College of Arms. Culleton's Manual of Heraldry, 300 Engravings, 7s. 6d. Cheshem-street corner of St. Martin's-lane, W.C. Crest on seals or rings, 7s.

SOLID GOLD SIGNET RINGS, 18 Carat, 30s. Hall-marked. Size, Rings very massive, for Arms, Crest, and Motto. 42s. Crest Engraved on Seals or Rings, in real heraldic style, 7s. 6d. by CULLETON, Gold and Silver Engraver to her Majesty, 25, Cranbourn-street corner of St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

NO CHARGE FOR ENGRAVING DIES with Arms, Crest, Monogram, or Address, if an order is given for a Seal of Best Paper and 500 Envelopes to match at 5s. 6d. Arms found, 3s. 6d. Sketch and Search, 2s. 6d. Culleton's Manual of Heraldry, 300 Engravings, 7s. 6d. Cheshem-street corner of St. Martin's-lane.

WEDDING CARDS, Printed and Stamped in Silver, a Copperplate engraved in any Style, and 50 best Wedding Cards and Envelopes, 21s. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street corner of St. Martin's-lane.

MARK YOUR LINEN with CULLETON'S PATENT ELECTRO-SILVER PLATES.—By means of this invention a thousand pieces of linen can be marked within three hours with initial or name, 2s. 6d. Crest, 5s. Set of Numbers, 2s. 6d. Crest, 5s. Set of Numbers, 2s. 6d. Crest, 5s. Set of Numbers

NEW MUSIC.

FAUST.—GOUNOD'S Celebrated OPERA, now in rehearsal at both the Italian Operas.—The scenes of this Opera on the French and Italian stages abroad has been unprecedented.—Beginning A Selection of Favourite Pieces, arranged and published Airs, Quadrilles, Waltzes, &c., now ready. The opera complete, with Italian and English words. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DENMARK QUADRILLE. Dedicated, by Special Permission, to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Composed entirely on Danish National Melodies. By D. GODFREY, Mus. Grenadier Guards. Illustrated with a Photograph of H.R.H. the Princess of Denmark and the Prince of Wales.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S WAVING LILY BELLS. Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA VOIX CELESTE. Reverie Nocturne pour Piano. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA BELLE MARIETTE. Valse Brillant pour Piano. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA PRIÈRE D'UNE MÈRE. Reverie pour Piano. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S "THE ANGELS' HARP, Grand Fantasia for Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S ROYAL WEDDING MARCH, for the Pianoforte, splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NATIONAL MELODIES FOR THE PIANOFORTE.
No. 1. "The Minstrel Boy, the Last of the Sheaves." Price 3s.
2. "Poor Mary Ann." (At Sixty is one). Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S SEMIRAMIDE, Grand Fantasia on Rossini's Celebrated Operatic Theme, for the Pianoforte, by this popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASANIELLO.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia for the Pianoforte on Airs from this Masterpiece. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on Favourite Melodies from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the above popular Composer. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NAVY PRESENT.—NATIONAL SONG and HYMN. Arranged for the Pianoforte. Beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s. 6d., Duets, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE TUTOR FOR THE PIANOFORTE. The best, the newest, and the most practical instruction Book, containing the most complete Scales and Exercises, Airs with Variations, and the most popular Dances as progressive Lessons, in the easiest style, full music size, price 4s., post-free. N.B. A list of Brinley Richards' Popular Pieces will be sent on application.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular song arranged as a very pleasing fawning-room Piano Piece. Price 3s. Also as a Duet, 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. Bolero arranged as an easy and effective drawing-room Piano Piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' GOD SAVE THE QUEEN. A drawing-room piece, we are pleased to think 'God Save the Queen' true of Mr. Richards' most striking achievement. Price 3s. Also as a Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

EFFIE JEANS QUADRILLE, on favourite Scotch melodies. By S. FERRIN; and Illustrated with Portraits of Miss Rosebank, Miss Effie Stuart, and Mr. Byron. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW and IMPORTANT WORK for the PIANOFORTE, just published, NORDMANN'S MATRIX, arranged complete for the Harmonium, with the stops carefully selected and marked for the HARMONIUM. Bound in limp cloth and gilt. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S MONTHLY COMPANION for the SMALL HARMONIUM, wide or without Pedals, commences in May. A Selection of Favourite Pieces, carefully and Specially arranged expressly for this popular Instrument by F. F. HIMMAULT. Now ready, price 1s. each.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SACRED WORK FOR THE HARMONIUM, Just Published, NORDMANN'S MATRIX, arranged complete for the Harmonium, with the stops carefully selected and marked for the HARMONIUM. Bound in limp cloth and gilt. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S 100 PSALM and HYMN TUNES, for the SMALL HARMONIUM, selected from the most eminent Church Composers. Price 1s. each.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S 200 CHANTS by the best Composers, ancient and modern, selected from the Books of the various Cathedrals, and arranged expressly for the Harmonium. Price 1s. each.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S 50 SHORT VOLUNTARIES for the HARMONIUM, expressly suited to small Churches and Chapels. Price 1s. each.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

A FAIRY BELL. New Song. Words by S. ROGERS. Music, ALFRED HILL. Sung by Mr. Sautley in Mr. Hullah's Concerts with immense success. Price (with or without Violoncello Obligato), 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE Hon ALFRED SIDURTON'S NEW SONG, THE SPELL OF THY BEAUTY, transcribed for the Pianoforte by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 3s. Also an effective trans-cription for the Harmonium, by W. T. WRIGHTON.
COCK, HUTCHINGS, and Co., 63 and 65, near Bond-street, London; and can be had of all Music-sellers throughout the country.

FANTASIA on DANISH AIRS, for the Pianoforte. By JULES BRISSAC. 4s.
COCK, HUTCHINGS and Co., No. 63, Bond-street.

DANISH NATIONAL SEA-ONG, for the Pianoforte. By W. GOLDSACK. 3s.
COCK, HUTCHINGS, and Co., No. 63, Bond-street.

NEW SONG. By FRANK ROMER. "THE SPELL OF THY SONG" sung by Miss Palmer.
COCK, HUTCHINGS, and Co., 63 and 65, Near Bond-street, London.

ELSING'S Valse brillante, for the Pianoforte. By H. ESSINGER. 3s.
COCK, HUTCHINGS, and Co., 63, Near Bond-street.

AN ENGLISH HOME, sung by Miss Louisa Pyne, in "Payne Gift." Composed by A. MACFARREN. Price 3s.
COCK, HUTCHINGS, and Co., 63 and 65, Near Bond-street.

NEW CONTRALTO SONGS.
A WILD, WET NIGHT. Composed by MRS. HUTCHINSON, and sung by Miss Palmer with great success. Price 3s. 6d.
METTLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THINE. By HENRY SMART. "This new and effective Song is within the compass of no ordinary Voice."—Vide Press.
METTLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S "DREAMLAND."
SLUMBER, MINE OWN. In C and in E flat. Price 3s. 6d.
METTLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SLUMBER, MINE OWN. Transcription for the Piano of the popular Song, by W. KUHE, price 3s.
METTLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD'S MUSIC CIRCULATING LIBRARY for Town and Country. Terms—Two, Three, and Four Guineas per Annum.

HALF-PRICE. ALL FULL-PRICED Music sent free at half the marked price by CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

NICCOLO DE' LAPI, Signor SCHIRA'S New Opera. Sung by Signor SCHIRA.
s. d.
"Quel dì che ti volsi." Song by Mdlle. Titiens 3 0
"Ah! non credea mirarti." Song by Madame Trebelli, Signori Giuglini, Gassier, and Mr. Sautley 3 0
"Un singhoz, tendre, and expressive piece of writing, in the style of Donizetti."—Vide Press 3 0
"Qui sulla bianca spiaggia." Song by Mr. Sautley 3 0
"Ah! dolce come un angelo." Song by Signor Giuglini 3 0
"La bella mano." Song by Mdlle. Titiens 4 0
"A quelle, and sure-singly pretty cavatina."—Times. "Bright, sparkling, and tuneful."—Vide Press 3 0
"Gran Dio." Chorus and Prayer. Sung by Mr Sautley 3 0
"Se la rivesti ha." Song by Signor Giuglini 3 0
"Di questa speranza." Duet by Mdlle. Titiens 3 0
"Ah! non credea mirarti." Quadrille on the Opera. "Times, May 11. Brilliant." Sung by Mdlle Trebelli 4 0
"Ah! non credea mirarti." Waltz 4 0
"Ah, pace." Sung by Mdlle Titiens 3 0
PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
W. H. Calcott's Book of Airs. Duet 6 0
Solo 4 0
E. F. Rimbault's Arrangement of the Overture 3 0
W. H. Calcott's Quadrille 4 0
R. Richards' Arrangement of Signor Giuglini's favourite Romance, "Ah! dolce come un angelo" 3 0
A. Mary Leadon's Sonata 4 0
Also, Selections at the Crystal Palace.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

FARFALLETTA.—Signor ARDITI'S New MAZURKA, as sung by Mdme. Alboni with an brilliant an effect, by Mdlle. Titiens, at Her Majesty's Ball at Fredensborg, and "Lucia," danced by Mdlle. Ferreti at Her Majesty's Theatre, arranged for the Pianoforte. 3s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

CHRD PONSUL.
ROSINA MARIA. Song by Mdme. D'Affre in "The Barber of Seville." Arranged for the Pianoforte by CHARLES BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

JACQUES BLUMENTHAL.
"Le Parfum," Réverie (op. 36) ... ... 4s.
"Les Adieux," Valse Brillante (op. 41) ... ... 4s.
"Rêverie," Nocturne (op. 42) ... ... 4s.
"Les Adieux" ... ... 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ENGLISH SONGS.
Breeze and the Harp ... ... Virginia Gabriel 3s. 0d.
Thou ... ... Virginia Gabriel 3s. 0d.
I sit down on the beautiful Rhine ... F. Romer 3s. 0d.
Lovely Spring ... ... F. Romer 3s. 0d.
I gather flowers ... ... F. Romer 3s. 0d.
Johnny Bell's Wooing ... ... Charles J. Wagrell 3s. 6d.
Ever of thee ... ... Charles J. Wagrell 3s. 0d.
Sing, birdie, sing ... ... Virginia Gabriel 3s. 0d.
She is a maiden of artless grace ... G. A. Macfarren, 3s. 0d.
Sweet Spring ... ... Henry Smart 3s. 0d.
Thoralie of the ... ... J. Simonetti 3s. 0d.
Ah! non credea ... ... Arranged by Rimbault 4s. 0d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ITALIAN SONGS.
Ah! sotto sotti. Melodia ... ... F. Lablache, 3s. 0d.
Ch, que je t'aime! Melodie (sung by Giuglini) ... F. Lablache, 3s. 0d.
Lilia! ... ... F. Lablache, 3s. 0d.
Il mio cuore sempre Gingilli ... ... Virginia Gabriel 3s. 0d.
Il Re dei Gondolieri ... ... Virginia Gabriel 3s. 0d.
Ah! non credea by Mdme. Alboni ... ... Arranged by Rimbault 4s. 0d.
Ah! non credea by Mdlle. Titiens ... ... Arranged by Rimbault 4s. 0d.
Bohemian Reminiscence ... ... G. Murzard, 3s. 0d.
Serenata (sung by Giuglini) ... ... G. Murzard, 3s. 0d.
Serenata (sung by Mdlle. Titiens) ... ... G. Murzard, 3s. 0d.
Serenata (sung by Mdme. Rudersdorff) ... G. Murzard, 3s. 0d.
Serenata (sung by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby) ... G. Murzard, 3s. 0d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

GRETTON'S PIANOFORTE WORKS, Rode and Blumenthal, 2s.; Dr. Hemy-Sans, 6s.; Dr. Wallerstein, Thalberg, and Osborne, 3s.; Kuhe, Brissac, Tedesco, Fagus, &c., 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE and WOOD 201 Regent-street.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE PETIT JOIE. One of the most recent and successful pieces by the celebrated Pianoforte Virtuoso. 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S UNE PERLE DE PARADIS. A most original and admirable piece. "Elegant, graceful, and effective."—Vide Press. 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ECLIENNE. Played by the Composer at his pianoforte recitals at the Crystal Palace to overflowing audiences. 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE JET D'EAU Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace with immense applause. One of the most popular pieces of the day. Price 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FAIRY WHISPERS. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A remarkable and effective piece. "Elegant and graceful."—Vide Press. 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MORNING DEWDROPS, played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace with immense applause. "Elegant, graceful, and effective."—Vide Press. 4s.—ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DEUXIEME LA SAUTERELLE. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A thoroughly vigorous, dashing, brilliant, and telling piece. 4s.—ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE CŒUR. Played by the Composer at his pianoforte recitals at the Crystal Palace. A spirited, exhilarating, and extremely popular piece. "Elegant, graceful, and effective."—Vide Press. 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MASANIELLO. A clever, bright, attractive piece for the Piano, on the best Airs in Auber's popular Opera. "Elegant and effective."—Vide Press. 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

KUHE'S PLOUGH OF LOVE. A most charming and beautiful song, sung by Madame Lemaire's beautiful melody. 3s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

BOYTON SMITH'S NEW SONG, BIRD OF THE WILDERNESS. Sung by Madame Lemaire. A most beautiful words this is considered to be immensurably the best. Price 3s. 6d.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING, GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Mdlle. Parepa at the Crystal Palace and other Concerts with immense success. 3s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S popular Song and Grand Galop, "One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season."—Illustrated London News. 3s. each.
ADDISON and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

MDME. LIND-GOLDSCHMIDT, MDME. SAINTON-DOLBY, VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S New and Popular Songs, at C. LONSDALE'S Musical Circulating Library, 26, Old Bond-street. Music at Half-price. Catalogues gratis.

MDLLE. ADELINA PATTI'S NEW SONG, "Sing me a Merry Lay," composed for her by LAURTON WILLIAMS, and sung with immense success at the Crystal Palace, Feb. 21, 1863, and at Tottenham-court-road.

"THE BIRD AND THE STREAMLET," new Song, by LAURTON WILLIAMS. Just published. Sung with great success by Mdlle. Parepa at the Crystal Palace.
W. WILLIAMS and Co., 201, Tottenham-court-road.

NEW MUSIC.

CLARIBEL'S SONGS.—"I CLARIBEL" (L'Absence) is the name given, unnamed, to her publications by a lady well known in society, and highly distinguished as an accomplished musician. She has given to the public a number of vocal pieces, all marked by literary taste in the choice of the poetry, the gift of melody, and the command of skill in the musical art.—Daily News.

CLARIBEL.—JANET'S CHOICE and JANET'S BRIDAL. Two songs sung by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby and Miss Poyntz. 3s. each. Many thousands have been sold of these ballads.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—FIVE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING. The most popular of all this Author's songs. Sung in the concerts of Mdme. Lemaire. 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—THE TWO NESTS. A beautiful little song for the present season. Very popular. Illustrated by the Author. 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—YOU AND I. Sung with immense success by Mdme. Novra. The most popular tenor song of the year. Price 3s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' MUSICAL LIBRARY.—Every Saturday, Boosey's Journal receives a monthly Series Volume of Illustrated Music, and has the use of twelve pieces of Music, full size, from the Catalogue of the Library. Subscribers at One Guinea have the use of four pieces. Full particulars from M. Holles-street.

THALBERG'S ART OF SINGING APPLIED TO THE PIANO. Cheap Edition of the Six Favourite Numbers as performed at the Anchorage Concerts. With Introduction and Coda, composed by THALBERG. This invaluable Work should be in the hands of all pianists. Price 3s. 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

Published every Saturday, price One Penny,
THE WEEKLY CONCERTINIST. Offer 15, Beaufort-buildings, Strand.

Published every Saturday, price One Penny,
THE WEEKLY VOCALIST. Offer 15, Beaufort-buildings, Strand.

Published every Saturday, price One Penny,
THE WEEKLY PIANIST. Offer 15, Beaufort-buildings, Strand.

NOTICE.—HALF-PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage-stamps. Catalogues gratis.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

ANOTHER GREAT SUCCESS.
COOTE'S ROULETTE GALOP. Price 3s. net.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S COLOGNE QUADRILLES. Illustrated with Portraits of Miss Alleyne, splendidly executed. Price 4s. net.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S PRINCESS ALEXANDRA WALTZ. Price 4s., illustrated with a splendid Portrait of Her Consort, respectfully inscribed to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bondstreet.

The Latest Incitements.
COOTE'S QUADRILLES, Illustrated. Price 4s. Sole or Duet. One of this Composer's happiest, most sparkling and dansante productions.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-st.

The best set of Lancers are
COOTE'S CURE LANCERS. Price 4s. Illustrated with Portraits of Miss Poole, Miss Poyntz, "Ever by Daily is the Morning." "The Cure," and other popular Airs. A most merry set. Dance-music unsurpassed. Orchestra without Horns. Always redemanded.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S VILLAGE-BELLS POLKA. Price 4s. net. One of the very best Polkas published, and well suited in popularity the celebrated "Great Eastern," by the same Composer.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Continued Success.
TINNEY'S SONGS OF THE WOOD VALE. Price 3s. Sole or Duet. Performed by all the Bands in the United Kingdom. Illustrated with Portraits of the Composer.

BUCKLEY'S BEAUTIFUL SONG.
COME WHERE THE MOONBEAMS LOVE. Price 3s. net. The melody is simple and beautiful.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW BALLAD.
SIGHING FOR THE LOVE. By F. BUCKLEY, Price 3s. 6d., is exceedingly pretty.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SUNG BY WAMBOLD, ALWAYS REDEMANDED.
I WAIT TO HEAR THY SWEET GOOD NIGHT. Price 3s. net. Lady Sing. Price 3s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

An exquisite Morceau.
KUHE'S SERENADE MOONBEAMS. Price 4s. net. The most favourite piece by this celebrated Pianoforte Composer. Price 4s. net.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

ENGLAND AND DENMARK. Mazurka de Salon. By C. M. LUTHER. Price 4s. Beautifully Illustrated with Coloured Portraits.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD'S Pianofortes, 201, Regent-street. Sole Agents.
The largest in Europe.
Every Instrument warranted for Five Years, at least equal to the Instruments of any other Maker, and in most cases specially manufactured from the stock.
Pianofortes by all the eminent English, Continental, and American Manufacturers, for Sale or Hire.

EASY TERMS OF PURCHASE.—CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD have made arrangements for the Purchase of PIANOFORTE by INSTALMENTS. Terms may be known on application at 201, Regent-street, W.

CRAMER'S ENGLISH PIANETTE, Cramer, Beale, and Wood's manufacture, the best small Instrument. It has all the qualities of the best Pianoforte—thus producing a full musical tone—and is, in fact, a Pianoforte in miniature. In proceeding on this Pianoforte the fingers of the player will not be raised above the level of the keys. The Pianette is 3 feet 3 inches high, 2 feet 6 inches wide, and 1 foot 6 inches deep. Rosewood, walnut, or ebonized.
Particulars are particularly requested to observe that this instrument has not the common or single scale, but the double or check action, by which the repetition of the notes is instantaneous, and the touch elastic.

THALBERG'S GRAND PIANOFORTES. These magnificent Instruments, manufactured by Messrs. J. and C. Pleyel, of Paris, from the designs of THALBERG, have been purchased by CRAMER and CO., and are universally admired for the fine, pure, and sympathetic quality of their tone, and the remarkable facility of touch adapted to any extraordinary force in all their peculiar excellencies; this tone has great volume, together with brilliancy and delicacy of quality. The same are without and rosewood. Price, 370 and 410 guineas.

ERARD'S GRAND PIANOFORTES.—Only to be had of CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, who have been appointed Sole Agents to the eminent firm of ERARD, of Paris, and CO.'S Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANOFORTE.—A PIANOFORTE GUITARE PIANOFORTE, in solid mahogany, with metallic bearings and all other appliances necessary to resist the effect of various climates, can be obtained only of CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street. The mechanism of the instruments as well as the case has been secured by Patent, and the Pianofortes are guaranteed to stand in any climate. Lists of prices may be had on application, and the Indian Government and other recommendations for their excellent quality of tone as well as their durability.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANOFORTE.—A PIANOFORTE GUITARE PIANOFORTE, in solid mahogany, with metallic bearings and all other appliances necessary to resist the effect of various climates, can be obtained only of CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street. The mechanism of the instruments as well as the case has been secured by Patent, and the Pianofortes are guaranteed to stand in any climate. Lists of prices may be had on application, and the Indian Government and other recommendations for their excellent quality of tone as well as their durability.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANOFORTE.—A PIANOFORTE GUITARE PIANOFORTE, in solid mahogany, with metallic bearings and all other appliances necessary to resist the effect of various climates, can be obtained only of CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street. The mechanism of the instruments as well as the case has been secured by Patent, and the Pianofortes are guaranteed to stand in any climate. Lists of prices may be had on application, and the Indian Government and other recommendations for their excellent quality of tone as well as their durability.

BOUDOIR GRANDS, at 75 Guineas—capital instruments, extremely durable, and possessing a very superior quality of tone; manufactured by Tschir, of Leipsic, and Imported by CHAMBERS, Sole Agent, 20, C.S. Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 201, Regent-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES.—A great number of Instruments by Broadwood, Collard, and Erard, formerly equal to new, at £25, £30, £40, and £50.
CHAMBERS, 307 and 309, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S HARMONIUMS, as manufactured by the inventor of the Harmonium, M. Debain, of Paris, received the Prize Medal and the very highest recommendation. Those Instruments are now Imported by CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street, who have also in stock, for immediate delivery, a full, musical tone, quite strong enough to fill the largest drawing-room, and yet not too powerful for a small room, in Rosewood, Walnut, and Oak Cases, at prices as small as could be asked for Instruments of inferior quality. The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, Dec. 13, 1862, says:—"The Harmoniums of Messrs. Cramer, Beale, and Wood are without a rival."—Boosey and Sons, 24, Holles-street, London.

EVANS'S ENGLISH HARMONIUMS, International Exhibition Prize Medal. These Instruments are manufactured in various sizes, and are sold at prices from 12 to 140 guineas.
BOOSEY and CREWS, 30, Holles-street, London.

CASE'S ENGLISH CONCERTINAS. These well-known Instruments, which still maintain their high character for superiority of tone, touch, and workmanship, are sold by all Musicsellers, and wholesale by the Manufacturers,
BOOSEY and CREWS, Manufacturers, 24, Holles-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO (the very Pianette to which the Prize Medal was awarded), a very elegant Pianoforte, of small size, the full compass, check action, and of the best workmanship throughout, in Rosewood, Walnut, or Oak Case, &c. Warranted to keep in tune, and to be the best and cheapest Pianoforte ever offered to the public under one hundred guineas.
Prize, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 35 and 36 guineas. A great variety of other Pianofortes.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S NEW TWENTY-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, with check action, in French mahogany case, and full compass. This Pianoforte, which is a wonder of cheapness, is perfection as a foreign factory, expressly built with the view of meeting a ready demand for a Pianoforte of this class. Every note it has its very best check action, the full compass; its tone is a vast improvement on that of the usual class of Pianofortes at this price, and it is warranted to stand in any climate.
CHAPPELL and Co. expressly recommend this Pianoforte as superior in all respects to second-hand Pianofortes of seven years' use, frequently offered to the public for 30 guineas, and to be the best Pianoforte ever produced at twenty guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ENGLISH MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE.—In consequence of the great success of the Foreign Pianoforte, CHAPPELL and CO. have built a Pianoforte of the same size, but entirely English, at a moderate price. The action is of the same simple description as the above makers', the touch elastic, and especially adapted to the country, where the more complicated actions are objectionable on many of the grounds. The workmanship and tone of this Pianoforte are of the highest order. Price, in rosewood or oak cases, 40 guineas; in walnut, 42 guineas.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and ERARD, The best Pianofortes of every description, including all the newest improvements, for SALE or HIRE, on the most liberal terms, and the exact terms which system of purchase at the new Showrooms of CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE in rosewood case, full compass, and check action, 40 guineas. This instrument has three strings and the richest grand compass of tone. The case is manufactured by the best French makers under the greatest amount of wear, and to stand perfectly in any climate. The touch is elastic, and the repetition very rapid. The workmanship is of the highest order, and the Pianoforte has been imported at the same price. Every instrument will be warranted, and the system of check action is the same as in the Grand Pianofortes.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ERARD'S NEW BOUDOIR GRAND PIANOFORTE, at 120 guineas, having been now brought to perfection, and the most complete adaptation of the CHAPPELL and CO.'S 80, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES.
CHAPPELL and CO. have a great number of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, ERARD, &c., at very reduced prices. Also, new Instruments of every description, at CHAPPELL and Co.'s Pianoforte Gallery.

PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The largest Stock in London, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c., for SALE or HIRE.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

A LEXANDRE'S DRAWING-ROOM MODEL HARMONIUM, for the CHURCH, 13 stops, 4 rows of vibrators, knee-swell, and percussive tone, in handsome case of oak, fast, in oak case, 21 guineas. A large assortment may be always seen at CHAPPELL and Co.'s Pianoforte Gallery.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

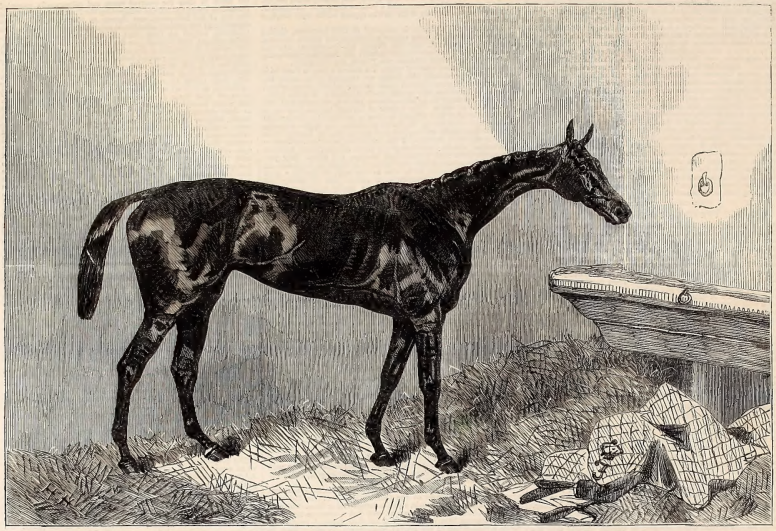
THE SICILIANA FLUTE.—Old System of Boehm.—These celebrated Instruments, manufactured in silver, are now made manufactured, at private varying from £6 to 18 guineas. The ALBION SILVER FLUTE, Boehm-system, from whom detailed price-lists may be obtained.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ANTOINE CORNET-A-PISTONS.—These celebrated Instruments, used by every performer of eminence, are kept in stock by CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street, from whose price-lists and Circulars they may be selected.

PIANOFORTES, New and Secondhand, by Broadwood, Collard, Kirkman and Co., for SALE or HIRE, at MOORE, CREW, HUTCHINGS, and SCOTT'S Pianoforte Rooms, No. 16 and 88, New Bond-street (late of Beak-street).

KIRKMAN'S celebrated TRICHORD PIANOFORTES, of every description, for SALE or HIRE, at MOORE, CREW, HUTCHINGS, and SCOTT'S Pianoforte Rooms, No. 16 and 88, New Bond-street (late of Beak-street).

PLANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and CO.'S PIANETTES are very superior to the French. Their Pianofortes, in all the varieties of construction, are the choicest of the exhibition in their friends, and give universal satisfaction. Cash prices, 20 guineas and upwards. Drawing-room cases, in plain woods, cheaper, warehoused.—151, Regent-street (the only address).



QUEEN BERTHA, WINNER OF THE OAKS.

JOHN SCOTT is seldom so dangerous as when he is least feared, and this year it was supposed that he had never brought a weaker team to Leatherhead. The form which the stable showed in the Derby was not encouraging, and as the trial seemed to say that Amelia was the best of the Whitewall Oaks trio, Queen Bertha started with scarcely a backer at 50 to 1. This mare, which is the property of Lord Falmouth, is a fine-looking bay, about sixteen hands high and very deep in her fore ribs, good in her shoulders, and with great propelling power. She is by Kingston (the sire of last year's Derby winner) from Flax, and started four times in 1862—twice at Doncaster, where she was third to Coritha and Lord Clifden, Bohemia separating her from them in both races. At the Second October she was third again to Tom Pool and Automaton in a large field for the Prendergast Stakes, and won her maiden race (£300) in the Houghton Meeting, against Blue Mantle and Falcon. The ill-luck which generally befalls the favourites had the effect of bringing out twenty starters (the largest number since 1848) for the Oaks, and nothing but the most beautifully-timed rush on the part of Aldcroft won the race in the very last stride. Marigold, ridden by Doyle (who was third for the Derby), just beat Vivid a head for second place, and Charles Marlow (the well known jockey at the Flying Dutchman and Van Tromp) was placed fourth on Isolier, the property of Mr. Thomas Parr, with whom he now lives to ride gallops and trials. Lady Augusta, the favourite, was only sixth, and Old Orange Girl fifth, while Amelia was "nowhere." John Scott had won the Oaks six times previously, with his own, Queen Mary, Brocklesby, Blink Bonny, Jacmel, Industry, Glumera, Iris, and Marchioness for four separate employers. Aldcroft has now won all the three great races, and was also on Globetrotter in her Oaks dead heat with Governess. Lord Falmouth ran third for his race last year with Wingrave, the winner of the One Thousand, and has the same quite his share of luck, considering the short time he has been on the turf. His mare is entered in the Ascot Derby of 1865, the Select Stakes of Newmarket (5th and 6th), the Ascot Triennial and Biennial, the Yorkshire Oaks (5th, extra), and the St. Leger. The Sporting Gazette says that "it is remarkable singular that the Derby and Oaks should be carried off by two friends, who rent a house at Newmarket between them: and it is still more remarkable that the landlord, determined to let the sporting world know 'which way the wind blew,' listed both the weathercock at the top pointed in Mammon and Queen Bertha's colours." Our Engraving is from a sketch by Mr. Harry Hall, of Newmarket.

OPENING OF THE NEW PIER AT BLACKPOOL, LANCASHIRE: THE PROCESSION RETURNING FROM THE PIER—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE OPENING OF BLACKPOOL PIER.

THE promenade pier at Blackpool, Lancashire, was opened on Thursday week with considerable ceremony. Shortly after one hour in the morning the trains, both ordinary and special, discharged large numbers of visitors, and by noon, when the proceedings of the day may be said to have commenced, the number of persons on the little short of 20,000. The appearance of the town itself was as gay as any festival could make it. Streamers, flags, and banners were hung out the thoroughfares, the shops were closed, and every one appeared to join in the day's festivities. The pier itself and its approaches formed one of the great points of attraction. The ceremony of opening the pier began with a procession, which represented all the local interests of the town. The marching of the procession commenced about two hours, and, after passing through the chief streets and round the pier, arrived opposite the Clifton Arms Hotel, on the Lytham Road, the chairman of the pier company, said that the pleasing duty devolved upon him, on behalf of the directors of the Blackpool Pier Company, formally to open the undertaking which they commenced last year. The crowd gave several hearty cheers, and the demonstration was terminated by a salvo of artillery.

A dejeûner was afterwards served in the Clifton Hotel, to which at 4 o'clock persons sat down. Mr. Preston occupied the chair, and after a few speeches from him and other gentlemen, the proceedings terminated.

The pier is an elegant structure, and while it possesses a lightness of appearance which might at first sight lead to the belief that such an expensive structure, the usage it has already undergone is sufficient to justify the belief that neatness and lightness are not its only attributes. It possesses an approach, 600 feet in length, 30 feet long and 45ft. wide, and the main portion is 1070 ft. long and 28ft. wide, giving a total length of 1405ft., available as a promenade. About fifty yards, including the head of the pier, are still unfinished. When the whole is completed, the pier will have a handsome pavilion, landing-stages, with flights of steps 10ft. wide, and an easy incline, so that passengers may land and embark at all stages of the tide. The whole of the structure rests upon 1050 cast-iron screws, fixed by means of screws. The first of these columns was raised in May, last year, after waiting for the unfavourable weather to have compressed for a time but slowly. It was probably fortunate that this was so, for the storms which succeeded the erection of the first structure was being erected at too low a level. The shareholders profited by this salutary lesson, and in November held a special meeting, at which it was determined that the pier be 2ft. higher than was originally contemplated. This alteration involved an extra cost of £3000, but was carried out without at all endangering the strength of the structure. The piles are massive as well as numerous, and form in this strength accommodation of promenaders. As the head of the pier stands not less than 60 ft. above low water of spring tides, a special flight of steps to give it additional strength. Upon the main portion of the pier are erected several shelters and ornamental houses, of an octagonal shape, which are placed on side projections and destroy the stiff and monotonous appearance which the long straight outline of the pier would otherwise present. The structure is provided with lamps from end to end, and the area which is afforded for promenading purposes is little under 30,000 square feet. The total weight of iron which has been used in the erection is 700 tons, 340 tons of which are wrought. It has been erected by a private company unassisted by local funds. The plans are by Mr. Eugenius Birch, of London, and the contractors are Messrs. R. Lucifer and Son, of Glasgow.

We are indebted for the sketch from which our Engraving is taken to Mr. W. Woods of Liverpool.

THE SPAHIS IN PARIS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

SPAHI, in Arabic sebehâki, signifies horseman. The first native horsemen regularly embodied in the service of France were incorporated by a Royal ordonnance in the year 1834, and were found so useful that, in 1840, all the native cavalry then in Algeria formed the corps of Spahis, belonging respectively to the provinces of Oran, Algiers, and Constantine. In 1845 two more bodies of Spahis were organized as regiments—the 1st at Algiers, the 2nd at Oran, and the 3rd at Constantine. The detachment of fifty Spahis recently arrived in Paris, and the first visitor from the Queen of Oude, au-pièce belong to the 3rd Regiment, successively commanded by General Bosquet, General Walsin Esterhazy, and Colonel Yusuf. Paris de Clam, who kindly placed some of his men at the disposition of Ed. Delessert, the artist, and Eugène Fromentin, for their valuable and learned information than my space will permit me to avail myself of.

Since their formation a vast number of superior officers have served in the regiments of Spahis, besides those just mentioned—Generals Durieu, d'Allonville, Desvaux, Yusuf, Fleury, Lebreton, Randon, and many others of great note, together with a swarm of subsequent colonels of distinction. The late Abd-el-Kader was himself for a time a lieutenant in the Constantine regiment.

The most striking and distinguishing colour of the Spahi's burnous was green; but as far back as 1845 that garment was set aside for a burnous of red cloth lost over a wider lining of white Arabian tissue, thrown over the shoulder with picturesque effect. The costume is completed by light blue Arabian breeches, with a black stripe; a blue waistcoat embroidered with black cord and a light blue vest, or scarlet woollen sash of from six to eight yards in length; and an Arabian vest of dyed cloth, also trimmed with black braid. The species of turban which serve as their headdress is a most complicated article, and varies according to the corps or grade to which they belong. A rope of camel hair, and is surrounded by a woollen cord distinguishing, by its colour, the squadron to which the particular Spahi belongs. The Spahi wear red morocco leggings, which fit close to the foot, then draw the Arab shoes, replaced, when on horseback, by plaited morocco boots without heels, thus permitting the foot to be thrust well home to the peculiar form of the Arabian stirrup. The spurs are adapted to the foot by means of two bands of morocco, similarly arranged to the leather bands employed for attaching skates. The dress of the native officers, who are not allowed to attain a rank higher than that of lieutenant, closely resembles that of the troopers, the only difference being in the superior richness of the braiding.

The dress of the French officers consists of a wide, light-blue, plaited gaberdine with a red stripe, a deep red spencer trimmed with black braid and fastened with silver-shaped buttons. Their headdress is a simple light-blue képi, ornamented with gilt braid.

The Spahis are armed with a pistol, worn at the waist; a sword suspended horizontally to the saddle-bow, and passing under the left leg of the mounted horseman; and a carbine slung over the shoulder. When on parade the butt of the carbine reposes on the right thigh of the horseman.

Each regiment of Spahis is composed of 1200 horsemen, divided into six squadrons. Each squadron has there are two French captains, one French lieutenant, and two French sub-lieutenants; also one native lieutenant and two sub-lieutenants: the remainder are composed pretty equally divided between the French and the Arabs.

Unlike the Turcos, some of whom are also on a visit to Paris with a view to improvement, the Spahis are recruited from among the aristocracy of Algeria: each of them has the honour of possessing a gentleman, and every one of them is the son of a chief. Some of them are also heads of families. A single Spahi, therefore, represents on an average seven persons, and possesses about a dozen head of cattle. The honour of serving in the ranks of so much sought after that a Spahi desirous of selling his position would easily obtain for it 1000 francs. The ordinary pay of a private soldier to mount horse night and day, without ever making an inquiry either as to the state of the weather or the condition, or as to the direction to be taken. During their absence the khamme, or servitors, continue to cultivate their land, protect their families, and defend their property. The khammes are the Spahi's natural accessory of purpose and irreproachable character, to be able to ride well, to furnish a good horse, to prove the possessor of a certain sum of money and number of cattle, and to belong to a family well regarded in the country. The greatest part of the khammes are persons in good extraction. Their mission is especially a civilizing one; and, as a recompense for their services, the Imperial authorities grant to each Spahi a certain quantity of land on the frontier; for this by them and by their khammes that the French Government expect to be able to maintain peace to the eastern and south-eastern limits of their land, &c. Their influence has already succeeded in inducing the cultivation of cotton, flax, and hemp, which the Arab-led-by part of the population, on returning to their tents after a year's service, will be able to sow in numerous localities. Already they have written to tell of the care and attention of which they have been the objects. Grave and reserved, the Spahis, in the eyes of many Arabs, have the reputation of being too fond of but little interest in what they see; but they have expressed to Jules Favre their admiration and astonishment at the wonders of Paris. Faithful observers of their religious law, the Spahis, on the day of their arrival in the capital, preferred to remain fasting than to partaking of meat killed in a manner not altogether in conformity with the prescriptions of Mahomet. The words of the Koran had indeed been explained by their Colonel while the sheep were killing, but it was not one of the faithful who had held the knife. The next day, a Friday, the Spahis, in the Champs Elysées, slaughtered the sheep with due ceremonial at the abattoir.

The Spahis are installed, with their excellent horses (their own property), in the barracks on the Quai d'Orsay, near the Tuileries. They are lodged in the French style, although few of them had ever before slept in a bed. The commissariat, as well as the whole of the military purposes have been provided for their personal comfort, to which a corps of cooks, who accompanied them from Algeria, will continue their arab cuisine, will also contribute. To the wives of the Spahis, left behind in the douars, a certain portion of money is remitted every month for their temporary requirements.

The French and Arab officers of the Spahis live together at the mess of the Gendarmerie de la Garde Impériale.

THE RUSSIAN IRON-CLAD BATTERY, PERVENETZ.

GREAT interest was excited at Blackwall on Monday week by the launch, at the Thames Iron and Shipbuilding Works, of the second armour-clad turret-floating battery, built by these celebrated constructors for the Russian Government, and named the Pervenetz. The Pervenetz is a steam-propelled iron-clad ram battery of thirty guns, in structure similar to the Warrior and Black Prince, but smaller; but, instead of the beautiful bow of the n-ble ship just mentioned, she is built with a form of stem which closely resembles the snout of the hideous caiman, giving the vessel a most formidable and formidable appearance, the hawser-holes being painted, after the Chinese fashion, to resemble eyes. The bow is also armed with a ram, and the stern, and the armour carried back so as completely to protect the screw and rudder. The hull is built of iron, and is divided into forty-seven degrees, and completely covered from stem to stern with 4½in. plates, backed by teak, and these by iron plates 9in. thick, which descend throughout to 5ft. below her load-line, and she launched half-covered with them. Her length between the perpendiculars is 225 ft., and 235 ft. 6in. over all; her tonnage, burden in tons, 2812, builders' measurement. The engines, of 300-horse nominal power, will be launched by Messrs. Penn, Maudslay, and Field, of their patented three-cylinder principle, super-heated and surface-condensing, and with all the latest improvements attached. Her armament will consist of twenty-eight 68-pounders on the main deck, the ports 6ft. 6 in. clear of the water-line, and on the upper deck, carried by the sponsons, will be mounted two 9-inch guns, which descend throughout to 5

MUSIC.

Another addition has been made to the company of HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE in the person of Signor Saraglì, who made his début on Tuesday in the character of Edgardo in "Lucia di Lammermoor." He is a young performer of considerable merit; handsome in face and figure, with an easy and graceful manner, and a tenor voice of much sweetness, though not sufficiently powerful for so arduous a part. He was favourably received; but his reception would be warmer were he to confine himself to characters more suitable to his means. As Arturo, for instance, in the "Puritani," Elvino in the "Sonnambula," or Lionel in "Martha," he could scarcely fail, we think, of complete success.

The first of the performances at DRURY LANE, for the benefit of MR. LUMLEY, took place on Monday evening. The theatre was crowded to overflowing, and the boxes and stalls were filled with the most fashionable company in London. Our old favourite, Piccolomini, now the lion of the season, who had come all the way from Florence to assist her former manager, was welcomed by the audience with acclamations. She is altered in her respects: she has grown stout, a plumpness does no harm to her figure; her voice is as brilliant and beautiful as ever, and her acting and singing as captivating as ever. The opera was the "Traviata," the piece which first introduced her to the acquaintance of the English public. It was admirably performed, the characters of Alfredo and the older Germont being sustained by Giuglini and Delle Sedie.

On the same evening the "Prophète" was performed at the ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA for the first time this season. The parts were cast in the same manner as last year, and the performance had all the splendour and magnificence with which it has always been clothed at this theatre.

On Friday last "Martha" was repeated at the same theatre, with Mdlle. Fiorelli (instead of Mdlle. Dem) in the character of the heroine. This lady was not remarkably happy either in singing or acting the part, but she sang exquisitely, and was most vehemently applauded in the famous Irish melody "Last rose of summer," and also in the spinning-wheel quartet, both of which were encored. The house was full, and the Prince and Princess of Wales, with the Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary, were present.

The Second Concert of the ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC took place at the Hanover Square Rooms. There was a large audience, and the various performances were on the whole satisfactory, placing our national Conservatoire in a very favourable light. The first part of the concert consisted of a selection from the "Jessonda" of Spohr, which included several of the finest morceaux of that beautiful opera. The solo parts were sung by Miss Westbrook, Miss Enwright, Mr. Prentice, Mr. T. Smith, and Mr. Wells, all of whom acquitted themselves admirably. The choruses were deficient in weight, and were sometimes quite overpowered by the weight of the instrumental orchestra. Two pretty part-songs, "Come, follow me," composed by Miss Arabella Goddard, and "Come, Anna, come," by Mr. Arthur Fox, both studbats, gave a very favourable impression of their talents. Mr. Ralph, a young and promising violinist, played the first movement of Spohr's fine concerto in G in a manner which did him great credit. Mr. Walbeln performed a capriccio and tarantella for the piano, with orchestral accompaniments composed by himself, in a style deserving the warm applause which he received. The concert was conducted by Sir Charles Lucas, the principal of the academy, with his usual care and ability.

On Friday last week Mr. OSCAR BLUE began a new series of pianoforte recitals at St. James's Hall. He performed a selection from the works of Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Scarlatti, Bach, Schubert, and Chopin, displaying with his masterly execution and purity of style for which he is so highly distinguished. The Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke of Hesse, and Baroness Mary of Cambridge honoured the performance with their presence.

The excellent and successful concerts of MR. HENRY LESLIE'S CHOIR seem to be a close for this season. The last concert was given on Thursday week, when the sixth and last of the series was given at St. James's Hall. The programmes was of a more miscellaneous character than usual, including not only sacred and secular choral pieces and part-songs, but airs for single voice, and instrumental pieces. The solo singers were Mdlle. Parepa and Mr. Sims Reeves, and several pieces on the pianoforte were played by Mdme. Arabella Goddard. Such variety of fare is very acceptable, as it no doubt proves attractive to a popular audience; but in concerts of so high an order we confess that we prefer greater unity of design and a more distinct purpose.

To the list of eminent vocal performers engaged for the WORCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL, when we mentioned last week, the names of MDLLE. PICCOLOMINI and MISS ALICE PHILLIPS are to be added. These young ladies, the daughters of Mr. Henry Phillips, have, it will be remembered, made several distinguished appearances this season.

THE THEATRES.

SURREY.—On Saturday this house opened, under the management of Mr. Henry Pitt, for a summer season, with Mr. Jackson's popular drama of "Peep o'Day; or, Savourneen Deelish." At the end, with one exception, the same cast as at DRURY LANE performance after no special remark. Miss Margaret Wilton, as Mary Grace, was satisfactory as a representative of the lady heroine; and Mr. Cleveland, as Kavanagh's sister, acted with her usual power. The piece has been placed on the stage with its melodramatic accessories and some fine scenery; and the pathetic, the humorous, and the vigorous in the drama have full justice done them in the representation. At the conclusion Mr. Lumley was enthusiastically called for, and responded to the appeal of the audience.

NEW ADELPHI.—A new burlesque was produced on Thursday week. It is entitled "The Ill-Treated Ill Treveria," and is from the pen of Mr. H. J. Byron. The spectator will find in it what he will naturally look for from the author—a abundance of humour and of word-torturing, with an interesting sprinkle of well-managed parodies. He will also be agreeably surprised to find that the music of Mr. Meyer Lutz (Saxon and Carey) whose vocal powers are elaborately and pleasingly exerted in the parts of Leonora and Maurice. Mr. Poole, as the grim old seneschal, Ancona, has a great part, which he supported with all his skill and power, singing, dancing, and going mad in the most approved style. The scenery and dresses are all that can be indisputable. It was preceded by "Angel or Devil," in which Miss Amelia Jones performed the heroine, and which met with a considerable amount of success.

HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS.—On Monday Mr. Henry Nicholls, the Shakspearian reader, solicited an extraordinary hearing under the title of "Recitals from the Recent Poets and Humourists," and was much and deservedly applauded by a numerous and fashionable audience. His selections consisted of two poems by Hood—"Miss Kilmansegg" and "The Dessert-boy"—two by Ingoldsby—"Sir Rupert the Fearless" and "The Lord of Thunderden"—two by Tennyson—"Locksley Hall" and "Lady Clara Vere de Vere;" with Macaulay's "Armada," and Poe's "Bells." All these were given from memory with a precision and effect that were marvellous, and Mr. Nicholls preserved the fine tone of his voice throughout.

The King of the Belgians has sent the Grand Cordon of the Order of Leopold to the Queen of Spain.

At a full fight at Madrid, on the 18th, the celebrated toreador known as El Toto received a rather severe wound in the breast from the horn of one of the bulls.

John C. Whyte, Esq. (of the Irish Bar), police magistrate at Hong Kong, has been appointed Acting Judge of that colony during the absence of the Chief Justice.

Mr. Dunlop, her Majesty's Consul in Crete, has been appointed Consul at Cairo; and Mr. F. Drummond Hay, Consul at Cairo, to be Consul in Crete. Mr. Russell, third Secretary at Berlin, has been promoted to be second Secretary at Stockholm. Mr. G. Lenox Conyngham, third Secretary at the Hague, and lately attached to Mr. Elliot's special mission to Greece, has been appointed a third Secretary at the Embassy at Berlin. Mr. Edmund Douglas Veitch Fane, Attaché to her Majesty's Legation at Tehran, is to be a Third Secretary in her Majesty's diplomatic service.

COLUMN FOR THE CURIOUS.

RESTORATION festivities, or celebrations of the Restoration of Charles II. (May 29), are now few and far between. Royal oak may be here and there seen upon this silver cup, and rums thirty years ago the decoration of Dundrill's tomb, at St. Giles'-in-the-Fields, was revived. In the boys' town at Norwood the commemoration is more generally observed than in any other place. Miss Baker felt so much a feeling of gratitude to Charles II., who contributed 1000 tons of timber out of Whitewood Forest, and remitted the duty of shipmoney in Northampton for seven years, towards the rebuilding of the town, after the destructive fire in 1675, that a statue of the "Merry Monarch" is placed on the portico of All Saints' Church, is enveloped in oakboughs on this day, and the sons of the villagers decorate their houses with branches of oak, which children also carry about in their hands. In Devonshire, too, the children have, or recently had, their "Royalist holiday." In such a manner, at all events, stood in remainder Charles II., was carried about in a cart. The religious observance of the 29th of May has been continued these five years; and the House of Commons is no longer represented at church by its officers and some half-dozen members. It is true that we have one of Boscobel oaks left in Hyde Park, and Restoration dinners are given in the halls of City companies on May 29 to keep green the memory of Charles II., who dined with the citizens oftener than any other Monarch. This brings us to the subject of our illustration—a clared cup, bearing the portrait of Charles II., which, though rudely painted, was doubtless added to commemorate his restoration. This cup is itself such a memorial at his other grant, signs with chased scorns, which Pepys gave to the Clothworkers' Company in the year of his mastership, 1677; but to the collector of "cups and pans" this claret-cup is more precious, perhaps, if carries us back to the festivities of the Restoration Day itself, when bonfires blazed in Cheapside, Fleet-street, and the Strand; "the bells rang," as Evelyn tells us, "and the churches were ringing; rumps of beef were roasted in the streets; the butchers at the Maypole in the Strand rang a peal with their knives," when "the wayes were strewed with flowers, the streetes hung with tapistry, fountaines running with wine;" and when John Evelyn stood in the Strand with "a great bonfire before his door, and his wine-pots, of which the accompanying is a specimen, are mostly dated: some commemorate the Martyr, as the claret of Charles I., and are the productions of a colony of Dutch potters, who settled at Fulham and at Lambeth early in the seventeenth century. There pots bear the names of "Sack," "Claret," and "White," with the dates inscribed in blue. Marryatt, in his work on Pottery and Porcelain, mentions, among the Lambeth potters, Thomas Elers, who settled at Lambeth at Strawberry Hill, 1646; another in the Norwich Museum, 1648; and one Dwight, who was at Fulham Pottery in 1668. The specimen here engraved is in the possession of Mr. Thomas D. Scott, and was discovered many years since in an old house at Lambeth, the seat of the pottery; the pot with the portrait of Charles II. is very rare. This mode of commemorating Royal personages appears to have been in fashion formerly than in the present day. Before us is a Worcester specimen, nearly of the form of Charles's claret-jug, and bearing the head of Frederick the Great, dated 1767, fame, group of standards, &c., this being the year of Frederick's victories. Again, in 1805, we have exactly character in a memorial of Nelson, which we picked up the other day, an earthenware saucer, painted in blue, with a border of Grecian ornament, groups of anchors, &c., figures blowing shells, and "Trafalgar" on a ribbon, a pyramid, fortress, &c.—of Nelson's last victory. These homely commemoratives of the Restoration, of Nelson, and of others are beyond the nondescript groups which too often disfigure our pottery shops.

RESTORATION CLARET-POT.

Reverting to the Restoration dinners, we may observe that, in the present day, the custom is not always the same. Some dinners are abundance, through foreign cultivate, which not infrequently fail to produce a detached wheal-lock with an engraving of a mounted hunter, accompanied by his hounds and his foot servitor, about to discharge just such a pistol as one of those exhibited at a stag and hind which he had overtaken. The Archæological Institute, we perceive, will open to its members, from June 1 to June 13 inclusive, a special exhibition of sculptures in ivory—a branch of art ably illustrated a few years since by Mr. Digby Wyatt.

Every amplification of the personal history of our great epic poet Milton is read with interest. His garden-house, Aldersgate, was in existence but a few years since. It stood at the bottom of Lamb-alley, in Aldersgate-street; and Milton and his first wife resided here in the year 1641, rated in the books of the parish of St. Botolph Without, Aldersgate, to the poll-tax in the assessment of that year. Here he is returned to the Exchequer. Lamb-alley (now Maidenhead-court) runs through from opposite No. 159, Aldersgate-street, into Nicholl-square; and in the garden at the rear of No. 5 (old No. 4) of Shaftesbury's mansion—Nos. 37 and 38, Aldersgate-street—was the poet's "garden-house," or cottage, the walls, like the gateway, built with dark and stern. Here Milton was hidden from the fury of Charles II., and, no doubt, well provided for by his stanch friend—the proprietor the Earl of Bindfordbury Phillips, in his "Life of Milton," describes the garden-house as at the end of an entry; and there was formerly "a passage that found its way from the left-hand side of the court round this cottage into Wall-yard, which, upon the erection of the houses new Redcross-square, was closed up, but the site, without the line of the public, a footway was cut through the cottage for an entrance into Nicholl-square." Another interesting detail, derived from the parish books, have lately appeared in extenso in the City Press.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

LADY LECONFIELD.

The Right Hon. Mary Fanny, Lady Leconfield, whose sudden and lamented death occurred on the 22nd inst., at her town house, 4, Grosvenor-place, was the only daughter of the late Earl of Cornwallis, and was born in 1801, and was married on the 19th of April, 1825, to George Wyndham, present Lord Leconfield, who succeeded to the title on the Hon. Henry Wyndham, Captain in the Life Guards, and Hon. Percy Wyndham, M.P., and four daughters—viz., Fanny Charlotte, wife of Sir Stafford Northcote, Bart., and Sir H. C. Montgomery, Bart.; Lady Constance Elizabeth; Blanche Julia, Lady Neaz; and Constance Elizabeth, wife of Reginald Talbot, Esq., Member for South Pembrokeshire. The late daughter Caroline Sophia, wife of Colonel R. N. Fitzharding Kingscote, C.B., M.P., died on the 15th of March, 1862.

SIR CULLING R. EARDLEY, BART.

Sir Culling Eardley Eardley, Baronet, of Hadley, Middlesex, who died on the 31st inst., at his seat, Sedgwell Hall, near Bridgnorth, Shropshire, was the eldest son of Culling Smith, the second Baronet by his wife Elizabeth, daughter and coheir with her sisters, Lady Sage and Silo, and Mrs. Childers, of Yorkshire (formerly wife of Sir Gervase Clifton), and Lord Eardley—a title extinct in 1824. He was born April 21, 1805, and was educated at Eton, and Oriel College, Oxford, where he was second in classics in 1826. He succeeded his father, Sir Culling Smith, as third Baronet, June 30, 1839. He married, 1st, October 12, 1830, Sarah, eldest daughter of Sir Matthew Wilson, Bart., of Eshton, Northumberland, and by her (who was sister of the present Lord Eardley, and died in January 14, 1860) left, with two daughters—Frances Selina and Sarah Elizabeth—a son and heir, now Sir Eardley Culling Eardley Eardley, the fourth Baronet, who was born in 1838, and married, in 1859, Frederica, eldest daughter of Esq., of New Orleans. This family—first Lefevre, then Smith, and then Eardley—come from France. Sir Culling Eardley Eardley is Minister of the Church, a patron of eminence in mercantile affairs, and has been highly connected by marriage—Capt. with Dr. Simcox, Provost of Oriel College, Oxford, and the Lees of Lauriston; with the Wellesleys, Earls of Mornington; and with Henry, seventh Lord Cranstoun, and Lord Bernard, Sir Culling Smith, was created in 1802, and was grandfather of the Baronet just deceased.

The subscriptions to the Rhodes fund have enabled the committee to send £300 to her Britannic Majesty's Consul at Rhodes.

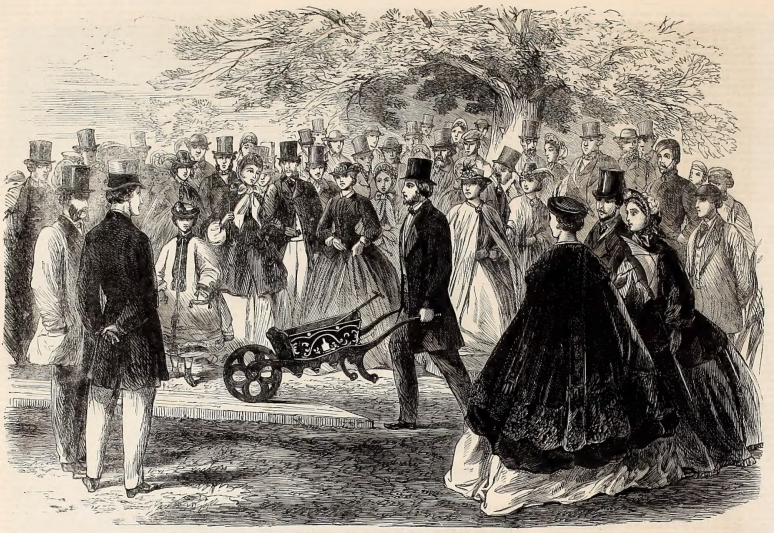
Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Elliot, K.C.B., has been appointed Governor of the Island of St. Helena.

CORK AND KINSALE AND WEST CORK RAILWAYS.

SATURDAY, the 16th inst., was marked by two events of great importance to the western part of the county of Cork—the opening for traffic of the Kinsale Junction Railway, and the opening of the first turf on the projected line from Bandon to Skibbereen. We take from the local papers some account of these interesting events, both of which are illustrated in our present Number.

A special train started from the Cork terminus of the Cork and Bandon Railway at half-past four in the afternoon. It consisted of a large number of carriages, containing the persons who had accepted the invitation of the directors to celebrate the day by their presence and approval. The train, having proceeded by the usual Cork and Bandon line of railway as far as Ballinhassig Junction, on the new Kinsale branch, which, with the exception of one or two short cuttings, affords a view on each side of the fine country through which it passes, the train rolled into the terminus at Kinsale a charming birdseye view of the town and harbour was obtained. The line terminates upon the brow of the hill, about north-east of the town, and from this point the town was seen picturesquely nestled in the deep valley formed by the surrounding hills. Beyond, and to the right towards the bay, the placid waters of the pretty harbour, while the opposite slope was studded with beautiful villas, and the ruins of Charles Fort crowned the terminus stands, the whole presented the aspect of a beautiful picture seen through the lens of a camera. The arrival of the train was hailed with cheers by the crowds of inhabitants who, town, who had turned out to welcome the excursionists, while with the firing of cannon from the Old Head of the South Abbey and Artillery Militia. Headed by this band, the party proceeded to the military barracks where a review of the 4th West York Militia and the artillery, commanded by Major Longfield, was held before Major-General Bloomfield. The guests next entered the town of Kinsale, the appearance of which at this time of the full sunlight from the hill on which the railway terminus and the military barracks are situated is very picturesque. The Imperial Hotel, which was most tastefully decorated for the occasion, an excellent dejeuner was provided. Addresses having been delivered by Major-General Bloomfield (vice-chairman of the company), Sir John Arnott, and Sir Cusack Roney, the visitors went to witness the laying the foundation-stone of the new Kinsale Hotel, by Mrs. Cusack Roney, wife of the estimable secretary to the company.

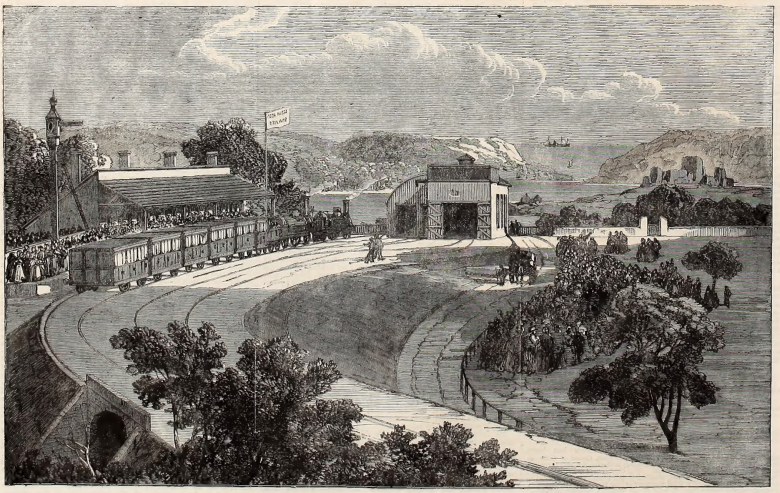
At the conclusion of this ceremony the visitors returned to the railway terminus, where the special train was awaiting them, and at a quarter to three o'clock the train started for the most interesting event of the day was to come off. The arrival of the train at the Bandon terminus was hailed with cheers by immense crowds of people assembled along the sides of the line and at the entrance to the station. Here, as in Kinsale, the whole population seemed to have turned out to celebrate the event, and everything wore a holiday aspect. The station-house was decorated with evergreens and various ornamental devices. While it was being set up the bands of the 11th Regiment and the West Cork Infantry, which, as the visitors stepped upon the platform, began to play with "Cheer, boys, cheer! Come!" In addition to the immense crowds of pedestrians, the road to the spot where the sod was to be cut was thronged by all descriptions of vehicles, and a more animated scene than that presented could not be imagined. The ceremony of turning the first turf was performed in a field close to Lord Bandon's park gate, some distance outside the town. About five o'clock Lord and Lady Carbery arrived on the ground, accompanied by Sir C. P. Roney, Mr. Somerville, Mr. H. W. O'Donovan, Mr. Swanton, Mr. A. Newman, Mr. W. Newman, and Mr. Holland, directors of the railway; the Hon. and Rev. Mr. Bernard, Lady Harriet Bernard, Admiral Sir L. Corry, General Bloomfield, Colonel Beamish, Sir J. Arnott, and others. A handsome silver spade, engraved, we understand, by Messrs. Hunt, manufactured for the occasion by Howell and James, of London, were presented to his Lordship by the contractors of the railway,



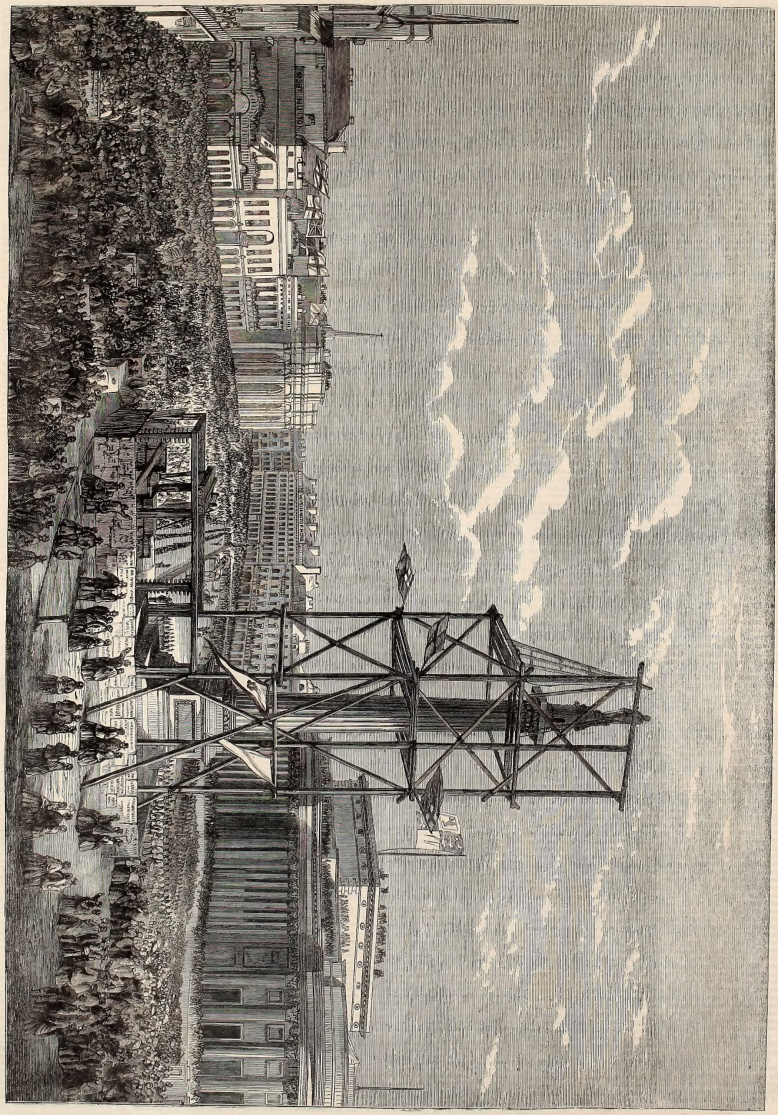
LORD CARBERY RAISING THE FIRST TURF OF THE WEST CORK RAILWAY, NEAR BANDON.

Messrs. Wheatly, Kirk, and Co., of Manchester, and, the sod having been previously prepared, his Lordship raised it and wheeled it off amidst loud cheers, the band playing "God Save the Queen." Sir Cusack Roney then announced the formal commencement of the line, and stated that the really practical part of the works would be begun in ten or twelve days. This announcement was received with loud cheers. Sir Cusack Roney added that he expected to have ten miles of the line open within twelve months, and he congratulated the district upon the work so happily inaugurated that day. The ceremony was then declared at an end, and the vast crowds which had assembled on the ground returned to town. Before closing our notice of this part of the day's proceedings we should add a few facts in reference to the proposed line. It is intended to construct the railway in three sections—the first undertaking being that between Bandon and Ballincen. The works on this section will be commenced simultaneously at both ends, and it is expected that they will be completed in less than twelve months. In that case it is contemplated to carry the line up to Dunmanway within the year—thus opening seventeen miles instead of ten. It is also in contemplation to at once make a short section out from Skibbereen, so that no time may be lost in completing the whole line between the two terminal points.

On the return of the visitors from the inauguration of the works of the railway a sumptuous dejeuner was served in the Townhall, Bandon. Over two hundred ladies and gentlemen sat down to table. The chair was occupied by Sir C. P. Roney; and the vice-chairs were filled by Colonel Beamish, Sir John Arnott, M.P., and Mr. Joseph Holland.



OPENING OF THE CORK AND KINSALE JUNCTION RAILWAY: ARRIVAL OF THE TRAIN AT KINSALE.



THE PRINCE OF WALES LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF THE NEW DOCKS AT LIVERPOOL.—SEE PAGE 604.

INAUGURATION OF THE WELLINGTON STATUE AT LIVERPOOL

THE Wellington statue at Liverpool was uncovered on the 16th inst., in the presence of an immense number of persons. Early in the afternoon the weather, which in the morning was cloudy and threatened rain, cleared up, and a brilliant sun poured forth its rays and contributed greatly to the success of the ceremony. The people began to assemble at an early hour, and long before five o'clock all the thoroughfares in the neighbourhood of the monument were completely crowded. Stages were erected on the right and left of the column, and these were filled with ladies and gentlemen, who were admitted by ticket. The local pensioners and the Volunteers were ordered to assemble on the ground shortly before five o'clock, each corps headed by its band of music. The Mayor (Mr. John Jones, C.E.), the Town Council, Aldermen, and Captain M'Mullen and Captain Barton Wrigley officiated as Brigade Majors. There were also present in attendance a number of mounted officers. Altogether there were about 2000 volunteers and pensioners, including officers. The steps at the base of St. George's Hall were densely crowded, a large number of persons had even succeeded in getting upon the roof of that building to witness the proceedings from that point of view. The display of St. George's Hall and other buildings in the neighbourhood, whilst the Royal standard and the flags floated above the scaffolding, attracted a crowd.

In accordance with an invitation from the Mayor, the members of the town council and gentlemen constituting the Wellington committee assembled at the Townhall shortly after four o'clock, and partook of a light refreshment. About five o'clock the Mayor with the Mayor and the other gentlemen who were to take part in the ceremony of the day left the Townhall in procession, and passed down Dale-street and along William Brown-street to the site of the monument in Lime-street-square. The Mayor's progress through the ground at twenty minutes past five o'clock, and after his Worship had taken the chair and the ladies who were with him were seated on the platform at the base of the column, Mr. John Lord, the secretary of the monument committee, addressed the assembly, and, after giving a history of the labours of the body by whom they were assembled the monument, in the names of the subscribers, to the Mayor and Corporation of the town. At the conclusion of the address the statue was unveiled, amidst the applause of the assembled thousands, the band in the mean time playing "God Save the Queen." A salute of guns was afterwards fired by Colonel Clay's battery, stationed at the rear of the monument. When the applause had subsided the Mayor, in the name of the Corporation, received the statue entrusted upon them, and after a graceful reference to the brilliant career of him to from whose memory the monument was erected, paid a fine tribute to the exertions of the monument committee, especially the secretary and treasurer, Messrs. Dove and T. B. Horsfall, who were whom acknowledged the compliment. Several other addresses were afterwards delivered, and the proceedings were brought to a close in a most satisfactory manner.

The monument consists of a Roman Doric column and a statue of the great Duke. The base of the column is composed of three tiers or ranges of granite steps, and the pedestal is also of similar material, the height being 21 ft. 6 in. The column itself, which is a single granite cap, measures 9 ft. 11 in. 10 ft. in diameter at the foot of the shaft, and 9 ft. 2 in. at the top, upon which rests the pedestal supporting the figure. The pedestal on which the column stands is also of granite, and is surrounded by a carriage, which, together with the statue, when completed, so far as regards the ornamentation. At each angle there will be eagles, executed in bronze, and resting upon shields of the same bronze. One of the four panels—that facing Lime-street—will contain a bas relief representing the grand charge at Waterloo. This panel will be executed in bronze. In the remaining three panels will be introduced, in a like manner, wreaths of stone surrounding shields on which the deceased distinguished himself. When completed, the whole will be surrounded with granite posts and chains similar to those in front of St. George's Hall. A winding staircase of stone ascends through the interior of the column to the summit, and, by the same route, a lightning conductor is carried, terminating at the top of the statue. The dimensions of the work are as follow:—Granite steps, 6 ft. high; pedestal, 11 ft. 6 in.; column, base, 10 ft.; shaft, 80 ft.; capital, 1 ft. 13 ft.; platform, 2 ft. 8 in.; statue, 14 ft.; making the total height, including the figure, 132 ft. The whole rests upon a foundation of large blocks of Anglesea stone, some of the blocks weighing several tons weight. For the column, Darley Dale stone has been employed. The carving was executed by Mr. J. Lawson, assisted by Messrs. Mercer, Mersea. Holme and Nicol were the general contractors, the mason's work being executed under Mr. G. Gibson, the clerk of the works of the office, being 14 ft. in height. The Duke is represented in the undress uniform of a General. His left hand rests upon a sword, and in the right he holds a Field Marshal's baton. He wears a short military cloak, which formed part of his ordinary attire. The treatment of the figure is that of complete repose. In every respect the statue is creditable to the skill and ability of the artist, Mr. G. Lawson, sculptor, of Liverpool. The architectural portion was executed from the same artist. The statue was cast at the works of Messrs. Robinson and Cottam, Pimlico, London, the metal employed being chiefly from guns supplied by the Government, and from the battlefield from Waterloo

We are indebted to Mr. W. Woods of Liverpool for the sketch from which our Engraving is taken.

THE FARM.

As was pretty certain to be the case on an Oaks day, the general meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society was very thinly attended. The board had (which substituted Mr Clayden for Mr Thompson of the Agricultural Hall) and Sir Matthew White Ridley, Bart., on the council for Mr. Brandreth and Lord Strudbrooke was adopted nem. dis. Lord Strudbrooke was not asked to attend—for since his accession to General Hood, Mr. Torr, Mr. Milward, Mr. Pain, Mr. Cantrell, Mr. Dent, M.P., and Sir Hen. A. Verney have been elected by acclamation at councils and committees to chosen, and some other members might do well to look to it, lest they should take the honour of the chair from them. The number of members on the society's books is 6183, being only an increase of twenty within the last few months. Lord Faversham was elected president for the ensuing year. Mr. Alexander Pusey, M.P., raised the question, which has already been contested so closely in the council, as to doing away with the present system of county soundness in the horse classes. The great amount of unsoundness which is shown up by the veterinary officers at the various shows, the certificated horses proves either that many of the country practitioners do not examine them properly, or that they are so much under the thumb of their employers that they have not the moral courage to refuse certificates. The present system is, in fact, done nothing but "humbug." The temptation towards forging "the Johns and Toms (why not the Roberts') and many a one now to ask" out of the way, is the only way to do so is to inform the owners that if their horses are disqualified at the first examination they must not be brought up again, and forfeit the amount paid for the horse, or suffer them to stand there during the show with the disqualification ticket above their heads. Such a step would really prevent fraud, and would be converted into a more safe mart, and also prevent the public wandering about in a way how do is perfect, among the unsoundness and disqualified horses, and misunderstanding or "crabbing" the judgment passed thereby. The implement courts are, if possible, more numerous than in any preceding year. Monday next is the last day for the entry of stock, and we trust that Hereford will do its duty and think no more of its disappointment. It may be well to remind hereafter to consider whether the terms of the in-call heifer class cannot, by the addition of a few restrictive words on the subject of service in April and May, be made more stringent, so as to prevent owners entering heifers which they know at the time of entry must "run as dead letters," as far as claiming a prize is concerned. The distribution of nominal honours under the present system operates most unfairly.

A bill for Scotland has been recently introduced into Parliament to make the owner of every dog liable in damages for any injury done by it to sheep or cattle, without showing any such previous mischievous propensity in the dog or knowledge of it on the part of the owner. This is only making assurance doubly sure, as it was held by the Court of Session, in "Orr v. Fleming," by three Judges to one (and accepted by Lord Campbell as settled Scottish law), that there is no occasion to show the previous habits of the animal or to prove scienti. and. The Lord Ordinary has not occasion specially to observe:—"The law of England allows each dog to have one worry with impunity."

The cry out everywhere is for rain—rain, and the Yorkshire wold farmers look with dismay at their fast-decreasing ponds. From Lincolnshire a friend writes:—"We continue to have awfully cold weather, and the wet was even worse than ever—a perfect unusual a month of May. My early-sown rape has been all cut away by the cold, and looks very miserable."

Notwithstanding the merely "commended" fiat of the judges at the Bath Spring Show, we hear that Mr. Torr's young bull "Grey Gauntlet," grandson of the Emerald Isle, at a good big price, and is now the joint property of Mr. Armstrong, of Enniscorthy, in the county of Wexford, and of his father-in-law, Mr. Torr. Grey Gauntlet, Mr. Noakes's shorthorn herd at Brockley, near Lewisham, come six miles from Grosvenor-square, will be submitted to auction on the following day; and on June 24 comes "the last scene of all," at Aldershot.

It is said that Durham (which, on dit, would have been beaten by Darlington if Newcastle had not been chosen) will be the place of meeting of the Durham County Agricultural next year, the week before or after the Royal. This year the Durham County goes to Gateshead on Tuesday, June 9, and the following days. Prizes—cups, £100, £50, and twenty silver medals, on Sept. 24 and 25; and Earl Lichfield gives a £50 prize for the best agreement which shall provide compensation to the tenant for all unexhausted commercial improvements at the time of quitting the farm, and afford full protection to the rights and interests of the landlord. The Earl of Wenham landlords and tenant-farmers did not take the initiative in vain.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

WAR OFFICE

1st Dragoon Guards: Lieut. J. B. Hepburn to be Lieutenant, 4th: Lieut. A. C. C. Inge to be Captain, vice Hon. C. Bingham, who exchanges. 5th: Lieut. W. Lee to be Captain, vice Bell: Lieut. T. A. Quin to be Lieutenant, 7th: Ensign G. T. Morris to be Lieut., vice Lennox. 10th Hussars: Lieut. C. Fitzroy to be Captain, vice Hon. C. Bingham. 11th: Cornet W. Foot: Lieut. J. H. Bolton to be Captain; Ensign W. H. Barbrey to be Lieutenant: Cornet H. Hall to be Lieut., vice Bolton. 13th: Lieut. C. Hall to be Captain, vice Hon. C. Bingham. 14th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hon. C. Bingham. 15th: Major J. R. Backe to be Major. 16th: C. R. Robertson to be Ensign. 72nd: C. L. Lennox to be Lieut., vice Hon. Sir Gore Quoyle. 73rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Burgess. 74th: Staff Surg. Dill, D. Bennett to be Surgeon, 16th: J. Alexander Hall to be Lieut., vice Hall. 77th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 78th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 79th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 80th: Lieut. G. E. Anderson to be Captain; Ensign W. Hall to be Lieutenant, vice Hall. 81st: Lieut. G. E. Anderson to be Captain; Ensign W. Hall to be Lieutenant, vice Hall. 82nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 83rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 84th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 85th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 86th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 87th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 88th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 89th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 90th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 91st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 92nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 93rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 94th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 95th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 96th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 97th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 98th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 99th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 100th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 101st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 102nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 103rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 104th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 105th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 106th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 107th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 108th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 109th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 110th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 111th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 112th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 113th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 114th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 115th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 116th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 117th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 118th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 119th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 120th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 121st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 122nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 123rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 124th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 125th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 126th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 127th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 128th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 129th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 130th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 131st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 132nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 133rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 134th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 135th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 136th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 137th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 138th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 139th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 140th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 141st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 142nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 143rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 144th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 145th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 146th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 147th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 148th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 149th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 150th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 151st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 152nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 153rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 154th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 155th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 156th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 157th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 158th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 159th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 160th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 161st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 162nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 163rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 164th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 165th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 166th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 167th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 168th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 169th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 170th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 171st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 172nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 173rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 174th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 175th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 176th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 177th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 178th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 179th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 180th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 181st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 182nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 183rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 184th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 185th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 186th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 187th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 188th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 189th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 190th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 191st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 192nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 193rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 194th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 195th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 196th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 197th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 198th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 199th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 200th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 201st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 202nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 203rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 204th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 205th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 206th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 207th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 208th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 209th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 210th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 211th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 212th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 213th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 214th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 215th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 216th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 217th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 218th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 219th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 220th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 221st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 222nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 223rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 224th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 225th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 226th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 227th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 228th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 229th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 230th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 231st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 232nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 233rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 234th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 235th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 236th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 237th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 238th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 239th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 240th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 241st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 242nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 243rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 244th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 245th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 246th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 247th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 248th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 249th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 250th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 251st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 252nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 253rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 254th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 255th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 256th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 257th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 258th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 259th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 260th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 261st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 262nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 263rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 264th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 265th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 266th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 267th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 268th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 269th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 270th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 271st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 272nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 273rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 274th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 275th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 276th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 277th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 278th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 279th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 280th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 281st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 282nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 283rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 284th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 285th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 286th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 287th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 288th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 289th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 290th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 291st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 292nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 293rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 294th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 295th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 296th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 297th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 298th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 299th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 300th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 301st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 302nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 303rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 304th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 305th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 306th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 307th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 308th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 309th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 310th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 311th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 312th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 313th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 314th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 315th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 316th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 317th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 318th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 319th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 320th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 321st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 322nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 323rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 324th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 325th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 326th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 327th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 328th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 329th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 330th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 331st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 332nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 333rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 334th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 335th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 336th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 337th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 338th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 339th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 340th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 341st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 342nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 343rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 344th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 345th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 346th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 347th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 348th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 349th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 350th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 351st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 352nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 353rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 354th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 355th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 356th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 357th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 358th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 359th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 360th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 361st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 362nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 363rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 364th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 365th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 366th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 367th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 368th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 369th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 370th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 371st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 372nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 373rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 374th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 375th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 376th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 377th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 378th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 379th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 380th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 381st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 382nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 383rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 384th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 385th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 386th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 387th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 388th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 389th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 390th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 391st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 392nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 393rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 394th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 395th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 396th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 397th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 398th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 399th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 400th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 401st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 402nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 403rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 404th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 405th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 406th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 407th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 408th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 409th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 410th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 411th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 412th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 413th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 414th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 415th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 416th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 417th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 418th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 419th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 420th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 421st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 422nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 423rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 424th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 425th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 426th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 427th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 428th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 429th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 430th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 431st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 432nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 433rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 434th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 435th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 436th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 437th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 438th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 439th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 440th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 441st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 442nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 443rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 444th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 445th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 446th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 447th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 448th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 449th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 450th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 451st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 452nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 453rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 454th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 455th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 456th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 457th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 458th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 459th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 460th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 461st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 462nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 463rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 464th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 465th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 466th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 467th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 468th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 469th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 470th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 471st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 472nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 473rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 474th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 475th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 476th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 477th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 478th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 479th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 480th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 481st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 482nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 483rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 484th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 485th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 486th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 487th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 488th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 489th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 490th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 491st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 492nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 493rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 494th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 495th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 496th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 497th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 498th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 499th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 500th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 501st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 502nd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 503rd: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 504th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 505th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 506th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 507th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 508th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 509th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 510th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 511th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 512th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 513th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 514th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 515th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 516th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 517th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 518th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 519th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 520th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 521st: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 522nd: Lieut. J.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

THERE is never now any serious difference between the Houses of Lords and Commons, on condition that the former as a rule register all the decrees of the latter. Once in a way, the Upper House is permitted to throw out a bill which has passed the other Chamber, such measures being always of a special and peculiar character. Of late, however, the opposition in the Commons, by its curious gatherings in strength on Wednesdays, has saved the Lords the trouble of discussing, as well as deprived them of the gratification of asserting their rights by hostile divisions against the very few subjects which remain in this category. Unity between the two branches of the Legislature is in a manner secured, and the Lords run only one risk—that of individuality by keeping up distinctions which do not amount to differences between themselves and the Commons. For instance, last week Lord Granville sat on Wednesday; on their sitting days their time of meeting is an hour later than the Commons'; and their consequent sittings for the Easter and Whitsuntide recesses are fixed for different periods to those adopted by the Lower House. Such are the only matters which distinguish the Peers sitting as the Commons, and met with wonderful formality two days after the other House had taken that step. Some suspicion was aroused that, by way of a joke, one of the newspapers to themselves, they would expand into a debate of pretension—an effect which they can produce out of anything or nothing, it not being necessary, to their notions of order, to be very conversant in any of their proceedings. Thus, last week Lord Lyttelton's talk of the Budget was before them; and, as roasting Mr. Gladstone is a favourite amusement of their Lordships, from Lord Derby down to Lord Lyttelton, who, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, believed that, by virtue of his office, he is critic-in-chief of the Chancellor of the Exchequer personally, and such occasion was looked for and expected; and not the less because, with all due solemnity, the leaders of what may be called the pro-leaders on both sides of politics were to took their seats ominously. However, nothing came of it, except that Lord Redesdale made exactly five speeches—very short, of course—in rotation by one objection to a point in a statement which he looked by three from Lord Stanley of Alderley, and all was over. The strangers, under whose privilege we had been admitted, and of influence to obtain the boon of a Peer's order to the gallery, stared and rubbed their eyes, wondering whether a new order of things was coming on to a dissolving view was really a deliberate act of business on the part of the second estate of the realm.

Nevertheless, it is the fact that the Lords have been by no means idle during the present Session. There have been numerous debates spiritedly carried on, but only until half-past seven or eight in the day. We have not beheld this year that scene in the Upper House which means so peculiar, and which constitutes a stirring feature in the year. What a weird look the gorgeous chamber presents about eleven. The lamps are burning their best, but they are not sufficient to give a cheerful light over the wide area of the house, although they make heat enough, and the atmosphere is close and oppressive. The red benches are thinly tenanted by a few Lords, who sit there because they have not feel energy enough to move elsewhere; the Lord Chancellor, on the Woolsack right east, heads the row of the Judges on the same side, his wig having fallen awry in his restlessness, for it is about this time that the boredom of the Upper House reaches its climax. Lord Derby, Lord Granville, it may be Lord Ellenborough—have spoken early in the debate; perhaps even the Duke of Argyll has rung out his rarely sonorous, as a voice which is more effective by the strength of lungs is consistent with diminutiveness of person; and the discussion has fallen into the hands of the Earl of Carnarvon, Lord Montagle, or it may be a Bishop, who is not the Bishop of Oxford, for in him and there is to find no amusement in the debate, and a host of numbers to listen. But as a rule prose is prevalent at this time, and as typical a representation was typical of this appearance as that by a stretch of imagination, by things, it is to be found here. Not a there any hope of revival, for every one knows that the debate is to be wound up by the Duke of Newcastle, and that he is not an hour—if he is merciful—he will flow on in one steady, level monotone, which ought to be soothing, but somehow is irritating. It is not that he reaches a point at which it is thought there is a prospect of conclusion Lord Derby, and Lord Granville of Carlton, the leaders for Government and the Opposition respectively, drive in their lordly herds of voters, who come with pensive steps and slow to go through the form of a division, the result of which has been known for every one a week before.

As has been stated, up to this time there has been no such debate in the Lords as it is very likely that such will be before it is got out of the dulness of this Session. The ordinary characteristics of the house are therefore preserved, and a week or two about them may not be without interest. When the doors are opened to the technical stranger, at five o'clock, the house is deadly still, the Lord Chancellor on the woolsack being almost the only occupant. In a minute or two the swing doors on each side of the throne are from time to time pushed gently open, disclosing, with quite a shuffling noise, as they stand for a moment ajar, glimpses of the Prince's Chamber; and through one or other of these openings presently glides with measured steps an occasional Peer, whose demeanour is indicative of a desire not to break the silence of the place, and who takes his seat with a caution and precision which are quite engaging. In a short time the Peers are seated on the Opposition bench, nearest the throne, the Marquis of Normanby, the Earl of Shaftesbury, and the Earl of Carnarvon, the latter sitting in an attitude like that which the Duke of Wellington used to assume in his latter days—the head bent down on the breast and the arms folded. On the chief Opposition seat are to be seen the Earl of Clarendon and the Marquis of Salisbury; the Earl of Hardwicke is near the centre, next to Lord Derby, who is supported on the other side by Lord Malmesbury, when he is there—which he is not by any means constantly. On the Ministerial side, Lord Chelmsford, who seems to have been appointed deputy leader of the Opposition, always takes possession of the first seat of that functionary when Lord Derby has the gout. On a bench still lower sit Lord Wodehouse and other unattached Peers, and Lord Overstone. As every one knows, there are really cross benches in the House of Lords, and on them the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Cambridge sit when they are present; but there are always some occupants, such as the Duke of Cleveland, Earl Stanhope, and the Earl of Galloway. On the front bench, Earl Granville, the Ministerial side, is a kind of beau sentencier, for there are gathered ex-Ministers, such as Lord Clarendon, Lord Wodehouse, Lord Wodehouse, and Lord Taunton; and behind it may be seen the tall, gaunt form of the Marquis of Westminster. The Ministerial bench proper, from the bar upwards, sit Lord Stanley of Alderley, Earl De Grey, and the Duke of Somerset. In the place of honour, as leader and commander-in-chief, is found Earl Granville, and on his immediate side are the Duke of Newcastle and the Duke of Argyll. By a strong exercise of power directed on the next seat to the latter, a place for the Bishops may be observed, first a large hat, then a pair of folded arms, and, lastly, legs which are in the act of crossing in order to reach the floor, and, when discovery is pushed further, sufficient to warrant a face to emulate one to ascertain that there sits her Majesty's Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Earl Russell. Sprinkle half a dozen Peers on the back benches on each side, most of them sitting far apart from each other, in the manner of people at Steen hundred persons; put five Bishops in their robes and lawn sleeves on their peculiar benches; place three Lay Peers in lounging attitudes on the large woolsacks located before that on which the Chancellor sits; let Lord Redesdale's yellow waistcoat and bright brass buttons shine over the table by the side of the chair on which he sits when acting as Chairman of Committees: let Lord Brougham be glancing sunshine-like, for he is still active and alert in his extraordinary degree, from bench to bench, whispering in one man's ear and talking loudly to another; and let the three privileged strangers listen stand on the steps of the throne, and you have the House of Lords at a time when almost all the members before it commence business.

Until a quarter past five petitions are presented; and it is quite possible that a discussion may be raised on any one of them, although this is not frequent; and then by rights there should be a pause before going to the orders of the day. But in most cases this is the moment when Lord Brougham, having previously sent an intimation to the reporters that he is going to speak, will deliver himself of an animated, not to say excited, oration on some abstract question, or discuss the merits of a bill, which, during his absence in the early part of the Session, has been debated in all the stages, and has been sent down long before to the Commons. Or else some question will be put to Lord Aberdeen's Government; and the raises a really interesting question with regard to the House of Lords, so far as the public is concerned, and that is the question of hearing what is said. Indeed, it has come to be believed that, taking advantage of the defective acoustics of the chamber, Ministers contrive that as little as possible of what they say should reach the ordinary channels of information. Lord Granville, who should be the example, is the chief offender in this respect. Never very intelligible, owing to his thickness of utterance, when he answers questions, a question he leans over the table, his head towards the throne, and speaks in a voice so low that it scarcely, if at all, reaches the Opposition. A notable case in point, was long ago the Duke of Buccleuch asked a question, which was duly placed on the notice paper, to which Lord Granville replied. Not a word reached the Duke, and some days after, when the matter in hand went to the bar and made inquiries, but nobody there had heard a word. Lord Blachford was then applied to, but he stated that he had not been able to gather even the sense of the response, and was consoling himself with the hope that he should see it the next morning in the newspapers; and it was only after Lord Granville himself had been sent to and induced to write down the substance of what he had said, that the desired information was obtained. On the other house, being built for show as well as business, is too large and too lofty for ordinary conversation to be audible; but there are Peers who make themselves heard, and that, apparently, without difficulty—Lord Derby and Lord Ellenborough especially—so that no one can complain, if he were inclined, that any of Lord Hardwicke's wisdom escapes the ear. As for Lord Russell, physical causes prevented his making himself heard, latterly, in the House of Commons; and nothing can be expected of him in the Lords. On the whole, one's impression of the second branch of the Legislature, at its ordinary meetings, is—that it meets in a very fine hall; that its proceedings are not very dignified, and are not particularly lively; that there are in it many able and eloquent men who have their places there who are in a state of practical eclipse; that in the march of events, in latter times, such a change has come over the public mind that it is not at all affected its genius and vocation; and that it is by no means likely we shall have occasion to be stupendously thankful that we have a House of Lords.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

BOOKWORM.—If we mistake not, three or four cases played between Mr. Buckle, the late lamented author of "The History of Civilisation," and Mr. Löwenthal, will be found published in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS about fifteen years ago. Those we have not at present by us to refer to.

T. V.—The Chess Club of Cambridge University is under the fostering care of Mr. Bledge, assisted by Messrs. Von Heydebrand, Hamilton, Mayer, Horwitz, &c.

A. L.—We are not directly acquainted with the author of the article on "Chess" in the last number of the Cornhill Magazine; but there is no impropriety in our saying that it is generally attributed to Mr. Thackeray, the editor of that periodical.

R. D.—The Chess Problem Tourney, which has excited so much interest of late, was published in London, we believe, by Messrs. Bartlett and Lowell, of Great Marlborough-street, and by Mr. Staunton, of Upper Gower-street.

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER, &c.—The "Congress Chess Leaves."—We have no, but can hardly conceive that they will be long in existence, as the Congress Tourney, which gave rise to them, was by the simplest of calculations unsuccessful. The Tourney, which was to be held in Paris, was unanimously condemned in France, in Germany, and in America; that, of the only four Chess publications in London, three were against it, and that, of the only four Chess Clubs in the metropolis, the Oxford and Cambridge and the London Clubs refused to allow its rooms to be used for the purpose. Under such circumstances to suppose that it could possibly succeed was to display a degree of ignorance of the state of Chess affairs in this country which is quite inconceivable among well-informed persons.

H. F. N.—The arrangements do not admit of elucidation.

J. A. Lowe.—Many thanks for the kind communication of problem No. 1030, should be glad to hear from you further.

HUNTLY BISHOP.—You have omitted to remove the white bishop before playing over Mr. Morphy's game, and of course the whole of the subsequent moves are incomprehensible. Take off the Kt first and you will find every move correct.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1028 received from Mrs. Anna, F. R. S. B. D., 1863, P. P., Felix, H. F. W., Rev. J. A. Clarke, Caius, Rev. J. Owen, Alpha, Delta, Leonidas, Argus, W. T., Rev. E. H. M., Maurice, C. J. Perrin, R. M. J., Violet, Burton, Y. F. S., Burton Beauty, Phiz, Beatrice, Iota, Fidelity, Percy, F. A. R., Stanley, J. Brown, C. of Galmoye, J. Lee, Dr. Norris, Tyrolean, C. C., Lacey, Dunraven, G. F. W., R. G. D., Percy, Quicksave, Box and Cox, Rev. J. W. D., W. H. Thompson, Shropshire Lass, Ajax, Rev. J. Wayte, Rev. J. Bell, Rev. J. Bell, Jun., Rev. J. Bell, 3rd, Rev. J. Bell, 4th, Rev. J. Bell, 5th, Rev. J. Bell, 6th, Rev. J. Bell, 7th, Rev. J. Bell, 8th, Rev. J. Bell, 9th, Rev. J. Bell, 10th, Rev. J. Bell, 11th, Rev. J. Bell, 12th, Rev. J. Bell, 13th, Rev. J. Bell, 14th, Rev. J. Bell, 15th, Rev. J. Bell, 16th, Rev. J. Bell, 17th, Rev. J. Bell, 18th, Rev. J. Bell, 19th, Rev. J. Bell, 20th, Rev. J. Bell, 21st, Rev. J. Bell, 22nd, Rev. J. Bell, 23rd, Rev. J. Bell, 24th, Rev. J. Bell, 25th, Rev. J. Bell, 26th, Rev. J. Bell, 27th, Rev. J. Bell, 28th, Rev. J. Bell, 29th, Rev. J. Bell, 30th, Rev. J. Bell, 31st, Rev. J. Bell, 32nd, Rev. J. Bell, 33rd, Rev. J. Bell, 34th, Rev. J. Bell, 35th, Rev. J. Bell, 36th, Rev. J. Bell, 37th, Rev. J. Bell, 38th, Rev. J. Bell, 39th, Rev. J. Bell, 40th, Rev. J. Bell, 41st, Rev. J. Bell, 42nd, Rev. J. Bell, 43rd, Rev. J. Bell, 44th, Rev. J. Bell, 45th, Rev. J. Bell, 46th, Rev. J. Bell, 47th, Rev. J. Bell, 48th, Rev. J. Bell, 49th, Rev. J. Bell, 50th, Rev. J. Bell, 51st, Rev. J. Bell, 52nd, Rev. J. Bell, 53rd, Rev. J. Bell, 54th, Rev. J. Bell, 55th, Rev. J. Bell, 56th, Rev. J. Bell, 57th, Rev. J. Bell, 58th, Rev. J. Bell, 59th, Rev. J. Bell, 60th, Rev. J. Bell, 61st, Rev. J. Bell, 62nd, Rev. J. Bell, 63rd, Rev. J. Bell, 64th, Rev. J. Bell, 65th, Rev. J. Bell, 66th, Rev. J. Bell, 67th, Rev. J. Bell, 68th, Rev. J. Bell, 69th, Rev. J. Bell, 70th, Rev. J. Bell, 71st, Rev. J. Bell, 72nd, Rev. J. Bell, 73rd, Rev. J. Bell, 74th, Rev. J. Bell, 75th, Rev. J. Bell, 76th, Rev. J. Bell, 77th, Rev. J. Bell, 78th, Rev. J. Bell, 79th, Rev. J. Bell, 80th, Rev. J. Bell, 81st, Rev. J. Bell, 82nd, Rev. J. Bell, 83rd, Rev. J. Bell, 84th, Rev. J. Bell, 85th, Rev. J. Bell, 86th, Rev. J. Bell, 87th, Rev. J. Bell, 88th, Rev. J. Bell, 89th, Rev. J. Bell, 90th, Rev. J. Bell, 91st, Rev. J. Bell, 92nd, Rev. J. Bell, 93rd, Rev. J. Bell, 94th, Rev. J. Bell, 95th, Rev. J. Bell, 96th, Rev. J. Bell, 97th, Rev. J. Bell, 98th, Rev. J. Bell, 99th, Rev. J. Bell, 100th, Rev. J. Bell, 101st, Rev. J. Bell, 102nd, Rev. J. Bell, 103rd, Rev. J. Bell, 104th, Rev. J. Bell, 105th, Rev. J. Bell, 106th, Rev. J. Bell, 107th, Rev. J. Bell, 108th, Rev. J. Bell, 109th, Rev. J. Bell, 110th, Rev. J. Bell, 111th, Rev. J. Bell, 112th, Rev. J. Bell, 113th, Rev. J. Bell, 114th, Rev. J. Bell, 115th, Rev. J. Bell, 116th, Rev. J. Bell, 117th, Rev. J. Bell, 118th, Rev. J. Bell, 119th, Rev. J. Bell, 120th, Rev. J. Bell, 121st, Rev. J. Bell, 122nd, Rev. J. Bell, 123rd, Rev. J. Bell, 124th, Rev. J. Bell, 125th, Rev. J. Bell, 126th, Rev. J. Bell, 127th, Rev. J. Bell, 128th, Rev. J. Bell, 129th, Rev. J. Bell, 130th, Rev. J. Bell, 131st, Rev. J. Bell, 132nd, Rev. J. Bell, 133rd, Rev. J. Bell, 134th, Rev. J. Bell, 135th, Rev. J. Bell, 136th, Rev. J. Bell, 137th, Rev. J. Bell, 138th, Rev. J. Bell, 139th, Rev. J. Bell, 140th, Rev. J. Bell, 141st, Rev. J. Bell, 142nd, Rev. J. Bell, 143rd, Rev. J. Bell, 144th, Rev. J. Bell, 145th, Rev. J. Bell, 146th, Rev. J. Bell, 147th, Rev. J. Bell, 148th, Rev. J. Bell, 149th, Rev. J. Bell, 150th, Rev. J. Bell, 151st, Rev. J. Bell, 152nd, Rev. J. Bell, 153rd, Rev. J. Bell, 154th, Rev. J. Bell, 155th, Rev. J. Bell, 156th, Rev. J. Bell, 157th, Rev. J. Bell, 158th, Rev. J. Bell, 159th, Rev. J. Bell, 160th, Rev. J. Bell, 161st, Rev. J. Bell, 162nd, Rev. J. Bell, 163rd, Rev. J. Bell, 164th, Rev. J. Bell, 165th, Rev. J. Bell, 166th, Rev. J. Bell, 167th, Rev. J. Bell, 168th, Rev. J. Bell, 169th, Rev. J. Bell, 170th, Rev. J. Bell, 171st, Rev. J. Bell, 172nd, Rev. J. Bell, 173rd, Rev. J. Bell, 174th, Rev. J. Bell, 175th, Rev. J. Bell, 176th, Rev. J. Bell, 177th, Rev. J. Bell, 178th, Rev. J. Bell, 179th, Rev. J. Bell, 180th, Rev. J. Bell, 181st, Rev. J. Bell, 182nd, Rev. J. Bell, 183rd, Rev. J. Bell, 184th, Rev. J. Bell, 185th, Rev. J. Bell, 186th, Rev. J. Bell, 187th, Rev. J. Bell, 188th, Rev. J. Bell, 189th, Rev. J. Bell, 190th, Rev. J. Bell, 191st, Rev. J. Bell, 192nd, Rev. J. Bell, 193rd, Rev. J. Bell, 194th, Rev. J. Bell, 195th, Rev. J. Bell, 196th, Rev. J. Bell, 197th, Rev. J. Bell, 198th, Rev. J. Bell, 199th, Rev. J. Bell, 200th, Rev. J. Bell, 201st, Rev. J. Bell, 202nd, Rev. J. Bell, 203rd, Rev. J. Bell, 204th, Rev. J. Bell, 205th, Rev. J. Bell, 206th, Rev. J. Bell, 207th, Rev. J. Bell, 208th, Rev. J. Bell, 209th, Rev. J. Bell, 210th, Rev. J. Bell, 211th, Rev. J. Bell, 212th, Rev. J. Bell, 213th, Rev. J. Bell, 214th, Rev. J. Bell, 215th, Rev. J. Bell, 216th, Rev. J. Bell, 217th, Rev. J. Bell, 218th, Rev. J. Bell, 219th, Rev. J. Bell, 220th, Rev. J. Bell, 221st, Rev. J. Bell, 222nd, Rev. J. Bell, 223rd, Rev. J. Bell, 224th, Rev. J. Bell, 225th, Rev. J. Bell, 226th, Rev. J. Bell, 227th, Rev. J. Bell, 228th, Rev. J. Bell, 229th, Rev. J. Bell, 230th, Rev. J. Bell, 231st, Rev. J. Bell, 232nd, Rev. J. Bell, 233rd, Rev. J. Bell, 234th, Rev. J. Bell, 235th, Rev. J. Bell, 236th, Rev. J. Bell, 237th, Rev. J. Bell, 238th, Rev. J. Bell, 239th, Rev. J. Bell, 240th, Rev. J. Bell, 241st, Rev. J. Bell, 242nd, Rev. J. Bell, 243rd, Rev. J. Bell, 244th, Rev. J. Bell, 245th, Rev. J. Bell, 246th, Rev. J. Bell, 247th, Rev. J. Bell, 248th, Rev. J. Bell, 249th, Rev. J. Bell, 250th, Rev. J. Bell, 251st, Rev. J. Bell, 252nd, Rev. J. Bell, 253rd, Rev. J. Bell, 254th, Rev. J. Bell, 255th, Rev. J. Bell, 256th, Rev. J. Bell, 257th, Rev. J. Bell, 258th, Rev. J. Bell, 259th, Rev. J. Bell, 260th, Rev. J. Bell, 261st, Rev. J. Bell, 262nd, Rev. J. Bell, 263rd, Rev. J. Bell, 264th, Rev. J. Bell, 265th, Rev. J. Bell, 266th, Rev. J. Bell, 267th, Rev. J. Bell, 268th, Rev. J. Bell, 269th, Rev. J. Bell, 270th, Rev. J. Bell, 271st, Rev. J. Bell, 272nd, Rev. J. Bell, 273rd, Rev. J. Bell, 274th, Rev. J. Bell, 275th, Rev. J. Bell, 276th, Rev. J. Bell, 277th, Rev. J. Bell, 278th, Rev. J. Bell, 279th, Rev. J. Bell, 280th, Rev. J. Bell, 281st, Rev. J. Bell, 282nd, Rev. J. Bell, 283rd, Rev. J. Bell, 284th, Rev. J. Bell, 285th, Rev. J. Bell, 286th, Rev. J. Bell, 287th, Rev. J. Bell, 288th, Rev. J. Bell, 289th, Rev. J. Bell, 290th, Rev. J. Bell, 291st, Rev. J. Bell, 292nd, Rev. J. Bell, 293rd, Rev. J. Bell, 294th, Rev. J. Bell, 295th, Rev. J. Bell, 296th, Rev. J. Bell, 297th, Rev. J. Bell, 298th, Rev. J. Bell, 299th, Rev. J. Bell, 300th, Rev. J. Bell, 301st, Rev. J. Bell, 302nd, Rev. J. Bell, 303rd, Rev. J. Bell, 304th, Rev. J. Bell, 305th, Rev. J. Bell, 306th, Rev. J. Bell, 307th, Rev. J. Bell, 308th, Rev. J. Bell, 309th, Rev. J. Bell, 310th, Rev. J. Bell, 311th, Rev. J. Bell, 312th, Rev. J. Bell, 313th, Rev. J. Bell, 314th, Rev. J. Bell, 315th, Rev. J. Bell, 316th, Rev. J. Bell, 317th, Rev. J. Bell, 318th, Rev. J. Bell, 319th, Rev. J. Bell, 320th, Rev. J. Bell, 321st, Rev. J. Bell, 322nd, Rev. J. Bell, 323rd, Rev. J. Bell, 324th, Rev. J. Bell, 325th, Rev. J. Bell, 326th, Rev. J. Bell, 327th, Rev. J. Bell, 328th, Rev. J. Bell, 329th, Rev. J. Bell, 330th, Rev. J. Bell, 331st, Rev. J. Bell, 332nd, Rev. J. Bell, 333rd, Rev. J. Bell, 334th, Rev. J. Bell, 335th, Rev. J. Bell, 336th, Rev. J. Bell, 337th, Rev. J. Bell, 338th, Rev. J. Bell, 339th, Rev. J. Bell, 340th, Rev. J. Bell, 341st, Rev. J. Bell, 342nd, Rev. J. Bell, 343rd, Rev. J. Bell, 344th, Rev. J. Bell, 345th, Rev. J. Bell, 346th, Rev. J. Bell, 347th, Rev. J. Bell, 348th, Rev. J. Bell, 349th, Rev. J. Bell, 350th, Rev. J. Bell, 351st, Rev. J. Bell, 352nd, Rev. J. Bell, 353rd, Rev. J. Bell, 354th, Rev. J. Bell, 355th, Rev. J. Bell, 356th, Rev. J. Bell, 357th, Rev. J. Bell, 358th, Rev. J. Bell, 359th, Rev. J. Bell, 360th, Rev. J. Bell, 361st, Rev. J. Bell, 362nd, Rev. J. Bell, 363rd, Rev. J. Bell, 364th, Rev. J. Bell, 365th, Rev. J. Bell, 366th, Rev. J. Bell, 367th, Rev. J. Bell, 368th, Rev. J. Bell, 369th, Rev. J. Bell, 370th, Rev. J. Bell, 371st, Rev. J. Bell, 372nd, Rev. J. Bell, 373rd, Rev. J. Bell, 374th, Rev. J. Bell, 375th, Rev. J. Bell, 376th, Rev. J. Bell, 377th, Rev. J. Bell, 378th, Rev. J. Bell, 379th, Rev. J. Bell, 380th, Rev. J. Bell, 381st, Rev. J. Bell, 382nd, Rev. J. Bell, 383rd, Rev. J. Bell, 384th, Rev. J. Bell, 385th, Rev. J. Bell, 386th, Rev. J. Bell, 387th, Rev. J. Bell, 388th, Rev. J. Bell, 389th, Rev. J. Bell, 390th, Rev. J. Bell, 391st, Rev. J. Bell, 392nd, Rev. J. Bell, 393rd, Rev. J. Bell, 394th, Rev. J. Bell, 395th, Rev. J. Bell, 396th, Rev. J. Bell, 397th, Rev. J. Bell, 398th, Rev. J. Bell, 399th, Rev. J. Bell, 400th, Rev. J. Bell, 401st, Rev. J. Bell, 402nd, Rev. J. Bell, 403rd, Rev. J. Bell, 404th, Rev. J. Bell, 405th, Rev. J. Bell, 406th, Rev. J. Bell, 407th, Rev. J. Bell, 408th, Rev. J. Bell, 409th, Rev. J. Bell, 410th, Rev. J. Bell, 411th, Rev. J. Bell, 412th, Rev. J. Bell, 413th, Rev. J. Bell, 414th, Rev. J. Bell, 415th, Rev. J. Bell, 416th, Rev. J. Bell, 417th, Rev. J. Bell, 418th, Rev. J. Bell, 419th, Rev. J. Bell, 420th, Rev. J. Bell, 421st, Rev. J. Bell, 422nd, Rev. J. Bell, 423rd, Rev. J. Bell, 424th, Rev. J. Bell, 425th, Rev. J. Bell, 426th, Rev. J. Bell, 427th, Rev. J. Bell, 428th, Rev. J. Bell, 429th, Rev. J. Bell, 430th, Rev. J. Bell, 431st, Rev. J. Bell, 432nd, Rev. J. Bell, 433rd, Rev. J. Bell, 434th, Rev. J. Bell, 435th, Rev. J. Bell, 436th, Rev. J. Bell, 437th, Rev. J. Bell, 438th, Rev. J. Bell, 439th, Rev. J. Bell, 440th, Rev. J. Bell, 441st, Rev. J. Bell, 442nd, Rev. J. Bell, 443rd, Rev. J. Bell, 444th, Rev. J. Bell, 445th, Rev. J. Bell, 446th, Rev. J. Bell, 447th, Rev. J. Bell, 448th, Rev. J. Bell, 449th, Rev. J. Bell, 450th, Rev. J. Bell, 451st, Rev. J. Bell, 452nd, Rev. J. Bell, 453rd, Rev. J. Bell, 454th, Rev. J. Bell, 455th, Rev. J. Bell, 456th, Rev. J. Bell, 457th, Rev. J. Bell, 458th, Rev. J. Bell, 459th, Rev. J. Bell, 460th, Rev. J. Bell, 461st, Rev. J. Bell, 462nd, Rev. J. Bell, 463rd, Rev. J. Bell, 464th, Rev. J. Bell, 465th, Rev. J. Bell, 466th, Rev. J. Bell, 467th, Rev. J. Bell, 468th, Rev. J. Bell, 469th, Rev. J. Bell, 470th, Rev. J. Bell, 471st, Rev. J. Bell, 472nd, Rev. J. Bell, 473rd, Rev. J. Bell, 474th, Rev. J. Bell, 475th, Rev. J. Bell, 476th, Rev. J. Bell, 477th, Rev. J. Bell, 478th, Rev. J. Bell, 479th, Rev. J. Bell, 480th, Rev. J. Bell, 481st, Rev. J. Bell, 482nd, Rev. J. Bell, 483rd, Rev. J. Bell, 484th, Rev. J. Bell, 485th, Rev. J. Bell, 486th, Rev. J. Bell, 487th, Rev. J. Bell, 488th, Rev. J. Bell, 489th, Rev. J. Bell, 490th, Rev. J. Bell, 491st, Rev. J. Bell, 492nd, Rev. J. Bell, 493rd, Rev. J. Bell, 494th, Rev. J. Bell, 495th, Rev. J. Bell, 496th, Rev. J. Bell, 497th, Rev. J. Bell, 498th, Rev. J. Bell, 499th, Rev. J. Bell, 500th, Rev. J. Bell, 501st, Rev. J. Bell, 502nd, Rev. J. Bell, 503rd, Rev. J. Bell, 504th, Rev. J. Bell, 505th, Rev. J. Bell, 506th, Rev. J. Bell, 507th, Rev. J. Bell, 508th, Rev. J. Bell, 509th, Rev. J. Bell, 510th, Rev. J. Bell, 511th, Rev. J. Bell, 512th, Rev. J. Bell, 513th, Rev. J. Bell, 514th, Rev. J. Bell, 515th, Rev. J. Bell, 516th, Rev. J. Bell, 517th, Rev. J. Bell, 518th, Rev. J. Bell, 519th, Rev. J. Bell, 520th, Rev. J. Bell, 521st, Rev. J. Bell, 522nd, Rev. J. Bell, 523rd, Rev. J. Bell, 524th, Rev. J. Bell, 525th, Rev. J. Bell, 526th, Rev. J. Bell, 527th, Rev. J. Bell, 528th, Rev. J. Bell, 529th, Rev. J. Bell, 530th, Rev. J. Bell, 531st, Rev. J. Bell, 532nd, Rev. J. Bell, 533rd, Rev. J. Bell, 534th, Rev. J. Bell, 535th, Rev. J. Bell, 536th, Rev. J. Bell, 537th, Rev. J. Bell, 538th, Rev. J. Bell, 539th, Rev. J. Bell, 540th, Rev. J. Bell, 541st, Rev. J. Bell, 542nd, Rev. J. Bell, 543rd, Rev. J. Bell, 544th, Rev. J. Bell, 545th, Rev. J. Bell, 546th, Rev. J. Bell, 547th, Rev. J. Bell, 548th, Rev. J. Bell, 549th, Rev. J. Bell, 550th, Rev. J. Bell, 551st, Rev. J. Bell, 552nd, Rev. J. Bell, 553rd, Rev. J. Bell, 554th, Rev. J. Bell, 555th, Rev. J. Bell, 556th, Rev. J. Bell, 557th, Rev. J. Bell, 558th, Rev. J. Bell, 559th, Rev. J. Bell, 560th, Rev. J. Bell, 561st, Rev. J. Bell, 562nd, Rev. J. Bell, 563rd, Rev. J. Bell, 564th, Rev. J. Bell, 565th, Rev. J. Bell, 566th, Rev. J. Bell, 567th, Rev. J. Bell, 568th, Rev. J. Bell, 569th, Rev. J. Bell, 570th, Rev. J. Bell, 571st, Rev. J. Bell, 572nd, Rev. J. Bell, 573rd, Rev. J. Bell, 574th, Rev. J. Bell, 575th, Rev. J. Bell, 576th, Rev. J. Bell, 577th, Rev. J. Bell, 578th, Rev. J. Bell, 579th, Rev. J. Bell, 580th, Rev. J. Bell, 581st, Rev. J. Bell, 582nd, Rev. J. Bell, 583rd, Rev. J. Bell, 584th, Rev. J. Bell, 585th, Rev. J. Bell, 586th, Rev. J. Bell, 587th, Rev. J. Bell, 588th, Rev. J. Bell, 589th, Rev. J. Bell, 590th, Rev. J. Bell, 591st, Rev. J. Bell, 592nd, Rev. J. Bell, 593rd, Rev. J. Bell, 594th, Rev. J. Bell, 595th, Rev. J. Bell, 596th, Rev. J. Bell, 597th, Rev. J. Bell, 598th, Rev. J. Bell, 599th, Rev. J. Bell, 600th, Rev. J. Bell, 601st, Rev. J. Bell, 602nd, Rev. J. Bell, 603rd, Rev. J. Bell, 604th, Rev. J. Bell, 605th, Rev. J. Bell, 606th, Rev. J. Bell, 607th, Rev. J. Bell, 608th, Rev. J. Bell, 609th, Rev. J. Bell, 610th, Rev. J. Bell, 611th, Rev. J. Bell, 612th, Rev. J. Bell, 613th, Rev. J. Bell, 614th, Rev. J. Bell, 615th, Rev. J. Bell, 616th, Rev. J. Bell, 617th, Rev. J. Bell, 618th, Rev. J. Bell, 619th, Rev. J. Bell, 620th, Rev. J. Bell, 621st, Rev. J. Bell, 622nd, Rev. J. Bell, 623rd, Rev. J. Bell, 624th, Rev. J. Bell, 625th, Rev. J. Bell, 626th, Rev. J. Bell, 627th, Rev. J. Bell, 628th, Rev. J. Bell, 629th, Rev. J. Bell, 630th, Rev. J. Bell, 631st, Rev. J. Bell, 632nd, Rev. J. Bell, 633rd, Rev. J. Bell, 634th, Rev. J. Bell, 635th, Rev. J. Bell, 636th, Rev. J. Bell, 637th, Rev. J. Bell, 638th, Rev. J. Bell, 639th, Rev. J. Bell, 640th, Rev. J. Bell, 641st, Rev. J. Bell, 642nd, Rev. J. Bell, 643rd, Rev. J. Bell, 644th, Rev. J. Bell, 645th, Rev. J. Bell, 646th, Rev. J. Bell, 647th, Rev. J. Bell, 648th, Rev. J. Bell, 649th, Rev. J. Bell, 650th, Rev. J. Bell, 651st, Rev. J. Bell, 652nd, Rev. J. Bell, 653rd, Rev. J. Bell, 654th, Rev. J. Bell, 655th, Rev. J. Bell, 656th, Rev. J. Bell, 657th, Rev. J. Bell, 658th, Rev. J. Bell, 659th, Rev. J. Bell, 660th, Rev. J. Bell, 661st, Rev. J. Bell, 662nd, Rev. J. Bell, 663rd, Rev. J. Bell, 664th, Rev. J. Bell, 665th, Rev. J. Bell, 666th, Rev. J. Bell, 667th, Rev. J. Bell, 668th, Rev. J. Bell, 669th, Rev. J. Bell, 670th, Rev. J. Bell, 671st, Rev. J. Bell, 672nd, Rev. J. Bell, 673rd, Rev. J. Bell, 674th, Rev. J. Bell, 675th, Rev. J. Bell, 676th, Rev. J. Bell, 677th, Rev. J. Bell, 678th, Rev. J. Bell, 679th, Rev. J. Bell, 680th, Rev. J. Bell, 681st, Rev. J. Bell, 682nd, Rev. J. Bell, 683rd, Rev. J. Bell, 684th, Rev. J. Bell, 685th, Rev. J. Bell, 686th, Rev. J. Bell, 687th, Rev. J. Bell, 688th, Rev. J. Bell, 689th, Rev. J. Bell, 690th, Rev. J. Bell, 691st, Rev. J. Bell, 692nd, Rev. J. Bell, 693rd, Rev. J. Bell, 694th, Rev. J. Bell, 695th, Rev. J. Bell, 696th, Rev. J. Bell, 697th, Rev. J. Bell, 698th, Rev. J. Bell, 699th, Rev. J. Bell, 700th, Rev. J. Bell, 701st, Rev. J. Bell, 702nd, Rev. J. Bell, 703rd, Rev. J. Bell, 704th, Rev. J. Bell, 705th, Rev. J. Bell, 706th, Rev. J. Bell, 707th, Rev. J. Bell, 708th, Rev. J. Bell, 709th, Rev. J. Bell, 710th, Rev. J. Bell, 711th, Rev. J. Bell, 712th, Rev. J. Bell, 713th, Rev. J. Bell, 714th, Rev. J. Bell, 715th, Rev. J. Bell, 716th, Rev. J. Bell, 717th, Rev. J. Bell, 718th, Rev. J. Bell, 719th, Rev. J. Bell, 720th, Rev. J. Bell, 721st, Rev. J. Bell, 722nd, Rev. J. Bell, 723rd, Rev. J. Bell, 724th, Rev. J. Bell, 725th, Rev. J. Bell, 726th, Rev. J. Bell, 727th, Rev. J. Bell, 728th, Rev. J. Bell, 729th, Rev. J. Bell, 730th, Rev. J. Bell, 731st, Rev. J. Bell, 732nd, Rev. J. Bell, 733rd, Rev. J. Bell, 734th, Rev. J. Bell, 735th, Rev. J. Bell, 736th, Rev. J. Bell, 737th, Rev. J. Bell, 738th, Rev. J. Bell, 739th, Rev. J. Bell, 740th, Rev. J. Bell, 741st, Rev. J. Bell, 742nd, Rev. J. Bell, 743rd, Rev. J. Bell, 744th, Rev. J. Bell, 745th, Rev. J. Bell, 746th, Rev. J. Bell, 747th, Rev. J. Bell, 748th, Rev. J. Bell, 749th, Rev. J. Bell, 750th, Rev. J. Bell, 751st, Rev. J. Bell, 752nd, Rev. J. Bell, 753rd, Rev. J. Bell, 754th, Rev. J. Bell, 755th, Rev. J. Bell, 756th, Rev. J. Bell, 757th, Rev. J. Bell, 758th, Rev. J. Bell, 759th, Rev. J. Bell, 760th, Rev. J. Bell, 761st, Rev. J. Bell, 762nd, Rev. J. Bell, 763rd, Rev. J. Bell, 764th, Rev. J. Bell, 765th, Rev. J. Bell, 766th, Rev. J. Bell, 767th, Rev. J. Bell, 768th, Rev. J. Bell, 769th, Rev. J. Bell, 770th, Rev. J. Bell, 771st, Rev. J. Bell, 772n

NEW BOOKS.

Now ready, in royal 8vo, with Map and 10 Illustrations.

TRAVELS ON HORSEBACK IN MANCHU TARTARY; being a Summer's Ride beyond the Great Wall of China. By GEORGE FLEMING.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

Now ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.,

THE HON. MRS. NORTON'S NEW NOVEL, LOST AND SAVED. Third Edition.

"Lost and Saved will be read with more interest by those who love a touching story."—Athenæum.
RESPECTABLE SINNERS. By Mrs. BROTHERTON. Author of "Transmigration," 3 vols.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

CATHERINE'S MARRIAGE, June 8.

MR. THE PRINCESS OF WALES'S SCHOOL. A Tale for Young People. By ANNE MANNING. Illustrated by Frederick Tayler. Square 8vo, handsomely bound, 5s.
"Miss Anne Manning's lively little story, 'The Princess of Wales's School,' is a book which will please young readers."—Athenæum.
"Miss Manning's story is a pleasant one, and will be read with interest by those who like stories of school life."—Spectator.
"Miss Manning's story is a very

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1207.—VOL. XLII. SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1863. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

OUR VOLUNTEERS.

THERE are those who, for reasons best known to themselves, have been, and are, in the habit of treating our volunteer system with a contemptuous pity or a sarcastic sneer. They would fain have us believe that the spirit which called into existence an institution eminently national was born only of a temporary enthusiasm which has now died away, and left our volunteer force but a shadow of that which it was, or might have been. These patriotic persons tell us that the predictions of experienced military men which were launched at the time when the organisation of the force began have been fulfilled, and that the great body of citizen troops, in which were once enrolled the flower of our youth and the prime of our manhood, is, practically, a skeleton; and by its existing constitution is not even a satisfactory nucleus for the formation of a real national force. It would not be very difficult to refute these assertions, which are not only contradicted by statistics which may or may not count for much, but are inconsistent with the personal experience of those who are acquainted with the facts of the volunteer movement. It is no doubt true that the enrolled number of men is not more than 170,000, and that this does not adequately realise the idea of the rising in arms of the whole population capable of bearing weapons. It may be that the numerical strength of corps has fallen off, and that demonstrative marchings out are not so frequent as they were a year and a half ago; but it should be remembered that the enthusiasm of Englishmen is tempered by practical good sense, and that the sacrifices of time and money which are indispensable to the conversion of a busy man into a trained soldier need not be continued after that result has been to a certain extent attained. It is the fact that thousands of men, having gone through their courses of drill, and acquired an adequate knowledge of their duties, have retired from active volunteering, but with a deliberate intention of rendering themselves available for the service of their country in time of need. Then, too, in most if not all the corps, the very desirable process of weeding out the mere layfigures in uniforms has proceeded in the natural course of things; and thus the temporary retirement of good men, who would be fit for duty again in a fortnight if necessary, and the elimination of bad men, whom nobody ever wishes to see in the volunteer ranks, even as mere food for powder, have tended to thin the muster-roll to a considerable extent, but without real damage to the movement. As a whole, we believe the volunteer system to be sound at the root, and imperishably imbedded in our national and our social system. Nevertheless, like all our institutions, in perfection is by no means attained, it has difficulties to encounter and dangers to overcome; and, as at this moment a bill is on its passage through the House of Commons having for its object the amendment and consolidation of the laws relating to volunteers, a fitting occasion is afforded for a consideration of the subject in all its bearings.

THE WAR IN AMERICA: SCENE AT FORT MOULTRIE DURING THE BOMBARDMENT OF CHARLESTON.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

It seems to us that the main difficulty of the volunteer system is needless expense, and that the greatest danger comes from its officers. The willingness of the young men of England of all classes to enrol themselves, and to be drilled and disciplined for purposes of national defence, is as great as it was in the earliest infancy of the movement. But, while they are willing to give time, stolen even from their natural rest, and moderate pecuniary subscriptions, for the attainment of this end, they are so pestered and bothered with expenditure for purposes worse than useless, and they have been, and are, so snubbed, and thwarted, and kept down by officers selected on a plan which seems to have no principle but favouritism and job and inefficiency, that there seems almost no alternative but to dissolve the whole institution and remodel it on an entirely new basis. Take, for instance, the item of expense. Why is it that volunteer corps have been compelled to have recourse to balls and theatrical performances, and fancy fairs, and all kinds of modes by which charities are supported, to enable them to obtain means to meet their expenses? It is, amongst other things, because fantastical commanding officers will have bands, which are got together with difficulty, and at most unreasonable sums of money, and are distinguished for their unmusical qualities, while a third of the amount spent upon them would provide well-trained drums and fifes and a supply of bugles quite adequate to their requirements, and much far more military and spirit-stirring. Then the men, in a measure, and the officers in a still greater degree, are worried by changes in the dress, according to the fickle caprices of Colonels. One corps, within our knowledge, and which is nominally a working-man's regiment, was dressed in a handsome as well as serviceable uniform, including a simple cap on the pattern of the French kepi; but its ruling power must needs desire to substitute for it a beavkin cap, like those worn by the Guards—an infliction both on the purses and the heads of the men. In another corps the undress uniform of the officers (what do they want with undress at all?) was in the course of one year changed from a blue-braided frock to a shell-jacket, and back again to the frock, merely at the whim of the Lieutenant-Colonel. It is these and other equally unnecessary changes which have brought the volunteers as suppliants to the War Office for pecuniary grants from the public funds—thus delivering themselves over, bound hand and foot, to that department.

But the greatest grievance and the greatest peril of the volunteer body lies in the existing system of officering the corps. We really do not profess to know on what principle the system is founded, nor can we explain the way in which the officers are appointed, but while the best men are unwilling to take the responsibility of becoming officers until they have learnt their duty in the ranks, others are found less conscientious, and thus ignorance and vanity rush in where zeal and ability fear to tread. The application of a little judicious toadyism to high quarters obtains the desired commission, and then the mischief begins. As a matter of course, the officer who enters a corps on equal terms with a private, so far as professional knowledge is concerned, has less opportunity of learning his duty than the rank and file. It often happens, therefore, that he has to command men who are better acquainted with their drill than he is, and he endeavours to conceal his incompetency by an assumption of the dignity of the officer over the private, which, as between volunteers, is a simple absurdity. Just imagine what corps are proceeding by railway for a field-day, a general order being issued that none but officers will be allowed to travel first-class. In fact, it is notorious that the officers, as a class, have been taking advantage of their factitious authority to play pranks which are modelled on the worst features of the caste system in the regular Army, and that, like all imitators, they have outstripped the originals in the wrong sense of the term. The matter has gone so far that volunteer officers, not content with treating the men, who are quite as good as themselves both in the eye of the law and of society, and in handling of cases much better, in the most contemptuous and exclusive manner, have assumed a power of dismissal without trial or reason when any of the latter have dared to show the slightest symptom of independence. To such an extent has this gone, that where has absolutely been established, to meet and to deal with it, a volunteer protection association. Conceive a body of men, constituted and recruited as our volunteers are, being obliged to have recourse to such a means of vindicating their position against their officers!

And this brings us to the consideration in brief of the bill which is now before Parliament, which seems to aim at establishing by law that social segregation of officers from men which is not necessary for the preservation of the discipline of volunteers, and which, as it is, has done so much mischief to the system. The measure, indeed, might be described in the preamble as a bill for rendering commanding officers of volunteers omnipotent. In the first place, as it well know, Parliament, at the instance of the Government, has voted a capitation grant towards the expenses of the volunteers. The distribution of this sum is to be placed solely in the hands, and at the disposal, of the commanding officer, who is the only judge of the test by which any enrolled member of a corps is to be entitled to the benefit of the grant. Then, a commanding officer may discharge from the corps any volunteer for any breach of military duty, "or for other sufficient cause," the existence and sufficiency of which are to be judged of by the commanding officer alone, from whose decision there will be no appeal. Again, a commanding officer may arrest and keep in custody for a limited time any volunteer who has been guilty of misconduct or disobedience of orders, not only when the volunteer is engaged in drill or military exercises, but while "wearing the clothing or accoutrements" of his corps—a tolerably extensive power, which, however, is somewhat more than down that when the volunteers make rules for the management of their property and finances such rules shall not have effect unless and until the commanding officer of the corps "thinks fit" to transmit them to the Lord Lieutenant of the county which he may also, if he thinks proper, accordingly approve. We have cited these as specimens of the spirit in which the bill is framed; and we believe that if it is suffered to become law it is calculated to strike a heavy blow at the very existence of the volunteer force. Of course, in such a measure as this has not passed unobserved, and means are being taken to oppose the more obnoxious of its provisions.

It is understood that the present Secretary for War, Earl De Grey and Ripon, while holding the second place in the Government, has manifested considerable reluctance to lend assistance from the Government as has been afforded to the volunteers. The zeal and ability with which he laboured to promote the organisation of the force are well known. It is to be hoped that, now that he has become supreme in authority, he will not permit any ill-judged interference with the constitution of the body which owes so much to his fostering care. It is most desirable that he should understand that by the proposed bill the chief vice of the system will be strengthened, and the existing anomalies of the relation between officers and men will be accentuated but enlarged. We should be glad to see the War Office making an attempt to put the officering of volunteers on a better footing. Before receiving commissions candidates should be compelled to prove their qualifications, and there should be built up a promoting efficient men from the ranks, a plan which, we believe is as studiously eschewed in volunteer corps as it is in the regular Army. It is known that the establishment of volunteer corps in our universities, and the adoption of military training in our public schools, were intended to turn out officers for the Army who have no need to learn the very rudiments of their profession after they join their regiments. Why should not officers of volunteers be chosen from the same sources. The Government organs which are attached to most volunteer regiments also afford good training-schools for future officers, and might well be made available for the purpose. But, however it be effected, it is certain that the efficiency, the permanency, and the good feeling of volunteer corps—and these are the three great points of the institution—depend on the establishment of a proper system of officering the regiments.

THE WAR IN AMERICA.

SCENE AT FORT MOULTRIE DURING THE BOMBARDMENT OF CHARLESTON.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

THE SKETCH I send you illustrates one of the most gallant feats in the bombardment of Fort Sumter. I had left my position in the battery Bee and reached Fort Moultrie just in time to witness it. The action was at its height when a ball cut the flagstaff in two just above the traverse, and as it fell it struck a poor fellow on the back of the head, killing him on the spot. The quartermaster of the battalion in the fort immediately rushed forward and seizing the fallen flag tore it from its hold and leapt on to the traverse, where he stood under the heavy fire unmoved, his gallant figure was seen and raised in the place of the shattered staff. The soldiers in the foreground of my Sketch are removing the broken staff from the body of the poor fellow who lies beneath it, and who was the only man killed by the Federal fire.

The Empress Eugénie recently received, as a present from Vevay, a charming gondola, brought by Count Arse, and intended for use on the lake of Geneva during the summer. It is five metres long, is made of pear-tree wood, blacked to imitate ebony, and ornamented with steel studs. In the middle, on the seats, is a light wooden awning, which can be taken off when the weather is fine.

Rear-Admiral Sir Alexander Milne, in her Majesty's ship Euryalus, having been summoned by Colonel Neale, her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Japan, arrived there in the Euryalus on Yokohama on the 29th of January, with the flagship were her Majesty's ships Rattler, Racehorse, Centaur, and Kestrel, which were ordered to proceed to Japan from Hong Kong, Shanghai, Canton, Macao, and the Philippines. The Chargé d'Affaires was about to demand immediate reparation for the murderous attack committed on the British Legation on June 26, during the attack on the British Legation, and the murder of Mr. Richardson, by a body of Japanese, supposed to be retainers of the Daimio Chargé d'Affaires and the Admiral.

PERILOUS ASCENT OF THE PIC DU MIDI D'OSSAU, IN THE PYRENEES.—On the 16th of May a party consisting of three Englishmen, A. G., C. P., and G. H. C., accompanied by three guides, attempted the ascent of the Pic du Midi d'Ossau, a mountain rising to the height of 9,465 feet, on the frontiers of Spain and Navarre. The greatest difficulty and danger, owing to the enormous snow on the precipitous rocks, was encountered in passing a certain ridge, the name from Falco Chasm, a half-pint seen, as, and, after a walk of nearly four hours over steep slopes of snow, arrived at the top of the Col Suzon, which is the termination of the ridge, and commences the last and final preparations for ascending the Pic. During that time they constantly encountered enormous masses of snow, the dimensions of which it is difficult to pass. At half-past eleven they commenced their ascent, and had proceeded about a hundred feet, when one of the party, C. P., lost his grip, and, as it could be spared to accompany him back, he, with much courage, determined to avail on a small ledge of rock for their return, concluding that they would be up in more than four hours absent. The rest of the party then proceeded, sometimes on their hands, sometimes where snow was not to be found, by the perpendicular descent of the avalanches forming one of the chief perils of their journey—and, having reached the summit, descended to the place where they had left their friend, and found that, after three hours' hard climbing, they succeeded in reaching the top of the Pic du Midi d'Ossau. The view from the summit amply repaid by the magnificence of the widely-extended view of the snow-capped Pyrenees. After a short quarter of an hour, enjoying the view, and refreshing the inner man, as much needed, they commenced the descent, which they found far worse than the ascent, as, owing to the advanced hour of the day, it is softer than three o'clock, the crust, yielding to the effect of the sun, had slipped in many places, and there was also fresh danger from avalanches, which at one place they had to let each other down by ropes. It took three hours and a half to reach the spot where they had left their friend, who had then spent six hours and a half waiting on a ledge of a rock. They found him almost insensible from cold and exhaustion, after long watching and anxiety, as, owing to the length of his friends' absence, he had almost despaired seeing them again, considering that some accident must have befallen them, and was going to attempt the descent alone. Having administered brandy, &c., to their friend, which somewhat revived him, they were able to descend with safety, but not without some difficulty, owing to a thick fog, which for a time impeded their progress. They arrived at Eaux-Chaudes at ten p.m.—Daily-news.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Emperor and Empress have left Paris for Fontainebleau.

King Ferdinand of Portugal has arrived in Paris. He paid a visit on Sunday to the Emperor. The Prince of Orange is also in Paris, and has visited the Emperor.

The elections have resulted in a complete defeat of the Administration in Paris, where not a single Government candidate seems to have been returned, though in one or two districts, in which no candidate obtained a legal majority, the Government will have to be ballé; and this in despite of the paring shot fired by M. de Persigny on the eve of the election battle, in the form of a circular to the Prefects, in which he denounced all the Opposition candidates as enemies to the empire, and warned the country against being duped by their manœuvres. M. Thiers, M. Jules Favre, M. Emile Ollivier, and other well-known independent candidates were returned by a considerable majorities. The results in the departments were not all in as we went to press; but it appears that at Marseilles and Lyons the Government has been defeated, the successful candidates at Lyons being M. Berryer, the Legitimist, and M. Marie, the Republican. But generally in the provinces the Government party had had it all their own way. Returns have been obtained of elections accomplished in 268 circumscriptions, and of these 189 were Government candidates chosen. The total of official returns and a few invalid elections remain to be disposed of. The polling took place everywhere with the most perfect order. La France acknowledges that the Parisian elections are symptoms of public opinion which challenge the most serious attention of the Government. Already before the probable resignation of Count Persigny, who has undoubtedly identified himself with the repressive policy lately pursued.

A most interesting military spectacle took place on Thursday week in the Bois de Boulogne. The Emperor reviewed the squadron of Spahis and the battalion of Turcos recently arrived in France. After the review the Spahis performed a "fantasia." With a wild shout the squadron broke, and scattered at full gallop over the plain, pursuing each other, discharging their muskets, tossing them high up in the air at full speed, loading their horses when at the height of their going through all the wild evolutions of a cavalry mêlée among the desert tribes. The crowd was enormous, and both Turcos and Spahis were loudly cheered.

The Grand Prize of Paris, value 100,000f., was run for on Sunday. The Ranger won by a length, the Texas was second, and Mr. Buchanan's third, and Donnybrook fourth. Mr. Savile, the owner of The Ranger, receives 10,000f. for the victory, and the money of the poor of Paris.

The Minister of Commerce has forwarded a circular to the Chambers of Commerce throughout France, announcing that the cotton crop now practised by swindlers in various foreign towns, who, by false pretences, obtain possession of merchandise, and then disappear.

Official despatches from Puebla to the 12th announce that the siege of Puebla is progressing satisfactorily. Still the fighting appears to be much about every day. Forey is to be hotly disputed. The Spanish had routed, by reconnoitring detachments, several bodies of Mexicans who attempted to harass them. The latest official accounts from Puebla to the 30th of April, received via San Francisco, and published by the New York journals, say:—"The French had two further conflicts with the Mexicans, in the first of which the Mexicans had their ground and in the second remained masters of the field, capturing 150 Zouaves. Juarez had left for Comonfort's army, to urge offensive operations."

SPAIN.

Upon the proposition of the President of the Council, the Queen has determined to grant a general amnesty to the persons implicated in the disorders at San Domingo.

The sentence of imprisonment passed upon the Protestants at Malaga has been commuted to banishment, and they are to be conveyed to France.

PORTUGAL.

The King has given a grand dinner party in the Cintra Palace in celebration of the birthday of Her Majesty Queen Victoria.

The discussion of the Budget has terminated; but the chief clauses, having been referred to the committees, must again undergo discussion.

The Chambers have been prorogued until the 6th inst. (b-day).

General Prim has arrived at Lisbon, and one of the officers who landed at the Mindello with Dom Pedro IV., is dead. His funeral was attended with high military honours.

ITALY.

Prince Humbert, the Heir-Apparent to the Crown, presided on Monday at the ceremony of letting water into the Grand Cavour Canal. An immense concourse assembled to witness the ceremony.

The address of the Senate in reply to the Royal speech approves of the Government having re-established good relations with the great Powers, and concluded the convention with France for the suppression of brigandage. It also congratulates the new Spanish Cortes on the completion of the general organisation of the State. The address of the Chamber of Deputies is simply an echo of the King's speech.

PRUSSIA.

It is reported that during the absence of the King, for the benefit of his health, at Carlsbad, his Majesty will be represented by a Viceroy (Statthalter). The Crown Prince having declined, Prince Carl, the brother of the King, will, it is said, fill that post.

The Government has issued a decree with the view of restricting the free action of the press. The decree empowers the administrative authorities to suspend temporarily or altogether newspapers whose attitude is, previous to the publication, found to be guilty, and the authorities are also authorised to prohibit the admission of foreign newspapers which represent in the same vague terms.

The Berlin Review openly advises the King to make a coup d'état, and says that the people are having their own way in their Inland waunige, it only remains for the King to enter upon an ther course of conduct.

DENMARK.

The Cabinet has replied to the Austrian and Prussian notes on the Schleswig-Holstein question. The reply is couched in pacific terms but firm refusal to make any alteration in the recent ordinance severing Holstein from political identity with the rest of the Danish kingdom.

THE INSURRECTION IN POLAND.

All the difficulties in the way of his acceptance of the Greek throne having been at length overcome, Prince William of Denmark has definitively accepted the crown of Greece. To-day (Saturday) the King will receive the final deputation at Christiansburg in solemn audience, in order to announce to them the acceptance of the crown by Prince William. A State banquet will afterwards take place.

Telegrams represent the insurrection as greatly increasing in the palatinate of Augustowo, where the peasantry are described as particularly favourable to the movement.

A very sanguinary engagement took place on the 1st inst. between the Russians and the insurgents, near Ilowy, in which the latter a large number of men. The battle is said to have been renewed on the 2nd, the insurgents at the last accounts remaining masters of the field.

TURKEY.

Fuad Pacha was nominated Grand Vizier on Monday. He will retain the portfolio of Minister of War, with Halil Pacha as deputy.

Emin Pacha has been appointed Minister of the Divan and Ottoman minister at the Conference on the affairs of the Herzegovina in the place of Zia Bey.

AMERICA.

By the arrival of the steamers City of New York and Bohemian we have New York morning journals of the 23rd ult., and a telegram from Farther Point to the evening of that day.

WAR NEWS.

The Federal loss in killed, wounded, and missing in the late battle of Chancellorsville is officially stated to be as follows:—Killed, 1989; wounded, 7867. Between 1700 and 1800 of the wounded were so slightly hurt that they were not off duty a single day.

The chief interest in the recent operations centres in the vicinity of the Mississippi.

General Grant occupied Jackson, the capital of the State of

"LE RELIQUAIRE," BY WALTER GOODALL, FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—SEE PAGE 622.

"LE RELIQUAIRE," BY WALTER GOODALL, FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—SEE PAGE 623.

"CHRIST BLESSING LITTLE CHILDREN," BY HENRY TIDEY, FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

THE title we have affixed (for convenience) to the engraving from Mr. Tidey's drawing in the exhibition of the Institute (heretofore the New Society) of Painters in Water Colours, is not given by the artist, who merely refers to the narrative in St. Matthew's gospel, where our Saviour is not, in so many words, said to "bless" the children brought to Him, but we are told that He put His hands on them, prayed, and checked His disciples for rebuking those that brought them, in the memorable words, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

We are glad to see by the catalogue that Mr. Tidey has painted this work for the Bible Illustration Society. It is time that the popular illustration of the Scriptures should be elevated from the level of the showy, trashy wood engraving, or the still feebler engraving on steel and copper, with no quality of art, no invention or propriety of composition, but proving in every detail ignorance and incapacity, which disfigure most of our family Bibles. It is time our Bible illustrations should at least equal the generally excellent religious designs produced in such profusion by German and other Continental artists, of which we may instance, as one of many examples, the etchings to the Lord's Prayer by the Danish artist M. Fröhlich, which, we hear, are about to be published in this country.

We are no great advocates for an ultra-realistic mode of representing incidents of scriptural narrative. It is impossible to recal the aspect of the Romanised Judea and its inhabitants of eighteen hundred years ago. Therefore, it seems to us injudicious to copy very closely costumes seen in the Mohammedan Palestine of the present day if it involves a necessary surrender of the dignity and elevation which, from the very constitution of our minds, we associate with religious subjects. On the other hand, some reference to Oriental manners and customs—many of which have remarkable persistency—is desirable to give local colour and an air of probability, especially when it enables the artist to escape the conventionalisms of the Renaissance and earlier "Christian art" painters, and when it may be had without such debasement of the theme as we have deprecated. Mr. Tidey, who had previously painted several Eastern subjects, seems to us to come near the juste milieu, though inclining, perhaps, too much to so-called realism. The garments of the Saviour and the rebuking Apostle have the Roman simplicity and amplitude which admit of the breadth and grandeur of what artists speak of as "drapery." The introduction of a swarthy Nubian woman with her two woolly-headed children does not in the least violate probability and will be very suggestive to the Christian philanthropist and friend of emancipation; and her dress is so simple and suitable to the climate that it may have been worn at any time. But the Arab to the right, with the kefiyeh round his head, his rumbas gown, his cloak or pelisse, loose nash'lah, and boots turning up at the toes, looks rather too much (according to our notions) like a modern sheikh. The Jews behind, with their turbans, sashes, baggy trousers, and similar boots are still more decidedly like modern Syrians. The artist may, however, contend with justice that these figures lose no dignity from their dress if we regard them with no association of ideas, and that is quite possible, for, modern as these may look, very similar costumes may have been worn in the days of Abraham. One great and rare merit must be conceded to this drawing—its composition is admirable. The figures, too, are well drawn; the attitudes and gestures expressive and appropriate. Although the material of writer colour may not, as it has been objected, have sufficient force for the most solemn and pathetic incidents of sacred narrative, this is one which of all others seemed most eligible. The delicacy and sweetness of water colour render it peculiarly suitable for representing children. In all the children here introduced the artist has been eminently successful. It would not be easy to praise too highly the ingenuous awe and bewilderment of the two little ones standing together, or the innocent eagerness to be noticed—yet with her arms unconsciously placed on Bright her—of the little girl standing where our Lord has not yet seen her.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 13.

SUNDAY, June 7.—First Sunday after Trinity. Meeting of Henry VIII. of England, and Francis I. of France, at the field of the Cloth of gold," near Ardres, 1520. Royal Assent given to the Reform Bill, 1832.

MONDAY, 8.—The Austrians defeated by Lannes, at Montebello (of which he is made Duke), 1800.

TUESDAY, 9.—The Austrians defeated by Lannes, at Montebello (of which he is made Duke), 1800.

WEDNESDAY, 10.—The Crystal Palace, Sydenham, opened by the Queen, 1854. The Athenian Law for the Confederates at Delos, died at Bagdad, 1451.

THURSDAY, 11.—St. Barnabas, Apostle and Martyr. Death of Sir John Franklin in the Polar regions, 1847.

FRIDAY, 12.—West Tuft and a hundred thousand men encamp at Blackheath, 1381. Act of Settlement passed, which led to the accession of the House of Brunswick, 1701. Trinity Term ends.

SATURDAY, 13.—Battle of Arroi, defeat of the Carlists at Cuddalore by General Stewart, 1783. The Metropolitan Cattle Market, Islington, inaugurated by the Lord Mayor, in the presence of the Prince Consort, 1855.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 13.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
0 30	1 0	1 30	2 0	2 30	3 0	3 30
12 45	1 15	1 45	2 15	2 45	3 15	3 45

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL ARSENAL.

Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF THERMOMETERS.				WIND.		RAIN in 24 hours ending 10 A.M.
	Dry Bulb.	Wet Bulb.	Dew Point.	Elastic Force of Vapour.	Direction.	Horizontal Motion.
	Inches	°	°	Inches.		Miles.	Inches
May 31	59·240	57·3	51·2	·368	S.	241	·000
June 1	29·902	67·0	60·4	·487	W. by W.	193	·000
2	30·014	62·4	53·5	·372	W.	187	·000
3	30·124	62·6	57·0	·410	W.	149	·000
4	29·978	62·0	57·0	·410	W.	149	·000
5	...	...	...	...	S.W.	205	·000
June 12	29·787	54·3	44·4	·271	S.W.	265	·014
,,	29·968	62·7	52·1	·362	S.W. by S.	297	·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:

Barometer (in Inches) corrected	29·854	29·784	29·720	29·711	—	29·748
Temperature of Air	58·2°	57·8°	57·8°	60·4°	—	62·6°
Temperature of Evaporation	52·5°	51·8°	52·2°	57·4°	—	57·8°
Direction of Wind	S.W.	S.W.	S.W.	S.W.	—	S.W.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Triumphant success of the new Comedy of FOLLIES, IN ART AND ACCOUNTS! in five acts, by Mr. Tom Taylor, author of "Still Waters Run Deep," "The Ticket-of-Leave Man," &c., which has a Panorama of the Town of the Present at Noon in the East. The new Farces AN UNLUCKY MORTAL every evening. On MONDAY, JUNE 8 and during the week, AN UNLUCKY MORTAL. After which, at 8 Quarter to Eight, the new Comedy of FINESSE, OR BIT BY BIT, every evening. Doors open at Seven. Box-office at HOME the three nights only. On Thursday a new Farce, entitled BABY MINDING.

NEW THEATRE-ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor

and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER.—The most successful Drama of the Week, THE WILFUL MURDER, every evening at Seven. On MONDAY, and during the week, THE WILFUL MURDER. Scenes: H.R., Theatre Royal, Drury Lane; Mr. Webster, Mr. Selby, Mr. Gurney, Mr. Cathcart, Mr. Ellis, Mr. Ryan, Mr. Wilkinson, Mr. Gardner, Mr. Carey and Mr. Addison; Mrs. Keeley, Miss Keeley, Miss Fitzwilliam, and Miss Woolgar.

THEATRE ROYAL, LYCEUM.—MONDAY, and every evening during the Week, A SUDDEN ATTACK—Hearts, Shots, Garden, Wedding, Blue Stockings, and Mr. Lee. After which, at 8 Quarter to Seven, a Drama, in Two Acts and Fifth copies of the Romantic Drama, in Three Acts, and Prologue, entitled THE DUKE'S MOTTO. Doors open at Half-past Six. Box-office open from Ten to Five. Characters sustained by Messrs. Rouse, J. Stoyngham, H. Wieland, Lingham, G. Jackson, Ryder, Hemsley, Wilkinson, and Dawson; Misses Caroline Lucknow, Kate Terry, E. Lawrence, and Hewerdy. Doors open at Seven, commence at Half-past.

MR. LUMLEY'S BENEFIT.—Last Night.

THIS EVENING, TUESDAY, DRURY LANE.
On MONDAY, JUNE 8, Meyerbeer's Opera of LES HUGUENOTS, and Mdme. Alboni, LA FIGLIA DEL REGGIMENTO. Fourth Act of LA TRAVIATA, and other Entertainments. At mid-Night, the Grand Ball.

MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.—ST. JAMES'S HALL.

BEETHOVEN NIGHT on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 8. Pianoforte, Mdme. Arabella Goddard; Violoncello, Signor Piatti; Violin, Herr Joachim; Vocalist, Mr. Sims Reeves. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Balcony, 2s.; Admission, 1s. Programmes and Tickets at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street; and at usual Agents.

BEETHOVEN NIGHT at the MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS on MONDAY EVENING NEXT, JUNE 8.

MR. SIMS REEVES will SING "Adelaida" (accompanied by Mdme. Arabella Goddard) "The Serenet" and "The Miller Boy." Pianoforte, Mdme. Arabella Goddard; Violoncello, Signor Piatti; Violin, Herr Joachim. On WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 8. Programmes and Tickets at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street; and at usual Agents. Private Box, £1 1s.

MDME. ARABELLA GODDARD will PLAY Beethoven's

Sonata Appassionata for Pianoforte alone, and join Sainton Piatti in Beethoven's Trio in E flat, for Pianoforte and Violin and Violoncello, at the MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS, ST. JAMES'S HALL, on MONDAY EVENING NEXT, JUNE 8. Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Balcony, 2s.; Area, 1s. Tickets and Programmes at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

AGRICULTURAL HALL, Islington.—MR. SIMS REEVES

in the CREATION.—MR. J. BENEDICT begs to announce a grand performance of Haydn's Oratorio, THE CREATION, in the AGRICULTURAL HALL, Islington, on WEDNESDAY EVENING, NEXT, JUNE 8, 1863, by the Sacred Harmonic Society and Mr. Benedict's Choir. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Admission, 5s., 2s., and 1s. Commence at Half-past Seven.

S. THALBERG'S FAREWELL.—S. Thalberg's remaining

Matinées and last appearance in London will take place at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS on MONDAY NEXT, JUNE 8 (his last appearance but one). The Farewell Matinée and last appearance on MONDAY, JUNE 15. The concerts will commence at Three o'clock. Stalls, 7s.; Family Tickets, Three Guineas; Unreserved Seats, 2s. 6d.; may be had at the Hanover-square Rooms, and at the usual Agents. Last Night of Mr. Hall's Concert, when the whole strength of the corps de ballet will appear.

MDME. SAINTON-DOLBY and M. SAINTON beg to announce that they will give a GRAND CONCERT at ST. JAMES'S HALL, on WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 17, at Three o'clock precisely, when a selection of their most admired vocal and instrumental pieces will have the honour of appearing.—Vocalists, Mdme. Goldsmith, Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, Mdme. Weiss, Mdme. Rudersdorff, Mdme. Sainton-Dolby, Mdme. Viardot, Mdme. Alboni, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, Mr. Weiss, and Mr. Sainton. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Pianoforte, Mdme. Arabella Goddard, Mdme. Sainton, and Mr. Charles Hallé. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony, 7s.; Gallery, 3s. Doors open at Two. Tickets at Austin's Ticket Office, St. James's Hall, 28, Piccadilly, and Mr. Sainton, 9, Upper Wimpole-street, W.

EGYPTIAN HALL.—The Canoe, the Ride, and the Axe.—

MR. F. S. HOLLINS, F.R.G.S., AT HOME IN THE WILDERNESS. Scenes and Incidents in the Trail of a Trapper and Hunter—extending through the hunting-grounds of the Blackfeet and Crow Indians, from Fort Benton to the Rocky Mountains, and down the Valley of the Missouri to the Monmouth Trail. The Home of the Beholden. The Trapper's Story. EVERY EVENING at Eight, and MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and SATURDAY Afternoons at Three o'clock. Three others: Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Stalls, 2s.; Balcony, 1s.; Gallery, 1s. Box Office open from Ten till Four p.m.

ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—In consequence of the programme not having yet been made for the Grand Fête of June 13, the Gates will be CLOSED on TUESDAY, the 9th inst.

By order of the Council. ANDREW MURRAY.

POLYTECHNIC.—All the Lectures and Entertainments as delivered before the Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Prince Alexandra of Denmark, and the Royal Family, at Sandringham, on TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, and THURSDAY last, at Windsor Castle, on FRIDAY, and at the Polytechnic on SATURDAY last. The Queen's Grand Opera of "LUCIA DI LAMMERMOOR." Engagement of Mdlle. Rosina Isidor for Six Nights only. Mdlle. Isidor's Farewell Benefit, on Saturday next, when she will appear in the Queen's Opera of "LUCIA DI LAMMERMOOR." Lecture by J. Pollard, Esq., depicting the Highest Mountains of the Country. Fashionable Dresses by J. C. King, Esq.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—GRAND ARCHERY MEETING.—

THE GREAT MEETING of the ARCHERS of the UNITED KINGDOM will take place in the Grounds on THURSDAY and FRIDAY next, JUNE 11 and 12.
The Prizes will be given by the Queen, and will be delivered by the Prince of Wales.
The Gentlemen will commence shooting at Eleven o'Clock precisely, and the Ladies at Two o'Clock.
Luncheon in the Grounds at half-past One.
Privileged Tickets, admitting the Bearer within the Ropes and permitting the Holders to occupy the Reserve in the Centre, Half-a-Crown each, may be had on the Ground each day.
NOTE.—The GREAT SUMMATIONS and ENTIRE SERIES of WATERWORKS will be displayed on THURSDAY at the conclusion of the Shooting. Military Bands will perform on the Ground each day.
A Monster Concert, Half-a-Crown; Friday, One Shilling. Season Tickets free.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Week ending Saturday, June 13.

Open Monday at Nine, this day at Ten.
Orchestral Band at 1 and 4.30. Organ Performances at 2.30 daily.
The Park and Grounds are peopled with thousands of Handsome Statues and other Attractive Objects in Bronze.
Picture Gallery, Sculpture Gallery, and Great Picture Gallery. Immense assortment of Useful and Fancy Goods on sale in the Exhibition Department.
Thursday and Friday, Annual Grand Archery Meeting; Display of Great Fountains on Thursday; Monster Concert.
Saturday, Handel Festival, Fourth Grand Concert.
Admission: Thursday, Half-a-crown; Saturday, Five Shillings; other days, One-Shilling. Children under Twelve, Half-price. Season Tickets free.
Programmes obtained after 1.30 on Saturday on showing their tickets.

On SATURDAY NEXT, the 13th inst.,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

WILL CONSIST OF

TWO WHOLE SHEETS,

comprising, among others, the following Illustrations:—
The Prince and Princess of Wales at Ascot.
View on the Barbon and Midland Railway, recently opened.
Two large Engravings of the proposed Thames Embankment.
A Series of Engravings of Hindoos.
The Grand Race at Longchamps.
Repairing Damages at Fort Sumter, Charleston, after the Bombardment. &c.
Price of the whole, 5d.; Stamped, 6d.
Office, 198, Strand.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1863.

"PARIS is France," say Frenchmen. "The empire is from the cottage," says he who is most interested in the conservation of Imperialism. The two sentiments have just come into collision, and Europe is looking on. The French elections have taken place, and Paris has returned Opposition candidates by large majorities. Not mere Opposition candidates, in the sense in which party feeling is understood in England, but men who are pledged to vote for the existing rule in France, but who have been denounced and defied by the Government, and placed in the position, not of opponents, but of bitter and deadly enemies. Add that the elected men are among the ablest writers and speakers in Europe, and we shall arrive at a comprehension of the terrible blow which has been effectively dealt by the educated and intellectual portion of France, at the Imperial system.

It is but a handful of men that has been returned as the Opposition to the Tuileries. The cottage dwells an enormous and overwhelming majority. But, sententiæ ponderantur non numerantur. The peasants, who are by no means sure that they are not voting for the Napoleon Bonaparte who sustained some damage at Waterloo, but afterwards returned, won some tremendous battle or other, and has been reigning ever since, have chosen the commercial men so strongly recommended to them by the Mayors and the policemen; but Paris has chosen M. Thiers, who knows all the truth about that same Napoleon, whom he himself has made a little fall in his books. It is Paris, impatient of the paternal system that keeps her in such splendid order, that has availed herself of a little concession of liberty of speech, and has suddenly shouted out in language that will be heard all over the world. All the sycophantic lackeys and evil-eyed policemen in France cannot silence that cynical Paris. She has delivered her epigram, and the arrow, barbed and poisoned, sticks, and will stick; and she returns to her salons her best statesmen with a fatal smile of satisfaction. There has been no such important event since the days of that famous December, dear to Victor Hugo.

All very well to lay the disaster at the door of M. de Persigny, He himself says so, and, in descending into the scene, sprinkling and scolding, and publishing counter addresses which made Paris laugh, not altogether ill-naturedly. But he did as he was bid, and he was bid to make a mistake. That, however, has but increased the majorities against Government; it did not create them. We have perceived and accepted the situation, as it is the boast of Imperialism to do upon all occasions of difficulty. It seems almost impossible that he should not have understood the feeling of Paris, though we know how very hard it is for Power to learn in a palace, and how cruel it seems to a courtier to say anything that is not pleasant. Still, M. de Persigny, all Imperialist as he is, is a man of the world, and might be expected to know what was going on in it. Yet no stupid, bigoted, provincial Curé could have acted more thoroughly on a church question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all told to do, have a tolerably plausible case. But it will not hold water. It is too much to tell the thinking population of Europe that a whole city, which includes nearly all the intellect of France, has returned members to the Chamber in opposition to the Government of the nation merely because it has been incensed by the impertinence of an official. It is insulting to the thousands of Frenchmen of the best class who have defeated the Government even to a chimed question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all told to do, have a tolerably plausible case. But it will not hold water. It is too much to tell the thinking population of Europe that a whole city, which includes nearly all the intellect of France, has returned members to the Chamber in opposition to the Government of the nation merely because it has been incensed by the impertinence of an official. It is insulting to the thousands of Frenchmen of the best class who have defeated the Government even to a chimed question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all told to do, have a tolerably plausible case. But it will not hold water. It is too much to tell the thinking population of Europe that a whole city, which includes nearly all the intellect of France, has returned members to the Chamber in opposition to the Government of the nation merely because it has been incensed by the impertinence of an official. It is insulting to the thousands of Frenchmen of the best class who have defeated the Government even to a chimed question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all told to do, have a tolerably plausible case. But it will not hold water. It is too much to tell the thinking population of Europe that a whole city, which includes nearly all the intellect of France, has returned members to the Chamber in opposition to the Government of the nation merely because it has been incensed by the impertinence of an official. It is insulting to the thousands of Frenchmen of the best class who have defeated the Government even to a chimed question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all told to do, have a tolerably plausible case. But it will not hold water. It is too much to tell the thinking population of Europe that a whole city, which includes nearly all the intellect of France, has returned members to the Chamber in opposition to the Government of the nation merely because it has been incensed by the impertinence of an official. It is insulting to the thousands of Frenchmen of the best class who have defeated the Government even to a chimed question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all told to do, have a tolerably plausible case. But it will not hold water. It is too much to tell the thinking population of Europe that a whole city, which includes nearly all the intellect of France, has returned members to the Chamber in opposition to the Government of the nation merely because it has been incensed by the impertinence of an official. It is insulting to the thousands of Frenchmen of the best class who have defeated the Government even to a chimed question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all told to do, have a tolerably plausible case. But it will not hold water. It is too much to tell the thinking population of Europe that a whole city, which includes nearly all the intellect of France, has returned members to the Chamber in opposition to the Government of the nation merely because it has been incensed by the impertinence of an official. It is insulting to the thousands of Frenchmen of the best class who have defeated the Government even to a chimed question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all told to do, have a tolerably plausible case. But it will not hold water. It is too much to tell the thinking population of Europe that a whole city, which includes nearly all the intellect of France, has returned members to the Chamber in opposition to the Government of the nation merely because it has been incensed by the impertinence of an official. It is insulting to the thousands of Frenchmen of the best class who have defeated the Government even to a chimed question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all told to do, have a tolerably plausible case. But it will not hold water. It is too much to tell the thinking population of Europe that a whole city, which includes nearly all the intellect of France, has returned members to the Chamber in opposition to the Government of the nation merely because it has been incensed by the impertinence of an official. It is insulting to the thousands of Frenchmen of the best class who have defeated the Government even to a chimed question than M. de Persigny has acted in a matter involving his religion—Napoleonism. It may be convenient to make him the scapegoat, and, in truth, the blunders he has committed are of such magnitude that those who wish to make a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, as we are all to

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

Mr. Göschen, a Churchman of marked Liberal opinions, was on Tuesday elected for the City, without opposition, in the room of Mr. Western Wood, deceased.

A public meeting of the inhabitants of Westminster, in favour of Polish nationality, was held on Tuesday evening in the Temperance Hall, Broadway, Westminster—Mr. George Potter in the chair.

The committee for the City entertainment to the Prince and Princess of Wales have effected an extra insurance of £50,000 on the building at Guildhall, including new carpets, fittings, and decorations, for six weeks.

The Hon. Corporation of Trinity House held the annual Court on Monday for the election of the various officers. Viscount Palmerston was re-elected Master, and Captain Denman Deputy Master.

The Government has agreed to take the International Exhibition building off the hands of the Royal Commissioners and the contractors. It is estimated that £584,000 will be required for the purchase of the site and removal of the surplus and various other alterations, but for the present year it is only proposed to take a vote of £179,000.

The flower show at the Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, on Wednesday, was one of the most brilliant ever held in the metropolis. More than 10,000 persons, including the duke of London society, were present, enjoying the attractions of the show, which were supplemented by a magnificent promenade summer weather. The azaleas were especially beautiful, and the roses were seen in perfection.

The Duke of Cambridge presided, on Wednesday, at a meeting of the Society of Arts. Mr. Hawes read a report on the proposed new International Exhibition, and, after some short discussion, the Duke of Cambridge delivered an address on the general subject of international exhibitions. He approved of them highly, but expressed his opinion that, in order to render their highest results, they should not be held too frequently.

The public have lately been informed, through the newspapers, that the freedom of the City is to be conferred on the Prince of Wales on the 9th of July next. The fact is not strictly true; the Prince of Wales was born free. The late Lord Cranworth was the only person upon whom the Prince of Wales has been; all the Royal children are therefore born before the Lord Mayor has authority over them, and, as they are born free, the Corporation do not invite him, not to accept, but to receive, the freedom by presenting himself and making the usual declarations.—City Press.

A meeting of the inhabitants of Southwark was held on Monday, at the Bridge House Hotel, to consider what steps should be taken of the new St. Thomas's Hospital. Mr. Locke, M.P., was in the chair. Resolutions were unanimously carried to the effect that the new metropolitan hospital in the Surrey Gardens was quite insufficient for its purpose, and that the new hospital ought not to be removed further from the centre of the population than Newington Church or Bedlam.

On Thursday morning the children of the metropolis assembled, according to annual custom, at St. Paul's Cathedral. From all parts of London they marched towards the cathedral, headed by the contingents of the parishes, churchwardens, and other officials, bearing flags and banners, by the help of which each school was known to its own supporters. It was, when all the related rests were filled, the same was of a very animated character. The service, full choral service, and the sermon was preached by the Most Rev. Dr. Thomson, Archbishop of York.

Last week the births of 1907 children—1005 boys and 902 girls—were registered in London. In the corresponding week of the years 1853-62 the average number (corrected) was 1770. In the week last ended only 1660 were born, the total number registered in London in 1862, exhibiting a slight increase on that of the previous week, which was 1205. The average number, as obtained by the return of corrected weekly averages in the ten years 1853-62, corrected for increase of population, is 1139. The total of deaths registered in Plumstead in the week was 20, according to the paper on the walls of the bedroom containing large quantities of arsenic. The medical and coroner's examination proceeds.

RELIGIOUS AND BENEVOLENT SOCIETIES.—The annual dinner of the Royal Society of Musicians took place on the 1st inst. Tuesday evening at the Albion Hotel, Aldersgate-street. Lord Brougham occupied the chair, and about 200 gentlemen sat down. The noble chairman stated, that of "Prosperity to the Hospital" was drunk, the chairman in proposing the toast said, in regret that the receipts were not larger than £3000. Subscriptions to the amount of £3000 were announced. Her Majesty, who is patroness, sent £50.

The twenty-fifth anniversary festival of the Royal Orthopœdic Hospital was held on Wednesday week at Freemasons' Tavern, under the presidency of Lieutenant-General Sir James Yorke Scarlett, K.C.B. During the past year there has been a considerable accession of funds, enabling the committee to enlarge all current expenses, to apply £1000 in reduction of the mortgage debt, and to make investments to the amount of £2000, whereby the income of new patients admitted during the year was 1889, making a total of 20,287 since the opening of the hospital. There are still 1150 applications on the list for admission. The donations and subscriptions announced, including £200 from the Mercers' Company, amounted to upwards of £1000.

The annual meeting in behalf of the funds of the Strangers' Home, Limehouse, and for the benefit of Asiatics, Africans, and others, from the East, took place on Monday at Willis's Rooms—Sir T. Fowell Buxton, Bart., the vice-president, in the chair. During the year 1862 there was a considerable increase in the number of contributors to the home, but a falling off in the subscriptions to the amount of £1000 were sent to the home and their maintenance paid by their employers. Of under instructions from Government for India, and 114 came to the Home at their own accord, and paid for their food and lodging. The expenditure amounted to £2000, which with receipts from all sources were £3858. The total debt of the institution amounted to £2000, the expenditure of the year having been unusually heavy.

The annual meeting of the National Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the Established Church was held on Wednesday at Willis's Rooms—the Archbishop of Canterbury in the chair. There was a numerous and influential attendance of the friends of the society. The report stated that to the Committee of Council of Education refusing the usual grants for the training schools, on the increased difficulty of obtaining subscriptions, and from the Crimean Fund, the committee trusted that trustees would not thereby be discouraged from undertaking for future. A resolution was passed to the effect that schools whose trust deeds provided for all the children being taught the Church Catechism should also be connected with the new National Society.

The Royal grand Caledonian fancy-dress ball is to take place at Willis's Rooms on the 10th inst., the anniversary dinner on behalf of the Warrant Officers in the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, on the 11th, the seventh anniversary festival of the Great Northern Hospital, at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, on the 16th; a grand military concert at the Royal Highness the Princess Mary's fund for providing nurses in the Crimean War, at Willis's Rooms, on Wednesday evening, the 17th; the Caledonian Society's anniversary dinner at the London Tavern, on the 18th; the fifty-fourth anniversary festival and the general meeting and election of the Asylum for Fatherless Children, at the Freemasons' Tavern, on the 19th; a musical examination in connection with the asylum, at the asylum, on the 13th. The Prince of Wales is to lay the foundation stone of the Warehousemen and Clerks' new schools on the 11th of July next.

LAW AND POLICE.—The private relations of the favourite engineer, Mr. Thomas Swan Path, have for some time been a matter of scandal. The young lady is not yet twenty, and a Mr. James Macdonald applied last week in the Lambeth Police-court for her arrest. Miss Path appeared against her father, Salvatore Patti, and Maurice Strakosch, a brother-in-law. Macdonald is a friend of the grandmother, it was said, of the complainant's intended, controlled her movements, and received out of her performances profits which amounted in the year to upwards of £1,000. Patti denied that he was receiving letters or communicating with her friends—that is, the particular friends Macdonald. The application was refused, the magistrate stating that he did not believe the case. The Vicar's husband, Mr. Strakosch, and Patti himself was heard privately, but the facts are gathered from letters that have been subsequently published. It appears that Miss Patti was in so temporary the discarded nobleman declares that he cannot hold himself any longer engaged to her by the tie of honour, "as this illegitimate and perfidious manner," and wishes it proclaimed to the public, not that there is as yet "an impossibility" between the young lady, but that such a thing may occur, and that even at the present time there certainly is not "the remotest probability" of a speedy coming off.

An action on a promissory note in the Court of Exchequer on Saturday last had some features of interest. The borrower obtained the money from a third party, and there appeared no reason to doubt his statement that he subsequently paid the amount of the money to the same party in conformity with the date of the note, requiring two copies of the plea to be delivered to the Lord Chief Baron before the day of hearing.

The Middlesex Sessions for June commenced on Monday morning. The calendar contains the names of 76 prisoners, of whom 11 can neither read nor write, 2 can read only, 37 can read and write imperfectly, and 3 only can read and write well.

FINE ARTS.

EXHIBITION OF REJECTED PICTURES.

The French artists have lately opened in Paris an exhibition of the works rejected from this year's salon, and something of the kind has just been attempted by a few of our English painters. A so-called "Private Exhibition of Rejected Pictures not Hung in the Royal Academy for want of space" is to be seen at the old-fashioned and dilapidated gallery of Mr. Cosmopolite Smith, Charles-street, Berkeley-square—a gallery which, if used for the purpose of giving receptions to distinguished foreigners (such, we believe, being the referable object of the present exhibition little-known club)—must, we fear, give our "distinguished" visitors a rather cheerless idea of the English club life.

The pictures—numbering about twenty-six—in this exhibition are properly entitled "Rejected Pictures," because they scarcely possess a title of the number rejected—hardly, we may say on good authority, a fourth or a fifth. The Royal Academy is not to blame for this.

Strongly as all will sympathise with these unfortunate artists, it would be prejudicial to their true interests, as well as unjust to their brethren, to class their works beyond the pale of fair criticism against the Academy on a wrong footing. The average quality, then, of these works, we will say at once, is rather below than above that of the average of the pictures (excluding for the moment the many decidedly inferior works by academicians and associates) in the best places at the Academy; and as all are minute in detail it would have been more crucial to the artists when they could not have been fairly subject to reject them altogether.

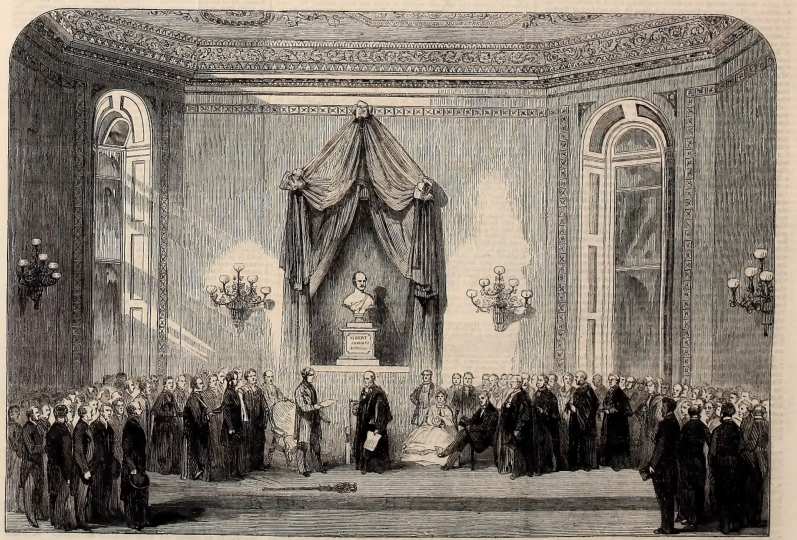
We were surprised to find that Mr. Brett's pictures are not in this collection of rejected works, but in the exhibition in addition to that due to the public, after what has been said of them with, as all will infer, the highest approbation. Another circumstance that very greatly lessens the importance of this exhibition, if intended to prove the charge, by the way, that nearly all the contributors have sent their works on "the line," or, at all events, "placed," in the Academy. Here is Mr. O. D. Leslie, for instance, with a picture trivial in conception and feeble in execution, entitled "Lucy Ashton at the Well-Tree Bank," a well-imagined subject, though immature in handling. Mr. Lee, R.A., has sent to the Academy his "Sale of Miss Cobora, of a German "Spinnstube," in we are bound to say, by no means her very best work. Mr. Frederick Goodall, Mr. Mac Callum has three admirable landscapes; but they do not materially differ in character from the two, perhaps rather inferior, works sent to the Academy—"Sunset on the Ill," and "Lunate Port." Mr. Mason has not been very well placed, and the "Lost Path" is insufficient to judge him by. Mr. Hughes has a touching picture called "Home from Sea" in the Academy exhibition, and his larger picture, "Ave Maria, Stella, ora pro nobis Mere" is altogether unpleasant, and the commonplace expressions deprive the picture of the impressiveness it might have. Then have had a fair opportunity of judging Redgrave's picture on "the line" at the Academy, "The First Sight of the Armada," produced several years ago, and Solomon's "Sale of Goods of the Bankrupt" here been exhibited also. And (although two or three of these works are admirable) Mr. Hook's "Sea Shore," Mr. Cooper, Mr. J. B. Bedford—whose Sarah, in his picture of "Ishmael Seeking," is quite sufficient to redeem the whole picture—Mr. Davis and Mr. W. Ascroft, all exhibitors here, have each and all pictures in the Academy. When these are deducted from the number of the pictures in this exhibition, and the drawings in water drawing, by seven artists! Strange to say, none of our contemporaries has noticed this exhibition, and we, therefore, feel, to a certain extent, attacked the Academy unfairly. Nearly all the artists in this exhibition have, we believe, been actuated by good discretion—not to say modesty—had they sent their works to some one of many galleries which would have given them a ready admission. Many of the pictures, however, have a considerable distinction of not having commanded space elsewhere. All but a few of our principal artists have, in fact, been represented on the walls in the Royal Academy. We would wish to see our chief annual exhibition as open as it can be, and we would not exclude any. We would wish to see the greatest range and diversity of good work therein illustrated; but we would not have it turned into a mart for the sale of any inferior work that any artist may think fit to send.

The painters who have had the Academy closed to them altogether this year and who would have been excluded from it in 1864 by those are two landscapes by Mr. Bonney, "His first Scrape," by Mr. Cooley, a brutal subject, and "Sunday Morning," one of the most pleasing and more important works—"Golgotha—"Where they nailed Him," by Mr. P. R. Morris, and "An Allegory," by Mr. H. Bridges. The first is a picture of the Crucifixion, surrounded by Jews from the neighbouring Jerusalem wistfully surveying or loitering about the accustomed scene, and the work is that of a man who, on the morning after that event, so portentous even to the most ignorant of the spectators, left his work-bench, his tools, and his wife and children curiously examine it, and thoughtlessly feel the points of the blood-stained nails. Remarkably original in conception; the sound and finished execution corresponds with the idea. We cannot imagine why, unless it is desired to discourage all originality and attention of study, this picture was excluded from the Royal Academy. "Allegory" typifies the Church and the World, as we infer by the passage quoted from the Book of Revelations. The Church in her dress meets in a path among trees a party of maidens, who are supposed to ultimately reply to her song in praise of Him who is the chief corner stone, and whose she seeks, that they will also seek Him with her. The artist here labours under the disadvantage of a subject which, from the very nature of things, cannot be forced into the form of pictorial incident, nor even the expression of countenance. The figures have only to express what the spectator does not bring to it. With no intangible a theme, and with only a single figure treated with any degree of power, the painter has given us young ladies, with modern air, in costumes of the sixteenth century. In the technical part of this picture, however, although it is by no means finished, the work is remarkable for a little evidence of inexperience. The colouring, particularly of the figures, is rather cold.

A great deal has been said respecting the hanging of the pictures at the Academy this year. As regards the works by "outsiders" it is, indeed, if we may so call it, a most unprejudiced fortunate or the reverse, and for the situation of which some allowance must be made on the score of space and of competing pictures, especially on the evenly covering a given wall space with pictures of all sizes, we assert in favourable comparison with the exhibition of the works

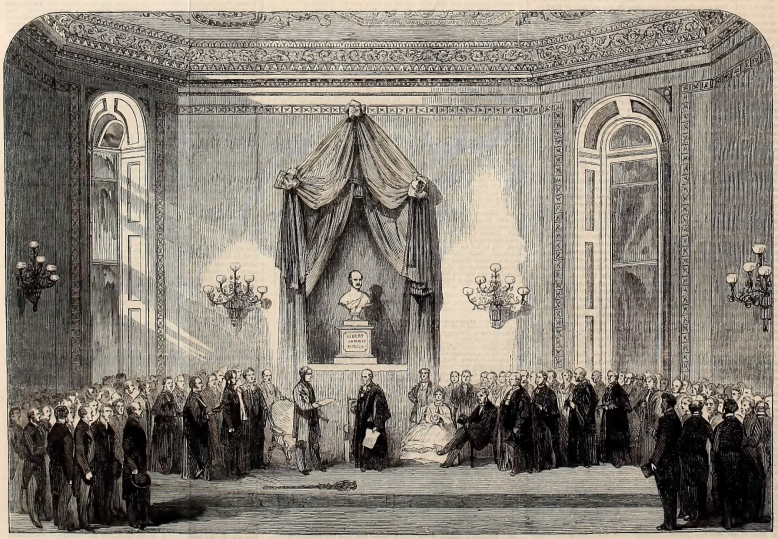
VOLUNTEER SHAM FIGHT AT SOUTHEND ON WHIT MONDAY.—SEE PAGE 622.

CRICKET MATCH BETWEEN THE UNITED AND ALL-ENGLAND ELEVENS AT LORD'S GROUND.—SEE PAGE 622.



INAUGURATION OF THE ALBERT HALL, ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS, DUBLIN.—SEE PAGE 624.

WHIT MONDAY.—SEE PAGE 622.



INAUGURATION OF THE ALBERT HALL, ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS, DUBLIN.—SEE PAGE 614.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

SINCE the remembering of Parliament after the Whitsuntide recess Mr. Gladstone has been practising leadership, and testing his qualifications for that function. It has been murmured gently that Lord Palmerston has had a Chatham-like fit of the gout; that is, having had a little difference with some of his more active and erratic colleagues (from the genius point of view) colleagues in the Cabinet, he found it convenient to cover annoyance—we will not say sulks—by maintaining his holiday retirement at Brocket Hall for several extra days, in company with alleged doses of colchicum and water gruel. However this may be, the fact is that he did not appear on Monday night; and with him the Whig section of the Cabinet was absent, so that Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Milner Gibson were left to bear the brunt on the assumption of timidity and a negation of the responsibility in the absence of his noble friend by Mr. Disraeli. This was almost unmanning, because everybody knows that the one thing in which he believes as his culminating crush of Mr. Disraeli is his promotion to the leadership of the House. He knows that Lord John will not do it; well: but it is very much to be doubted if Mr. Gladstone is fitted for such a duty. His temperament is against it; his habits, however temporary, in the truth and value of whatever he has to do, are too energetic; and he is utterly deficient in the substantial quality of patience; while the fact that he is more admired than liked by the House renders his attainment of success in such a function very doubtful. However, he had the debate on the Scotch-road contract all in his own hands; and, so far as pressing his case on the House and unwilling members like an attorney's clerk, unsupported, he managed well enough. His speech, in reply to Mr. Walpole's pompous parade of technicalities and inchrymous tenderness for the purity of the Constitution, as it was involved in'a contract for the conveyance of mails, was tremendously vigorous. It was the speech of a man of jobbery in relation to mail contracts a scapegoat had been selected, and he was hunted to the death with all the skill and ardour which mark the Gadsonian chase. Not that the fun was all on one was a pause, and the debate nearly lapsed, when Lord John Manners, who has a strange faith in his own Parliamentary and galvanised energy, stood up, and, in a tone pitched in "full," declared that he would demolish Mr. Gladstone's argument in one word. Nobody laughed, for the exhibition was only saddening. Why was it that Mr. Disraeli (who, by-the-by, kept remarkably quiet during all the Chamberlaud row) left the whole responsibility after Lord John Manners had concluded? Was it to indulge in secret in another which he could not, for the life of him, put into House? People will ask why it is that Mr. Lindsay always rises with the late Chamberlaud affair? Why it is that no information about mail contracts is brought against them and nobody replies? How lousy Lord Robert Cecil is as a member of Parliament. He seems to think that it is his duty to sit on the front bench in all debates. At least, he lays down emphatically the rule and square upon which everything ought to be done and said, and he is always manages to stand in the middle of the floor, and turns about in all directions, he appears to be looking for the point of scolding, with perfect success. As this Chanchward debate was a pretty struggle between the ins and the outs, there had been a tremendous whip on both sides; and the Government, having got all their men up by half-past six, it was resolved to take the division before seven, and all parties on both sides were kept down. The Opposition was not so ready, and they put up Sir Sydney Kelly, who has that unfortunate habit of mistaking consists in talking for any time and under any disadvantages; and he went on, regardless of his absolute power of boring every one round him, until Mr. Whitmore intimated to Mr. Disraeli that he had done his spouting so far as the division was concerned, and that it must come then; upon which the leader of the Opposition rose from one of his duties—that is, he pulled the tail of Sir Fitzroy's coat, the wall-horse signal to a taller colleague, and left the House, and was all over with Mr. Churchward.

Mr. Gregory is very nearly a personage in the House of Commons. He has the art of taking up subjects which are good for talk and nothing else, and of getting his motions the head of the paper. His speaks tolerably well, and he is industrious in collecting materials, but is not so embarrassed by masses of documents as some gentlemen are who know of devastating them into the waste paper basket on the average. But he falls into a fatal error when he consumes two hours or more in elaborating an abstract question, and then adds that it is nothing. In bringing forward his motion on the subject of Turkey, he is understood to have the finances of that country at his finger ends; but that great dame was peering with her bright eyes upon him from the Ladies' Gallery, no doubt he felt that he could go on for ever. It was difficult for those to address a subject who had not time to read it if his audience in the house were under thirty in number: For some time there remained to listen to him, the Ministerial bench on the Government and seven on the Opposition side. That is the question. War has speech—however complete it may be—ever come to an end? Mr. Baillie Cochrane, fresh from a trip to Greece, did not in the least freshen up the debate; but Mr. Layard, who was compromised by his wife and, delivered a most interesting account of his personal adventures in the East, is a great advantage to a debate. He has a straight forward illustration of his argument, to be able to say, I saw that which I speak. Mr. Layard, with his fine voice, and good delivery, is master the speech was rugged and disjointed, owing to Mr. Layard's deficiency in the mechanism of speaking. A debate on Turkey, and Lord Palmerston not there! It was understood that Mr. Gladstone, who had gone out to dinner, came in soon after ten o'clock, he found the debate only simmering, the House thin, and Mr. Layard in solitary state on the Treasury Bench. Mr. Gladstone was forced to remember his temporary leadership, and he rose to answer in a violent fit of yawning, brought on by some dreary common-place speech, by Mr. Cobden rising and declaring that he was not going to crasking address, rendering a reply on the part of the Government indispensable. And here occurred a Parliamentary miracle Mr. Gladstone made a bad speech. He was evidently under a body and mind; he had not heard the debate; he had not intended to speak; he had not considered the subject at all; and the speech of the wife, made a mess of it. All his characteristics were wanting; he was laboured and slow in utterance; his sentences were loose in structure; and he positively floundered in argument. Once he quickened into energy when he spoke of Turkish finance; and with the spirit of the Chancellor of the Exchequer in him, he talked of the "House" as the "Committee," just as if he was doing a Budget. He was, this strange, this unique Parliamentary night, not like the Parliamentary history of the foremost orator of our era, it may be said that if any one was conversant with the subject, Gladstone was him, had classed their eyes, they would have said to themselves, the voice is the voice of Gladstone, but the speech is the speech of Mr. Patrick O'Brien. A dull debate was appropriately ended by Mr. Crawford Griffin, who was allowed to talk until a quarter to one o'clock, no one having the heart left to interrupt him.

On Tuesday Mr. Goschen took his seat as member for the city of London. Intense curiosity was felt with regard to the speech which he had waked one morning and found that he was a politician of mark. Undoubtedly he possesses considerable powers of speaking; but, as he looks and is rather young, why, as somebody has said, he will speak the whole day long. His political friends, and notably Mr. Crawford, have guaranteed him to a considerable extent, but, somehow, no one expects anything particular from members from the City nowadays. Of the metropolitan members, Mr. Goschen is the most liked, because less is heard of them than of the others; and Mr. Goschen has no very fearful reputation for eloquence.

For once the House did not make a comedy of Mr. Whalley's motion for the relief of the poor in Maynooth. When that hon. member rose, a sound partaking of the nature of a hum and a groan passed along all the benches; but it subsided, and gentlemen entered into personal conversation; so that Mr. Whalley, for the first time, had a quiet time of it, for, except a running accompaniment of ironical "hear, hears" from Mr. Collins for the last ten minutes, nobody paid the least attention to him except Mr. Spooner, who of course must regard with interest (of what kind is perhaps dubious) him on whom his own mantle has fallen. A word or two from Mr. Black about threefarthings and one and sevenpence, a sesto-metric sentence or two from Sir Robert Peel, and a few darkly prophetic warnings from Mr. Newdegate, and the question of Maynooth, which was never less seriously argued, even by Mr. Whalley, has, now, disappeared for this year.

A great debate was expected on the second reading of Mr. Somes's bill for closing public-houses on Sundays, and there was a considerable gathering of members. But, somehow, nobody seemed to suppose that there was any need to be in earnest about the matter. To be sure, Mr. Somes was zealous, as his manner is; but Mr. Pease, who is joined with him in charge of the bill, though he spoke well, was only half-hearted in his arguments. Mr. Ker Seymer was rough and ready, and spoke to the point; and Mr. Hadfield, of Sheffield, Lincoln came out in a new vein, which may be described as that of a philosophical patriot, and that whether it was best three hours' hard work or morning liquors on a hot summer's day. Lo, peculiar effect of members, certain it is that the discussion waxed furious from excitement; those who were not interested in the question left the House, and the House fell into a state of babble that could only be quenched by proceeding to a division. The bill was rejected, and was endorsed at last by a tremendous majority. As church rates and marriage with a deceased wife's sister are about to be vexed Parliamentary questions as dying out, it seems that Sunday closing and temperance by Act of Parliament are likely to take their places as subject-matter for semiannual debates, and that Mr. Somes will be the hero of the annual playing at Parliament. It pleases members, interests strangers in the gallery, and hurts nobody.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The House remembered, after the Whitsuntide recess.

Sir George Grey's Australian Colonies Bill went through Committee.

The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill and the Sanctuary and Infant Revenue Bill were read a first time.

In reply to a question from Lord Brougham, who complained of the high rate of duties on paper, the Duke of Somerset said that the Government had no intention of introducing a bill on the subject.

Lord Stanley of Alderley gave notice relating to the Queensland, observing at the same time that it would be seen by them that the Brazilian Government did not contemplate the abolition of slavery. The noble lord concluded in a very manner in which they had been carried out.

THE CHURCH SERVICES.—Lord Derby then moved for a Royal Commission to inquire what steps should be taken to obviate the evils complained of in arbitrary changes and omissions in the performance of the public service of the Church of England. He explained at some length that what he required was that the Church should be allowed to exercise a wholesome control in accommodation with the Church, but that clergymen should not be obliged to use it except under the sanction of the Ordinary, and that they should be subject to all his character when living.—The Earl of DEVON objected to the discussion of such a question, which was more properly one for the consideration of the Archbishop of CANTERBURY, while agreeing that some alteration might be made, could see no reason for appointing such a commission.—The Earl of CLARENDON thought the appointment of the commission would be a wise one, and that it would be unjust, should the occasion continue, to tax Ireland for the support of the Irish Church.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH said that, as long as Ireland was treated as if she were not an integral part of the kingdom, so long would the Irish people have reason to be dissatisfied, and to be a source of weakness to England, instead of being the right arm of our strength.—Colonel FREMANTLE supported the motion.—The Duke of ARGYLL observed that the position as a piece of clapping got up for electioneering purposes, and that he hoped they would have the effect of placing the question at last much in the same position as America, by arraying one portion of the population against the other.—Lord CAMPBELL and Lord STANLEY supported the motion.—On the question of his gallant friend, and believed there were no grounds for the objections which had been urged against the motion. The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, on behalf of the members of the Government, regarded the question as one on behalf of the Government, regarded the question as one not from any want of confidence in the loyalty of the Irish people, but from the fact that Ireland included in the Bill, unfortunately, a state of religious animosity existed in various parts of the country which rendered it unwise in any way to encourage it. If the formation of volunteer corps were sanctioned in Ireland, that fact, there would be reason to fear, would be followed by actual and serious disturbances of the peace would ensue.—Colonel FREMANTLE said it was evident that the Government distrusted the Irish people.—Lord FITZWILLIAM denied that the Government entertained any feeling of distrust. On the contrary, they were perfectly willing to trust to the loyalty of the Irish people. He believed, if it were necessary to call upon the people of Ireland to arms in defence of the Throne, they would answer the call with alacrity, devotion and alacrity. It could not, however, be denied that a peculiar condition of things existed in Ireland, which, in the view of the Government, the tendency, consequent on the diversity of religious opinion, to call into active operation the elements which were a source of danger. After some observations from Mr. MAGUIRE and Sir G. BOWYER, the amendment was negatived without a division, and the motion was agreed to.—The Committee upon the bill, when the various clauses underwent a long discussion.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

The Navigation Laws Repeal Bill was brought through Committee.

The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill and the Sanctuary and Infant Revenue Bill were read a first time.

In reply to a question from Lord Brougham, who complained of the high rate of duties on paper, the Duke of SOMERSET said that the Government had no intention of introducing a bill on the subject.

Lord STANLEY of Alderley gave notice relating to Queensland, observing at the same time that it would be seen by them that the Brazilian Government did not contemplate the abolition of slavery. The noble lord concluded in a very manner in which they had been carried out.

THE CHURCH SERVICES.—Lord DERBY then moved for a Royal Commission to inquire what steps should be taken to obviate the evils complained of in arbitrary changes and omissions in the performance of the public service of the Church of England. He explained at some length that what he required was that the Church should be allowed to exercise a wholesome control in accommodation with the Church, but that clergymen should not be obliged to use it except under the sanction of the Ordinary, and that they should be subject to all his character when living.—The Earl of DEVON objected to the discussion of such a question, which was more properly one for the consideration of the Archbishop of CANTERBURY, while agreeing that some alteration might be made, could see no reason for appointing such a commission.—The Earl of CLARENDON thought the appointment of the commission would be a wise one, and that it would be unjust, should the occasion continue, to tax Ireland for the support of the Irish Church.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH said that, as long as Ireland was treated as if she were not an integral part of the kingdom, so long would the Irish people have reason to be dissatisfied, and to be a source of weakness to England, instead of being the right arm of our strength.—Colonel FREMANTLE supported the motion.—The Duke of ARGYLL observed that the position as a piece of clapping got up for electioneering purposes, and that he hoped they would have the effect of placing the question at last much in the same position as America, by arraying one portion of the population against the other.—Lord CAMPBELL and Lord STANLEY supported the motion.—On the question of his gallant friend, and believed there were no grounds for the objections which had been urged against the motion. The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, on behalf of the members of the Government, regarded the question as one not from any want of confidence in the loyalty of the Irish people, but from the fact that Ireland included in the Bill, unfortunately, a state of religious animosity existed in various parts of the country which rendered it unwise in any way to encourage it. If the formation of volunteer corps were sanctioned in Ireland, that fact, there would be reason to fear, would be followed by actual and serious disturbances of the peace would ensue.—Colonel FREMANTLE said it was evident that the Government distrusted the Irish people.—Lord FITZWILLIAM denied that the Government entertained any feeling of distrust. On the contrary, they were perfectly willing to trust to the loyalty of the Irish people. He believed, if it were necessary to call upon the people of Ireland to arms in defence of the Throne, they would answer the call with alacrity, devotion and alacrity. It could not, however, be denied that a peculiar condition of things existed in Ireland, which, in the view of the Government, the tendency, consequent on the diversity of religious opinion, to call into active operation the elements which were a source of danger. After some observations from Mr. MAGUIRE and Sir G. BOWYER, the amendment was negatived without a division, and the motion was agreed to.—The Committee upon the bill, when the various clauses underwent a long discussion.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The Queen has approved of Mr. Charles Isaac Forget as Consul at Liverpool for the State Confederation.

The foundation-stone of a church and convent of the Franciscan Recollects was laid at Buxton last Saturday.

Four men were killed and thirteen injured by a boiler explosion at the works of Messrs. Sparrow and Co., at Bolton, last Saturday.

Mr. Alexander Wilson, of Perth, who, in early life, was for nearly thirty years editor of the Dumfries Herald, was entertained at a public dinner in Dumfries, on Thursday evening, on the occasion of his visit to that town.

Mr. Naylor, the owner of the winner of the Derby, has just handed to the Mayor of Liverpool (in which town he resides) £1600 to be distributed amongst the poor of that borough.

A handsome candelabrum, subscribed by the inhabitants of Sherborne to Mr. Alderman Wakley, during the whole period of whose mayoralty has been for more than twenty years one of the most active men of the district in every work for the benefit of the working poor.

A line of railway from Whaley Bridge to Buxton, which places that watering-place in direct railway communication with Manchester, was opened on Monday last. The first train ran from Buxton to Manchester, was also opened on Saturday from Rowsley to Buxton.

The first of the series of examinations instituted by the University of Oxford commenced on Tuesday for Manchester and the district of which that city is the centre. Upwards of 300 candidates presented themselves at the Manchester district there are 122 juniors and 49 seniors. The examination of the latter will last until Monday, the 8th inst., and that of the juniors until Wednesday, the 10th inst. There are altogether 181 candidates entered. This number is said to be the largest ever assembled at any local centre.

At the meeting of the Liverpool Town Council on Wednesday, the Mayor announced that W. Moss, Esq., had presented a fine picture of "The Rusted Slaves," called recently for the benefit of the Lancashire Distress Fund, and purchased by him at the sale of Mr. Ashton's gallery at £1000. Mr. Ashton has also lent his magnificent collection of pictures to the Fine Arts Exhibition in Manchester. Another great patron of art resided in Liverpool, has announced his intention of following Mr. Ashton's example.

At the meeting of the Liverpool Local Marine Board on Thursday week, the presentation of British silver medals was announced and rewarded by presents from the Duke of Oldenburg and the President of the United States, to the crew of the pilot-boat No. 4, for saving the crew of an Oldenburg vessel, gold and silver medals were presented to the captain, mate, and crew of the pilot-boat No. 4 of Liverpool. In the case of the foreign and crew of the pilot-boat No. 4 of Liverpool. In the case of the foreign-American subjects were rescued off the Mersey by the steam-tug Gaul & Jones, and were presented with silver medals and pecuniary rewards by the American Government.

The twenty-first meeting of the Yorkshire Union of Mechanics' Institutes was held at Hull on Wednesday week, under the presidency of Mr. Edward Baines, M.P. The proceedings were opened with a speech by Mr. Baines, at which Alderman Bannister, the president of the Hull Mechanics' Institute, spoke, and was followed by Mr. Hadfield, M.P., Mr. Ald. Scott, Sir Charles Anderson, and several of the delegates. In the evening a soiree was held, which was very numerously attended at the Corn Exchange. On Thursday the delegates and their friends had a trip on the Humber, visiting the H. Corporation Docks, and the Victoria and Alexandra Docks.

Yesterday week the first stone was laid of a monumental sarcophagus to the memory of Shakspeare, and thereafter of the Bard. The monument, which is to be placed in the north transept of the church, is the gift of Mr. Thomas Combe, of Warwick, and is to be placed in which Tyndall was born. The exact spot was to Lord Ellesborough and the Rev. Mr. Hamilton, the vicar. The stone was laid by Mr. Tyndall, the father of the late Professor John Tyndall, and his father. There was a large assemblage of people. The spot selected is a piece of ground in the centre of the village, and from a great distance, and at a tower 111 ft. high, exclusive of the terminal, which is to be a reflector. Only £400 has been subscribed of the £1000 required.

A meeting was held last week at Stratford-on-Avon for the purpose of deciding upon the manner of celebrating the tercentenary of Shakspeare's birthday, in April, 1864. A proposal was received from the trustees of the country, Lord Leigh, and the meeting was one of the largest held in Stratford for several years. The Rev. Mr. Bowyer, the "Times" correspondent, shall be raised to Shakspeare in Stratford-on-Avon," as the place of his birth. For this purpose a committee was appointed to collect funds, and to take immediate measures as to the best mode of celebrating the tercentenary, it was agreed to that the Shakspeare Memorial Association, the Free Grammar School of King Edward VI., Stratford, in which Shakspeare was educated, and to found such scholarships as may be considered desirable, and to make such other steps in connection with the school. 2. To found a memorial prize for the best English poem, to be competed for annually by the students of the Queen's College, Free-place Gardens, and open them to the public, and otherwise properly celebrate the tercentenary of Shakspeare's birth.

On Wednesday and Thursday in Whitsun week the Dudley and Midland Geological Society held its annual meeting, which was more not only was there a large gathering of the scientific men in the midland counties but also of many persons who had come to Dudley and neighbourhood to attend the meeting. After the routine business of electing officers, &c., an excursion was made to the limestone quarries at Wren's Nest, Sedgley, and to the extensive and subterranean galleries, about half a mile in length, and which were on this occasion open to the public. A large number availed themselves of the opportunity. Mr. S. H. Blackwell, and Professor Tennant (King's College) gave a brief lecture on the connection between geology and mineralogy. In the evening the party adjourned to the famous siluria caverns beneath the Castle hill, and spent an hour in the capacious galleries, which were magnificently illuminated by the Earl of Dudley. Mr. J. W. Salter gave a brief address to the largest caves, on the characteristics of the siluria rocks around, and the party soon proceeded to beneath various interesting experiments in iron smelting at the Round Hill Works. A grand illumination of the caverns took place, with a display of fireworks, and the meeting brought to a close owing to a thunderstorm. The meeting was attended by the Earl of Dudley's chief colliers, where several toasts were spent, in a manner the remarkable features presented by the igneous rock in new portions of the workings. The society numbers about four hundred members, and is one of the most flourishing institutions in the country.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

SEIZURE OF BRITISH VESSELS.—Mr. CRAWFORD asked the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether any claim had been made upon the United States Government for compensation in the owners of the schooner Will o' the Wisp, seized at Matamoras in June, 1862, by a United States' cruiser, and afterwards released by the decision of the Prize Court at Key West in the following July.—Mr. LAYARD said there was some doubt of the vessel having been seized in the Matamoras waters. The Prize Court decided that there were sufficient grounds for the seizure of the vessel, and therefore they declined to give any damages or compensation. The owners of the vessel had an application to the British Government to support their claim.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION BUILDING.—Lord PALMERSTON, in reply to Mr. Locke King, said that the Duke of Cumberland Lodge or any other person for the alteration of the building to suit their purposes that they had intended had been abandoned.

THE HOLYHEAD PIER COMMITTEE.—Mr. TOLLEMACHE complained of the manner in which the Holyhead Pier Committee, the whole of the members of the constitution of the Select Committee on the Holyhead Pier and Harbour, and ordered that the Chairman of Committees be added to that Committee.—Mr. personal interest whatever in the matter.—Colonel D. PENNANT and Colonel CHURCHILL made similar statements.—Mr. CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER disclaimed any intention of making personal allusions to the other occasion.

VOLUNTEER FORCE.—On the motion for the House going into Committee upon the Volunteer Bill Mr. BAINES moved a resolution to the effect that it was impolitic and inexpedient to withdraw the Government from the operation of the system; and that it would be unjust, should the occasion continue, to tax Ireland for the support of the Irish Church.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH said that, as long as Ireland was treated as if she were not an integral part of the kingdom, so long would the Irish people have reason to be dissatisfied, and to be a source of weakness to England, instead of being the right arm of our strength.—Colonel FREMANTLE supported the motion.—The Duke of ARGYLL observed that the position as a piece of clapping got up for electioneering purposes, and that he hoped they would have the effect of placing the question at last much in the same position as America, by arraying one portion of the population against the other.—Lord CAMPBELL and Lord STANLEY supported the motion.—On the question of his gallant friend, and believed there were no grounds for the objections which had been urged against the motion. The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, on behalf of the members of the Government, regarded the question as one not from any want of confidence in the loyalty of the Irish people, but from the fact that Ireland included in the Bill, unfortunately, a state of religious animosity existed in various parts of the country which rendered it unwise in any way to encourage it. If the formation of volunteer corps were sanctioned in Ireland, that fact, there would be reason to fear, would be followed by actual and serious disturbances of the peace would ensue.—Colonel FREMANTLE said it was evident that the Government distrusted the Irish people.—Lord FITZWILLIAM denied that the Government entertained any feeling of distrust. On the contrary, they were perfectly willing to trust to the loyalty of the Irish people. He believed, if it were necessary to call upon the people of Ireland to arms in defence of the Throne, they would answer the call with alacrity, devotion and alacrity. It could not, however, be denied that a peculiar condition of things existed in Ireland, which, in the view of the Government, the tendency, consequent on the diversity of religious opinion, to call into active operation the elements which were a source of danger. After some observations from Mr. MAGUIRE and Sir G. BOWYER, the amendment was negatived without a division, and the motion was agreed to.—The Committee upon the bill, when the various clauses underwent a long discussion.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The Queen has approved of Mr. Charles Isaac Forget as Consul at Liverpool for the State Confederation.

The foundation-stone of a church and convent of the Franciscan Recollects was laid at Buxton last Saturday.

Four men were killed and thirteen injured by a boiler explosion at the works of Messrs. Sparrow and Co., at Bolton, last Saturday.

Mr. Alexander Wilson, of Perth, who, in early life, was for nearly thirty years editor of the Dumfries Herald, was entertained at a public dinner in Dumfries, on Thursday evening, on the occasion of his visit to that town.

Mr. Naylor, the owner of the winner of the Derby, has just handed to the Mayor of Liverpool (in which town he resides) £1600 to be distributed amongst the poor of that borough.

A handsome candelabrum, subscribed by the inhabitants of Sherborne to Mr. Alderman Wakley, during the whole period of whose mayoralty has been for more than twenty years one of the most active men of the district in every work for the benefit of the working poor.

A line of railway from Whaley Bridge to Buxton, which places that watering-place in direct railway communication with Manchester, was opened on Monday last. The first train ran from Buxton to Manchester, was also opened on Saturday from Rowsley to Buxton.

The first of the series of examinations instituted by the University of Oxford commenced on Tuesday for Manchester and the district of which that city is the centre. Upwards of 300 candidates presented themselves at the Manchester district there are 122 juniors and 49 seniors. The examination of the latter will last until Monday, the 8th inst., and that of the juniors until Wednesday, the 10th inst. There are altogether 181 candidates entered. This number is said to be the largest ever assembled at any local centre.

At the meeting of the Liverpool Town Council on Wednesday, the Mayor announced that W. Moss, Esq., had presented a fine picture of "The Rusted Slaves," called recently for the benefit of the Lancashire Distress Fund, and purchased by him at the sale of Mr. Ashton's gallery at £1000. Mr. Ashton has also lent his magnificent collection of pictures to the Fine Arts Exhibition in Manchester. Another great patron of art resided in Liverpool, has announced his intention of following Mr. Ashton's example.

At the meeting of the Liverpool Local Marine Board on Thursday week, the presentation of British silver medals was announced and rewarded by presents from the Duke of Oldenburg and the President of the United States, to the crew of the pilot-boat No. 4, for saving the crew of an Oldenburg vessel, gold and silver medals were presented to the captain, mate, and crew of the pilot-boat No. 4 of Liverpool. In the case of the foreign and crew of the pilot-boat No. 4 of Liverpool. In the case of the foreign-American subjects were rescued off the Mersey by the steam-tug Gaul & Jones, and were presented with silver medals and pecuniary rewards by the American Government.

The twenty-first meeting of the Yorkshire Union of Mechanics' Institutes was held at Hull on Wednesday week, under the presidency of Mr. Edward Baines, M.P. The proceedings were opened with a speech by Mr. Baines, at which Alderman Bannister, the president of the Hull Mechanics' Institute, spoke, and was followed by Mr. Hadfield, M.P., Mr. Ald. Scott, Sir Charles Anderson, and several of the delegates. In the evening a soiree was held, which was very numerously attended at the Corn Exchange. On Thursday the delegates and their friends had a trip on the Humber, visiting the H. Corporation Docks, and the Victoria and Alexandra Docks.

Yesterday week the first stone was laid of a monumental sarcophagus to the memory of Shakspeare, and thereafter of the Bard. The monument, which is to be placed in the north transept of the church, is the gift of Mr. Thomas Combe, of Warwick, and is to be placed in which Tyndall was born. The exact spot was to Lord Ellesborough and the Rev. Mr. Hamilton, the vicar. The stone was laid by Mr. Tyndall, the father of the late Professor John Tyndall, and his father. There was a large assemblage of people. The spot selected is a piece of ground in the centre of the village, and from a great distance, and at a tower 111 ft. high, exclusive of the terminal, which is to be a reflector. Only £400 has been subscribed of the £1000 required.

A meeting was held last week at Stratford-on-Avon for the purpose of deciding upon the manner of celebrating the tercentenary of Shakspeare's birthday, in April, 1864. A proposal was received from the trustees of the country, Lord Leigh, and the meeting was one of the largest held in Stratford for several years. The Rev. Mr. Bowyer, the "Times" correspondent, shall be raised to Shakspeare in Stratford-on-Avon," as the place of his birth. For this purpose a committee was appointed to collect funds, and to take immediate measures as to the best mode of celebrating the tercentenary, it was agreed to that the Shakspeare Memorial Association, the Free Grammar School of King Edward VI., Stratford, in which Shakspeare was educated, and to found such scholarships as may be considered desirable, and to make such other steps in connection with the school. 2. To found a memorial prize for the best English poem, to be competed for annually by the students of the Queen's College, Free-place Gardens, and open them to the public, and otherwise properly celebrate the tercentenary of Shakspeare's birth.

On Wednesday and Thursday in Whitsun week the Dudley and Midland Geological Society held its annual meeting, which was more not only was there a large gathering of the scientific men in the midland counties but also of many persons who had come to Dudley and neighbourhood to attend the meeting. After the routine business of electing officers, &c., an excursion was made to the limestone quarries at Wren's Nest, Sedgley, and to the extensive and subterranean galleries, about half a mile in length, and which were on this occasion open to the public. A large number availed themselves of the opportunity. Mr. S. H. Blackwell, and Professor Tennant (King's College) gave a brief lecture on the connection between geology and mineralogy. In the evening the party adjourned to the famous siluria caverns beneath the Castle hill, and spent an hour in the capacious galleries, which were magnificently illuminated by the Earl of Dudley. Mr. J. W. Salter gave a brief address to the largest caves, on the characteristics of the siluria rocks around, and the party soon proceeded to beneath various interesting experiments in iron smelting at the Round Hill Works. A grand illumination of the caverns took place, with a display of fireworks, and the meeting brought to a close owing to a thunderstorm. The meeting was attended by the Earl of Dudley's chief colliers, where several toasts were spent, in a manner the remarkable features presented by the igneous rock in new portions of the workings. The society numbers about four hundred members, and is one of the most flourishing institutions in the country.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE Grand Prize of Paris has proved that, but for an accident, Blanger might have been much forwarder in the Derby, and that Lord Clifden has had his heart quite cut out of him by the terrible use which was made of him in that race. Challoner was put on him at Paris, and those who record Fordham's sayings, and told us after Doncaster and before the Derby that he "had never been on such a horse," now, of course, declare on his authority, that "he was really greatly overrated, and that he cannot make out how he ever got him so near Macaroni." The St. Leger may tell us something more, but it seems very doubtful whether, even with an early fifteen weeks before him, Edwin Parr can wind up Lord Clifden to within 10lb. of what he was when he first stripped him at Epsom. Colonel Townley will have to race this season with Doctor of Manchester. This mare, as well as Impératrice, have both been at Kittlebridge, Cuddington, and are trained by Jones, the head groom, in the valley of the Holder. Mr. Topham is to be continued as clerk of the course at Chester, and Mr. Rudston Andrews in the Field of Mars, while the latter is reported to be preserved in a mausoleum specially built for it at Baton Hall, near that Welsh Newton and Hampton are the two names for the week.

The continued drought has played havoc with the training stables, and Ascot Heath was never in such a hard and dusty condition. The favourite, Oddendale, only ran fifth for the Stakes; and Lady Gertrude, favourite, Oddendale, only ran fifth for the Stakes; and Lady Gertrude, own sister to Gladiateur, was (at any odds) beaten by a head. Lady Gertrude was, as usual, nearly last. Lord Stamford's Avenger luck did not desert him on Wednesday, as Lady Augusta had to be content to carry home to the Coronation Stakes; and Queen Bertha, some pounds below what John Scott hopes to make her when she gets back to the turf, was by no means a match for the Duke of Hamilton's. The violet and orange cap was heartily cheered when Victor by Voodoo, won the Hunt Cup for Mr. Hodgson, and when Mr. Sharpe, another of the smart Wild Dayrell fillies, and Saccharometer got the other good things of the day. Hoogstraten's 1,000 gs. was over a mile to Lord Strathmore's colt. Blair Athol did not go.

In point of attendance, there has been no Ascot Cup day to compare with it. The carriages were four deep, and the enclosure was "S.R.O." when the finish there was one continuous serried line of people. The Prince and Princess of Wales were again present, but did not move from on to the course with the usual procession, headed by the Master of the Buckhounds. Fordham's mount, Lady Augusta, a fall from Curie in the first race; King of the Vale, who did very much as he easily beaten by Mr. Merry's blackstone for the St. James's Palace Stakes; and Scottish Chief, from the same stable, made such a successful debut in the Biennial, that he was backed at 11 to 1 for the Derby. Mr. Padwick's friends had begun to lose confidence overnight in their favourite for the Cup, and the field had the call. The winner, Victor, was ridden by Sam Rogers, his stable companion, Eisaure, going to make the running for him, and Hurricane (Adams), Scottish Chief (Boyce), Caller Ou (Challoner), and Backstone (Edwards) made up the field. At the mile-post, Rogers went on with the lead, but was soon joined and headed by Backstone and Adams the centre of the Stand, and then steadying his horse, came on the post and made a dead heat of it. The first judge awarded the verdict to Victor, who was that Backstone won by a head cleverly. A report that the latter had again broken down in the stoppages made Van Haansbergen back him for deciding heat. He made all the running, but was once more caught about the same place and beaten easily. Backstone, very steadily ridden by Edwards, and leisurely backed by his owner, never looked or went better, but Tim's stride had not its old freedom. Baron Rothschild's Lord New Stakes colt, Scottish Chief, was all in, but "the inclosure" were again at issue with the judge, and thought that Mr. Sadler's colt was won by nearly half a length. This, with the exception of that between Camarina (Robinson) and Rowton (Oliver) in 1857, there has never before been a dead heat for the Cup.

Her Majesty's yearlings, twenty-eight in number, were sold at Hampton Court on Saturday last, and averaged 21*l.* 6*s.*, being 9*l.* 13*s.* less than in '67, and 8*l.* 5*s.* less than in '66. Lord Rosebery's Ladas, by the blood of Imaum and Diophantus, as he did last year, giving 5*l.* 5*s.* for the full brother to the first former, and 7*l.* 7*s.* for the colt by the Newminster half-brother to the latter. The highest-priced Orlando, a filly from Rosalie, made 84*l.* 5*s.*; there were seventeen lots by the Snowing and Mr. Haulock, the trainer, who bid for one of his masters. The Orlando-Aycarcoux colt (Mr. Naylor, 38*l.* 5*s.*) was the best-looking. The Orlando-Aycarcoux colt (Mr. Naylor, 38*l.* 5*s.*) was the best-looking. and so was the Voltigeur-Trichetta filly, for which the Duke of St. Albans gave 70 gs. less. On the whole, they were not considered so full of quality as usual; but five or six of them had pedigrees such as we seldom see. Mr. Greville's were quite below his usual stamp, and the produce out of the Queen's Oaks mare Evenwood only averaged 108 gs. The highest-priced was "a slice of Old Alice," or a brown colt by Claiborne from Barcelona, for which Mr. Naylor gave 200 gs. Only two by this young sire have been sold so far, and they have averaged 230 gs. About forty very promising yearlings remain for Mr. Tattersall, at Eltham, this July and August. If this stud has not succeeded in again turning out another Caractacus; it can well claim to be the Oaks mare stud, for the dam of Lady Bertha, was purchased by Lord Falmouth as a yearling at the first of its sales, more than twenty years ago, and sent, out of compliment to Ascot, to Kingston. Lovers of autumnal sports at a very different description, will find the next leisure in the sale at Dr. Du Cane's museum of gorilla, chimpanzees, &c., on Friday, at Stevens's, Covent-garden.

The All-England Eleven have beaten the Lansdowne Twenty-two by three wickets. Anderson (56) was their most successful batsman, and Tinley and Tarrant were a perfect terror to the wickets. Mr. E. M. Grace made a splendid first innings of 170 for the Twenty-two Lansdowne, and will, we believe, accompany George Parr's Eleven to Australia. The Prince of Wales has presided at the dinners of the M.C.C. and Ground and "The Colts of England" with his presence on Monday. The latter lost the match by seven. Bignall (Notts) made the largest number (42) with his left hand; and Street (Surrey), J. Smith (Notts), and Rawlinson (Yorkshire) were the most successful bowlers. The latter is the first declaration of taking the wicket of Wootton, whose bowling sent fourteen of "The Colts" to grief. The Surrey Colts beat the Kent Colts by seven wickets on the Oval. Nightingale and Street batted splendidly; and the latter, with four others, divided the bowling honours. Williams and Mortlock were the Kentish batsmen, and Norley and Walter the bowlers. On Monday the M.C.C. and Ground v. County of Sussex will be played at Lord's, A.E.E. v. 22 of Luton Club, at Sedbergh; and All England v. 22 of the Northern Club (with two bowlers), at Seaforth. On Wednesday Household Brigade v. Royal Artillery, at Lord's; and the Standard Surrey v. Sussex at The Oval; Kent v. Notts, at Nottingham; and M.C.C. and Ground v. Thornton Heath, at Harrow.

ASCOT RACES.—TUESDAY.

Trial Stakes.—Tipplet, 1; Bishop, 2; Tornado, 3.
Ascot Stakes.—Stradella, 1; Bishop, 2; Oakapple, 3.
First Year of the 25th Ascot Biennial Stakes.—Light, 1. Goldylocks, 2. Tremely, 3.
The Gold Vase.—Adventurer, 1; Wingwave, 2; Atherstone, 3.
The Prince of Wales's Stakes.—Avenger, 1; Sarcelle, 2; Lady Augusta, 3.
A Maiden Plate.—Birch Broom, 1; Leicester, 2; Confederate, 3.
The Queen's Stand Plate.—Knowsley, 1; Umpire, 2; Give the Feist, 3.

WEDNESDAY.

Coronation Stakes.—Lady Augusta, 1; Pastail, 2; Crafton Lass, 3.
Ascot Derby Stakes.—Oastmeadler, 1; Queen Bertha, 2; Dum Maulde, 3; Royal Hunt Cup.—Victor, 1; Glenmorley, 2; The Knave, 3.
Sweepstakes of 10 sovs.—Scandal, 1; Dirt Cheap, 2; Lord of Lorne, 3.
Final Year of the Eleventh Ascot Triennial Stakes.—Derby Knight, 1; Catastrophe, 2; Bride de Chemin, 3.
Fernhill Produce Stakes.—1, Lady Mabel; 2, Midnight Mist; 3.
Second Year of the Fifth Ascot Biennial Stakes.—Scotsmonster, 1; Jakes, 2; Vivians Flute, Milkmaiden, 4; Pride, 5; Surgeon Bill, 6.

THURSDAY.

Maiden Plate.—Lady Evelyn, 1; Glaucus, 2; Peterdam, 3.
£100 Plate.—Gem of the Sea, 1; Senorita c., 2; Gentle Kitty c., 3.
St. James's Palace Stakes.—Gladstone beat King of the Vale.
First Biennial Stakes.—Scottish Chief, 1; Master Richard, 2. Knight of Snowdon, 3.
GOLD CUP.—Backstone, 1. Tim Whiffler, 2.
New Stakes.—Sister to Queen of the Vale, 1; Vacuna, 2. Mary Copp c., 3.
£100 Selling Plate.—Vigil, 1; Rob Roy, 2. Pyrrha, 3.
Royal Hunt Plate.—Wingave walked over.

THE DISTRESS IN LANCASHIRE.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the Central Relief Fund, held on Monday, the report of Mr. Farnall showed that 5827 flower pennies were receiving grants, and that 1000 of these were in Preston. The increase there was an increase in the number at three places only—Preston, Blackburn, and Warrington. The increase in Preston was due, chiefly, to that the favourable nature of the returns may be described as gratifying. Preston, Blackburn, and Warrington, are the three places where certain changes in the Local Government Board Orders have been carried out, and the cotton districts are now about arranging for the present time, it looks to the coming winter, when there must still be considerable distress and suffering.

In the Court of Queen's Bench the Attorney-General has obtained rules against the guardians of the unions of Preston, Chorley, Bamwick, and Congleton Union relative to their not complying with orders for rates in aid.

The Manchester Relief Committee has issued a report for the previous week. The total amount received up to the previous night was £491,912, of which £481,180 had been remitted to the various districts. The sum paid received during the week was £4459. Grants amounting of £4300 were made.

The Arundel Society has just issued its annual report, from which it appears that its finances are in a prosperous condition. The publications for the year consist of an engraving by Hertschel, of St. Augustine, thrust out before his martyrdom," after Pre Angelico, and five chromolithographs from the works of Botticelli and Benozzo Gozzoli.

Cardinal Wiseman, on Monday, opened a new convent and girls' school at Southgate, Hornsey, established by the Roman Catholic sisters of that locality. There was a large attendance of Roman Catholic clergymen from different parts of London, and the religious ceremonies took place, at which the Hon. Charles Langdale presided.

Last Saturday's Parthenon contains an announcement that the present number will be the last of that journal, which has hitherto been affiliated to the publication not being sufficient to warrant its continuance." The Lancet publishes of which it is the organ, and which has existed for another name, then finally ceases to an end.

In aid of the Royal Literary Fund, established in 1821, for the preservation of objects illustrative of the life and works of Shakspeare at Stratford-on-Avon, and for the benefit of the poor of that parish, relics of Shakspeare and other English poets at St. James's Hall, on Friday evening, June 26. The Duke of Cambridge will preside, and the Prince of Wales will be public spectators in England prior to their departure for Australia.

Prince Christian, Princess Christian, Princess Louise, Duchess of North Wales, headed by Lady Walker W. Wynn and Lady Powis, have subscribed amongst them £100 to the testimonial to Mr. Gladstone. The gracious Princess, who takes her title from the Cymric principality. The journal, which, under the management of Messrs. Cassell, Petter, and Galpin, still remains to the Royal family, consists of a suite of ornaments in diamonds and emeralds. The Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, is also a subscriber. A set of large diamonds supported beneath by a ribbon bearing the motto, in Welsh, is in two thousand pounds. To any who may be in want of a present for a national emblem, the lark, with the bulb in diamonds and the foliation in emeralds; and the Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, is also a subscriber. The remaining ornaments are a small brooch of similar pattern, but with the Prince of Wales's feathers in the centre, and a pair of ear-rings similar to the enamel drops, and large diamonds to form the upper part.

A fatal accident occurred on the London and Brighton Railway yesterday week. A heavy express-train, consisting of sixteen carriages, on its way to Brighton, ran into a number of empty carriages which were standing on the line near Streatham, and immediately afterwards the engine-boiler exploded. Fortunately the driver and stoker escaped with slight injuries and a lady (Mrs. Chivers) were killed; a large number of Gentlemen and other passengers were more or less wounded; and the driver and stoker who had noticed a considerable distance by the explosion, were dreadfully scalded and bruised, the former dying in the evening at the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's-inn-road. Newminster, and several members of his family are among the injured. The cause of the explosion is supposed to be the sudden rush of cold water into the train was behind time, and that the driver was pressing on at an excessive rate of speed to make up for lost time. The inquest was commenced on Sunday from Balaneal, expressing her sympathy with her wounded Guards, and the Prince and Princess of Wales sent messengers during the day to inquire respecting the condition of the poor fellows.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

NOTWITHSTANDING that the Bank rate of discounting is gold has arrived from various quarters, but chiefly from Australia and New Zealand, the transactions in the Bullion Department of the Bank have been small. Even in some instances, the quotations have had a drooping tendency. Scarcely any bullion has been taken into the Mint of late for Exportation. The gold has been withdrawn thence for shipment to Constantinople. Evidently large quantities are required to meet the Turkish loan for £5,000,000 sterling, and we therefore do not anticipate any great increase in the stock of the precious metals for some time.

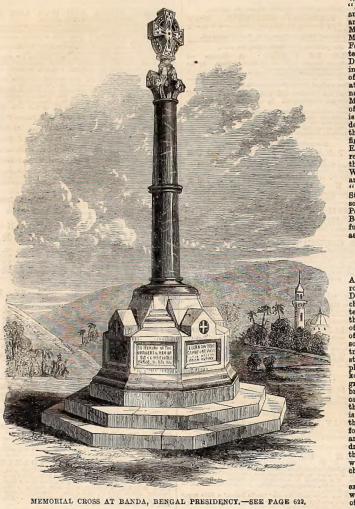
The Council for India has disposed of £400,000 in bills on the various Presidencies. The applications amounted to £1,600,000 sterling in value.

Nearly the whole of the Continental exchanges are in favour of this country, and there is a good demand for bills on Paris, Berlin, &c.

Shares in the new financial companies have been largely dealt in. The International Financial Society (Limited) have been issued at 21*s.* 6*d.* to 22*s.* and the London Financial, 2 to 2*l.* prem.

On the Stock Exchange, for the Account, and Account, were done at 92¼ ⅜ Reduced and New Three per Cents, 91¾ ⅞ Consols for Account, 91¾ ⅞ India Stock, 220 to 222 India Bonds, 1868, 1 to 3 prem. 217 to 219; India Stock, 91¾ ⅞ Ditto Bonds, 1874

THE EXHIBITION OF SCULPTURE IN THE GARDEN OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY, SOUTH KENSINGTON.—SEE PAGE 609.



MEMORIAL CROSS AT BANDA, BENGAL PRESIDENCY.—SEE PAGE 623.

Wellesley; Mr. Lawlor's "Titania" and "Balbir;" Mr. Durham's "Parting of Paul and Virginia;" Mr. Millar's "Evangeline" and "Emily and the White Doe of Rylstone;" Mr. Thrupp's "Boy Making a Flute;" Mr. Earle's "Hyacinthus" and Mr. Farrell's "Nymph and Cupid." On the terrace in front of the conservatory is Mr. Durham's colossal statue of the Queen, in bronze (by Messrs. Elkington's method of depositing by electrotype) bearing the attributes of "Peace," which was originally intended as the crowning statue for the Memorial of the International Exhibition of 1851. Our readers are aware this figure is not to surmount the memorial, but, by desire of her Majesty, one in its place, of the late Prince, by the same artist. This figure has also been completed by Messrs. Elkington, and is now fixed on the pedestal ready for the uncovering and inauguration of the memorial by the Prince and Princess of Wales on the 10th inst. Besides these there are three excellent works by Mr. Foley; his "Goldsmith," for Dublin; "A Youth at a Stream," one of the finest works of modern sculpture; and "Manockjee Nes Serwanjee Patel," a statue of a Parsee gentleman, for Bombay, lifelike, simple and unaffected, yet full of dignity, the hands as full of character as the head.

NEW WESLEYAN CHAPEL IN BOLTON.

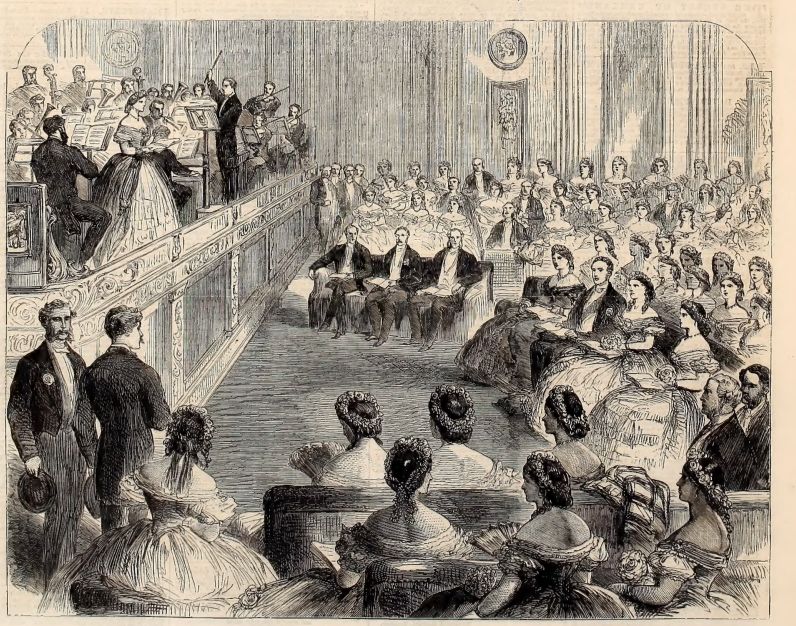
A WESLEYAN CHAPEL in Park-street, Chorley-road, Bolton, has been recently opened for Divine service. The buildings comprise the chapel and schoolroom, large vestry, ministers' and choir vestry, also four classrooms in the second story over the vestries; the whole of these being grouped together; the side wall of the vestries and the north gable of the school forming a continuous line with the transept gables. Detached from these and standing at the north-west corner of the plot, will be a residence for the chapel-keeper. The total length of the principal group of buildings is 141 ft., and the greatest breadth, externally, 80 ft. The chapel is calculated to accommodate 950 persons, and the school 250 scholars. The style adopted is Decorated Gothic, of the later period of the thirteenth and the beginning of the fourteenth centuries. Externally, the walls are faced with Yorkshire pierpoints, and the dressings of Wrexham stone. The plan of the chapel is cruciform, and comprises nave, with north and south transepts, and a chancel, in which the organ is placed.

Mr. George Woodhouse, the architect, exercised a general supervision over the works, the total outlay for which, exclusive of land, is about £9500.

CONCERT GIVEN BY "THE WANDERING MINSTRELS."

THIS concert, which took place at the Hanover-square Rooms on Thursday evening, the 28th ult., was one of the most brilliant musical entertainments of the season. It was interesting, not only on account of its benevolent object, and the substantial aid it afforded to a most useful charity—the British Asylum for Deaf and Dumb Females—but also on account of the evidence it gave of the high cultivation of music in the English fashionable world. The concert was honoured with the presence of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the room was crowded by a splendid assemblage. Though the performers were amateurs, yet the orchestra, taken collectively, was excellent, and several individuals displayed the talents of professional artists. Among these we may mention Lady Katherine Coke, who played Mendelssohn's pianoforte concerto in G minor in a style which would have done no discredit to the Monday Popular Concerts. Lord Gerald Fitzgerald, who was the principal violoncello, is a first-rate performer; and the Hon. Seymour Egerton directed the performance with the firmness and skill of an experienced conductor. The accompanying Engraving shows the aspect of the room during this remarkable concert.

PARK-STREET WESLEYAN CHAPEL, BOLTON.



AMATEUR CONCERT AT THE HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE BRITISH ASYLUM FOR DEAF AND DUMB FEMALES.

 The charge for insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTHS.

On the 27th ult., at 9, Pelham-crescent, Hastings, the wife of Major-General Ludlow, of a son.

On the 2nd inst., at Aberdeen, the wife of Mr. Alex. P. Hepath, of a son.

On the 28th ult., at Down-place, Windsor, the wife of George Douglas Fremont, of a daughter.

On the 1st ult., at Wickhepoi, Jamaica, the wife of the Rev. Whitbread Ingle, of a daughter.

On the 25th ult., at Weymouth, the widow of Matthew Godfrey Wigham, Esq., late of Victoria, Vancouver Island, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 25th ult., at St. Matthew's Church, Lower-road, Erlham Dexter, of 9, Montague-place, Islington, to Frances, youngest daughter of Mr. W. Midwinter, of Canonbury-square.

On the 2nd inst., at St. Michael's, Chester-square by the Rev. Dr. Hessey, Rector of the incumbent, Henry Christopher Wood, Esq., of Woodcote, Warwickshire, to Jane Harriet, youngest daughter of the late Sir Edward Cromwell Dodsworth, Bart.

On the 27th ult., at the English church, Utrecht, by the Rev. William Jamieson, M.A., H.B.M. Chaplain at Amsterdam, Maximilian Friedrich Leopold, Baron von Farrent Zandow or Hemmingen, Freiherr Gustin, in Prussia, to Magdalena Cornelia, third daughter of the late Gilles Vanstiaal, Esq., of British Guiana.

On the 28th ult., at St. John's Hackney, by the Rev. L. E. Fendall, Alfred James, third son of R. M. Ainsworth, Esq., of Highbury-place, to Amanda De Neville, third daughter of John Francis Bacon, Esq., of Dalston-rise.

DEATHS.

On the 31st ult., at Sussex-square, Hyde Park, inexpressibly beloved, Edward, only child of the late Major Henry William Pogue, Assistant Quartermaster-General at Cork, aged 10 years and 9 months.

On the 27th ult., at Vine Cottage, Sandy, Frances Elizabeth, relict of the late Captain R. A. Drought.

On the 29th ult., tenderly regretted, aged 3 months, all who knew him, Robert Sheldon Scrimgeour, Esq., of Tottenham, Hertfordshire; for many years a member of the Stock Exchange and Lloyd's, in the 76th year of his age.

W. P. FRITH, R.A.—PICTURE of "THE RAILWAY STATION." This celebrated Picture is NOW ON VIEW, at Mr. FLATOU'S FINE-ART GALLERY, 11, Haymarket, from Ten o'clock till Six. Admission, One Shilling. By Van Dyck's Rule, No. 1.

FRENCH GALLERY, 120, PALL-MALL.—THE TENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of PICTURES—the Contributions of Artists of the French and Flemish Schools—is NOW OPEN. Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The FIFTY-NINTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN at their GALLERY, 5, Pall-mall East (next door to the National Gallery), from Nine till Dusk. Admittance, 1s.; Catalogue 6d. JOSEPH J. JENKINS, Hon. Sec.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS. Founded 1831 (as the New Society of Painters in Water Colours). The FORTY-THIRD EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at the Gallery, 53, Pall-mall (Waterloo-place). Admission, 1s. JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

RAPHAEL.—THE HOLY FAMILY, by RAPHAEL, now returned from the Louvre, and on view at the Highness the Prince of Wales at Marlborough House (who has kindly permitted the Picture to be exhibited), is open to the Public DAILY, at 10, Admission 1s.

THE SECRET OF ENGLAND'S GREATNESS.—Enclosed by special permission to the Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury.—The splendid PICTURE by Her Majesty the Queen presenting a copy of the Bible to the Actress of Sunday-school, painted by Mr. Frith, is now on view at the Gallery of Art Treasures of her Empire to be opened by the Right Hon. JAMES BARKER, Esq., K.C., in ROOM ON VIEW DAILY at NOON, 5, and 6, BRUTON-STREET GALLERY, 61, Conduit-street, Bond-street. Ten to Five. Admission Sixpence.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED, with MR. CORNEY GRAIN'S NEW and CHARMING COTTAGE, STORY and MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT, entitled HOME SWEET HOME, every afternoon at 3, ROYAL GALLERY OF ILLUSTRATION, 14, Regent-street. Stalls, Three Shillings; Second Seats, Two Shillings.

MR. DAVID FISHER'S FACTS and FANCIES, musically and dramatically illustrated.—Mr. DAVID FISHER'S NEW ENTERTAINMENT, entitled FACTS and FANCIES, being returned from the Provinces, will be repeated Three Nights from Monday next, at the ADELPHI THEATRE, on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 8, at Eight o'clock. Tickets to be had at the principal Musicsellers and at the Box-office. Pays, 5, Soho-square.

MR. HUBERT'S RECITAL OF CLASSICAL and MODERN PIANOFORTE MUSIC at the SANDWICH-ROOMS, 9, Hanover-square, on TUESDAY, JUNE 16, at Three o'clock. Vocalists—Mesdames Lemmens-Sherrington, Sainton-Dolby, and Rory Blewitt. Conductor—Mr. Benedict. Violoncello—Signor Piatti. Violin—Mr. J. Tolbecque. Tickets, Half-a-Guinea each; Stalls, to admit Three, One Guinea; to be had of Mr. Hubert, 9, Hanover-square; and of Cramer, Beale, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

HERR OBERTHÜR'S Second HARP RECITAL will take place on SATURDAY, JUNE 6, at his residence, No. 7, Tuberstreet, Westbourne-park.

MR. J. F. BARNETT'S GRAND CONCERT, ST. JAMES'S CONCERT ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE, THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 11. Vocalists—Mdlle. Carlotta Patti, Madame Rudersdorff, Miss Banks, Mr. Sims Reeves, and London Vocal Society. Instrumentalists—Mr. Charles Hallé, Mr. Mori, Wm. Pratt, Genn, and J. Barnett. Tickets, 10s. 6d. and 21s., at the Concert Room; of the Musicsellers, and of Mr. J. Barnett, 21, Brecknock-crescent, N.W.

JUNE 20. MR. BENEDICT'S CONCERT, Under the immediate patronage of Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, at the ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, Covent-garden, by Command. The first and SECOND MORNING CONCERT on WEDNESDAY next, and every alternate Wednesday during the season, at the Residence of Mr. Benedict, 2, Manchester-square.

JUNE 11.—Mdme. BOHRER RICHARD CHATTERTON and Herr REINHOLD BOHRER have the honour to announce their ANNUAL GRAND MORNING CONCERT, TUESDAY MATINÉE at the Royal Rink, the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Concert-room, Hanover-square, on THURSDAY, JUNE 11, to commence at Two o'clock precisely. The programme comprises the principal English and foreign talent of the day. Tickets, Half-a-Guinea each; Stalls, to admit Three, One Guinea; to be had of Mdme. Bohrer, 2, Gloucester-terrace, Hyde-park, where also can be obtained Reserved Seats for Gye-Gunter's Promenade Concerts, Covent-garden Theatre, and Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, for Mr. Hullah's Concert. Mdme. and Herr Bohrer will also perform.—No. 20, Duke-street, Manchester-square.

MR. KENNEDY'S SONGS of SCOTLAND, MR. KENNEDY will SING HALL, FRIDAY MORNING NEXT, assisted by Mr. Lind as the Bandsman. A Novel Entertainment, entitled "Glengarry Glenmutchkin and Co." at 3. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Reserved Seats, 5s.; and 32, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square.

THE SHAKESPEARE FUND.—Mr. and Mrs. CHARLES KEAN have much pleasure in giving a Performance for the benefit of the above Fund, at the HAYMARKET THEATRE, on ST. JAMES'S HALL, on FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 26, for the benefit of the Fund. The doors will be thrown open at Seven o'clock, and the first public appearance in England prior to their departure for Australia of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean. Under the Presidency of the Duke of Cambridge, and the patronage of the Queen, the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family. Full particulars will be duly announced. Stalls, 21s.; Reserved seats, 5s. 6d. Tickets to be had at Mr. Austin's Ticket-office, 26, Piccadilly; at the Box-office of the Haymarket Theatre; at Mitchell's, 33, New Bond-street; and at Keith and Prowse's, Cheapside. Commence at Eight p.m.

ATTOMMASO'S BARDIC FESTIVAL.—MR. SIMS REEVES, MR. and MADAME WEISS, MADAME LEMMENS-SHERRINGTON, Mr. Henry Phillips, Mr. Lazarus, Mr. Vinning, Mr. Howard, Mr. Wyatt, Signor Gardoni, Mr. Santley, Mr. Willyng Cooper, Lucy Escott, Thomas, Regal, Harrison, Jun., Distin, Mesars. Benedict, Aguilar, and Frank Mori. Accompanyists—Messrs. Genn, Ransford, and Aarbor.

LEVASSOR EN VISITE.—Last Week but TWO.—BUDLEY GALLERY, PICCADILLY, every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at Three and Eight. Stalls, Half-a-Crown; Unreserved Seats, One Shilling. Pantomime, No. 11.—Mitchell's Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street.

MRS. FANNY KEMBLE'S READINGS from SHAKESPEARE KNOWLES'S PLAYS, commence on EVENING, JUNE 8. SUCH AND ABOUT NOTHING. Wednesday, June 10, at Three. Stalls, 5s.; Unreserved Seats, 2s. 6d. and 1s. Tickets and Programmes at Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street, and Mr. Austin's, 26, Piccadilly.

WELSH NATIONAL MUSIC, sung by the UNITED CHOIRS, accompanied by a Band of Harps, A MORNING CONCERT will be given at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1863, to commence at Three o'Clock, with Selections from the Works of Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Spohr, Costa, Gounod, and Mendelssohn, and Welsh Airs, Glees, Choruses, and Solos. Conductor—Mr. Wilfred Bendall. Principal Vocalists—Miss Dolby, Miss Poole, Miss Lascelles, Miss Lucombe, Miss Lemmens-Sherrington, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Lewis Thomas, Mr. Weiss, Mr. Lawler, and Mr. Lewis Jones. Leader—Mr. Cramer. Harpists—Messrs. Thomas, Rudall, Rose, Aptommas, Chatterton, Pratt, Lockwood, Wrigglesworth, Jun., Johns, Hall, Hughes, Jun., Hall, Jun., Hall, Senior, Hughes, Senior, and Parry. Pianoforte—Mr. Wilfred Bendall. Organist—Mr. Ernest Portland-street, W. Tickets, Half-a-guinea, at all Musicsellers'.

MUSICAL UNION.—TUESDAY, JUNE 9, at 3, in St. James's Hall. Quartets in C, Mozart—in E flat, Mozart—Sonata, Variations, Vivace, Solo—Duet in F, Piano and Violoncello, Beethoven—in G minor, Mendelssohn. Pianoforte—Madame Arabella Goddard. Violin—Herr Ries. Violas—Herr Ries, Webb, and Pratt. Violins, Hauke. Violoncellos—Piatti, Paque, and Lucas. Double-bass—Howell. Conductor—Mr. Ella. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Admission, 1s. Sole Agent—Mr. Austin, 26, Piccadilly. Programmes and Tickets may be had at Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street, and Addison and Parry, 19, Hanover-square.

HERR WILHELM GANZ begs to announce that his ANNUAL MORNING CONCERT will take place at the Hanover-square Rooms, on THURSDAY, June 18, 1863, to commence at Three o'clock precisely. Tickets, One Guinea each, to be had of Herr Wilhelm Ganz, 9, Manchester-square, W.

MR. LIND-GOLDSCHMIDT. Mr. JAMES HALL, Queen's Concert Room, Hanover-square, on FRIDAY, JUNE 26. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Unreserved Seats, 5s. Tickets to be had of Mr. Lind-Goldschmidt, Amherst, Tunbridge-wells.

JUNE 11th.—HENRY LESLIE'S CHOIR.—The DIRECTORS BENEFIT.—ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Leader—Sainton-Sherrington. Vocalists—Miss Dolby, Miss Arabella Goddard, Charles Hallé. Mdme. Lemmens will sing Mendelssohn's Duet, "Lift thine eyes," with Miss Dolby. Mdme. Lemmens will also sing Mendelssohn's Scena, "Infelice," and Gounod's Cantique, "Nazareth." Mdme. Arabella Goddard and Mr. Charles Hallé will play Mendelssohn's Duet in A, for Pianoforte and Violoncello. Mr. Henry Leslie will conduct Mendelssohn's Psalm, "Judge me, O God," and Mr. Sims Reeves will sing "Why do the nations," from "The Messiah," with Chorus. "Lord, consider my affliction," from "Israel in Egypt," with trumpet, and the grand duet and final chorus from "Judas Maccabæus." Tickets, Half-a-Guinea, Stalls, Three Guineas, Reserved Seats, 5s. Admission, 1s. Address, 211, Regent-street; Austin's Ticket Office, 26, Piccadilly; and Cramer's, Regent-street.

MDME. BOHRER-CHATTERTON and Herr REINHOLD BOHRER have the honour to announce their Second Morning Concert, at the Royal Rink, the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Concert-room, Hanover-square, on TUESDAY, June 16, at Three o'clock precisely. Vocalists—Mdme. Bohrer-Chatterton, Miss Poole, Mr. Lewis Thomas, and Mr. Weiss. Violoncello—Herr Reinhold Bohrer, who will for the first time perform a concerto composed by himself. Conductor—Mr. Benedict. Tickets, Half-a-Guinea each; Stalls, to admit Three, One Guinea; to be had of Mdme. Bohrer-Chatterton, 2, Gloucester-terrace, Hyde-park, where also can be obtained Reserved Seats for Gye-Gunter's Promenade Concerts, Covent-garden Theatre, and Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, for Mr. Hullah's Concert.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION BUILDINGS, South Kensington.—A GRAND MILITARY CONCERT, on the Grand Organ, will be given on SATURDAY NEXT, JUNE 6, at Three o'clock. A GRAND MILITARY CONCERT will be given in the International Exhibition Building, South Kensington (by special permission), on MONDAY, JUNE 15, 1863. Doors open at Two, the Concert to commence at Three precisely.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales,
Her Royal Highness the Princess Alice,
Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales,
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge,
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, and
Her Royal Highness the Princess Mary of Cambridge,

The Band of the Grenadier Guards, by permission of Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Sir James Hall, K.C.B., and the Band of the First Life Guards, the Second Life Guards, Royal Horse Guards (Blue), the Royal Artillery, and Royal Engineers, by permission of the Field Officers in charge of the same.

The full Programmes will be ready on Monday next, June 8, and may be obtained at the Doors, price Sixpence each.

Tickets to be obtained at Mr. Austin's Royal Library, 18, Piccadilly, and 26, Piccadilly; Mr. Mitchell's Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street; Mr. Keith and Mr. Prowse's, 48, Cheapside; Mr. Mitchell's Royal Library, 39, Old Bond-street; Addison and Lucas, 210, Regent-street; and Mr. Austin's Ticket Office, 26, Piccadilly.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, Regent's Park.—EXHIBITION of AMERICAN PLANTS, MONDAY NEXT, June 8, and Three following days. Open from Nine o'clock till Seven. Admission, 1s.; on Saturday, 6d.; Fellows, 6d. each. Gates open all hour o'clock.

The Military Bands will attend.

The last morning for the Election of New Subscribers, Saturday, June 13.

FRENCH EMBASSY.—A GRAND FANCY BALLAD, under the Patronage of Her Majesty the Empress of the French, will be held at ALBERT GATE HOUSE, Knightsbridge, on THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1863, in aid of the funds of the FRENCH BENEVOLENT AND ORPHAN ASSISTANCE ASSOCIATION (Société Française de Secours Mutuels). FRENCH AMBASSADRESS. Contributions for the Sale will be most gratefully received by the Ladies Patronesses, at the Embassy, Albert Gate House, Knightsbridge, and at the Residence of the Secretary, 2, Cleveland-terrace, Queen's Park, N.W. Subscription Tickets, 21s. each.

POLYTECHNIC.—Professor PEPPER is prepared to make arrangements with town institutions in the country for the delivery of his LECTURE.

MONEY ADVANCED by Mr. LUXMOORE, 449, Strand, on Life Interests, Reversions, &c. Mortgages, &c. Crown Life Assurance Policies purchased. Apply to Mr. Luxmoore, 449, Strand.

SOUTH ESSEX WATERWORKS COMPANY.—The Half-yearly Section of this Company is now in progress of construction. The supply will be from the Thames at Barking, by the finest quality which can be possibly obtained in the vicinity of the Metropolis. The Directors are of opinion that the Shares will be found a desirable investment for Manufacturers and others on the point can be supplied to any extent. Applications for Shares, and information, may be had of the Secretary, at the Offices, 2, Moorgate-street, City, and by order of the Board, SAMUEL BRADLEY, Secretary.

A RTICLED CLERK.—There is a VACANCY for an ARTICLED CLERK in the Office of a Solicitor practising in the Midland Counties.—Address Gamma, care of Messrs. Deacon's, Leadenhall-street.

ISLE OF MAN.—TO FAMILIES WISHING for the VERY BEST SEA-BATHING, and the most delightful residence, a VILLA RESIDENCE, situate on the margin of the Sea, with Gardens, Pleasure-ground, Stabling, &c., to be LET, for a short or long term, on moderate terms. For particulars apply to Messrs. Cubbon and Co., Douglas, Isle of Man.

NORTH LONDON RAILWAY COMPANY. Notice is hereby given that the Directors are prepared to receive APPLICATIONS for ALLOTMENTS of the NORTH LONDON RAILWAY DEBENTURE STOCK, authorised under the powers and by the terms of the Company's Act of 1862, for the purpose of paying off the Company's Debenture Stock, bearing 6 per cent. interest.

The stock bears a fixed and perpetual yearly dividend or interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, such dividend or interest forming a charge upon the tolls and undertaking, and taking priority of payment over all other dividends or any other stock or shares of the Company.

Applications for allotments of the stock must be received at the office of the Company, No. 19, Moorgate-street, London, E.C., on or before the 15th day of June, 1863.

The Directors reserve to themselves the right of allotting the stock, and will give notice of the allotments to the applicants.

By order of the Board,
ROBERT S. HASSELL, Secretary.

Moorgate-street, London, N.W., April, 1863.

NEW BOOKS.

Now Edition, price 10s. 6d., cloth elegant; 18s. morocco,

THE BIRTHDAY SOUVENIR. Every page richly Illuminated in Gold and Colours, from Designs by S. STANNARD.

GRIFFITH and FARRAN, Corner of St. Paul's-churchyard.

Just published, price 6s. 6d., oblong 8vo., cloth,

LITTLE BY LITTLE: A Series of Illustrated Stories for the Use of Reading Mamas. By the Author of "Conversations on Harmony."

GRIFFITH and FARRAN, Corner of St. Paul's-churchyard.

Now ready, at all the Libraries, crown 8vo., price 5s.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE BEAUTIES OF SHAKESPEARE. By the Author of "The Napoleon Gallery."

"This work contains many beauties."—Morning Post.

"The selections are made with much taste for the luxuries and charms of both sex and land in general."—Bell's Life.

"They (the selections) are well chosen."—Sunday Times.

London: ROBERT HARDWICKE, 192, Piccadilly.

CAPTAIN DANGEROUS.

By GUTTAVUS AYLMORE SALA.

London: TINSLEY BROTHERS, 18, Catherine-street, Strand.

This day, dedicated to M. Fuchsz, price 3s. complete,

THE DUET'S MONTHLY. No. 7.

The Drama at the Lyceum Theatre is founded upon this Tale.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

JOSEPH ANSTEY, the New Novel of Real Life, by the Author of the principal Circulating Libraries in town and country. Price 7s. 6d.

London: JOHN MAXWELL and Co.

DR. GOODE'S NEW WORK.—This day is published, price 10s. cloth, FULFILLED PROPHECY, a Proof of the Truth of the Bible: being the Warburtonian Lectures for 1858-9. With an Appendix of Notes, including a full Investigation of the Prophecy of the Seventy Weeks. By the Very Rev. W. GOODE, Dean of Ripon.

London: HATCHARD and Co., 187, Piccadilly.

Just published, 4th Edition, 2s.

THE BATTLE of GERMANY. By Edw'n Lee, M.D., author of "The Victorious Plague of England," &c. John Bull and Co., 169, Fleet-street, and all Booksellers.

AUTOGRAPH LETTERS AND HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

WALLER'S CATALOGUE, Part 50, is now ready, and contains Autographs of Bacon, Blake, Bolingbroke, Boyle, Burke, Byron, Charles I., Charles II., Fenelon, Queen Elizabeth, Charles I., Fox, Franklin, Henry VIII., Hogarth, Jeffreys, Locke, Milton, Napoleon I., Nelson, Newton, Philippe, Marie de Médicis, Napoleon I. and III., Nelson, Newton, Penn, Pitt, Pope, Prince Rupert, Rubens, Sheridan, Swift, Titian, Voltaire, Washington, Wellington, Wolfe, &c. Post-free, 6d.

This day is published, in post 8vo, price 1s.,

LA SORCIÈRE, the Witch of the Middle Ages. Translated from the French of JULES MICHELET.

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and CO., Stationers'-hall-court.

Now ready, price 8s. 6d.,

FAMILY FIELDS for Midsummer. A portrait, illustrated, and replete with original matter of the most entertaining character. WARD and LOCK, Warwick-house.

Now ready, handsomely bound in cloth, price 7s. 6d.,

THE FAMILY HERALD. VOLUME XV.

It dwells at the outset with both spirit and propriety, of all the poetry serials. The colour is its confidant and confessor in every distress of life. The reader's sympathies cannot be withheld.—Athenæum.

Numerous and illustrative of the most interesting phases of human life.—Morning Post.

The Family Herald is the best of its class. Its literary power is of a very high order.—Morning Herald.

Interesting, instructive, and well calculated to prevent deformities of the chest in harp players.

MDME. LIND-GOLDSCHMIDT. Mr. JAMES HALL, Queen's Concert Room, Hanover-square, on FRIDAY, JUNE 26. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Unreserved Seats, 5s. Tickets to be had of Mr. Lind-Goldschmidt, Amherst, Tunbridge-wells.

MR. JAMES HALL, FINSBURY, on WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 10, at Eight o'clock, will SING "The Bandsman," "Glengarry Glenmutchkin and Co.," and "The Wee Hoose." Mr. W. H. Weiss, Lind and Cherry of the Performers' Conductor, Mr. Lind-Goldschmidt. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Unreserved Seats (last numbered), Half-a-crown; back of the Area and Gallery, 1s. Tickets to be had of Mr. James Hall, 32, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square; Mr. Austin's Ticket Office, 26, Piccadilly; Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street; Addison and Lucas, 210, Regent-street; and Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, Regent-street.

DECALCOMANIE.—Instructions in this new and beautiful Art, by which Designs may be handsomely transferred to Glass, Silk, Wood, &c., post-free, 8d. Designs in every variety of style, from 1s. per Sheet. Catalogues free on application. Wholesale and for Exportation.—WILLIAM BARNARD, Artistic Repository, 16, Cranbourne-terrace, London, W.

Eighteenth Edition, post 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.,

HOMŒOPATHIC DOMESTIC MEDICINE. By J. LAURIE, M.D. No medicine is prescribed without the indications under which the drug is to be administered, the result of an extensive and specially-adapted to the use of clergymen and families residing in the country, who have not the advantage of medical aid at hand. By the same Author, Homœopathy applied to the former prior life, and to the latter, 10s. Health and Disease, and how to Cure, 1s. 6d. Fourth-thousand.

LEATH and RITCHIE, 9, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street.

Sixty-first Edition, bound, price 1s., post-free,

HOMŒOPATHIC FAMILY GUIDE; containing Directions for the Treatment of Diseases, Choice of Homœopathic Aliments, A Chest of Medicines for the Work, price 25s. Sold by all Booksellers, and by the Author, 18, Bloomsbury-square.

Second Edition, price 1s., post-free,

HOMŒOPATHIC TREATMENT OF INDIGESTION, Constipation, and Piles. By W. MORAN, Author of "Homœopathic Domestic Medicine," "Homœopathic Domestic Disorders, Rules for Diet, Recipes for Delicacies which may be had daily in the country from other of these complaints." LEATH and RITCHIE, 9, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street.

50,000 BIBLES, Prayer-books, and Church Services, with the Latest Readings and Renderings, at the Lowest Prices. Catalogues free. Warehouse, at JOHN FIELD'S Great Bible Warehouse, 93, Regent-quadrant.

A GUINEA PRAYER-BOOK for 6s. 6d.—The Pocket Edition of the CHURCH PRAYER, large type, with 696 beautiful engravings, and bound in antique style, only 6s. 6d. Catalogues free. Warehouse, at JOHN FIELD'S, 93, Regent-quadrant.

THE CHEAPEST BIBLE STORIES, with nearly 300 Bible Pictures, a Pictorial Sunday Book for the many, and a Gift-book for all. Price 3s. 6d. Catalogues free from FIELD'S Great Bible Warehouse, 93, Regent-quadrant.

FIELD'S GUINEA FAMILY BIBLE.—Large type, with 1,000 Bible Pictures, and Concordance and Matchless Volume. The Largest Book in the World, from 14 to 16 Inches. Price One Guinea. Catalogues free. Warehouse, at JOHN FIELD'S, 93, Regent-quadrant.

THE NEW EDITIONS of the PRAYER-BOOK are now ready, and contain the Services appointed by Command of the Queen for the Princess of Wales, are now ready, at HENRY OAKLEY and Co.'s Warehouse, 93, Regent-quadrant.

DENCILS, BLACK LEAD, and COLOURED CHALK. A. W. FABER'S POLYGRADE LEAD PENCILS, Nos. 1 to 6, and Hexagon Coloured Chalks. Sold Agents, Stationers and Bookmen, 9, Friday-street, London E.C.

IMPERIAL SHERRY, 30s.; XL, 36s.; Port, 30s.; Champagne, 36s.; and all WINE CIRCULARS, free. Oxford-street, W. City Offices, 15, Jobn-street, Bedford-row.

DYSPEPSIA.—MORSON'S PEPSINE WINE, containing the digestive principle prepared from the Stomach of the Pig, is the most effective remedy for dyspepsia, particularly palatable form for administering this popular remedy for indigestion.

Manufactured by T. Morson and Son, 12 and 31, Southampton-row, Russell-square, and sold by Chemists and Druggists.

E. LAZENBY and SON, Foreign Wine Merchants, 67, Upper Thames-street, London, E.C., solicit Orders for their Old Vintage Wines, Port and Sherry, at 24s. per dozen.

EVERY ARTICLE of FOOD for INVALIDS and INFANTS FREE from ADULTERATION. Jellies, Arrowroot, Farinaceous Foods, Cocoa, Chocolate, Tea, Coffee, Compressed Vegetables, Medicines, and General Groceries.—TAN ARCOT and CO., Dietetic Depôt, 5, Princes-street, Cavendish-square, W.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, used in the Royal Laundry, and awarded the Prize Medal for its Superiority.

NEW MUSIC.

ROBERT COCKS AND CO.'S LIST OF NEW MUSIC.

PIANO, with Course of the Accidental, by permission permission to H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES, GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES. By Brinley Richards. Sung with wonderful success by Mr. Sims Reeves. Price 4s.

CORDELIA.—GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES (Berlin). Richards, arranged for Orchestra by the Composer. Price 4s.

LAFFITE'S NEW QUADRILLE. THE PRINCE OF WALES. Price 4s.

LE ALBERT-EDWARD MARCH (both by Brinley Richards). Price 4s. Also, the Quadrille on the Battle of the Nile. Price 4s.

HARMONIUM.—GOD SAVE THE QUEEN and GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES. Arranged by Brinley Richards.

HARMONIUM.—GOD SAVE THE QUEEN and GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves. Price 4s.

HARMONIUM.—GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES. Price 4s.

DUDE-PARTONE.—SURMETTING ON. By S. M. Lois. (No. 36 of Cocks's Musical Miniatures.) Price 1s.

FLAGG.—LITTLE BUTTERCHARLIE. By Frances Wallace. Price 4s.

I KNOW A BANK. (C. E. Horn.) For Piano by Richards. Price 4s.

LA FRIERE DE SEMIRAMIDE. For Piano. By G. F. Work. 7s.

THE FAVORITE OPERAS. Arranged for Piano by Richards. Price 4s. each.

THEMATIC CATALOGUE OF VOCAL MUSIC. Gratis and post-free.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S PIANOFORTES, in Walnut and Rosewood, of Cabinet, 25l.

ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street, W. Publishers to the Queen, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family. Also, Agents for Erard, Broadwood, Collard, Pleyel, and Wolff.

HALF PRICE.—All Music sent post-free at half the published price.

FOSTER and KING, 77, Hedderington, Regent-street, W.

NEW CONTRALTO SONGS.

Corn Lies—Virginia Gabriel ... 3s. Od.
The Curfew Bell—"Come where my love lies dreaming" ... 3s. Od.
The Mountaineer's Wife—Castrel and G. ... 3s. Od.
The Fairies' Song ... 3s. Od.
Fare as Angels—Braham ... 3s. Od.
The Sea—"Oh! how I love on the dark blue sea" ... 3s. Od.
FOSTER and KING, 77, Hedderington, Regent-street, W.

NEW PART-SONGS, SUNG BY MR. HENRY LESLIE'S CHOIR.

Sweet and Low—Barnett ... 2s. Od.
Ariel's Song—Barnett ... 2s. Od.
Autumn's Treasures—G. Cabriel ... 2s. Od.
The Twilight Bells—Virginia Gabriel ... 2s. Od.
Hunter's Evening Song—H. Cummings ... 2s. Od.
Sound the Loud Timbrel—H. Hiles ... 2s. Od.
Published by FOSTER and KING, 77, Hedderington, Regent-street, W.

Twenty-sixth Edition of the Favorite Piece-Flute Piece,

LA SZAUSKA. "LA SZAUSKA." PRAYER and Cavatina. The reply to "La Prière d'une Vierge." For FLEMING NORTON, Flute to the Queen, 296, Strand.

OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, Portman-square.

MUSIC HALF-PRICE and POST-FREE. All Music sent post-free at half the published prices. Country orders are on sight of stamps. The trade supplied to sell at Half-prices. Catalogues gratis and post-free.—67, Hampstead-road, Euston-square.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUMBE'S NEW PIANETTES are very superior to the French, and are strongly recommended for their full, rich, and powerful tone, extent of compass, elegance of design, and durable and reliable construction. One in the window nominal for prize; others, in plain woods, cheaper; from 25 guineas.—OETZMANN and PLUMBE, 27, Baker-street, Portman-square.

PIANOFORTES.—H. TOLKIEN'S EXHIBITION MODEL COTTAGE PIANO, first class, having all recent improvements, the patent check repeater action, in less than six extraordinary years. The price, from 40 low figure, is not higher than that of the old-fashioned instrument of the last century. Also, a Pianoforte, by the same maker, of the old pattern, but also repaired, or taken in exchange. Drawings free.—Tolkien, 27, Wilton-street, Grosvenor-place, S.W.

PIANOFORTE, 18 Guineas.—Broadwood upright cottage pianoforte, in excellent condition, in handsome rosewood case, with fine full tone and quick touch. Inspection of this instrument is invited.—Broadwood, manufactory, being a few more, and materially cheap. May be viewed, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square.

MUSICAL BOX DEPOT for the Sale of ERCOLES celebrated Musical Instruments is removed from No. 24 to 19, Old Bond-street, London. Lists of tunes and prices gratis and postage-free.

MUSICAL BOX DEPOTS, 32, Ludgate-street, and 56, Cheapside, London. Musical Boxes, 21 per Air; Pianofortes, 16s. to 40s. Catalogues of tunes and prices gratis and post-free. Musical Boxes Repaired.

SUPERB GILT DRAWING-ROOM CLOCKS 7 ft. 6 in. high, with Chimes and Cathedral Tone, by the Clerkenwell Clock in London at WALES and MCCULLOCH'S Clock Depôt, 56, Cheapside (next Bow Church). Illustrated Catalogue gratis and post-free on application.

TO BE SOLD for £21 (cost £50), a Superb Gothic Organ, with Pedals, Compass CC to F in alt, 30 stops, 2 rows of keys. May be seen at WALES and MCCULLOCH'S, 32, Ludgate-street.

DENT, Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker to the Queen, and to the Royal Family, and to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and Maker of the Great Clock for the Houses of Parliament, 61, Strand, and 34, Royal Exchange, E.C., and 82, Royal Exchange.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—ARTIST in HAIR. Mr. PHILLIPS begs to inform Ladies or Gentlemen that he continues to execute every description of Hair Jewellery, Bracelets, Chains, Brooches, Rings, Pins, Slides, &c., and forwards the same as a perfect one-hair Pattern, with prices and instructions for self-measurement, handsomely mounted, sent for inspection. An illustrated book sent free on receipt of two postage-stamps.—Mr. Phillips, 3, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square.

GEOLOGY and MINERALOGY. Collections of Minerals, Rocks, Recent Shells, and Fossils, to illustrate the Science of Geology, and Specimens for the Cabinet, at the lowest prices, with descriptive Catalogues, sent free by post for one stamp. Address, J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, W.C. 2 Z gives Prize Instruction in Geology.

RECONCITERER! GLASS, 9s. 6d.! Invented by Dollond, Optician to the Queen, Strand, two doors &c., late maker of Joseph's Mouse &c., are distinctly seen by it. Sent by post for 54 stamps.—Address, Optician, 59, Strand, London. "I have never met with an article that so completely answered Captain Garnet here. I never before met an optician that so completely understood the principles of optics."—Captain Garnet, Royal Observatory, Cape of Good Hope. "Regarding the glasses supplied by Messrs. Dollond, I can most cheerfully bear testimony to their excellence. I have frequently had occasion to use them in the field, and have found them to answer all the purposes for which they were intended. I have also found them to possess the most perfect achromatism, and to define objects with the greatest distinctness."—Lieut.-Col. Sir Henry James, R.E., late Superintendent of the Ordnance Survey. "I have used your glasses for the last three years, and find them to be very good. I have also found them to retain their power for a much longer time than those I had used before."—Lieut. Hall, R.N. Post-free, 10s. 6d. The Hydra Glass, allowing the eye to see in the dark, 10s. 6d. Opera Glasses, which are only to be had direct from DOLLOND and CO., 59, Strand.

HER MAJESTY'S HEAD GAMEKEEPER. Mr. ROBERT HOLLAND, Gamekeeper to the Queen at Windsor, says, "It is certainly a very fine glass; the best I have ever had in my hand." Sent by post for 54 stamps. The Hydra and two Reconciterer Glasses, 21s. Sent by post for 54 stamps. Only to be had direct from DOLLOND and CO., 59, Strand.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO-GUINEA BINOCULAR FIELD, RIFLE, or OPERA GLASS.—The most powerful and perfect glass ever manufactured, possessing extraordinary distinctness at any distance—suitable for the theatre, the race-course, the sporting field, or the tourist. Sold by all Opticians, and wholesale of the Optical Laboratory for Science, 59, High Holborn, London.

OPERA, RACE, and FIELD GLASSES of every description, of the most approved construction and size. The largest and best selection, in every variety of mounting, at DOLLOND'S Old Established Glass Warehouse, 59, Strand,

BRIGHTON and BACK for 3s. EVERY SUNDAY and MONDAY.—Trains leave Victoria, Kensington, and Addison-bridge Stations at 9 a.m., returning from Brighton for Victoria at 7.30 for Kensington, at 7.35, and for London Bridge at 7.50 p.m.

The Victoria Train will call at Kent Cowden, and the Kensington Train will call at Chelsea, Clapham Junction, Crystal Palace, and Norwood Junction, going and returning.

	1st Class.	2nd Class.	3rd Class.
Return Tickets	5s. 6d.	4s. 6d.	3s. 6d.
Single Tickets	3s. 6d.	2s. 6d.	2s. 0d.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO PORTSMOUTH.—Trains leave London Bridge and Victoria at 8.45 a.m. calling at Kew Gardens, Richmond, Twickenham, Hampton Court, Esher, Hersham, Walton, Weybridge, Byfleet, Woking, Farnborough, Aldershot, Farnham, Liphook, Petersfield, Havant, Chichester, Woodgate, for Bognor, Arundel, and Worthing, returning the same evening.

Fares: First Class, 8s. 6d.; Second Class, 6s. 6d.; Third Class, 5s. 6d. Guest and Co., Secretaries.

HASTINGS for 3s. 6d.—CHEAP EXCURSIONS run EVERY SUNDAY from Victoria and Kensington, Addison-road, Chelsea, Clapham Junction, Crystal Palace, Herne Hill, Denmark Hill, Loughborough Junction, and Lewes, returning the same evening.

Fares: First Class, 7s. 6d.; Second Class, 5s. 6d.; Third Class, 4s. 6d., there and back.

YOUR ARMS, CREST, MONOGRAM, or Address Die Engraved on Paper Free of Charge. Send no stamps for copying this rule, which is given to show a neat and legible style. Post 2d envelope to match at 10s., sermon pad, 5s.; T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

WEDDING-CARDS and ENVELOPES Stamped in Silver with Arms, Crest, or Monogram. 50 Cards and Die Engraved, 4s. 6d. Initials and Address Die Sunk for Stamping, 5s. Any old envelopes re-stamped. Catalogue and Price-list of every style, and 50 best ivory Cards, 3s., post-free.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver of H.M. Chamberlain's court (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

FAMILY ARMS.—All Persons desirous of having a correct copy of their armorial bearings should send name and county to CULLETON'S HERALDIC LIBRARY. No fee for search. Plain sketch, 2s. 6d.; in tasteful colours, 5s.; large size for framing, 10s. 6d. Arms painted, fine description, beautifully executed in their proper colours, 21s. Family Reference Index and Arms examined and inquired by T. Culleton, Chamberlain's court (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

FAMILY ARMS Engraved on Seals, Rings, and steel Dies in artistic style. Crest on Seals, 7s. 6d.; with Motto Ring, 15s. Book-plate, Hall-marked, engraved, with crest, 21s.; plain, very tasteful, 10s. Gothic for Arms, Crest, and Motto, 10s. Crest on Dies, 5s. Arms painted in proper colours, 12s. Send for Sketch. Trademark for Arms, Crest, and Motto. Certificate of Trade, by appointment, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CRESTS and MONOGRAMS for ALBUMS. —The Arms and Quarterings of the Queen and all the Royal Family, the Arms of every Duke and Marquis, the Coronets and Supporters of the Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage, and the Arms of Universities and Cities. Anybody can have his Arms and Crest of British Consumers, the Crown and Monograms of the Emperor and Empress of the French, and the Imperial Family and Aristocracy of France. Price 2d. per sheet, or 12 sheets for 2s. Postage-stamps accepted. Heraldic Office, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

MARK YOUR LINEN with CULLETON'S PATENT ELECTRO-SILVER PLATES.—By means of this invention any lady can mark her own linen with the most elegant and superscribed. Initial Plate, 1s.; Name, 2s. 6d.; Set of Numbers, 2s. 6d. Crest, Initials, and Name, 5s. Any one can use them.—T. Culleton, Patentee, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

HANDSOME BRASS and IRON BEDSTEADS, SHAPLAND and PETTER'S Show-rooms contain a large assortment of these bedsteads suitable both for home use and for furnishing apartments abroad, fitted with their registered dovetailed sacking and dispensing with Dutch iron bands for screwing. A new description of Wood Bedstead that is manufactured, in Mahogany and Rosewood, for the Home and Japanned, all fitted with bedding complete, complete, as well as every description of Bedroom Furniture and Bedding, 64, Oxford-street, Manchester, London, W.

LE SOMMIER ÉLASTIQUE PORTATIF.—The foundation of all Mattress Bedding should be elastic, and the spring Mattress to be heavy and elastic—the requisites for perfect rest. HEAL and SONS now Patent Le Sommier Elastique Portatif Mattress, which is elastic on both sides, and requires no turning, as it is also stuffed so that there is no stuffing on the top, to cause harbour moth. Lists of Prices on application to Heal and Son, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

STAINED DEAL GOTHIC BEDROOM FURNITURE.—HEAL and SON having been frequently asked for bedroom furniture to correspond in finish with the Gothic and Mediæval houses now so frequently erected, have supplied the want, and have now on show a Bedstead, Wardrobe, &c., by HEAL, to which the whole attention of the clergy and gentry is now finishing country houses. It is plain and simple in character, and executed in stained and varnished deal. Bedstead, Bedding, and Spring Mattress Furniture Manufacturers, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

HEAL and SON'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE containing Sketches and Prices of their Stock of STEADS, as well as of 150 different sketches of Bedroom Furniture, sent free by post.—Heal and Son, Bedstead, Bedding, and Bedroom Furniture Manufacturers, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

FIRST-CLASS BEDROOM FURNITURE. A SEDLEY and CO., 210, Regent-street, have for sale second-hand, complete suites of Bedroom Furniture, brass bedstead, mahogany wardrobe with marble-top washstand, thick dressing table, with glass, towel-rail, chair, &c., all in perfect condition, and of the best workmanship and material, with the exception of a few Spanish mahogany tilts the whole of elegant design and the finest description of polish. Also a variety of Dressing-tables, all of which have been bedstead, and Wardrobes, for £3—A. Sedley and Co., Upholsterers, 210, Regent-street, W.

THE NONPAREIL WARDROBE.—For Ladies, Gents, and Children, and the same for Gentlemen, £17, with large plate-glass doors, fixed-pins in all requisite, and very convenient.—A. Sedley and Co., 210, Regent-street, Upholsterers, W.

FIRST-RATE and ELEGANT FURNITURE at MODERATE PRICES.—Illustrated Catalogue Gratis. A. SEDLEY and Co., 210, Regent-street, London, W.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE. WATCH and SON, 2 and 4, Goodge-street; and 65 and 67, Tottenham-court-road, W. Carpets, Furniture Stuffs, &c. An immediate reduction of twenty per cent in all descriptions.

REVISION of CATALOGUE.—ATKINSON and CO. beg to acquaint their numerous customers and also the public generally that they have now NEW CATALOGUES in NOW READY, and may be had through the post, or by applying at their Warehouse, 3, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square. It is published in three parts, and is made from the pieces of patterns in their showrooms. The enabling purchasers to judge beforehand the character and style of the goods required, all articles marked in plain figures having reference to the prices given in the Catalogue.

A staff of artists are employed at the present season's productions in cabinet furniture, carpets, and rich fabrics of every description, including the beautiful Tapestry, Brocatelle, and Damascene lace, point lace, Honiton and Lace curtains. Those Catalogues are free on application or forwarded by post on receipt of 2d.

Contractors to her Majesty's Government and the principal public companies and noblemen's mansions.

Addresses to Atkinson and Co., 3, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square, the New Bridge, from the Houses of Parliament.

WILLIAM S. BURTON, GENERAL IRONMONGER, by appointment to H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES, sends a CATALOGUE gratis and post-free, containing upwards of One Hundred Illustrations of his Stock of Sterling Silver and Electro-plate, Nickel Silver, and Britannia Metal Goods, Dish Covers and Hot-water Dishes, Stoves, Fenders, Marble Chimney-pieces, Kitchen Ranges, Lamps, Gaseliers, Tea Trays, Urns and Kettles; Clocks, Table Cutlery, Baths, Toilet Ware, Turnery, Iron and Brass Bedsteads, Bedding, Bedroom and Cabinet Furniture, Portable Cottages, Garden Tools, &c., with Lists of Prices and Plans of the Twenty Large Showrooms, at 39, Oxford-street, W.; 1, 1a, 2, and 3, Newman-street; 4, 4a, and 5, Perry's-place; and 1, Newman-yard, London.

FURNISH YOUR HOUSE with the best articles, at DEANE'S Ironmongery and Furnishing Warehouse, established A.D. 1700. Price List and Plans free by post. Deane and Co. (the Monument), London Bridge.

ICE-SAFE, or REFRIGERATOR, for the Preservation of Provisions, Wines, Fruits, &c. Will keep in cool in any country. Price from £3 3s. Also Ice Pails and Ice Spoons, to be had only of the inventor, Actuary.—DEANE and Co., the Monument, London Bridge. Established A.D. 1700.

ICE FOR TOWN OR COUNTRY. REFRIGERATORS, Ice-Cream Machines, Freezing Powders, and everything connected with freezing, of the best, most modern, and reliable kinds, at moderate Prices.—Apply to the full patentees, Rees, WERNHAM, LACE, and ICE COMPANY, 180, Strand, London.

FIRST DELIVERY OF THE NEW SUMMER SILKS at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
All new colours lately discovered.
Patterns sent post-free. Address as King and Co., Regent-street, London.

PLAIN SUMMER SILKS, £1 18s. a DRESS, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

STRIPED SUMMER SILKS, £1 18s. a DRESS, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

CHECKED SUMMER SILKS, £1 18s. a DRESS, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

CORDED SUMMER SILKS, £1 15s. a DRESS, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

CHINÉE and REPS SUMMER SILKS, £2 2s. a DRESS, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

BLACK SILKS, £1 a DRESS, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Broché Black Silks ..... ,, £1 10s. 6d.
Corded Black Silks ..... ,, £1 15s. 6d.
Black Moire Antiques ..... ,, £1 18s. 6d.
Patterns sent post-free.

JACONET MUSLINS, 2s 11d. a DRESS, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Organdie Muslins, 3s. 6d.
Swiss Muslins, 3s. 6d.
Jaconet Muslins, 3s. 6d.
Patterns sent post-free.

GRENADINES, 10s. 6d. a DRESS, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Broché Grenadines, 15s. 6d.
Pompadour Grenadines, 21s.
Patterns sent post-free.

BLACK LACE SHAWLS, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
From 10s. 6d. to £3 3s. each.
New Parisian Square Shawls, Barcelona shawls, ... 15s. 6d.
Black Cashmere, trimmed 9in, 10s. 6d. to £3 3s.
Black Cashmere Scarfs, in every variety.
King and Co., Regent-street, London.

NEW SILKS for JUNE.
All textile yards. Patterns post-free.
Turquise Medora, 11s. 6d., recommended by the Rue 114, the New Zebaline, 1s. 11d. New Washing Gossamines, 10s. 6d., the New Organdine, 1s. 6d., the new Pompadour Grenadine, 10s. 6d., the new Broché Grenadine, 15s. 6d., and Silk Cuss pieces, rich Arabesque Tissues, in all the new styles and colours, 21s. Patterns sent post-free.

To ensure a reply and the forwarding of patterns the same day, it is positively necessary that all letters be addressed to the Crystal Warehouse.

NICHOLSON and SMITH, 61 and 62, St. Paul's-churchyard.

ELEGANT SILK JACKETS and MANTLES, for the Present Season.
Crystal Warehouse,
61 and 62, St. Paul's-churchyard.

NEW SILKS for JUNE.
All twelve yards, wide width.
Patterns free.
Checked Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. Striped Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. French Fancy Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. Japanese Checked Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. Striped Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. Broché Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. Richest Broché Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. Rich Striped Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. Rich Fancy Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. Rich Checked Silks, at 1½ guinea the dress. Rich Plaid

NEW MUSIC.

FAUST.—GOUNOD'S Celebrated OPERA, now in rehearsal at both the Italian Opera—The scenes of this Opera on the Pianoforte. Price 2s. net. Also the Waltz Song and Jewel Song. Special Vocal Arrangements of all the principal airs, Quadrilles, Waltzes, &c., now ready. The opera complete, with Italian or French words, price 10s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DENMARK QUADRILLE.
Special Permission to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Composed entirely on Danish National Melodies. By T. GODFREY. This Quadrille is dedicated, by permission, to the Princesse Victoria of Wales, the Princess Alexandra, and the Princess Louise.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S WAVING LILY BELLS, Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA VOIX CELESTE. Reverie for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA BELLE MARIETTE. Valse for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA PRIÈRE D'UNE MÈRE. Reverie pour Piano. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S "THE ANGELS' HARP." Rhapsody for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S ROYAL WEDDING MARCH, for the Pianoforte, splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NATIONAL MELODIES FOR THE PIANOFORTE.
No. 1. "The March of the Men of Harlech." Price 3s.
No. 2. "Ye Mary Ann." (At 1st 3rd 5 mov.) Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S SEMIRAMIDE. Grand Fantasia on Airs from Rossini's Grand Serious Opera, for the Pianoforte, by this popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASANIELLO.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia for the Pianoforte on Airs from this charming Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on Favourite Melodies from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NAVA'S DANISH NATIONAL SONG and HYMN. Arranged for the Pianoforte. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

GOODBAN'S WEDDING BELLS for the Pianoforte, beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular Song arranged as a Duet, for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. This popular Ballad arranged as an easy and effective drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS'S GOD SAVE THE QUEEN. "As a drawing-room piece, we are disposed to think this the finest of the set." Mr. Richard Best, musical schoolmaster.—Review. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW and IMPORTANT WORK for the PIANOFORTE.
HARMONIUM. Just published, SCHUBERT'S ADAGIO and ANDANTE, for Pianoforte and Harmonium, with the songs carefully selected and marked by Dr. BIRMINGHAM. Price 4s. each. Also, by the same Composer, the Andante Cantabile from his Pianoforte Quintet, arranged expressly for this popular Instrument by F. P. BIMBAULT. Now in the press. Price 1s. each.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SACRED WORK FOR THE HARMONIUM. Twenty-five FULL or CONCLUDING VOLUNTARIES for the Harmonium, specially suited to the Offertory and Concluding Portions of the Service, expressly suited to small Churches and Chapels. By Dr. BIRMINGHAM. Price 4s. net.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIMBAULT'S 100 PSALM and HYMN TUNES for HARMONIUM, selected from the most eminent Church Composers. Price 4s. 1s cloth, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIMBAULT'S 200 CHANTS by the best Church Composers, ancient and modern, Double and Single, Some of the various Cadences, and arranged expressly for the Harmonium. Price 4s. 1s cloth, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIMBAULT'S 50 SHORT VOLUNTARIES for the HARMONIUM, expressly suited to small Church and Chapels. Price 4s. 1s cloth, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

A FAREWELL. New Song. Words by A. ROCKEL. Music by CHARLES ROCKEL. Sung by Mr. Santley at the Royal Albert Hall Concert. Price 4s.
Price (with Violoncello Obligato), 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HARVEST HOME. BY G. R. ALLEN.

MY OWN DEAR NATIVE FIELDS. Constantly Sung from this Popular Composer. Price 3s.
NEWLEN and CO., 71, 73, 75, and 81, Great Marlborough-street, W.

HARVEST HOME WALSE. By DE LUSSAN. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 4s. Played by all the bands.
NEWLEN and CO., 71, 73, 75, and 81, Great Marlborough-street, W.

HARVEST HOME QUADRILLE. By DE LUSSAN. Illustrated. Price 4s. Played by all the bands with great success.
NEWLEN and CO., 71, 73, 75, and 81, Great Marlborough-street, W.

KUHE'S HARVEST HOME. Characteristic for the Piano of Airs from this popular Song. Price 4s.
NEWLEN and CO., 71, 73, 75, and 81, Great Marlborough-street, W.

KUHE'S SLUMBER, MINE OWN. Transcription for the Piano of this popular Song. Price 4s.
NEWLEN and CO., 71, 73, 75, and 81, Great Marlborough-street, W.

VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S "INSAMLAND."
Song sung by her in C or in E flat. Price 3s.
NEWLEN and CO., 71, 73, 75, and 81, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SLUMBER, MINE OWN. Song so popular Song sung by her in C or in E flat. Price 3s.
NEWLEN and CO., 71, 73, 75, and 81, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MDME. OURY'S "PURITANI" Fantasia for the Piano, as played by the Composer. Price 4s.
NEWLEN and CO., 71, 73, 75, and 81, Great Marlborough-street, W.

"THE CAPTIVITY."
MARCH OF THE MEDES and PERSIANS from HANDEL'S Oratorio "Joseph." Transcribed for the Piano by RUDOLPH NORDMANN. Price 4s.
NEWLEN and CO., 71, 73, 75, and 81, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWSONG.—"THE SEA IS BEFORE US."
Composed by HENRY RUSSELL. Price 3s. 6d. Also a brief print. This is one of Mr. Russell's best songs, in the style of his favourite Song of "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," which was sung by all Europe. Duff and Hodgson, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW VALSE.—THE ANGLO-DANISH VALSE. By L. E. MIRK. Solo or Duet. Price 4s. Dedicated, by permission, to Princess Victoria. Very successful. May now be had as Solo or Duet for Pianoforte, and in Parts for Septet or full Orchestra.—Duff and Hodgson, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG. BIRD OF THE WILDERNESS. Composed by HOWARD LANG. Sung by Mr. KENNEDY. Price 3s. 6d. (Duet at half-price.) This favourite Song is the forthcoming novelty in the Entertainments at the Stage of Scotland.—Duff and Hodgson, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW MUSIC.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD'S MUSIC CIRCULATING LIBRARY for Town and Country. Terms—Two, Three, and Four Guineas per Annum.

HALF-PRICE. ALL FULL-PRICED Music sent Post at Half the Published Price by CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

NICCOLO DE LAPI.
New Opera. By Signor SCHIRA.
VOCAL MUSIC.
"Quel di che ti vidi." Tenor Solo, Trebelli, Signori ... 4 0
"Il primo bacio." Soprano Solo, Trebelli, Signori ... 4 0
Quartet and Chorus, and Mr. Santley ... 2 0
"Ah! sempre, sempre, sei sempre nel mio pensiero." In the legitimate Italian style. "Tirsee, May 14 ... 3 0
"Ah! non lasciarmi." Duet for Soprano and Tenor, Bettini

THE KAGU.

We are indebted for the following description of the kagu (Rhinochetus jubatus), lately added to the collection in the Zoological Gardens, to a paper by Mr. A. D. Bartlett, recently published in the Proceedings of the Zoological Society of London:—

At the first sight of this bird one is struck with its resemblance to several different genera, one and all of which appear more or less represented in its singular combination of characters.

The actions and movements of the kagu are generally quick and lively, so opposite to the slow and chameleon-like movements of the true herons that one can hardly suspect it to be an Ardeine bird. This, however, it doubtless will prove to be, but so modified and adapted to a different kind of diet and mode of life, that its real affinities are difficult to recognise.

With its erect crest and wings spread out, the kagu runs or skips about, sometimes pursuing and driving before him all the birds that are confined with him in the same aviary (among these are several blue waterhens [Porphyrio]), evidently enjoying the fun of seeing them frightened; at other times he will seize the end of his wing or tail and run round, holding it in his bill: from a piece of paper or dry leaf he derives amusement by tossing it about and running after it. During his frolic he will thrust his bill into the ground and spread out his wings, kick his legs in the air, and then tumble about as if in a fit. At other times he appears intent upon catching worms: he steps slowly, his neck close to his body, his crest flat on his back, all his feathers smooth and close; he raises one foot, and with two or three gentle strokes he paws the ground, swiftly he darts his bill into the earth and draws forth a worm; a sudden shake and it is swallowed; again he runs; stopping suddenly, he makes another dart; and thus he continues to capture this kind of food. With respect to feeding, this bird differs much from the heron family, seeking out, in every hole and corner, worms, snails, and other living things, whenever they are not in motion. As soon as a snail is found, he breaks its shell by repeated knocks upon the ground, and after shaking the fragments of the broken shell off, the animal is swallowed. In no instance, however, that I have observed, does this bird eat bread, seed, or any kind of vegetable, but he strictly confines himself to insects and other animal substances.

The skeleton and internal anatomy of the kagu being entirely unknown to me, I can only form an opinion of the affinities of this bird by its external characters, habits, &c.; and I find that the remarkable powder-down tufts, which are well developed in all the Ardeinæ, are carried to a greater extent in this bird; for above and around the wings, on the breast beneath the wings, and on the back and belly, this structure exists, and the enormous quantity of the white powder given off is surprising. The strong resemblance between this bird and Eurypyga, even in the markings upon the wing and tail feathers, the mode of spreading out the wings, and other resemblances convince me that I am right in considering the kagu to be more closely allied to Eurypyga than to any other bird that has come within my notice.

NEW AUSTRALIAN BIRD, THE KAGU (RHINOCHETUS JUBATUS), RECENTLY ADDED TO THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S COLLECTION IN REGENT'S PARK.

NEW INDIAN PHEASANTS.

In the year 1857 the Zoological Society of London received a fine collection of living pheasants from the Himalayas. This collection was formed for the society by their various correspondents in India, and brought home, round the Cape, in one of Messrs. Green and Co.'s sailing-vessels, under the care of a groom sent out for that purpose to Calcutta. Five species of the pheasants thus introduced into Europe have bred in the gardens in the Regent's Park every year since their introduction, and about thirty couples of these birds have been reared and distributed each year among the members and correspondents of the society. From this stock the Impeyan, the Cheer, and the three species of Kalesge pheasants that may now be seen in almost all the numerous zoological gardens in Europe, have originated. It was in contemplation to continue the importation of new birds from India, both for the sake of obtaining fresh blood and for the purpose of adding new species to the series, when the mutiny in India, and the general disarrangement of affairs throughout the country thereby caused, put an end to the further progress of the undertaking. The experiment, however, has been lately resumed, and the first of a new series of importations of living Indian pheasants has recently arrived in Regent's Park.

NEW INDIAN PHEASANTS ADDED TO THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S COLLECTION IN REGENT'S PARK.

Under the excellent arrangements made by Mr. John J. Stone (who, with the late William Smyth is justly entitled to the chief honours in the success of the present undertaking), these birds reached England on the 30th of March last, by the overland route, in perfect health and in excellent condition. Three species were contained in this collection which had not been represented in the series imported in 1857—namely, the Puerus pheasant (Lophura nycthemera), the Hardwicke's spur fowl (Gallogerdix lunulosa), and the Horned Tragopan (Ceriornis satyra), the two latter of which are so extremely rare as to insure their reproduction in this country, under proper treatment.

The Horned Tragopans (one of the finest birds of the magnificent family of Pheasinidæ) have already commenced laying, the first egg having been deposited on the 1st inst. The society are indebted for their specimens of this bird, and many other valuable acquisitions, to one of their corresponding members—the Rajah Rajendra Mullick, of Calcutta.

"LE RELIQUAIRE."

THE beautiful drawing we have engraved has already been criticised in an article in the Exhibition of the Society of Painters in Water Colours as one of the most admirable works we have seen by Mr. Walter Goodall. The subject of the drawing was, we understand, suggested to the artist during a tour in Brittany, and the exact locale where the painter witnessed this incident was an old ruinous chateau near Guingamp, now inhabited by a peasant and his family. The isolated situation of Brittany, the difference of climate, and the total absence of the Boston language and its modern dialects, have kept the province and its inhabitants remarkably free from that centralising despotism in manners and costume established in all capitals, and especially in that of France. Brittany is in outward aspect much what it was centuries ago, although more poverty-stricken, and with little hope for its amelioration. The Breton is still primitive; and almost as wild as their country, exceedingly quaint in their costumes, and possessing an unbounded faith in the pilgrimages to celebrated shrines. In no part of France are the people of all classes more frequent in their attendance at church, and more observant of the religious duties, of festivals, fasts, &c.

There is always something touching about the person of the blind, and the appearance of such a venerable old, blind pilgrim as Mr. Goodall represents, with his crucifix staff, and bearing round his neck a reliquiary, in close confabulation with the peasant's family, and the Blessed Virgin and Child, would be the ripest everywhere in Brittany for reverent loving and sympathy, and for many a coarse cuff and saving of Ave's and genuflexions, especially among the women and children. The two pretty Bretonnes in the Egyptian hall are much improved by the advent of the holy image, the importance of which is, possibly, increased by some saintly relic. He may, probably, possess, in his boots, or in his clothes, the bone of some inferior saint, or a piece of his garment, or shoe, his staff, or something to handle, or some holy ground on which he has stood, where his blood was shed, or where he was buried. We know such relics are common enough.

The cape worn by these Breton girls are not so peculiar in form as those seen in some parts of Brittany and Normandy. But such caps, by their quaintness, give always a pleasant relief to the scenery. These curious coiffures are often of a costly material. Old point lace is still unforgotten, as seen on many a peasant's cap, and even decorated as heirlooms (we intend no pun) from one generation to another. The dilapidated old château, the ivy-clad tower, the rugged granite portal; the Gothic arch of the side-door, and the turrets and "extinguisher" roofs in the distance recall the days of the Breton chivalry. There is to be the proprietor of the chateau and the district of Brittany in the present day is little better than to be, in the sense of the French word, the seigneur of whilom days "of yore." For reasons we have sufficiently indicated Brittany is, however, almost equally with Spain, an El Dorado of the picturesque for the artist. Here and in Normandy it was that Mr. Frederick Goodall, A.R.A., collected materials for some of his earliest and most successful pictures; and Mr. Walter Goodall is following up the example of his brother. The Goodall family of artists are now only less numerous than the Williamses. Besides the two we have named, there is Mr. Edward A. Goodall, the contributor of several excellent drawings to the same exhibition as that containing the drawing now before us, and the two sons of Mr. Edward Goodall, our foremost engraver of Turner's works.

COMBINED VOLUNTEER AND NAVAL DEMONSTRATION AT SOUTHEND.

A SHAM fight took place at Southend on Monday week, in which the volunteers were opposed to the less practised combatants of the Royal Navy. From an early hour the usually quiet locality of Southend was the scene of great activity and excitement in consequence of the large number of visitors who arrived by each successive train of the London and Tilbury Railway, and also by steam-boats, to witness the spectacle of an attack by a naval squadron on the Marines against a defensive force of volunteer artillery, engineers, and rifles.

At twelve o'clock the 3rd Essex (Southend) Regiment of Rifle Volunteers, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel John Coope Davis and Major Octavius Coope, marched to the respective ground fronting the Ship Hotel, preceded by its excellent regimental band of sixty performers; and a series of battalion evolutions, which occupied about an hour, were carried out by the corps, which comprises the following corps, viz.:—1st Essex (Romford), Captain Champion Russell; 2nd Essex (Ilford), Captain Gosling; 4th Essex (Chelmsford), Captain Henry M. Harvey; 3rd Essex (Brentwood), Captain Hall; 5th Essex (Southend), Captain Davis; 6th Essex (Rochford), Captain Peter F. Pearbleck; 10th Essex (Chipping Ongar), Captain Philip J. Budworth; 19th Essex (Epping), Captain Luther W. Cartwright; 21st Essex (Brentwood), Captain William J. Burgess; and 24th Essex (Woodford), Captain Commandant George Noble. At the termination of the battalion evolutions the battalion marched to Cliffe Town, which was the great centre of attraction for the vast crowd of open ground which was kept cleared to the heights facing sea was thronged by immense multitudes of spectators, who were excellently accommodated having been made for the safety and accommodation of the public.

The defensive artillery force to resist the landing of Royal Marines consisted of two 9-pounder field-guns, which were brought from the garrison at Shoeburyness in charge of a detachment of the depôt brigade Royal Artillery and the West Essex Artillery Corps, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel George Palmer. The guns of this regiment, comprising a 9-pounder of the muzzle-loading pattern, were placed in excellent position immediately on the summit of the cliff facing the point of attack, the command of which was under the command of the battery being Captains B. Bolton Edenborough, J. Jessop, and Lieutenant Hornborough. The two 40-pounder Armstrong guns, each drawn by eight horses, took up a position on the opposite cliff, considerably to the rear of the 9-pounder battery, these guns being supposed, on account of their superior range, to be detached from some squadron when far out from shore.

At half-past two o'clock the entire volunteer force had assembled on the ground and formed in review order, comprising, in addition to the the 3rd Essex Administrative Battalion, the following corps:—viz., the 15th Essex (Heybridge) Volunteer Engineers, commanded by Captain Edward Hammond Bastall; the 1st Administrative Battalion of the Tower Hamlets Rifles, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel C. Buxton, and comprising the 3rd (Spitalfields), Captain Commandant Sir T. F. Buxton; 4th (Mile-end), Captain G. E. Ludbrook; and 10th (Mile-end gate), Captain Davies; the 38th Middlesex, Captain Commandant H. W. Phillips; detachments of the West Middlesex, London Artists', and other metropolitan corps; the 5th Essex (Plaistow), Colonel Commandant Charles Capper; the 22nd Essex (Waltham Abbey), Captain William Leak; and the 23rd Essex (Maldon). Captain James A. Hamilton. The reviewing officers, Colonel W. C. F. M'Murdo, C.B., Inspector-General of Volunteers, Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel C. F. Ibbetson, Assistant Inspector, and Staff, were received with the usual salute by the entire line, and the force immediately proceeded to march and execute the battalion evolutions.

Shortly after three o'clock the most interesting portion of the proceedings of the day commenced. A squadron of five steam gunboats were observed steaming majestically up the Thames on the opposite shore; the bugles of the volunteers sounded the alarm; an excellent disposition was made of the resisting force by the commanding officers, and each of the guns was manned ready for action. The attacking squadron, having got well in position opposite Southend Pier, opened a terrific fire, which was responded to by the batteries on shore; and during the cannonade, under the protection of the fire of the squadron, a force of 200 men, land and file of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, under the command of Captain Butcher, left the vessels, and effected a landing in small boats at the eastern end of the beach at the bottom of the cliff, by means of the fleet. A landing was effected in gallant style, under the superintendence of Vice-Admiral Sir T. M. Pasley, Bart., K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, who had charge of the squadron, and Lieutenant-Colonel Jones, of the marines, and the marines formed the attacking force commanded, and prepared to reach the level of the cliff, and engage the enemy. The marines, being the force opposed by the volunteers, who had thrown out a party of skirmishers, who were supported by a line prepared for volley firing, the whole being drawn out by the right of companies. The gallant Royal Marines at all hazards continued to advance, and with some difficulty succeeded in reaching the level of the cliff, when, with a bayonet charge, rushing up at various points of the declivity, and overpowering the force of all opposed to them. The volunteer skirmishers and advance force retired to the main body, and the Royal Marines advanced in direct echelon of companies at quick march to the attack. The attacking force then encountered the entire line of the volunteer army, and a very brisk series of volley firing took place, in which the marines suffered severely, the volunteers subsequently changed front, the battery guns were brought to bear on the marines, and under the skilful command and movements of attack and defence, the bugle sounded a retreat and the Royal Marines retired to their vessels.

The proceedings terminated about half-past four o'clock, and the several corps of volunteers, having formed into quare, were addressed in some few words by the commanding officer, Colonel Davis, the gallant Colonel observed that, in consequence of the limited space at the disposal of the corps, it had been impossible to make such arrangements as to some of the evolutions. He was highly gratified with the entire proceedings of the day, and considered it was unquestionable that the volunteer force should become practically acquainted with the best means of resisting an enemy. He was pleased to find that the whole of the corps present were in a most efficient state, and that in the name of the volunteers, return his sincere thanks to the gallant officers of the Royal Navy and Royal Marines, and to Colonel the Marines, by whose kind assistance the proceedings had been brought to such a successful termination.

Three cheers were given for Colonel M'Murdo and Admiral Sir T. J. H. Johnstone, K.C.B., in which the spectators heartily joined, thus pleasantly bringing to an end a most agreeable and picturesque field-day.

THE TWO ELEVENS AT LORD'S CRICKET-GROUND.

UNEQUITOUS as the elements had been for the earlier cricket matches, there was nothing but "a very rough wicket" to mar the pastime of the Gentlemen and Players at Lord's. The surface of the ground was in such a state that the ball fairly beat the bat; and Jackson's bowling was of the most puzzling kind. It was quite a terrific that he took seven wickets, and fairly fell H. H Stephenson, the wicket-keeper. In the year 1846 Mr. Stephenson and Mr. Thed. Wilkinson were with "the brother;" Harenc, who has been rather less thought of lately than he deserved, came out in his old "cut" style, and, in the first over, Mr. Alfred Carpenter made the highest number (50) in both innings. The United won eventually by 70 runs; but the Players, in the first innings, had obtained the highest 100 runs to score 14 on that head. Anderson was absent from among the familiar faces of the Players, and was taken by Wootton, who bowled remarkably well; while Newman (a Cambridge man), Hodgson, Iddison, and Atkinson replaced Wisden, John Willsheire, Tom Sewell, and Julius Caesar, of the United. We are sorry to be regretted that the two Elevens will meet no more this year. All the Players will be required to assist their several counties, and the United in six. Our Engraving is from a photograph by Messrs. Lucas Brothers, St. John's Wood-road.

INAUGURATION OF THE ALBERT HALL AT THE COLLEGE OF SURGEONS, DUBLIN.

THE new Albert Hall at the Royal College of Surgeons, Stephen's-green, Dublin, was inaugurated by the Right Hon. the Earl of the Lord Lieutenant and a distinguished assemblage of members of the aristocracy and gentry of Ireland were invited to be present on the occasion. The meeting was also intended to commemorate the visit of the College of the Royal Prince of Wales to Ireland, which occurred on the 9th of August, 1849, by inaugurating his bust, executed by permission of her Majesty, to perpetuate his memory. The bust, which is of white marble, and stands on a pedestal, is placed by Theed. It is placed on a pedestal, in a niche prepared for its reception immediately in front of the entrance to the Albert Hall. The local journals for some particulars of the decorations of the hall, which are by Messrs. Cregan and Co., of the Theatre Royal. The ceiling in the Italian style; the walls are painted in panels of a warm chamois colour, with a bold fretted border of blue and white. The floor is covered with crimson cloth, and carpet of the same. Among the chill of the artist has been displayed to great advantage. Various emblematic devices are placed in appropriate positions around the arabesques; four circular panels indicate allegorical designs of Science, Art, Industry, and Medicine, with appropriate accessories. Other devices, emblematic of the institution, are worthy of attention from the care shown in the design and colouring. As a whole, the hall is extremely elegant.

Every suitable preparation was made by the heads of the college to invest the proceedings with the most imposing and attractive form. In manner worthy of the objects in view. There was a large attendance. The Lord Lieutenant arrived at the College at two o'clock, and was accompanied by Colonel Fielding, Mr. Croyke, and Captain Donaldson. His Excellency was received at the entrance-door by the Council, consisting of the members of the council, the secretary, and the examiners, all wearing their robes, and by the macebearer carrying the college mace. His Excellency was then led to the Council Room, the walls of the constabulary force, stationed in the vestibules, played the Lord Lieutenant's March. His Excellency then read the complimentary address to his Excellency, giving a brief sketch of the foundation and progress of the college, at the conclusion of which the rich crimson drapery that concealed the bust of the Prince Consort was withdrawn, and the bust was exposed to view. The address was then read by Colonel Fielding, as follows:—"My Lord,—In proceeding to fulfil the high and pleasing duty which, in the name of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland, you have been pleased to assign to me, while I acknowledge, in passing, the courteous terms in which you have been pleased to express your kind personal regard, I feel that I consider it a very great privilege to be associated in any work or function with a body so eminent, so useful, so honoured as your own. The services your college has rendered to suffering humanity are already counted by scores of years, and will soon be by centuries. You have adverted with just pride to the ever-widening circle that the extent of our dominions continually throws open to the healing and humanising influences which radiate from their centre, and which, far from being confined to merely physical benefits—salutary and even sublime as these are—tell largely upon the intellectual vigour and moral health of nations. It is in entire harmony with the essential character and purpose of such a society and such a mission that you have resolved to perpetuate within these walls the lineaments, and to give this hall the name, of our late beloved and lamented Prince Consort; for with that name and memory are inseparably blended all things most bright, pure, just, and true—a pity most sensitively awake to the wants and sufferings of his kind—a courage so firmly poised that there was no error he was not ready to meet with steadfast gaze—no truth for which he would not have braved the world—a purity in which his features were moulded and his life was steeped. Let this be named 'The Albert Hall.'" This announcement was received with applause. The Lord Lieutenant was then shown through the library, the board-room, and the museum.

MONUMENTAL CROSS AT BANDA, BENGAL PRESIDENCY.

(From a Correspondent.)

THIS monumental cross is erected to perpetuate the memory of the British officers and men of the Madras column commanded by Major-General Sir George Whitlock, C.B., who fell in action, or died, during the campaigns of 1838 and 1839.

The district in which Banda is situated and which is subject to the authority of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, at an early period of the insurrection followed the example set by the mutineers of Meerut and Delhi. The Nawab of Banda, a man of weak and undecided character, had at first afforded some protection to the European residents, but he soon yielded to the solicitations of the affected counsellors. The task of restoring order was allotted, by Earl Canning's wish, to the troops of the Madras Presidency, the only army south of the Jumna, which had remained entirely free from the taint of disaffection. And, accordingly, in the middle of February, 1858 (for peace of 1857 was over), with the carriage of heavy ordnance over Indian roads, could not easily have been accomplished earlier), the various corps, under Major-General Sir George Whitlock's command, rendezvoused at Dumoh, forty-six miles east of Saugor. They marched thence in the beginning of March, under the special orders of Lord Canning, for the purpose of clearing the lower way through the insurgent districts (Banda and Kirwee) to Allahabad. On the 19th of April, when the head of the column had not yet almost reached Kirwee, they encountered the Nawab of Banda, near the village of Goeria, at the head of a well-appointed force, and estimated thereby

THE MAGAZINES.

THOUGH less varied than usual, the contents of the Cornhill are still very interesting this month. The pet of honour belongs, as usual, to "Romola," where the calm, steady flow of narrative, mingled with reflection, is at length exchanged for something like a crisis and a catastrophe. Romola now loses Savonarola, as she has formerly lost Tito; and nothingcan be finer or more true to nature than the splendid picture of the ultimate rebellion of her large brain and loving heart against the fanaticism into which opposition is gradually perverting the pure enthusiasm of her spiritual guide. The character of Savonarola is in itself a wonderful study, such as could only have been produced by one whose peculiar training had familiarised him with the subtle temptations that break down the character of religious reformers, inevitably ending by identifying the interests of religion with the honour of heaven and the hopes of earth. Romola is too large-hearted to shut up creation within the limit of any party, and the calm, pale, resolute, and noble figure of Savonarola, as he drifting at the bidding of the winds, is but an emblem of that more comprehensive region of love and truth which the soul of Romola has escaped from the sectarianism whose purity can no longer atone for its intense narrowness. "The Small House at Allington" continues to afford perhaps the most perfect contemporary illustration of the way in which the novel has superseded the old comedy as social entertainment for the recreation of manners. Poor Crosbie is certainly made a most awful warning, while the ci-devant hero is everywhere so well received that it is impossible to accuse Mr. Trollope of accommodating his facts to his theories. "Spiritualism" will exasperate a great many and delight people to the verge of madness. It is a clear summary of the question from the scientific-sceptical point of view, written in the vein-and-vein-make tone, so intelligible to the world at large, of lively instants and feeble reasoning faculty. To us the paper is not wholly satisfactory; for while we are quite as firmly convinced as the writer of the puerility of all supposed interferences with law, as seems to us rather to assume than to prove that "spiritual phenomena" must be of a full within this category. The "spirit" of these revelations is of course made the most of. "Then what have you learned?" the writer once asked of a friend supposed to have been favoured with much ghostly comfort. "Why, one of them said that the spirit had no currency!" Mr. Arnold contributes a charming and eloquent paper on an éloge d'élite, "Eugénie de Guerin." The impression is one of melancholy. With genius, Eugénie achieves little; with every drop of the quality of the human heart, her life proves a total objection. We think she mistook her vocation. Like many of the best minds in France, the identical mixture of will has produced the party of Montalembert and Lamennais. It is easy to understand the fascination of this acute sensitive, for a refined and sympathetic mind, but it was tainted with unreality, feeble in deceptions, and the quietism it inculcated proved, at least in Eugénie's case, totally unavailable as a broken reeds under the pressure of actual affliction. There is only one verse contribution this month, "To Correspondents," very amusing and very pungent.

If spirits have no currency they won't read Mr. Bonamy Price's essay in Macmillan, and so will miss a good deal of entertainment. Mr. Price's subject is abstruse, but his treatment of it pithy and lively. He begins by his principle of the "great clearing-house" of Lord Overstone, who has "made a rational understanding of the currency a thing almost to be despised of." All might be well if the question of business would but grasp the truth that the precious metals are merely commodities like tea, or sugar, or political principles; but they are not, and so continues to operate with disastrous effect whenever they talk of American affairs, for example. Without wandering to any length into a subject which is not ours, we may say that Mr. Price has put much sense into few words when he remarks:—"The City believed that drafts would soon be paid in specie; it was so, for standstill when gold was at a premium of 10; it is at 60, and the combatants find as ample means to carry on the war as ever. It is a very easy matter to obtain money, and it always a very trifling portion of the national wealth. So long as the Americans can get supplies of food, clothing, and ammunition, they can go on perfectly well with the war, whatever may happen to the currency." Dr. Kingsley contributes a second paper on Ireland, the weakness in yielding its place to the pressure put upon him by his father-in-law, and the fine he chooses to pay rather than to see it unfairly been following his fortunes. All the other papers are good, and Mr. Ruskin's dialogue on taste in furniture is delightful—full of the soundest views, and written with the ease, tact, and spirit of a French comedy. Macmillan is also strong in the literary department. In Dean of Canterbury's last sermon is very sweet, and Mrs. Norton's tribute to Lord Dufferin's mother almost Sapphic in poetic grace and energy of feeling. Mr. Kingsley's second paper is much improved by the omission of the first four stanzas.

Fraser, in not equally vivid than month, shines with a steady and useful light. The most elaborate essay is that on Bolingbroke, carefully and clearly written, but suggesting the sad case of a man who has no principles and no moral principle. Ireland is not a more undesirable habitation for peoples than England for political rogues, simply because public opinion is with us the offspring of conviction, and with them the principled man is without the means of appreciating the direction of popular sentiment, and continually runs counter to the wind which imagines himself to be following. The paper on America is valuable as a record of experimental experience that we hope to receive more from the same pen as the Irish four of last number, being earnest and diffuse on the subject of satchles and potables, and meekness in the demonstration of the monster dinners at the Astor House and the Grand Hotel. But it is interesting for its sad but true picture of the morbid, moral, and intellectual decay of society in the South. "Mr. Kingsley's book the writer says—"I saw one, and only one, copy kept under lock and key in a cafe fort. And here I may mention Frenchman who was promised a perusal of it. He was, however, twenty-five miles out of names down, and did not like to wait for coming before August or September." Miss Cobbe's record of travel deserves the praise we bestowed upon her last: "Lawrence Bloomfield" continues to improve; and Mrs. Norton's "Old Sailor" is characterised by all the sweetness and all the neatness habitual to her elegant pen. Mr. W. M. Rossetti's notice of the Pre-Raphaelite Exhibition with the courage of clear perception, the accuracy of refined taste, and the cordial appreciation of genius essential to the genius kindred in nature, though different in its manifestations.

The resides of Blackwood will be happy to encounter a new series of "The Recollections of Carlingford," which promise a continuance of rivalling their predecessors in interest of narrative, delicacy of observation, and genuine kindliness of tone, so rare in our days when what "Cranford" would have been had Mrs. Gaskell woven her recollections into a continuous narrative instead of separating them through a series of sketches. The best of the other articles, and it is very good, is "Hugh Noble of a Rich Family." His career may be compared with the very interesting sketches of Anatolian travel now publishing in the Revue des Deux Mondes. "A Glance at the Italy Question" is a fair attack on the weak points of the Italian Prime Minister, written with much ability, and rendered more effective by a studied moderation of tone. "A letter from Italy" contains the best account of the insurrection we have seen; and the biographical articles on Bishop Blomfield and Savonarola are useful and accurate digests of the books with which they are respectively concerned.

The Dublin University defends the Irish Church with considerable warmth, somewhat the very worst possible position for a true Catholic, and starts a new novel,—"Wylder's Hand," which appears to possess the elements of a powerful story, though the opening chapters are not agreeable, and the interest of a melo-dramatic kind. "The Cross before the Throne" is continued with spirit, and the mystery of Petra still satisfactorily cleared up.

The conductors of London Society deserve great credit for their success in filling their periodical with easy, light, pleasant articles, making no demand on the faculties of the reader, but excellent amusement for an idle hour. "London Society Abroad," "Society in Crowds," "Out of Town for the season," are good examples of this class, and must be welcome to everybody who is not above being amused. Mr. Hood's verses are very pretty, and there is much humour in the illustration to the paper on fisheries, regenerating elves pillaging an oyster-bed. "Lady Clare" and the accompanying engravings do not fit; the illustration is of the country, and the poem of the city.

THE MAGAZINES.

MISS Braddon's story in Temple Bar is continued with considerable spirit. Among much lighter matter this magazine contains a good critical paper on Bowles, by Mr. J. A. Heraud; and another remarkable for the positive statement that the Whitworth cannon has been condemned by a French military commission.

The current number of the St. James's Magazine is the best we have seen for a long time. The serial, "Anthony Martin:" and "Madeleine Graham," are really very interesting, and the other papers, if not among the very high standard of merit, are at least varied and entertaining. We cannot say as much for the Churchman's Family Magazine, though "A Lamb to the Slaughter" is a pretty story. Good Words has a pleasing and very melodious poem by George Macdonald, "The Sungrel," as well as the usual allowance of useful and instructive papers. Among the latter, that on Natal is valuable as that on the condition of the private soldier, which well deserves attention. The Dean of Canterbury's sermon, "Plea for the Unlearned English" against the assault of Mr. Noon, and notices the suggestions of many gentlemen who have written to the Times since that Herald never have observed an instance of a growing barbarism—the use of "precious" as equivalent to "predicate."

MUSIC.

The sixth concert of the PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY, on Monday last, was remarkable for the performance of Mendelssohn's matchless performance of Beethoven's concerto in G, which, though not the greatest composition of his other pianoforte, is perhaps the finest of them all. It excited the audience to enthusiasm. The remainder of the selection was Spohr's symphony in D minor, composed for the Philharmonic Society; Beethoven's symphony in F, Weber's overture to Euryanthe, and Mendelssohn's overture in C major. There were three singers, all of German school: Mdlle. Liebhart, of the Imperial Theatre of Vienna: Mdlle. Lehmann, of the Royal Opera, Copenhagen; and Herr Pischer (who has been engaged for Her Majesty's Theatre under the Italianized name of Signor Pirica), of the Imperial Opera, Vienna. Each classical music in a classical style, and were received with much favour.

Haydn's immortal chef-d'œuvre, "The Creation," was performed by the Sacred Harmonic Society on Friday last. The principal solo performers were Mdme. Lascaux, Messrs. Sherrington, Mr. Swift, and Mr. Lewis Thomas. Mr. Sherrington sang the soprano music admirably, and was applauded with enthusiasm, the Exeter Hall audience having now freed themselves from the absurd restraint which formerly compelled them to hear sacred music in silence, and to refrain from applauding the music might be. Mr. Swift has a good voice, is a sound musician, and, since the departure of Herr Reichardt, is the best English tenor," is, perhaps, a good substitute as could be found. Mr. Weiss undertook the bass music, and executed the most sublime choruses—particularly the subliment of all, "The Heavens are telling the glory of God"—very well indeed. Mr. Benedict conducted, and the performance of the Sacred Harmonic Society was recorded to excess in every part.

The Musical World says the Musical World of Saturday last. "has volunteered to sing the parts of Donna Anna and Norma for Mr. Lumley's benefit representations. What says Mr. Gye? Mdlle. Titiens appeared as Norma; for Mdlle. Lucca's benefit on Thursday last, Mdlle. Piccolomini will appear as Donna Anna.

On Friday last Mr. Lumley gave an extra performance, specially commanded by the Prince and Princess of Wales, who honoured the Royal Italian Opera with their visit. "Ecco ridente Rossini," followed by the first act of "La Favorita." Mdlle. Piccolomini sang in both pieces, and Signor Graziani supported by Graglini. The performance was brilliant and successful.

The MUSICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON gave their fourth concert of the season on Wednesday last, at Willis's Rooms. It was one of the best and most successful concerts ever given by that great society. Beethoven's Septet in E flat, composed for a single hearing before it can be fairly judged of. Mendelssohn's pianoforte quartets in B minor, Mozart's Quintet in E flat, Schubert's, or Non mi dir," from Don Giovanni," and was warmly and deservedly applauded.

HERR JANSA, the eminent violinist and composer, gave a morning concert at the Hanover-square Rooms on Thursday week—an entertainment remarkable for the excellence of the music rendered. The programme was of a highly classical description. Its greatest attraction was the performance by Herr Jansa of Spohr's violin and piano, played with great power by Herr Jansa and Herr Wehrhahn, of Beethoven's Septet, Mozart's Quartet in E flat, and, in which Herr Jansa, as principal violin, was assisted by Messrs. Goffrie, Paque, Guenzel, Lazarus, Hausser, and C. Harper: a quartet composed by Herr Jansa himself, and played by the composer, also composed by him. This last piece, performed by himself, was most extremely applauded and encored. The vocal music of the concert was furnished by Mdlle. Liebhart, Mdme. Ellinger, and Herr Formes. Mdlle. Liebhart was extremely encored; and the same of Mdme. Liebhart, was vehemently encored; and the famous "Wanderer" of Schubert, sung by Formes, was also encored. The whole entertainment was of the highest order, and was received with much and classical school.

On Saturday last an excellent Matinée Musicale was given at Willis's Rooms by Mr. HAROLD THOMAS. Mr. Thomas is one of the most distinguished among the "rising generation" of our English musicians. He is a pupil of Mr. W. Sterndale Bennett, and he emulates Bennett; and he emulates his celebrated master in the execution of very and laborious pieces of composition. His concerto, for, as a composer, by various pieces for the piano, and also for the voice. Mr. Thomas has become deservedly popular. His concert consisted of a fine selection of vocal and instrumental music, admirably executed, and of a special interest from two things: first, from the earliest composition of Arbert, when a boy, the Duke of Edinburgh made and his name known to the world—a trio for the piano, violin, and violoncello, performed by the Duke himself, Mr. Thomas, and; secondly, from a solo for the pianoforte, written by Sterndale Bennett expressly for Mr. Thomas's execution, and presented to him as a special regard. This solo was played by Mr. H. Thomas, in conjunction with his own pupil, Miss Lucy Hall, a most imaginative baring-piece, and both were most warmly encored. Mesdms. Lemmens-Sherrington, Thomas played their favourite harp duet on Welsh melodies; Mr. Sainton performed a violin solo; and Mr. Santley and Mr. Lemmens-Sherrington sang songs were given by Mdlle. Parepa and Mr. Jules Lefort.

The Dublin Evening Mail is now speaking in glowing language of the proceedings of the PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY of that city, which seems to emulate the achievements of the prototype, our Philharmonic Society of London. The Dublin concert of Friday, last week, was well worthy of boasting of. It included Beethoven's magnificent Eighth Symphony, the overture to the "Freischütz," and, above all, Beethoven's splendid concerto in C minor, the piano part played by Thalberg—a thing we have not had the advantage of hearing in London. The vocal portion of the concert, too, was remarkable. The papers are unanimous in their praises of Miss Sarah Dobree, the pupil and adopted daughter of Mr. Wood, of Leeds—once Miss Paton, one of the most celebrated of English singers. Miss Dobree, by her brilliant execution of "Una voce poco fa," "Rode's Air," and a favourite Irish melody, showed herself to be a scholar worthy of her distinguished instructress. The other vocal performers—Miss M. Barry and Mr. Richard Smith—are also spoken of in high terms. The Lord Lieutenant and a host of distinguished persons were present at this concert.

The success obtained by Mrs. JOHN MACFARREN'S entertainment, "A Morning at the Pianoforte," has induced her to bring forward another entertainment of the same kind, which she gave at St. James's Hall, on Thursday last week, under the title of "Music and Musicians." It was in the form of a lecture, from the able pen of the lady's distinguished relative, Mr. G. A. Macfarren, in which many interesting musical topics were handled in a manner both entertaining and instructive. Mrs. Macfarren read the lecture with much grace; and its illustrations, a series of pianoforte pieces, selected from the works of Handel, Scarlatti, Dussek, Beethoven, Sterndale Bennett, and other eminent composers, were played by her in a manner worthy of her reputation as one of the most accomplished pianists of the day. She was assisted by Miss Banks, who sang a canzonet of Haydn; a German song, composed by Mendelssohn's celebrated sister, Fanny, and first published under the name of Mendelssohn himself; and a pretty song, "The Water Lady," composed by Mrs. Macfarren herself. The room was crowded, and the whole entertainment was most warmly applauded.

We learn that the dedication of Brinley Richards' song, "God Bless the Prince of Wales," has been accepted by his Royal Highness, the letter announcing this acceptance being couched in the most gracious terms. A new edition of this most popular composition is about to appear.

THE THEATRES.

OLYMPIC.—An original play by Mr. Tom Taylor, produced under the title of "The Ticket-of-Leave Man," is an attempt in the realistic path of art to combine the subject of a transportable drama with ordinary incidents of the social intercourse of treatment required by a West-end audience. Inasmuch as a sternness of delineation in character and a vehemence of passion in the action of such a play in the hands of Mr. Tom Taylor are more drawn-out than those which has long been a favourite with many of our theatres. It is, however, but an indequate and feeble attempt to introduce upon the stage a step towards a more complete development as it to be fairly regarded. But in any light the play is interesting, and the actor, to whom it gives opportunities for emotional exercise denied to him by the feeble pieces which it may be hoped it has altogether superseded. "The Ticket-of-Leave Man" is a play of a practical air, and moderately-ingenuity, as it does, to enlist the sympathy of society in favour of the wretched and the outcast. The story scans the adventures of a number of bad characters, at a place called Bellevue Gardens; among them Robert Brierly, a "ticket-of-leave" man, and James Dalton (Mr. Clarke). The latter, who has several aliases, such as "Downey" and "The Tiger," having turned from bad to good, employs him in a forged bank-note which he has purchased from the notorious Maltese (Mr. G. Vincent) who is a thieves' agent and keeper of a fence. Briefly obtains cash for the note from a Mr. Hawkshaw, who also leads to a capture by the detective Hawkshaw (Mr. Horace Wigan). Three years and a half are supposed to pass between the first and second acts. At the beginning of the latter we are reintroduced to one May Edwards (Miss Kate Saville), who had been deserted by her husband, and who, driven out of the proceeds of the forged note, as a ballad-singer visiting the Bellevue Gardens. Briefly, having received a ticket of leave, is discharged by May, who has maintained a most honourable with her benefactor; and at length he arrives at her lodgings, which are kept by Mrs. Willoughby, the widow wife of Dalton, possessed of the forged note. That transaction had ruined the humble shopkeeper, in the same time that Dalton had made his private fortune by the goodness of his disposition by sending twenty sovereigns anonymously to the landlady. May introduces him into the establishment of Mr. Edison, a bill-broker (Mr. Rogers), who is a member of the same banking-house as Mr. Hawkshaw, for his master is soon apprised of his antecedents, and dismisses him. But by the gentleman faithful to his interests. However, in the third act, we find that Brierly has not been able to obtain employment, and that he was to be admitted as a navvy on some railway works. Melter Dalton and Dalton are his enemies throughout, in order to compel him to join the gang of forgers. Apparently he consents, and they plan an attempt on the broker's premises, where a large sum of property is stored. Dalton is safely pinioned by Hawkshaw. All is now right with Brierly, who has also been the means of discovering the real name of the man whom that society may help the repentant convict with advantage to itself. Mr. Neville Boucicault performs for his able delineations of the hero, and Miss Kate Saville for her touching impersonation of May Edwards. The entire performance, indeed, is creditable to the company. The scenery, also, is good, and in very effective.

PRINCESS'.—Mr. George Vining, on Wednesday week, commenced his farewell engagement at this theatre, with a version, by himself, of a French melodrama, entitled "Jean le Valet," written by M. Paul Meurice, and acted some years ago at the Porte St. Martin. Mr. Vining has called it "Jean de Calais," and placed it on the stage with excellent scenery by Mr. P. Lloyds. The time in which the scene is laid is that of the reign of Louis XIII. The character admirably played by Mr. H. Marston) is one of the characters. The intrigue consists of an attempt on the part of the Chevalets (Mr. Charles Verner) and the Duke de Maurepas (Mr. Gaston Murray) to substitute Bibi, a foundling and Corporal in the French army, for the lost son and heir of the Chevalets, and who, as an honest, bluff fellow, is formally played by Mr. George Vining. The beautiful Jean de Calais is represented by Miss Angelina Anglois (Mr. J. F. Wayte). In the course of the piece, in order to save Angelus from the snare laid for her by the Duke, Jean is found in his path, Bibi has, apparently, to betray his friend. A scene of altercation consequently takes place, which is exceedingly well acted by Mr. Wayte, and Mr. Vining, and has part to play an important position on the boards. Ultimately the plots of these titled rufians are defeated by the humble instrumentality of Jean, Mr. Marston and Guillemette (Miss Lydia Thompson), and Angelus is enabled to marry Jean de Rome (Miss Fanny Josephs). The piece is varied by all sorts of peril, which he shares in part with the Countess Du Barri (Miss Amy Sedgwick), whose reputation the conspirators seek to destroy. The character was made prominent by the efficient acting of Miss Sedgwick, who rendered portions of the acting interesting. The piece is altogether well got up, and although the main success of the piece is dependent on its scenic successes. The Court at Versailles is splendidly displayed, and the reception of Lawfeld Mill is a well-contrived piece of machinery. Then we have a Watteau fête champêtre, and the Bastile scenes are the best and conclusive of Mr. F. Lloyds. We could have wished that the leading plot had been more intelligibly conveyed; but there is a dash and fervour in the performance which command and ensure constant applause.

The congress of the German naturalists and physicians is to be held this year at Stettin. The meeting will commence on the 18th of September, under the presidency of Dr. Dohrne and Dr. Behm.

The Spanish journals mention that the country in the neighbourhood of Cuenca, in the province of Murcia, is suffering from a plague of grasshoppers. A special commission has been formed for taking measures for their destruction, and 10 reals are offered for every litre of them. It is proposed to ask for the assistance of the troops should the present measures be insufficient.

The Confederate steamer Alabama put into Bahia on the 15th of May to land prisoners, and to obtain coal taken from vessels which she had captured and burnt a few days previously. The number of prisoners on board of this remarkable privateer was stated by the crew to be seventy-four, which number of chronometers are arranged in Captain Semmes' cabin. The Florida had been at Pernambuco, and had also been consulting great havoc on federal-owned vessels.

The Prefect of the department of Savoy published an ordonnance on the 11th of November last offering a reward for the destruction of lions and wolves. In consequence of this ordonnance 109 fores were killed in the department, which entitled the fortunate sportsmen to a sum of 4470. The sum voted by the Council-General of the department amounted, however, to only 1200 francs, and the Prefect, who did not anticipate such a wholesale destruction of wild animals, has been forced to apply to the Council for a further grant of money. In the mean time he has given notice that he cannot pay any further reward.

THE NEW BUILDINGS IN PATERNOSTER-ROW.

THE recent erection of the new block of buildings at the western end of Paternoster-row for Messrs. Longman, Green, Longman, Roberts, and Green, originated, like many of our modern buildings, in the damage occasioned by an extensive fire which occurred in the latter part of 1861. The premises formerly occupied by this leading firm consisted of a number of houses which had been built, with so many others of the same type, at the close of the seventeenth century, and which, being originally intended to serve the double purpose of business and residence, had become, in course of years, totally inadequate to the intricate and rapidly-increasing operations of modern trade.

Messrs. Blackwood and Sons, of Edinburgh, who formerly occupied the extreme north-west corner of the site of the new premises having, with the Messrs. Longman, determined to rebuild, readily adopted the recommendation of the architects that their building should group and harmonise with that of Messrs. Longman and Co., so as to form part of one entire design.

The design possesses features more in common with the Renaissance than with any other period of architecture; but it has been treated throughout with that educated freedom which is claimed by the best of our modern architects as necessary to ensure truly representative works of art.

Like so many of our modern structures, this building is situate in a narrow thoroughfare, a circumstance which, by dictating to the architect the necessity for admitting the largest possible volume of light, has imparted those pleasing expressions of individual character which are the chief merit of some of our recent architectural works. It is evident in this instance that the purposes of the building and its peculiarities of position have been the ruling influences in the composition.

The façade next Paternoster-row, with the returns in Ave Maria lane and London House-yard, are executed in Portland stone. The ornamentation has been introduced as sparingly as possible, so as to ensure that repose which we look for in a building of this class. The character of the carving, especially of the lower stories, is somewhat symbolical, natural foliage slightly conventionalised having been generally adopted. We specially note this character in the ornamentation of the central entrance. On the keystone of the arch is represented Literature supported by the Arts, Science, and Education. In the spandrils of same are the "Ship" and the "Swan," being half-size copies of two medallions which were saved from the old buildings, and which had been trade signs of parts of these premises since the Great Fire of London. Additional relief and richness have also been imparted to this central entrance by the use of polished granite columns.

A singular incident occurred during the excavation for the foundations, in the finding of a bed of manure at the south-west corner of the land—about 40 ft. square and about 20 ft. in depth—an interesting relic of old London, which can only be accounted for by the fact that this portion of the land occupies the site of part of the ancient gardens appertaining to the residence of the Bishop of London.

In the construction of the buildings there is nothing specially worthy of notice. The floors throughout are carried upon wrought-iron girders and cast-iron columns, the caps of the columns on the ground and one-pair stories being enriched with foliage executed in hammered iron.

The several portions of the interior have been designed with special reference to the requirements of Messrs. Longman and Co. as publishers. The prominent features are undoubtedly the entrance-hall and inner hall and staircase, the floors of which are paved with encaustic tiles, and the decorative parts of the walls executed in polished scagliola, with polished oak for the doors and other joiner's work. This, besides contributing to the architectural character of the interior, will greatly diminish the absorption of dust and the discoloration generally attending such an amount of traffic as will accompany, but will require the substitution of stone for wood in the place of those hitherto worn.

NEW BUILDINGS IN PATERNOSTER-ROW.

A modification of the suite-at-barque has just been produced for the seaside or for country excursions, with the equally nautical appellation of matelot; it is somewhat similar to its predecessor, but is profusely trimmed with bands of russia leather ornamented with steel beads and stars, and is provided with a leather bag, worn at the side, but which may be dispensed with at the will of the wearer. We do not consider these matelots to be altogether in the best taste; still, as faithful observers, we cannot do otherwise than announce their advent.

Great dissension exists in the fashionable aristocratic camp on the subject of the form of bonnets, the high-fronted chapeau à l'écurie, as they are often called) and those à la Marie Stuart each having numerous partisans; it is reserved to some future chronicler to state by which the victory shall have been won. In the Chaussée d'Antin the pyramidal model obtains, while in the more sedate Faubourg St. Germain a decided preference is accorded to the Marie Stuart. We would recommend our fair readers to follow neither the one nor the other of these fashionable localities absolutely, but to select that at these points. The principal staircase is of stone, lighted by a semioctagonal bay, having an arrangement of engaged columns supporting an entablature, with a groined domical ceiling and ribs between the lunettes. The architects are Messrs. John Griffith and Henry Dawson, of 16, Finsbury-place South; and the builders Messrs. Ashby and Horner.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR JUNE.

THE most fashionable material for the actual season is the foulard, which, in all probability, will only give way, during the summer days, to the muslin and barèges, whose agreeable reign is, unfortunately, of short duration. The foulards serve at present not only for dresses, but are advantageously employed for certain pardessus, on account of their lightness and consequent comfort. Several new small-patterned designs have been introduced, and look extremely well for the robe, with the plain material for the pardessus.

Much simplicity prevails with regard to ladies' dresses generally, and more particularly as to choice of colour. We have recently noticed several unicoloured toilets, the softer tints of blue, green, and violet being preferred. Glaring colours, it is scarcely necessary to state, would be contrary to good taste, so important as the distinguishing feature in a true lady's costume. Training dresses are no longer patronized for the promenade, and a change has been brought about in the shape of the sleeves, now worn of uniform width throughout their entire length, as may be seen on reference to our Illustration. They are very convenient and light in application of fresh undersleeves in

PARIS FASHIONS FOR JUNE.

MR. CHARLES STALIBRASS'S SKYE TERRIER, TIGER. MR. GREEN'S GREYHOUND, GIPSY QUEEN.
MR. GILBERT BAYLEY'S POINTER PUPPY, DAN. LORD FITZHARDINGE'S FOXHOUND, CROMWELL. MR. W. COOK JUNIOR'S CLUMBER, SPANIEL, DI.
MR. ST. QUINTIN'S POMERANIAN DOG, GUESS. MR. C. E. FORSTER'S BLOODHOUND, FORRESTER. MR. F. W. HAMMOND'S NEWFOUNDLAND, SAILOR.

WINNERS OF PRIZES AT THE INTERNATIONAL DOG SHOW, AGRICULTURAL HALL, ISLINGTON.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

form of bonnet which is best suited to their particular tastes, and, above all, to their features.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Fig. 1. Morning Wrapper.—This very pretty wrapper, in every way worthy of the name elegant, is in white mousseline de l'Inde, embroidered, and ruched with Valenciennes lace. The sleeves are provided with a much deeper lace. The mantle is placed over pale taffety, trimmed in front with graduating bows of the same colour. This morning toilette is completed by light-blue taffety bows to the rosettes and white silk stockings. If the colour of the taffety be changed to suit the taste of the wearer, that of the shoes should of course be suppressed.

Fig. 2. Walking Dress.—Violet silk robe, the skirt trimmed with three flutes of the same material, surrounded by three rows of narrow black passementerie. The corsage (high-necked) and the close sleeves are also provided with passementerie to match. Straw bonnet, ornamented with oak-leaves; maize-coloured bow and ends.

Fig. 3. Evening Dress.—Skirt of white Brussels net lace, trimmed down the front of the skirt, and on the shoulders and cuffs of the sleeves, with passementerie ornaments of white, which goes to a very graceful appearance to the toilet. The muslin undersleeves are necessarily a couple, to suit the sleeves of the dress. White gauze lace chapeau, with grey leaves and dark violet bow in the centre, and dark violet ribbons.

The Bonnet on the left-hand side of our Engraving represents one of the favourite chapeaux en cerise alluded to in our last article. This model is taken from a well-known Parisian house, the original being in white crape, trimmed on the top with a bouquet of feathers, and on the side with a blond ornament: lace bavolet, pink strings.

PRIZEWINNERS AT THE ISLINGTON DOG SHOW.

That dislike which many greyhound men have felt about sending their dogs to shows seems to have been completely got over at the show at Islington and its new system of champion prizes, as the nominations in these classes alone reached eighty-seven. The Duchess of Richmond represents Grey Queen, the winner of the female champion prize, to which she beat Mr. Spinks's celebrated Sea Pink (own sister to Canarado), the sister to Patty and Penelope. But Sea Pink's victory in the Spitz terrier class was headed by Mr. Charles Stallibrass's, of Finsbury, "Tiger," and that of the Clumber "Lassie," belonging to Mr. Hedgkinson of the Duke of Newcastle. Earl Spencer, and Lord Berners were represented—by one of Mr. W. Cook junior's. The latter being second with "Busy." Mr. Gilbert Bayley's "Jack" is one of the winning brace of pointers under six months. He is a liver and white, and certainly "the best" of his age: but the Islington judge or any other judges ever saw. Lord Fitzhardinge's old badger pied foxhound Crown-well was opposed by Gardner, Mr. Barnard's kennel, and Royal from the Cheltonham; but, although not a very handsome hound to look at, he carried a head like a lion, and his stern was bold and he bore himself like a master. Mr. Druid's "Rose" is another well-grave some months back' was at the head of the bloodhound-Islington class; and Rose was beaten by Mr. Druid's dog in the general class, "Forrester," the property of Mr. C. G. Foster, M.P., of Stoke Hall, Leicester. Among the Irish greyhounds, the first fell fell upon London and Mr. F. W. Hammond's, of Cuffesgrange, "Sailor." Then in the prize for Dandie Dinmonts, won by Mr. D. J. Laidlaw's "Snap;" but we give the portrait of the second prize, Mr. St. Quintin's "Gusso." The class consisted of nineteen, and, with the exception of "Gusso," the whole were disqualified, as was all from Middleser or the counties immediately adjacent.

THE FARM

THE second and last detachment of the Batsham herd, over which the sanglaus of Mr. Stratford and the ivory hammer of Mr. Carter Jonas will be brought into the field on Wednesday (June 24), contains 47 cows and heifers and 13 bulls. The Bodice tribe is not represented, but there are 30 Calias, 12 Duchess, Dolores, Julias, Phyllises, and 1 Gwynne, besides First Fruits, Erminstads, and her son Sir Charles (vol. Erminstad), the first prize bull at Battersea. Sir Charles, which won the first prize open to all England at the Essex Agricultural in 1861, was purchased at the Vyvyan sale in 1860, and is the only animal in the catalogue not bred on the farm. The stock will be on view a fortnight before the sale. Mr. Dickinson, of Hounslowmoor Court Farm, is selling part of the Lady Alice Seaton herd of the Cressida tribe, which he keeps, he has thirty-two females, and of these twenty are in the market. Mr. Dickinson commenced with a large sale, on July 29, of upwards of 100 head of shorthorns, belonging to Mr. Shepherd, of Strethin, near Chippenham, which also has bred from the late Captain Barclay's and Mr. Bates's blood; and Bates's Grand Duke, Booth's Red Knight, Knightley's Bouquet, and Bolden's Surrey Duke 2nd have all been used in the herd.

Mr. Noakes's shorthorns were sold by Mr. Strafford on Tuesday last, and 5 females averaged £39 3s. 6d., and 2 bulls £31 10s., thus giving a very fair average of £36 9s. 2d. throughout. The stock were generally in very low condition, as they had been all the year: and some of the calves, which had been scouring, and had rather lost their bloom, met dear enough. A capital company of nearly 200 including many very "good men"—sat down to the luncheon. Lord Walsingham's agent brought three lots of females, at 34 gs., 30 gs., and 27 gs.; Mr. R. Sharpe, of Courtlands, near Sevenoaks, purchased eight, including the yearling heifer, Elegant (50 gs.)—perhaps the best-looking there: Mr. Gribble, of Eye, one of the Lord Berners, of Westerham, bought several lots; and the cow Waterloo 23rd (72 gs.), the highest price of the day, fell to the lot of Mr. Hall, bailiff, of Revering Park, Romford. Cherry Duke 3rd headed the bull prices and was purchased by Mr. E. Hales, of North Frith, for 40 gs.

A piquant case of interest to farmers was decided in the Surrey Assize Court on Saturday by Mr. Justice Blackburn and Mr. Justice Mellor. The appellant had been so much troubled by the trespasses of pheasants belonging to his land and eating his corn that he sent to say that he would shoot them if they came again, and did shoot and kill one accordingly. He was summoned before the justices at Petty Sessions, and convicted, under the 23rd section of stat. 24 and 25 Vict., c. 96, which enacts that, "whosoever shall unlawfully and wilfully kill, wound, or take any tame house dove or pigeon under such circumstances as shall not amount to larceny at common law, shall, on conviction thereof before a court of petty sessions, forfeit and pay over and above the value of the bird any sum not exceeding £2." The Court of Queen's Bench arrested judgment, the conviction was wrong, and that the above section of the Act had only in contemplation a criminal act.

The Royal Agricultural Benevolent Society held its anniversary dinner last Wednesday week, under the presidency of the Earl of Dartmouth. Included £25 from her Majesty and £20 from the noble chairman and the Countess of Dartmouth, the donations and subscriptions reached £3740 in all. In the course of proposing, by Alderman Mechi, the originator of the society, was most cordially received, and stated, in the course of his speech, that one of his personal friends considered he had done injury to the farmers, the best plaister he could apply to the sore was to labour more earnestly for the institution, and bring it to a satisfactory position in the course of the least next year. The Alderman's manner, when on an excellent occasion of his kind, is so unique and unaffected that his address must be safely backed to case his friends' pockets of the amount in question, and I may say, of course, successfully. Mr. Wren Hoskyns is to be the vice chairman of the executive council. Four male (two of them married) and four female pensioners were elected on Wednesday, at the respective scale of allowances—£26, £40, and £20. The last report contains a statement of some of the principal reverses which have forced farmers to ask for aid at the hands of the fund. "Loss of an unfortunate family and being bondsman for his sons;" "chiefly owing to backing bills for a friend;" "losses and ill-health, and an afflicted wife;" "1317 sheep died from rot in 1854-55;" "all crops destroyed by a baisdeem in 1856;" "loss of stock, mildewed corn, and domestic afflictions;" "damage done by game and rabbits;" and "misplaced confidence in family solicitor."

A notice has just been issued by the Postmaster-General that henceforward the postage of letters for Sweden, forwarded by the Swedish mail packets from Hull to Gothenburg, will be reduced to the same charge as that now levied upon letters sent via Belgium and Prussia, viz.—For a letter not exceeding half an ounce, 1s.; not exceeding one ounce, 2s.; and for every ounce after the first, 2s.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

INDIAN QUININE has at length been produced, through the able exertions of Mr. Clements Markham, now of the India Office, as detailed in his interesting travels in Peru and India. Specimens of bark grown in India have arrived, growth have been produced, and the Government have white crystals of pure sulphate of quinine and other febrifuge alkaloids in as large a proportion as the best Peruvian barks. This fact is of immense social importance to India, as the scarcity of quinine has been a most serious one severely felt. It will also undoubtedly give an impulse to the planting of the cinchona trees in India, and thereby tend greatly to promote the prosperity of that part of the British empire.

THE HUMAN JAW OF ABBEVILLE.—To determine the authenticity of the human jaw-bone of English and French savants provided over by M. Milne-Edwards, the eminent zoologist, met at Paris on the 30th inst. At the close of the meeting on Monday, M. Milne-Edwards arose to shake the doubts of the Englishmen present—Drs. Carpenter and Falconer and Mr. Prestwich—who had come to Paris for the purpose of seeing the new relic, while the French savans retained an opposite opinion. In accordance with the decision arrived at, M. Boucher de Perthes, the discoverer of the jaw, and the workmen who had been employed in the excavations at Moulin Quignon were found in one cellar, and the jaw in another. It is impossible to doubt the authenticity of the discovery, and the English savans, it is said, are of the same opinion as the French.

The above evidence regarding the occurrence of the jaw in the undisturbed ground, and it appeared to me to have been the most direct testimony that it was unanimously accepted by the commission. The strongest particulars are extracted from the Paleontology for the present the 21st ult. He states that he signed the following memorandum:—"I am of opinion that the finding of the human jaw at Moulin Quignon is authentic, but that the characters which it presents, taken in connection with the conditions under which it lay, are not sufficient to justify the placing of any very great antiquity." Mr. Busk gave in to the commission a memorandum of a similar character. Dr. Carpenter, also, in an elaborate and thoughtful letter to the authenticity of the jaw. The intercourse between the English and French savans has of necessity produced character.—At a recent meeting of the French Academy, after M. Milne-Edwards had reported the agreement of the English with the French savans, M. Elie de Beaumont expressed his conviction that the soil in which the above-mentioned jaw had been found was not diluvium, but a deposit of comparatively recent date, and that it had arisen due to extraordinary storms. The jaw found at Abbeville, he says, is not that of an ancient man, but that of a modern man, that of a man who lived during the stone age, and not long before the historical period. In reply to some observations by M. Flourens, M. Elie de Beaumont said that the Academy in attributing to the jaw in question an antiquity of between three and four thousand years, had not pronounced upon the question of the age of man.

M. Prince-Say on this subject, who gives the following opinions:—"The age of the human race is unknown, and will probably remain so. Geology can only speak of the historic age. 2. We can follow the presence of man through very diverse successive geological periods. 3. We can thus establish connections among the different races of the north of Europe, by following the origin of our continent as far as the Celtic race, and even much to learn geological and archæological character of that interesting fragment of antiquity.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

PROFESSOR ANSTED'S seventh lecture, given on Thursday, May 28, was devoted to the consideration of the Physical Agents which have contributed to the Progress of Geology—Fossil Animals and Plants being defined as indications of the former presence of life upon the earth. Volcanic action was neglected, which was a natural consequence of deficient knowledge of the subject, and the lecturer passed on to that which they have to do with the diagrams it was pointed out that the examination of different formations has proved the existence of a certain order in the succession of animal life, and like manner as the animal and vegetable life of different countries at the present time are found to be distinct, so was it in the past. The lecturer found where the circumstances fitted for its maintenance occur, and life and vegetation abound, but where these circumstances are not found they are found each other; hence the existing harmony between living and dead matters. Life is subject to change, and is liable to extinction, and these changes are modified by the circumstances which surround it. The application of these principles to the chronology of the earth was then made, and the formation of rocks, since a high degree of knowledge is required for an adequate comparison with distant localities, and more of the life tones of the formations, whether chalk, limestone, clay, &c. Professor Ansted especially considered the history of the carboniferous period, and the glacial drift, and the modern periods in that geologic history of our own country when the plants were found in the form of peat, and the bones of the Elephas primigenius, Rhinoceros, &c., were found to be commonest of twenty years ago, in consequence of the visit of the Ice Age. Geological Sections were exhibited to show the position of the Carboniferous Limestone in England, Ireland, and the north of Germany, France, and England, he has been enabled to publish it, first in the Geological Journal, and afterwards in a separate form for the use of British Government, which patronage he had obtained through the kind interference of Sir Roderick Murchison. The publication of the work would comprise the original text, the hymns, the probable date of which is assigned to the period of the Rig-Veda, a translation of the Sanskrit passages dating about 1400 A.D. The name "Veda" means knowledge, and corresponds with the Greek word "Oida," and the German "Wissen," to know, or learn. In no country is the theory of revelation so elaborated as in India, with a view to develop a system of religious development: but the Rig-Veda, or Veda of Brahmins that the Vedas, as a revelation, are communications of divine truth and the inspired utterances of sages, which have been handed down from great numbers, extracts from whom were read. The Veda is composed of four samhitis or collections of hymns, prayers, and sacrificial formulæ, and these collections being allotted to certain cases of priests, of which there are four—the Brahmans, whose office it is to recite the prayers; the sacrificial reciters, and the Bishops or own-ers. Fortunately, the hymns of the Rig-Veda, which is the oldest, have been kept in a wonderful prayer-book, but were preserved in an old collection, the Rig-Veda, Sanhita, which contains the hymns, and the Brahmanas, Upanishads, and the Psalms. The Rig-Veda is the only historical Veda, and reflects the earliest phase of Indian religion. The hymns are addressed to the personified Aryan race, to which we belong. In Sanscrit literature it is what Homer is in the Greek, Shakspeare in English, Dante in Italian, Goethe in German, and by oral tradition. The oldest MS. of the Old Testament in Hebrew dates 900 A.D., and the Vedas, 1400 B.C., therefore are very old. The Vedas are not allowed to be sold in India. However, the Chinese pilgrims, Hiouanthsang, and Fa-hian, carried them to China, where they translated them into Chinese. The Vedas have come down to us by human memory. The sole object of the Rig-Veda is to praise the gods. The Rig-Veda is founded in his learning by heart from the lips of an old Brahmin those hymns which he had learned from his father, and so on. The Rig-Veda is chorister, a repeater of the Rig-Veda, or of an orderer or Bishop—whose office it is to see that the performance of the sacrifice is duly carried out. The Vedas, amidst much puerility, are found many good things; the recognition of a supreme God, the immortality of the soul, and a future life. Professor Williams's Sanscrit Grammar, and other works, are referred to, and added that the new edition had been found very useful in introducing the Sanscrit language into the British schools, and in the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM THOMSON gave his first lecture on the electric telegraph on Saturday last, the 30th ult., before a numerous audience. The most daunting ideas by means of dead matter occupying space between two intelligent minds, and the means by which this mystery is accomplished were professed by one person, with the intention that it should be perceived by another possessed of similar intelligence. The lecturer then arranged reasoning. This signal may be characterised by the quality of an action, by the quantity of action, or by the position of the signal in relation to the tioners; and Lieutenant-Colonel Brett the volunteers. The special feature of the review was the presentation of colours, the gift of Mr. R. R. Bacon, of Norwich, to the Norwich volunteers. The Hon. Mrs. Walpole presented the colours to the junior ensigns of the corps. The colours were then consecrated by the Rev. J. Clarke, who offered up an appropriate prayer, after which Colonel Brett, as commanding officer, thanked Mrs. Walpole and Mr. Bacon for the present to the corps. At the conclusion of the gallant colonel's observations the assembled troops, lancers, volunteers, pensioners, and others, gave three cheers for her Majesty, and the review was proceeded with, in accordance with a programme previously arranged, the lancers and pensioners sustained their parts with steadiness, and their exercises were good.

THE VOLUNTEERS AT WIMBLEDON.—The following regulations, in reference to the approaching meeting at Wimbledon, have been issued by the Council of the National Rifle Association, to which the Queen has sanctioned the issue of an additional 100 rounds for the use of the competitors for the Queen's Prize—that is, for previous practice—making 200 rounds altogether. 2. That officers of administrative battalions can, if selected, engage and pay for the ammunition for the volunteers of their battalions who compete for the Queen's prize. 3. Administrative battalions are not to be allowed the same facilities for awarding their proportion of contributions for the Queen's prize, as the consolidated battalions—viz., that if the number of the consolidated battalion exceeds that of eight companies, the number of eight can be made companies not confining any competitors, the number of eight can be made companies not confining any competitors, the number of eight can be made up by the oldest companies including many of the same competitors. The number of competitors must not, however, exceed the number of companies.—The Secretary of State has consented to provide for the encampment at Wimbledon, hereby arrangements have been made, and he hereby gives notice that he will provide tents for the accommodation of the officers commanding companies and their subalterns, and for the officers commanding regimental or corps, will issue rations and forage for the horses of officers entitled to be present at the encampment, viz., 6lb. of oats, 12lb. of hay, and 8lb. of straw per horse per day, and will also issue rations of meat, bread, tea, sugar, coffee, &c., to officers, and to the men, viz., 1lb. of meat, 1lb. of bread, 1 pint of tea, 2oz. of sugar, 1 pint of cocoa, and 1oz. of coffee, per day. The rations will be issued from the 4th to the 10th inclusive, and will be commenced from the 4th to the 10th. Each volunteer or corps, will issue commenced from the 4th to the 10th. Each volunteer or corps, will issue commenced from the 4th to the 10th. Each volunteer or corps, will issue

INFANT ORPHAN ASYLUM, WANSTEAD.—NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
In consequence of the immediate expiration of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway across Lodge-hill, the Committee have compelled to REMOVE their OFFICES to 100, FLEET-STREET, where, from July next, all communications are to be addressed.
By order of the Committee,
HENRY W. GREEN, Secretary.
May 1, 1863.

ST. MARK'S HOSPITAL for FISTULA, &c.
The Committee draw attention to the following form of bequest, which is recommended to those charitable individuals who may feel disposed to benefit this Institution:—
"I give and bequeath out of such part of my personal estate as may lawfully be applied for that purpose, the sum of £ to St. Mark's Hospital for Fistula, &c., City-road, with such wish for the general use and benefit of the said Hospital; and the receipt of the Secretary for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge to my executors for the same."
If Estates of land or legacies of money under charged are left with the Rector of Hackney, the medical men be elected by the governors, as vacancies occur.
JAMES PAUL BELL WILBRAHAM, Secretary.
Offices, 52, Finsbury-square, E.C., May, 1863.

ISLE OF MAN.—HILL'S ROYAL HOTEL, DOUGLAS. Board, Lodging, and Attendance, 4s. 6d. per day. Illustrated Guide to Interesting Scenery and Map of the Island, 1s.

NEW ZEALAND.—REMITTANCERS.—The Bank of New Zealand (Incorporated by Act of General Assembly), Capital £500,000, grants Letters of Credit and undertakes every description of Banking business throughout the several Provinces.
Terms and conditions on application at the London Office,
No. 64, Bread-street, London, E.C.
F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.

THE WIDOW of a CLERGYMAN, residing west of London, offers a superior and careful EDUCATION with every domestic COMFORT, to a SMALL NUMBER of YOUNG LADIES. Eminent masters attend. Terms moderate. Highly-satisfactory references permitted to the Bishop of London and other distinguished families. Address, Miss H., care of Mr. Hatchard, 187, Piccadilly, Middlesex.

A LADY accustomed to Tuition, who has just returned to England, after remaining five years on the Continent, wishes to RE-ENGAGEMENT as GOVERNESS. She DARE DE COMPAGNIE in a nobleman's or gentleman's family. In addition to the branches of an English education, she teaches the piano, music, dancing, drawing, with the rudimentary Latin. The lady will be at liberty after the 1st of July.—Address, Camilla, 11, Oxford-st.

IN consequence of the Division of an Interest now being worked, a large SHARE is offered for SALE at Copenhagen. It contains 110 rooms and a part of 1500 square rods, and is situated on Strand, in Manufactory, or a Depot. Apply to S. O., 216, care of Messrs. Haasenstein and Vogler, Strasburg.

BOTANY.—A Gentleman wishes to receive PUPILS at Holloway or Gentleman of position as medical pupil. Instructions will be given from the living plant, and the pupil will be enabled to collect, examine, and name specimens for his future use. The locality abounds with woods, fields, and rose-gardens. Terms, with every information, on application by letter, to the owner of the Botanic Collection.—Address S. J., Messrs. Millington and Hutton, 35, Budge-row, London.

SELECT PLANTS, POST-FREE, at the lowest cash.—12 superb varieties Fuchsias, 12 to 15 for Verbenas, 24; 12 fine var. Pelargon. to 18 fine var. Penstemons, 24 Fern & We. Alpine, Border Flowers, &c.—Catalogues free.

HEDGES and BUTLER, 155, Regent-street, London, W., and 30, Kings-road, Brighton, recommend their Dinner Sherry at 24s., Port at 30s., Claret at 18s., Champagne at 36s., Hock at 36s., and 42s., Brandy at 48s., Champagne, 42s., 48s., 60s. On receipt of a Post-office order or reference, and quantity, with a printed list of all other wines, will be forwarded immediately.—Originally established A.D. 1667.

THE GOLD PEN, 164, New Bond-street, London, W., 24, Cornhill, and 100, Regent-street, Birmingham, are now selling the 18-carat Gold Pens, 10s. 6d. per dozen. Sheffield, WOOD and WATSON. Wine and Spirit Merchants, 16, Clement's-lane, City, E.C.

TURTLE.—MCCALL'S WEST INDIA. A liquefy prepared by recent process. Flavour guaranteed. Real Turtle Soup, quarts, 10s. 6d.; pints, 5s. 6d.; half-pints, 3s. Calipash and Calipee, pints, 5s. 6d.; half, 3s. Sealing Wax and Italian Warehousemen. 2, Broad-street, Golden-square, and others.

F. MCCALL and CO.,
Preston Station, 197, Shoreditch, N. E.

Prize Medal for Patent Process of Preserving Provisions without overcooking, whereby freshness and flavour are retained.

SAUCE
LEA and PERRINS'
WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE,
Recommended by the Connoisseurs.
"THE ONLY GOOD SAUCE."
Most genuine without a name on wrapper, label, bottle, and stopper.
Sold by CROSSE and BLACKWELL; Barclay and Sons; and by Grocers and Oilmen everywhere.

Exhibition Prize Medal 1862.
FRYS CHOCOLATE.
Fry's Prize Medal Chocolate for Eating, in Sticks and Drops.
FRY'S CHOCOLATE CREAM.
Fry's Prize Medal Chocolate in Cakes.
J. S. FRY and SONS, Bristol and London.

HORNIMAN'S PURE TEA CHEAPER.
Pure, fresh, and delicious duty obtained by purchasing HORNIMAN'S TEA. Sold in packets by 2,000 agents. High Breakfast 4s. 4d., 4s. 8d., 5s. (formerly 4s. 8d.); the best imported.

LETTERS PATENT 1853. PRIZE MEDAL 1855.
ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS is the most valuable preparation for making pure and delicious Gruel. Modern chemistry has shown that that food is easy of digestion and nutritious in proportion.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY makes a delicious custard pudding, and is the best for thickening soups, broths, &c. Prescribed in it is appreciated as a non-inflammatory food, excellent for mothers nursing, and has been used with great success for rearing infants by hand.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE and CO.
Garlick Hill, London.

KEEN'S GENUINE MUSTARD,
Quite pure, and very excellent. Manufactured by Messrs. Keen's extensive Mustard and Oil mill, which has been in operation since 1742. Sold by the Trade throughout the Kingdom.
KEEN'S MANUFACTURES, 1742.
Sold by the Trade from the Cask, and 1lb. 2lb. and 4lb. canisters, and 1lb. and ½lb. Packets, Labelled.
Garlick-hill, Cannon-street, London.

COWDOG
PREPARED CORN,
for
Puddings, Custards, Blanc-Mange, &c.
Manufactured and Perfected by
T. KINGSFORD and SON,
Patentees of Oswego Starch Works.
It is the original preparation from the Indian Maize, established 1848, commands the highest price from the trade, and offers the best value to the consumer.
It is a quarter stronger than any of the imitations, has a finer grain, and is more delicious.
The Oswego is the natural golden tinge, and not the stark white produced by artificial process.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.,
Garlick Hill, London.

VICTORIA PARK LAUNDRY SOAP, or WASHING STUFF—being strips of soap to be so used as almost entirely to do away the labour of washing.
Sold in packets of 2d. and 6d. each, and may be had also in bars by the trade.
Besides the saving in labour, this soap goes twice as far as the common sort; it does not destroy the linen nor injure coloured goods, and is particularly valuable when washing machines are used.
Sold by all Grocers and other vendors of soap, and of PALMER and CO., Station-street, Charlesworth, sole manufacturers.

J. C. and J. FIELD, Original Manufacturers of PALMITINE CANDLES, to whom the Great Prize Medal (1862) has been awarded, and their Candles adopted by her Majesty's Government for use at the Military stations abroad. These Candles can be obtained of all Chandlers and Grocers in the United Kingdom, in 1lb., 2lb., 4lb., 6lb., 8lb., and 12lb. packets. Unified Series of 1lb., 2lb., 4lb., and 6lb. each. The Candles mentioned to see that Field's label is on the packets or boxes. Wholesale only, and for exportation, Upper-street, Lambeth, London, S.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
used in the Royal Laundry,
Is the Purest and Best Starch.
Sold by all Grocers, Chandlers, &c.

JUDSON'S SIMPLE DYES FOR LADIES, 6d. per bottle. Any one can use them. Ten brilliant colours. May be had of all Chemists.

COALS.—COCKERELL'S COALS, price 23s., cash. Central Office, No. 19, Cornhill, E.C.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE WEDDING PRESENTS, by Permission of Her Royal Highness the PRINCESS ALEXANDRIA of WALES, by THURSTON THOMPSON, Esq. The set of 25 for £2 2s.
LONDON STEREOSCOPIC and PHOTOGRAPHIC COMPANY, 54, Cheapside, and 110, Regent-street.

THE NEW PORTRAITS OF ALIX the PRINCESS and PRINCESS—STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY.

THE SET OF 15 LARGE VIEWS OF SANDRINGHAM.—STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY.

THE SET of 15 STEREOGRAPHS of SANDRINGHAM and the WEDDING PRESENTS, 42s.—LONDON STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY, 54, Cheapside; and 110, Regent-st.

PHOTOGRAPHS of DESANGER'S GRAND PICTURE of the MARRIAGE of the PRINCE of WALES, about size, in fol., 1 second size, in fol.; portfolio size, 5s.
LONDON STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY; and 110, Regent-st.

THE NEW CARTES DE VISITE of the PRINCE and PRINCESS, 1s. 6d. each; 2s. the two first.—The large Photographic Portraits of the PRINCE and PRINCESS, 10s. each.—LONDON STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY, 54, Cheapside; and 110, Regent-street. Sent to Queen Swan Nottage, Managing Partner, 54, Cheapside; and 110, Regent-street.

YOUR CREST, ADDRESS, or MONOGRAM Stamped on Paper and Envelopes, in any Colour, without Charge. Wedding Cards, Notes, and Invitations in the Newest Fashion. Best Quality Cream-laid Note Paper, 4s. per ream, unequalled in the trade.

THE NEW STUDIO EASEL.
Very simple and effective.
WINSOR and NEWTON, Manufacturers,
38, Rathbone-place, Oxford-street.

WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, MANUFACTURING GOLDSMITHS, Invite visitors to the Bank. First-class Patent Detached Lever Watches, with the improvements of recent introduction, combining extra going whilst being wound, recommended for accuracy and durability.
Patent Lever Watches, in Hunting Cases, 18-carat, 5 guineas; in Silver, jewelled in four holes and capped ... £6 6 0
Ditto, jewelled in six holes, capped, and strong hunting Silver Watches, in Hunting Cases, 10s. 6d. extra.
Ditto, jewelled in eight holes ... £8 8 0
Patent Lever Watches, in Hunting Cases, 18-carat, £10 10 0
Ditto, with richly-engraved case ... £10 10 0
Ditto, jewelled in eight holes, and jewelled in four bars ... £14 14 0
GOLD WATCHES—SIDE FOR GENTLEMEN ... £10 10 0
Ditto, jewelled in eight holes, and jewelled in four bars ... £12 12 0
Ditto, jewelled in six holes, and gold balance ... £17 17 0
Ditto, jewelled in eight holes, compensation balance ... £21 0 0
List of prices forwarded on application, post-free.
A. B. SAVORY and SONS, 11 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

GOLD CHAINS of FINE GOLD
GUARANTEED.—A very elegant STOCK of GOLD CHAINS, from 2 to 20 guineas; Albert Chains, 3 to 10 guineas; Guard Brooches, 9s. to 15s.; Gold Bracelets, 4s. to £20; Wedding and Keeper Rings, 2s. to 10s.; Gold Lockets, 5s. to £10; Gold Earrings, 5s. to £5; Gold Pencil Cases, 5s. to £5; Gold Double Shell Scent Pins, 5s. to 10s.—HENRY HAWLEY, Goldsmith, 140, Strand, corner of Wellington-street, opposite Somerset House.

WATCHES, TIMEPIECES, and CLOCKS.
HIGHEST GOLD WATCHES, jewelled in four holes, £2 15s. to £20. Gentlemen's Silver Watches, 40s. to £10. Ladies' Watches, 12s. 6d. each; Chains going 14 days, three guineas and upwards. Every Watch is skilfully Timed and Warranted.—T. COX SAVORY, 47, Cornhill, and 16, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, Established nearly a Century. List of prices free. Old Watches, Gold, Silver, Diamonds, and Miscellaneous Property Purchased for Cash or Cognizance exchanged on liberal terms. Watches and Clocks repaired.

ALGERIAN ONYX MARBLE.—HOWELL, JAMES, and CO. respectfully announce that they are NOW EXHIBITING upwards of One Thousand OBJECTS manufactured in this beautiful MARBLE, which, for variety of colour, is unrivalled. Vases, candelabra, inkstands, tazzi, card-trays, pastilleries, porte monnaies, paper-knives, &c. Also a large assortment of Bronzes, Ormolu, Porcelain, and Glass. Purchasers are invited to see the exclusive Agents for the Company's Works, and to compare the extensive assortment of their establishment.—Howell, James, and Co., 4, Regent-street.

TWO PRIZE MEDALS, 1862.
THE GAME OF CROQUET.
JAQUES and SON, Patentees, 102, Hatton-garden.

GUNS.—E. M. REILLY and CO. invite attention to their manufactures of double guns of rifled, breech and muzzle loading. Second-hand guns at reduced prices, warranted sound. 315, High Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

THE PLANETS and DOUBLE STARS seen with a distinctness that is perfectly marvellous. The power to split the faint one of a sharp and the features of a man four miles, the improved 4½-inch Achromatic Telescope is sent carriage free to any mile, and time by a church clock ten miles. This instrument is the result of the most extensive practical experience, and is sold at a price to be obtained elsewhere for a small refracting telescope. It has a fine, superior achromatic object-glass, two eyepieces, &c., with portable mahogany tripod stand, and packing-case complete, price 5l. 5s. and 7l. 7s. SOLOMONS, Sole Inventor, 19, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly. Sold by all Opticians. Testimonials from the highest authorities at home and abroad. Pamphlet gratis and post-free.

OPERA GLASSES.—Just brought out, an Opera, Race, Field, and general outdoor day and night RECONNOITRING and DRAMA GLASS, of the highest power, containing 12 lenses. Will show a person to know him 2½ and an object distinctly 3 miles off. Price 2l. 2s. Also a variety of Telescopes, Microscopes, Spectacles, and Eye-glasses, from 5s. to 5l. 5s., 10s., 20s., and 30s.—SOLOMON, No. 8, Albemarle-st., Piccadilly.

MAGIC LANTERNS of the highest character and low prices.—DUBOSCQ and SOLEIL, improved Stereoscopic Machinery, which can be supplied nearly at half the exclusive prices hitherto known, and which will show the largest and most perfect Slides by first-rate scientific men.—20, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

SPECTACLES, SPECTACLES, TINTED SPECTACLES are patronised by the majority of the nobility, including Viscount Palmerston, who has worn them constantly by day and night in weak, dim, and defective vision. The adaptation of spectacles to the various imperfections of vision is one of the most vital importance. One of the Firm who has had great experience and practical knowledge in the Trade for 20 years, may be CONSULTED, Gratuitously, at 38, Ludgate-hill, City, E.C.

DEAFNESS.—The SOUND MAGNIFIER and INVISIBLE VOICE CONDUCTOR, a newly-invented instrument for cases of Deafness. It fits into the ear completely, restores sleeping noises to the head, and enables deaf persons to hear distinctly in church, at lectures, theatres, &c. Sold by SOLOMONS, 19, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, and 59, Cornhill.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, exquisitely enamelled on gutta percha, detection impossible, purest materials and best work, on the most reasonable terms. Decayed teeth rendered useful for many years by stopping with Mineral Cement, which hardens like stone.—A Governess-street, Bond-street, W. Consultations free.

THE SUMMER SUN and DUST.—Ladies will find the application of ROWLAND KALYDOR both cooling and refreshing to the face and skin; allaying all heat and irritation arising from the influence of the sun, dust, or exercise, and rendering the complexion delightfully clear and blooming. Sold by all Perfumers; and at 20, Hatton-garden; and by Chemists and Perfumers. Ask for ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, and beware of pernicious articles under the name of "Kalydor."

EAU and POMADE ANTITRICHE DE PIESSE and LUBIN.—Indelible to restore the Hair to its natural colour; keeps it clean, smooth, and brilliant—Sold by all Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale Depôt, 2lB, LUSCOMBE and CO., 71, Camden-street West, London.

PIESSE and LUBIN'S HUNGARY WATER. Odours, Cherryzon, Lucretium, Aurelian, and Festa give it the preference, for it refreshes the memory through the olfactory nerve. See Bible. Sec. 19, 14.—New Send-street (No. 2), London.

PISTACHIO NUT TOILET POWDER imparts to the skin a natural whiteness, entirely delicacy, and removes almost instantly all other tokens. In 6d. 1s. 2s. 6d. 5s. 10s. 6d.—New Send-street (No. 2), London.

MILITARY CANTEENS for Officers, 48s. Fitted complete with Plate, Ivory Handles, and Electro-Plated SPOONS and FORKS.

1 Table spoons	...	0 15	0	Dessert knives	... 0 7 0
6 Table forks	...	0 12	0	Carving ditto	... 0 3 0
6 Dessert ditto	...	0 10	0	Steel sharpener	... 0 2 6
6 Dessert forks	...	0 10	0	1 Butter knife	... 0 2 6
6 Tea spoons	...	0 6	0	1 Sugar sifter	... 0 2 6
1 Egg frame knives	...	0 2	6	1 Pair scissors	... 0 2 6
1 Soup ladle	...	0 3	0	1 Pair of meat carvers	... 0 7 6
1 Pair fish carvers	...	0 3	0	1 Pair of chicken carvers	... 0 5 0
1 Sauce ladle	...	0 1	0	1 Ivory-handle steel	... 0 0 0
1 Gravy spoon	...	0 3	0	Cruet, no change

Carried forward, £5 5 0 Complete ... £8 0 0
Packing-case and Carriage Paid to any Railway Station.
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES of Dressing Bags, Writing Desks, Portmanteaus, Travelling Trunks, Iron-bound Boxes, Canteens, &c., post-free.
MECHI and BOBINSON, 112, Regent-street, and 4, Leadenhall-street, City, E.C.
Queen's Plate and Cutlery Works, Sheffield.
Illustrations on application.

MAPPIN and COMPANY,
71 and 72, Cornhill, City; and 77 and 78, Oxford-street.
Manufacturers to the Queen.
Fitted with their celebrated Table Cutlery, and every requisite of luxury and convenience of the first quality.
Dressing and Writing Bags.

	French	Enamel	Morocco	With
	Plated.	Plated.	Fitted.	Silver.
Ladies' Travelling-bag	1 10 0	2 10 0	3 15 0	6 15 0
Ditto, with writing materials	2 0 0	3 0 0	4 15 0	8 0 0
Gentlemen's Travelling-bag	1 15 0	2 15 0	3 15 0	6 15 0
Ditto, with writing materials	2 0 0	3 0 0	4 15 0	8 0 0
Dressing-case, with plated and complete fittings				10 10 0

Ladies' Wood Dressing-case, with Silver fittings ... £1 10 0 £4 0 0 £6 10 0
Gentlemen's Ditto ... 2 0 0 6 10 0 10 0 0 12 0 0
Ditto, ladies' quality, and more completely fitted ... 2 15 0 5 5 0 9 0 0 18 0 0
Ditto, with richer and more elaborate thoroughly enamelled plated mounts, and the best Sheffield plate in Cutlery, &c., and are unfurnished the cheapest in the trade. Every article is warranted, and may be had separately.
71 and 72, Cornhill, City, and 77 and 78, Oxford-street.

OAK PLATE-CHESTS.—No Charge.—MAPPIN and CO., 71 and 72, Cornhill, City; and 77 and 78, Oxford-street, Manufacturers to the Queen, have always in stock a CHOICE SELECTION of PLATE CHESTS, from 5 guineas to 200 guineas. CANTEEN CASES for orders of their celebrated electro-silver plate (introduced by them in 1844), containing a complete service for 12 persons, with all the requisite articles, fitted in oak, 12 guineas.
71 and 72, Cornhill, City, and 77 and 78, Oxford-street.

ORNAMENTS for the MANTELPIECE, &c. Bronzes, Ormolu, and Porcelain, including every other article. Groups, Statuettes, Vases, &c., in Parian and English and Foreign Porcelain. Lustres, Candelabra, and Candlesticks, in Ormolu, Bronze, Lustres, Candelabra, Candlesticks, and Bohemian Glass.
Table Glass, Dessert Services, &c.
DEANE, DRAY, and CO., London Bridge, E.C. Established 1700.

GARDNERS' 42 2s. DINNER SERVICES. Special, large assortment of patterns of the choicest description; full dessert, richly gilt, 12 persons, in superb variety, at this lowest possible price; table-glass of the utmost brilliancy of colour; glass chandeliers, lustres, &c.—GARDNERS, 453, West Strand, and 4, GARDNER-street, Strand, Charing-cross, four doors from Trafalgar-square. Established 1776. Furnishing Ironmongery Catalogue, 1863, free.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the Best.—The Cheapest and Best Assortment in London.—Moderator Table Lamps, from 5s. 6d. each. Engravings free by post. GARDNERS, 453, West Strand, and 4, Gardner-st. Appointment to her Majesty, Strand, Charing-cross, four doors from Trafalgar-square. Furnishing Ironmongery Catalogue, 1863, free.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S BEDSTEADS, in Wood, Iron, and Brass, fitted with furniture and bedding complete. Full-size Iron Bedstead, 21s.
Entrance, 145, Tottenham-court-road.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS SYSTEM.
The Turnpike Cloth ... ... 3 guineas.
The Regent Cloth ... ... 5 guineas.
The Duke Cloth ... ... 7 guineas.
The Eagles Easy Chair ... ... 10s.
The Eagles Couch ... ... 4 guineas.
Entrance, 145, to 149, Tottenham-court-road.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing the prices of every article required for completely furnishing a house, post-free on application. It is the largest and most convenient furnishing establishment in the world.—145, Tottenham-court-road.

WEST-END FURNITURE GALLERIES, 144, Oxford-street (opposite Bond-street).
Established in the Reign of George the Fourth.
Drawing-room Suites, complete, from £15 to £36. Dining-room Suites, complete, from £12 to £30. Bedsteads, from £2s. Gentlemen's Bedrooms, from £4. Bachelors' Bedrooms, from £7. Portable Cots, from 15s. Portable Folding Bedsteads, from 15s. Mahogany and Oak, from 2 to 40 guineas. Chimney-Glasses in endless variety. Pianos (second-hand) by all makers, from 15 guineas. Ingrain carpets and post-free on application. References kindly permitted to numerous families recently furnished.
144, Oxford-street (opposite Bond-street).

FURNITURE, Carriage Free.—EBBUTT'S improved 2nd BEDROOM SUITE, polished walnut, with plate mirrored doors, 5 feet wide, 3 feet 6 inches deep, 6 feet 10 inches high, &c., Blackman-street, Borough. Illustrated cata-logue free.

FURNITURE, Carriage Free.—EBBUTT'S improved DRAWING-ROOM SUITE, polished walnut, with black enamelled mouldings for £20 10s., including worked rich crimson Utrecht velvet. Blackman-street, Borough, Surrey.

FURNITURE, Carriage Free.—EBBUTT'S improved folding spring MATTRESSES and BEDDING, 3ft. by 6ft., 45s.; 4ft., 50s.; 4ft. 6in., 55s.; 5ft., 60s.—45 Victoria House, No. 31, Blackman-st., Borough, Croydon, and Crystal Palace.

SUPERIOR EASY-CHAIRS and SOFAS, in leather, spring stuffed, and covered, at F. H. LEWIS'S, 245 and 247, Tottenham-court-road, and 24, Charles-street, Oxford-street, W. An Illustrated Price Catalogue post-free.

CARPETS.—GOODE, GAINSFORD, and Co.
In Consequence of the Expiration of the Lease,
HANDLOOM, BRUSSELS and WILTONS,
Turkey, Axminster, and Kidderminster Carpets,
119, 120, 130, 132, Borough, S.E.

SUPERIOR BEDDING, BEDSTEADS, and BEDROOM FURNITURE.
Illustrated Catalogues sent free by post.
BRASS AND IRON BEDSTEADS of every size and description.
HEAL and SON, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

EVANS'S PRIZE KITCHENER.—This unshaken Kitchener obtained a Prize at the Exhibition of 1851. It is adapted for Baronial Halls, Clubs, and Public Inns. Also, larger sizes for Hotels, Taverns, Private and Public Schools, Asylums, Barracks, Hospitals, &c. Plans and estimates free.—EVANS and GLOVER, Manufacturers.
Showrooms, 34 and 34, King William-street, London-bridge.
Manufactories, Vauxhall-walk, Lambeth.

PURE WATER.—The New Filter.—Dr. Davis says—"I strongly recommend all persons in London to filter their water before use, as the best means to obtain wholesome drinking or cooking purposes without filtering is thorough Mr. Spencer's Patent Filter." Sold by Spencer, 88, Fleet-street, E.C., and 4, Leicester-square, W.C., Strand, Temple Bar. Old filters reconstructed on the new plan.

W. F. THOMAS and CO.'S PATENT SEWING-MACHINES.—FIRST MEDAL.—Constructed on principles which the experience of fifteen years has proved to be the most reliable. Purchasers are invited to inspect these machines, take the high reputation which they acquired on their first introduction to the public. They are the only machines which will perform the work produced (alike on both sides) in imitation of wrought, beauty, regularity, and durability.—60, Newgate-st., London, E.C.

TO LADIES. — HIGHLY - PREFORATED TISSUE, for Nurse Aprons, 4 sheets per packet. Green Tissue Dry Leaves, for ornamenting Chimney-glasses, 10 stamps per set of 72 tips. S. PETERS, 7 and, Bucklersbury.

BENZINE COLLAS removes grease, oil, or paint from silks, gloves, and every description of wearing apparel, without leaving the slightest stain or smell, and without injuring the most delicate colour. In bottles, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 7s. 6d. each. Collas Depôt, 37, Wellington-street, West, in Covent-garden, and 37, Wellington-street, W. In consequence of the immediate expiration of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway across Lodge-hill, the Committee have compelled to REMOVE their OFFICES to 100, FLEET-STREET, where, from July next, all communications are to be addressed.
By order of the Committee,
HENRY W. GREEN, Secretary.
May 1, 1863.

ST. MARK'S HOSPITAL for FISTULA, &c.
The Committee draw attention to the following form of bequest, which is recommended to those charitable individuals who may feel disposed to benefit this Institution:—
"I give and bequeath out of such part of my personal estate as may lawfully be applied for that purpose, the sum of £ to St. Mark's Hospital for Fistula, &c., City-road, with such wish for the general use and benefit of the said Hospital; and the receipt of the Secretary for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge to my executors for the same."
If Estates of land or legacies of money under charged are left with the Rector of Hackney, the medical men be elected by the governors, as vacancies occur.
JAMES PAUL BELL WILBRAHAM, Secretary.
Offices, 52, Finsbury-square, E.C., May, 1863.

ISLE OF MAN.—HILL'S ROYAL HOTEL, DOUGLAS. Board, Lodging, and Attendance, 4s. 6d. per day. Illustrated Guide to Interesting Scenery and Map of the Island, 1s.

NEW ZEALAND.—REMITTANCERS.—The Bank of New Zealand (Incorporated by Act of General Assembly), Capital £500,000, grants Letters of Credit and undertakes every description of Banking business throughout the several Provinces.
Terms and conditions on application at the London Office,
No. 64, Bread-street, London, E.C.
F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.

THE WIDOW of a CLERGYMAN, residing west of London, offers a superior and careful EDUCATION with every domestic COMFORT, to a SMALL NUMBER of YOUNG LADIES. Eminent masters attend. Terms moderate. Highly-satisfactory references permitted to the Bishop of London and other distinguished families. Address, Miss H., care of Mr. Hatchard, 187, Piccadilly, Middlesex.

A LADY accustomed to Tuition, who has just returned to England, after remaining five years on the Continent, wishes to RE-ENGAGEMENT as GOVERNESS. She DARE DE COMPAGNIE in a nobleman's or gentleman's family. In addition to the branches of an English education, she teaches the piano, music, dancing, drawing, with the rudimentary Latin. The lady will be at liberty after the 1st of July.—Address, Camilla, 11, Oxford-st.

IN consequence of the Division of an Interest now being worked, a large SHARE is offered for SALE at Copenhagen. It contains 110 rooms and a part of 1500 square rods, and is situated on Strand, in Manufactory, or a Depot. Apply to S. O., 216, care of Messrs. Haasenstein and Vogler, Strasburg.

BOTANY.—A Gentleman wishes to receive PUPILS at Holloway or Gentleman of position as medical pupil. Instructions will be given from the living plant, and the pupil will be enabled to collect, examine, and name specimens for his future use. The locality abounds with woods, fields, and rose-gardens. Terms, with every information, on application by letter, to the owner of the Botanic Collection.—Address S. J., Messrs. Millington and Hutton, 35, Budge-row, London.

SELECT PLANTS, POST-FREE, at the lowest cash.—12 superb varieties Fuchsias, 12 to 15 for Verbenas, 24; 12 fine var. Pelargon. to 18 fine var. Penstemons, 24 Fern & We. Alpine, Border Flowers, &c.—Catalogues free.

HEDGES and BUTLER, 155, Regent-street, London, W., and 30, Kings-road, Brighton, recommend their Dinner Sherry at 24s., Port at 30s., Claret at 18s., Champagne at 36s., Hock at 36s., and 42s., Brandy at 48s., Champagne, 42s., 48s., 60s. On receipt of a Post-office order or reference, and quantity, with a printed list of all other wines, will be forwarded immediately.—Originally established A.D. 1667.

THE GOLD PEN, 164, New Bond-street, London, W., 24, Cornhill, and 100, Regent-street, Birmingham, are now selling the 18-carat Gold Pens, 10s. 6d. per dozen. Sheffield, WOOD and WATSON. Wine and Spirit Merchants, 16, Clement's-lane, City, E.C.

TURTLE.—MCCALL'S WEST INDIA. A liquefy prepared by recent process. Flavour guaranteed. Real Turtle Soup, quarts, 10s. 6d.; pints, 5s. 6d.; half-pints, 3s. Calipash and Calipee, pints, 5s. 6d.; half, 3s. Sealing Wax and Italian Warehousemen. 2, Broad-street, Golden-square, and others.

F. MCCALL and CO.,
Preston Station, 197, Shoreditch, N. E.

Prize Medal for Patent Process of Preserving Provisions without overcooking, whereby freshness and flavour are retained.

SAUCE
LEA and PERRINS'
WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE,
Recommended by the Connoisseurs.
"THE ONLY GOOD SAUCE."
Most genuine without a name on wrapper, label, bottle, and stopper.
Sold by CROSSE and BLACKWELL; Barclay and Sons; and by Grocers and Oilmen everywhere.

Exhibition Prize Medal 1862.
FRYS CHOCOLATE.
Fry's Prize Medal Chocolate for Eating, in Sticks and Drops.
FRY'S CHOCOLATE CREAM.
Fry's Prize Medal Chocolate in Cakes.
J. S. FRY and SONS, Bristol and London.

HORNIMAN'S PURE TEA CHEAPER.
Pure, fresh, and delicious duty obtained by purchasing HORNIMAN'S TEA. Sold in packets by 2,000 agents. High Breakfast 4s. 4d., 4s. 8d., 5s. (formerly 4s. 8d.); the best imported.

LETTERS PATENT 1853. PRIZE MEDAL 1855.
ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS is the most valuable preparation for making pure and delicious Gruel. Modern chemistry has shown that that food is easy of digestion and nutritious in proportion.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY makes a delicious custard pudding, and is the best for thickening soups, broths, &c. Prescribed in it is appreciated as a non-inflammatory food, excellent for mothers nursing, and has been used with great success for rearing infants by hand.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE and CO.
Garlick Hill, London.

KEEN'S GENUINE MUSTARD,
Quite pure, and very excellent. Manufactured by Messrs. Keen's extensive Mustard and Oil mill, which has been in operation since 1742. Sold by the Trade throughout the Kingdom.
KEEN'S MANUFACTURES, 1742.
Sold by the Trade from the Cask, and 1lb. 2lb. and 4lb. canisters, and 1lb. and ½lb. Packets, Labelled.
Garlick-hill, Cannon-street, London.

COWDOG
PREPARED CORN,
for
Puddings, Custards, Blanc-Mange, &c.
Manufactured and Perfected by
T. KINGSFORD and SON,
Patentees of Oswego Starch Works.
It is the original preparation from the Indian Maize, established 1848, commands the highest price from the trade, and offers the best value to the consumer.
It is a quarter stronger than any of the imitations, has a finer grain, and is more delicious.
The Oswego is the natural golden tinge, and not the stark white produced by artificial process.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.,
Garlick Hill, London.

VICTORIA PARK LAUNDRY SOAP, or WASHING STUFF—being strips of soap to be so used as almost entirely to do away the labour of washing.
Sold in packets of 2d. and 6d. each, and may be had also in bars by the trade.
Besides the saving in labour, this soap goes twice as far as the common sort; it does not destroy the linen nor injure coloured goods, and is particularly valuable when washing machines are used.
Sold by all Grocers and other vendors of soap, and of PALMER and CO., Station-street, Charlesworth, sole manufacturers.

J. C. and J. FIELD, Original Manufacturers of PALMITINE CANDLES, to whom the Great Prize Medal (1862) has been awarded, and their Candles adopted by her Majesty's Government for use at the Military stations abroad. These Candles can be obtained of all Chandlers and Grocers in the United Kingdom, in 1lb., 2lb., 4lb., 6lb., 8lb., and 12lb. packets. Unified Series of 1lb., 2lb., 4lb., and 6lb. each. The Candles mentioned to see that Field's label is on the packets or boxes. Wholesale only, and for exportation, Upper-street, Lambeth, London, S.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
used in the Royal Laundry,
Is the Purest and Best Starch.
Sold by all Grocers, Chandlers, &c.

JUDSON'S SIMPLE DYES FOR LADIES, 6d. per bottle. Any one can use them. Ten brilliant colours. May be had of all Chemists.

COALS.—COCKERELL'S COALS, price 23s., cash. Central Office, No. 19, Cornhill, E.C.

100 PATTERNS SILKS, POST-FREE.
All the most useful and fashionable coloured Silks for summer wear, Plain and Figured, from NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 54, St. Paul's-churchyard.
Established 20 years.

100 PATTERNS SILKS, POST-FREE, including plain coloured Glacés in every shade, and some great bargains in Black Silks, from
NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 54, St. Paul's-churchyard.

5300 YARDS BLACK FRENCH GLACÉS, 2000 Yards Black Gros Grain Silk (very durable), 2000 Yards Black Figured Glacé, and 1300 Yards Black Satin, one of the most useful Dyeing manufacturers. Patterns of every quality, free. Also 1000 Pieces of Fancy Silks, in all the most useful and fashionable colours, from 50 to 55, St. Paul's-churchyard. Established 20 years.

3000 UNINFLAMMABLE SILK DERBYS, 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. each, or 24s. to 34s. per yard, all colours. Warranted all pure silk. Patterns post-free.
NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 54, St. Paul's-churchyard.

1863.—NOTICE.—MESSRS. NICHOLSON beg to state that their Address in (and has been for twenty years) 50, 51, 52, 53, and 54, St. Paul's-churchyard, and that they have no connexion with any other firm.

DO YOU WISH YOUR CHILDREN WELL DRESSED?—Bay's Embroidered Suits in Cloth, from 7s. 6d., Useful Suits, 2s. 6d., from 10s. 6d. Patterns of the Cloths, Directions for Measurement, and 41 Engravings of New Costumes post-free.—BAY, 557, Oxford-street, W. Established 14 years.

JAMES LOCKE and CO., 117 and 119, Regent-street, NEW MATERIALS for SPRING DRESSES, in NEW SHAWLS, and in NEW MANTLES and JACKETS in great variety. Patterns free.
The SCOTCH WAREROOM, 117 and 119, Regent-street.

FARMER and ROGERS, India Shawl and Dress Warehouse, 171, 172, 173, and 174, Regent-street, Wales, beg to announce the completion of their NEW FASHIONS for the present season.
They have in stock a fine assortment of Shawls, Scarfs, Mantles, &c. The "PRINCESS," rich Silk Mantle, trimmed lace, from 2 pounds 10 shillings.
The "DENMARK," of rich Gros Grain Silk, handsomely trimmed, from 3 pounds 10 shillings.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1208.—VOL. XLII. SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1863. TWO SHEETS, FIVEPENCE

GREECE AND HER YOUNG KING.

GREECE, after an interregnum of about seven months, rejoices once more in a constitutional King. A considerable interest, not altogether free from anxiety, has been felt in this country for the safe passage of that little eastern State through the perils which invariably follow a dynastic revolution. Classical associations; sympathy with a gallant people when struggling for national independence against desperate odds; intervention in their behalf in the hour of their extremity; a share in the responsibility of having given them, in Otho I., a supreme ruler whose misgovernment brought ruin and disgrace upon the kingdom; a hearty approval of the spirit and unanimity with which, at last, his subjects dismissed him and his Court to their Bavarian birthplace; and the disappointment we were compelled to occasion the Greeks in refusing them Prince Alfred, upon whom they had fixed their choice and set their hearts, as his successor, combined to excite and sustain in England a more than common solicitude that Greece might speedily emerge from political chaos, and start afresh, under better auspices, on a career to national prosperity, dignity, and glory. The ceremony of inauguration at the castle of Christianaborg which, on Saturday last, invested Prince Wilhelm of Denmark with the rights and responsibilities of the Grecian Crown, produced a visible glow of satisfaction here as well as in Denmark; and the satisfaction was heightened by the tenour of the few terse and emphatic sentences which were interchanged on that occasion between the veteran and patriotic Admiral who spoke in the name of the people of Greece, the Danish King whose nephew had been invited to reign over them, and the newly elect and youthful monarch George I.

Assuredly, the event which has happily closed a period of great uncertainty in the prospects of Greece has not occurred a moment too soon. It is impossible to say what evil might not have resulted from another disappointment, or a little further delay, in filling the vacant throne. Admirably as, all things considered, the people of Greece have borne themselves during a protracted interval of political disorganisation, it is not surprising, nor should it be disguised, that matters were rapidly tending towards dissolution, How could it have been otherwise: There have always been in that little kingdom, as well as elsewhere, factions eager to extract from national misfortunes the materials with which their self-importance might be fed. There, too, as elsewhere, in the absence of established authority, petty ambition has claimed the stage, and has "played such fantastic tricks" as seriously to imperil the future of the country. A nation in search of a King is, ipso facto, a nation approaching more or less closely the frontiers of anarchy. Seven months during which all government must, from the necessity of the case, be provisional only, and nothing whatever can be done which may not presently be undone, constitute a severe ordeal for a vivacious and restless people to pass through. If during such a time the arch will hold together without its keystone, we surely have less reason to wonder at the appearance of ominous cracks here and there than at the fact that it has not fallen into ruins. But no one interested in the well-being of Greece can be otherwise than relieved that she has recovered her normal form of political organisation; and many will try to hope that the interim of uncertainty, now that it is safely passed, may have served to disclose more distinctly the special weaknesses and evils with which the new King and his subjects will have hereafter to grapple.

It would be puerile to pronounce confidently on the future of a Sovereign who has not yet reached his majority, and who has been suddenly raised to a post, the temptations and difficulties of which might task the maturest wisdom. Nevertheless, the young King of Greece assumes the Crown under circumstances well fitted to encourage hope. His personal qualifications are understood to be highly promising. His political training has been acquired among a people and under a Monarch who thoroughly appreciate the advantages of constitutional rule. His connection, through the Princess of Wales, with the Royal family of England will bring him under influences calculated to repress every tendency to despotism, should any such make its appearance hereafter. He has naval tastes united to a people whose principal pursuits are maritime. His election to the throne, following a singular succession of disappointments, is little less gratifying to the Greeks than their first choice would have been had it been successful. He will carry with him to his adopted country a highly acceptable gift in the shape of an increase of territory by England's cession to Greece of the sovereignty of the Ionian Islands, and he will be accompanied thither by the best wishes of the most liberally governed States in Europe. These may be fairly regarded as so many moral aids to, and pledges of, good government; and, inasmuch as he is not a Dane, known, his very youth is so far in his favour that it ensures sufficient flexibility of disposition to enable him to adapt himself to the peculiarities of the people he is called to govern.

NEST OF THE AMERICAN OSTRICHES IN THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S GARDENS, REGENT'S PARK.—SEE PAGE 607.

The King of Denmark's speech to Admiral Kanaris and his colleagues, in which he gave them formal announcement of the National Assembly's choice of his relative to fill the throne of Greece, was worthy of the occasion, and the advice he publicly tendered to the young Sovereign was as full of practical wisdom as it was nervously expressed. "Love your people, endeavour," said he, "to gain and preserve the love of the people. Without boasting, I speak from experience when I say that in this consists the true happiness of a King. Adhere firmly to the Constitution of the country; strive constantly to procure its recognition; watch that it be maintained intact. If you make this your rule you and your people will prosper." Sound maxims these with which to fill a young man's mind whilst leaning him up the steps of a throne, and they seem to have made a deep and favourable impression. At an audience given to the deputation at the palace of Prince Christian, King George thus referred to the admonition he had received from the lips of the Danish Monarch:—"I have grown up in a country where legal order is combined with entire constitutional freedom, and which has thereby attained large and felicitous development. The lesson I have here received shall accompany me to my new country, and I shall always keep in view the motto of the King of Denmark, 'The love of the people is my strength.'" A beautiful, but brightest dawn sometimes ushers in a stormy day; and the early blossom, even when fairly set, may wither away beneath a subsequent blight. But the people are to be congratulated whose newly-elected King receives no check from the threshold, over which he has just lived, and yields to it such a frank and cordial response. At any rate, their prospects justify cheerful expectations.

There is plenty for the new King to do in association with his people, and, it must be confessed, there is much requiring to be undone. Dismissing for the present, as we sincerely hope they will, all dreaming about the "grand idea," and husbanding their revenue for a more modest political programme, they will need all the sagacity and firmness of their Sovereign combined to restore order to their finances, to rehabilitate their faded credit, and to develop industry in the country, by improving the means of communication, and by ensuring safety for both property and person. There is really no insuperable obstacle to the eventual expansion of the power of the Hellenic kingdom, occupying as much such a position in the Mediterranean as Denmark does in the Baltic, and England in the Atlantic. But if she would recover her former grandeur she can only hope to do so by a patient consolidation of what she has, to say, a communitive use, of what she already possesses. Her dream is not an unreasonable one if she can refrain from too much haste in her attempts to realise it. She will win by reverence for her past, and by showing that she coveted inheritance wide for her people only as she has only to prove her title by showing to the surrounding provinces, as Piedmont did to those of Italy, that she can govern herself, plant free institutions within her borders, and gather from them appropriate fruit. The end will come when the means are ripe.

It is pleasant, were it only for the sake of old associations, to see Greece starting towards this goal, led forward by the generosity of youth and guided by the experience which one failure has given her. Her course will by necessities at the outset. The most difficult, and the least visibly profitable, part of her duty is its first stage or two. If, with the ardour and the hopefulness of youth, George the First of Greece can lead his subjects over this least-inviting ground, the more distant future will soon reveal exactions sufficiently powerful to ensure their steady progress. We wish him and them the most complete success, and we trust we may accept the inaugural ceremony as at once a prophecy and an earnest of a bright and happy future.

A bill has passed the Canadian Legislature to prevent the execution of the death penalty in public after Jan. 1, 1882.

Sir Moses Montefiore, who is eighty-one years of age, has undertaken a journey to Constantinople in order to influence the Sultan in favour of his Jewish brethren.

The Great Eastern, which sailed from Liverpool on the 10th of May, arrived at New York on the morning of the 24th, and was anchored there on the afternoon of that day.

At Woolwich, on Tuesday, an imposing military spectacle took place in the presence of various distinguished visitors and many thousands of the public. The whole of the available troops in garrison, consisting of the Royal Horse Artillery and field batteries, the 60th Rifles, and the Royal Engineers Light Infantry, took part in the demonstration. At eleven o'clock the Royal Engineers' Prince Consort Battalion, under the command of Murchisons of Highmore Prince Battalion, under the command of Murchisons of Highmore Prince Battalion, under the command of Murchisons of Highmore Prince demanded. The land will descend to the applicant's heirs in perpetuity so long as the annual rent is regularly paid.

Khelat fell into the hands of the insurgents on the 16th of April. The revolutionists committed no violence on the Khanates. Sheer Ali Khan was installed on the throne.

Major General Wheeler, C.B., commanding the Meerut Division, has held an investigation at Muttra into the command and discipline of the 21st Hussars, in which serious grave discord has prevailed.

The cotton-presses of the Kurrachee Screw Press Company are now in operation.

The Shore Ghaut ferries is to be opened to passenger traffic, in order to the erection of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway company, on the 15th of September next.

AUSTRALIA.

By telegraph from Suez we are informed that the Parliament of Melbourne opened on April 21 by Lord Canterbury. Intercolonial conference has finished satisfactorily. Australia challenges England to a horserace, to come off at Victoria, for £16,000.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

A bazaar in aid of the Royal Hospital for Incurables is to be held at the Freemasons' Tavern Building on the 30th, 31st, and 1st.

A dinner is to be given to Sir Charles Darling, K.C.B., Governor-in-Chief of the colony of Victoria, on the 15th inst. at Greenwich.

There is to be a competition of choirs at the Crystal Palace July 4, under the auspices of the Association for the Encouragement of Music.

The new street from Blackfriars Bridge to the Mansion House is to be called Southwark-street.

An old lady has left £10,000 to the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, to be expended solely in a return of the slaughter-house of London.

Several valuable pictures of the Venetian and Lombardian schools—among them a fine altarpiece by Crivelli—have recently been added to the National Gallery.

It has been decided by the Metropolitan Board of Works that in future the street known as Bagnigge-wells-road, from King's-cross to Baker-street, Portman-square, be called "King's-cross-road." The name in this locality at Coppice-row and Victoria-street, to the bottom of Holborn-hill and Skinner-street, is to remain as at present, Farringdon Road.

On Thursday week a meeting of the church and congregation, meeting at Exeter Hall, Strand, Poplar, was held to celebrate the event, to present their pastor, the Rev. George Smith, with a service of plate valued at £250, in commemoration of his having completed the twenty-first year of his ministry in that important sphere of labour.

A handsome Gothic drinking-fountain, which has been erected by the Metropolitan Free Drinking-fountain Association within the precincts of Regent's Park, near Gloucester-gate, was opened to the public on Saturday last. The fountain is the gift of Mrs. Henry Bonnell Garrett, and was designed by Mr. Jackson, of Middle-hill.

Sir Alexander Cockburn, Lord Chief Justice of England, presided on Saturday afternoon at the distribution of prizes to the successful students attending the St. Mary's Hospital Medical School. In the course of an interesting address, his Lordship urged strongly the necessity of a careful study of medical jurisprudence.

The grand fancy-dress ball in aid of the funds of the Royal Caledonian Asylum, and of the Royal Hospital, one of the most brilliant of the fashionable season in London, took place on Wednesday, at Willis's Rooms, and was a success, one of the best-attended balls which have been held there for many years past.

The 162nd anniversary of the foundation of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts was celebrated on Wednesday by a special afternoon service at St. Paul's Cathedral—the sermon being preached by the Archbishop of Armagh. The collection in aid of the funds of the Lady Mayoress, as usual, entertained the Archbishop and Bishops at dinner at the Mansion House.

A bazaar in aid of the funds of the British Orphan Asylum was held on the Guildhall, on Thursday and yesterday; and was observed to emit smoke, and an alarm was given, when, the base being immediately laid on, all engines were sent to the spot. On examination it was found that a wisp of fire from the kitchen passed over the wooden roof of the corridor, that a hole had been burned, and that by the spinning and draught the woodwork near it had taken fire.

Mr. Alderman Waterlow's experience in regard to the houses which he has built for working men has led him to form an opinion as to the best as gratifying kind. This experience has led to a movement for the erection of several blocks of dwellings, on a similar character, and last Saturday a meeting of influential gentlemen was held at the Mansion House to form a company for carrying out the scheme. Lord Shaftesbury, M.P., presided, and terminated with a resolution to form a company, towards the capital of which over £50,000 was subscribed in the room.

On Wednesday the annual festival of the Institution of Civil Engineers was celebrated at the Freemasons' Tavern, Lincoln's-inn-fields; the president, in the chair; supported on the right by Prince Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein, and on the left by Lord Cathcart; Mr. Mark J. Addison, Robinson, the Controller of the Navy; Dr. Graham, the Master of the Mint; Colonel Yolland, R.E., and others; and on the left of the President, the Vice-Chancellor, Lord A. Paget, the Lord Mayor, &c. There were also present Sir John Hawkshaw and Mr. Hawkshaw, the four vice-presidents, and the leading members of the profession, the company numbering upwards of 150 guests.

Last week the Lords of 1848 published the Returns of Corn-prices—were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1855-62 the average (per Imperial quarter) was 180s. 2d.—Sunday, April 26, which were 129s in the last week of May, fell to 121l in the week that ended last Saturday. The average number of persons in receipt of relief of parochial weeks in 1855-62 nearly corresponding with last week, is, with a correction for increasing population, 82,112. The deaths from smallpox were eighty-one more last week as they were in any of the eight previous weeks. Two widows died at the ripe old respectability of ninety-three and ninety-four years, and a man at the age of ninety-six.

The Prince and Princess of Wales proceeded on Monday evening in state to the Guildhall, where his Royal Highness honoured the company with a visit at the invitation of the Lord Mayor. We have described at page 647, full particulars of the ceremony.—On Thursday evening the Prince was present at a dinner of the Merchant Taylors' Company, at their corporate hall, in Threadneedle-street. Mr. Spence, the master of the company, was in the chair, and the wardens, with Mr. Alderman Lawrence, the Royal Highness at the entrance in Threadneedle-street, and escorted him to the platform placed at the upper end of the building. During the dinner which the company was presented to him, and at the conclusion of the ceremony the guests responded to appropriate toasts.

On Wednesday the anniversary festival in aid of the funds of the German Hospital, Dalston, at Dalston, was held at the Albion Tavern. The Right Hon. Lord Harry Vane, M.P., presided. Double the sum was realised last year, viz., £600, and the expenditure £3631. The receipts for 1863 fell short £1000, and the expenditure £3631. The chairman, after speaking of the great value of the medical arrangements and nursing in the institution, went on to say that the present accommodation was insufficient, and therefore it had been resolved to build a new hospital somewhere. He was glad to say that the subscriptions obtained for this purpose had been highly encouraging. He had pleasure to acknowledge the donations received from our family—that of Mr. Hoffnung—£500. The subscriptions announced during the evening amounted to nearly £1000.

LAW AND POLICE.—The Dundonald case was before the Committee of Privileges of the Lords on Tuesday. It was brought by the eldest son of the celebrated sailor, who prayed their Lordships to declare him the legitimate son of his father and the rightful inheritor of the title. The claim was in the first instance disputed by Captain Cochrane, as grandson of the Warrior, and some strange testimony was given agreeing the character of the mother of both claimants. The venerable lady herself was examined, and indignantly denied the aspersions. The Committee found themselves in an embarrassing position—in now being called to decide a case on ex-parte statements, for Captain Cochrane, at the last meeting, withdrew his opposition; but they determined, as the case had been begun, it ought now to be heard through, and their Lordships adjourned to Monday next for its further hearing.

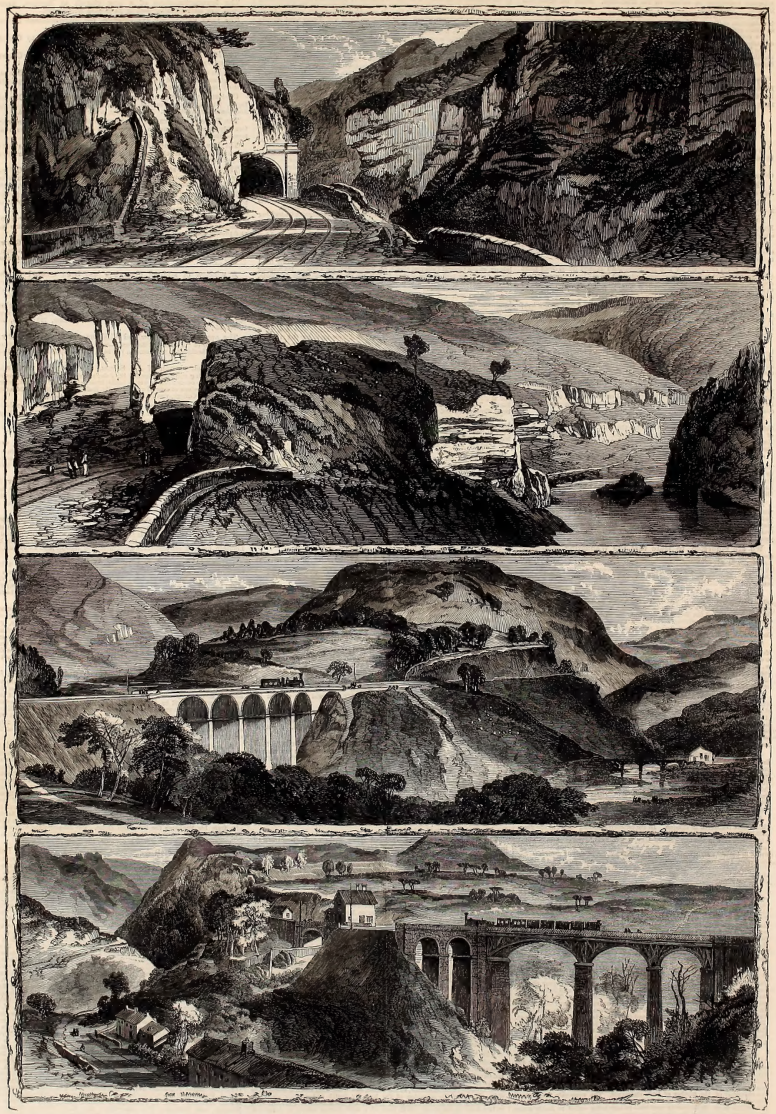
Applications were made to Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood, yesterday week, by the trustees of the River Lea, for an injunction to restrain the Metropolitan Board of Works from causing any sewage to pass down from the High Level and Middle Level Sewer into the River Lea. It appears that during the progress of the works upon the northern outfall sewer, the High Level and Middle Level Sewers temporarily discharge their sewage by "storm outlets" into the Lea. The board had undertaken that this should be done without interfering the former; but they discovered the mischief some time after. The Vice-Chancellor, after hearing arguments in favour of the issue of the injunction, was pleased that the work was already done was inevitable, and that, in the long run, the Lea would be benefited by the new arrangement. He could not compel the board to divert the sewage, but ordered that they should not connect any more sewers with that leading to the Lea, and also, if necessary by pumping, to divert the sewage which was down in that river.

In the Court of Queen's Bench the case of "Lord Carlington against Guthrie," in reference to the imputations cast on his Lordship's conduct at the fight Tarrytown, was brought on before the full Court of Queen's Bench. The Court refused the application for a criminal information for libel on the special ground, which had transpired during the trial, that the prosecutor's solicitor had instructed his publisher to destroy all the unsold copies of his book. The Lord Chief Justice of England said that he doubted whether the conduct complained of did constitute a gross libel for which, in other circumstances, the Court would grant a rule. The application, however, on the ground above stated was refused, and the rule would not be granted.

The application of Colonel Waugh to be allowed to surrender in bankruptcy was in open Court, on Friday, refused by Commissioner Fonblanque. "It is the principle of the law, he said, was in favour of the petitioner's claim, and he would have had no difficulty in granting it, if the matter had been left entirely to the Continent with £500, the property of his creditors. The bankrupt ought to explain to them before he was allowed to go free. The object of the assignees thought it was of importance to obtain his evidence in the case to reveal under his examination, even without the power of committing. Assignees took time to consider whether they would support the opposition or not.

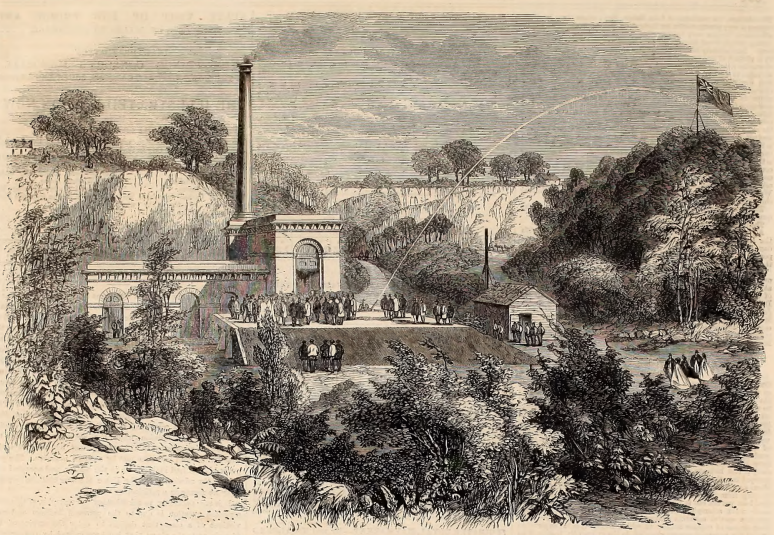
At the Middlesex Sessions, on Monday, Mary Ann Jones was indicted for stabbing a servant to rob her mistress, was tried at the Central Criminal Court on Tuesday and Wednesday. The principal witness was the prisoner herself, who is undergoing punishment for her share in the offence, and her statement was that Jones had made a different lunar ball to the appointed one, and had not been to the house at all. Enough was proved, however, to convict the prisoner, and the jury found her guilty. Sentence deferred.

An old woman, named Donovan, was sentenced to eighteen months' hard labour at the Central Criminal Court, on Wednesday. Mr. Bodkin, who prosecuted, said to the Judge, "Give me three years' penal servitude, for that Donovan is a dangerous woman." "I'll do nothing of the kind," said the Judge, "I'll do nothing of the kind," said the Judge, "I'll do nothing of the kind," said the Judge,



1. MANCHESTER JUNCTION TUNNEL, WYEDALE. 2. CRESSBROOK. 3. MONSAL DALE. 4. MILLERSDALE STATION.

OPENING OF THE BUXTON AND MATLOCK RAILWAY.—SEE NEXT PAGE.



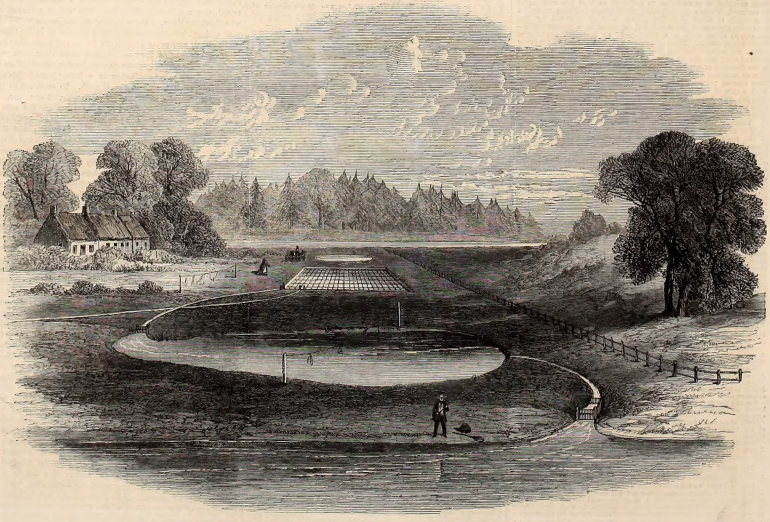
THE SOUTH ESSEX WATER-WORKS: TESTING THE ONE-INCH JET AT THE ENGINE-HOUSE, GRAYS.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE ROWSLEY AND BUXTON BRANCH OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

THE first sod was turned in September, 1860, and the first portion—viz., from Rowsley—was opened for public traffic Aug. 1, 1862. The remaining portion, from Hassop to Buxton, has just been completed, and was opened for public traffic on Monday, the 1st inst.

The works upon this railway are of a very interesting and extensive character, and the country through which it passes is most romantic and picturesque.

After leaving Rowsley the line crosses the River Derwent, and runs nearly parallel with the turnpike-road for about two miles, passes through the park at the back of Haddon Hall by a tunnel 1150 yards in length, and then comes in sight of the pretty town of Bakewell and on to Hassop. After leaving Hassop station the line passes by



SALMON-BREEDING PONDS AT STORMONTFIELD,—SEE PAGE 646.

Thornbridge, the residence of John Haigh, Esq., where there has been erected a very pretty station for Longnor and the district. The works afterwards become very heavy. The first work is the Monsal Dale tunnel, which is cut through the solid limestone, and is about 350 yards long. Immediately afterwards the line is carried over the River Wye by a viaduct of five semicircular arches, of 60 ft. span each, and 70 ft. above the river. After passing along the hillside for about a mile, we come to the Cressbrook Tunnel, 480 yards long, and breaking out into daylight again for about 200 or 300 yards, where there is a charmingly picturesque view of rocks and well-wooded hills, we are again in darkness, and pass through the Litton Tunnel. Upon emerging from this, we open out into a very fine country of hills and dales, studded with pretty white cottages, and mansions, the latter belonging to Mr. Henry Newton. After travelling another two miles the railway crosses the river again at Millersdale, where there is a viaduct, which is the largest piece of work on the line. The span here is 80 ft. above the river, and in a very pretty object amidst the beautiful romantic scenery by which it is surrounded. Close adjoining is the Millersdale station—a pretty building in good keeping with the country. The line then passes through the Chee Tor Tunnel, and again crosses the river, and immediately after into a tunnel through the celebrated Chee Tor rock. The line now gradually passes along the Wyedale, where the rocks and scenery are perhaps the grandest along the whole route.

The terminus at Buxton is situated immediately at the back of the quadrant, and the station is a handsome and convenient building.

The total length of the line from Rowsley to Buxton is 15¼ miles.

A junction line connecting the Midland Company's main line with the Ambergate branch at Ambergate was also opened on the same day, by means of which trains can run to and from the southern portion of the line without the delay formerly incurred by turning the engine at Ambergate.

On Saturday last the Midland directors and their friends went over the line from Derby by a special train, and had a sumptuous lunch at Buxton in celebration of the opening of this new branch to their railway. There were present on the occasion the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, Lord Denman, Lord Scarsdale, Sir S. Blaine, Sir Joseph Paxton, M.P.; S. Beale, Esq., M.P.; W. F. Thornhill, Esq., M.P.; and about two hundred of the principal shareholders. The engineer-in-chief is W. H. Barlow, Esq., Westminster; the resident engineers, Messrs. Campbell and Champion; and the contractors, Messrs. Rennie, Logan, and Matthews.

THE SOUTH ESSEX WATERWORKS.
THE ENGINE-HOUSE.

OUR ENGRAVING gives a faithful representation of the first operation of the South Essex Waterworks, which took place a few days since in the presence of the Directors, at Grays, and a large company invited to witness the inauguration of a system destined to supply the towns all over the county of Essex; and, ultimately, to the metropolis. The South Essex Waterworks Company was formed for the purpose of forming to account a large and, indeed, unlimited supply of water at Grays, in Essex. During the process of excavating a series of chalk pits on the estate of Mr. Mowlem Burt, M.P., which is working for upwards of fifty years, springs of water of large volume have been opened, capable of producing many millions of gallons daily; and hitherto this water has been simply wasted by being pumped into the Thames. The water springs in question are situated about a mile from the river, and when undisturbed rise to a height varying from five to eight feet below high-water mark. The chalk had been worked and to the level of the springs over a tract of sixty acres, when attempts to go deeper led to the discovery of this water, which a careful scientific analysis proves to be entirely free from the presence of organic matter, in which respect it is far superior to any of the waters at present supplied to the metropolis, and contains many of them contain at least three grains of organic matter to the gallon.

It became necessary, for the purposes of working the chalk-pits, to pump out the water, and by this operation, the pumps working day and night, a quantity exceeding 2,000,000 gallons was raised daily. In the course of weeks pumping, the water was lowered about twelve feet, and it then became possible to excavate the chalk to the additional depth over a small space; but if the pumps ceased working the water speedily rose to its former height, and a day and a night were occupied in pumping so as to admit of the chalk-pits might be resumed. When a space of thirty yards square had been excavated to the depth of about 12 ft. the pumps were discontinued, and the increasing pressure of the water, and by going to a greater depth—namely, to about 31 ft. in a small area, the full pressure of the water was apparent. These operations had been carried on for many years; yet notwithstanding that so large a quantity of water was pumped daily into the Thames, no perceptible difference took place in the quantity or quality of the water, and it was fairly presumed than an immense supply of very pure water was at command. From these sources, provided the excavations were deepened and enlarged. With a view of turning such a valuable source to account, a company was formed and obtained powers to distribute water to Brentwood, Romford, Ilford, Barking, and other places in Essex between Grays and the adjacent districts, the eastern suburbs of London. After providing for those districts a very large surplus of water will remain, which it is the intention of the company to the metropolis, and Shoreditch and Whitechapel may therefore expect to be better supplied—at any rate as far as purity is concerned—with water than any other section of London. On the occasion when our Sketch was taken the water was laid on for the first time to the town of Brentwood; and in a short time the service will be completed to the other towns in Essex which are comprehended in the operations of the company. The engine in Engraving is a picturesque doll, which forms, as it were, the entrance to the extensive chalk-pits, through which, in diverse streams, the water in question may be seen rippling, and presenting an appearance of clearness and brightness that can only be derived from its extreme purity.

SUMMER CIRCUITS OF THE JUDGES.

THE Judges of the several Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer have arranged the several circuits of England, and respectively proceed to hold the ensuing summer assize of over and terminer and gaol delivery for the several counties in the following order:—

Midland Circuit: Judges, the Right Hon. the Lord Chief Justice of England, Sir Alexander Cockburn, and the Hon. Mr. Justice Willes. Assizes to be holden at Oakham, Northampton, Leicester, for county and borough; Nottingham, for county and town; Lincoln, Derby, and Warwick.

Western Circuit: Judges, the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, Sir Wm. Erle, and the Hon. Mr. Justice Wightman. Assizes to be holden at Winchester, Salisbury, Dorchester, Exeter, Bodmin, Wells, and Bristol.

Northern Circuit: Judges, the Lord Chief Baron, Sir Fitzroy Kelly, Sir Frederick Pollock, and the Hon. Mr. Justice Wightman. Assizes to be holden at Aylesbury, Bedford, Huntingdon, Cambridge, Lancaster, and York.

Oxford Circuit: Judges, the Hon. Mr. Baron Martin and Mr. Justice Byles. Assizes to be holden at Abingdon, Reading, Oxford, Worcester, Hereford, Monmouth, and Gloucester.

Home Circuit: Judges, Mr. Baron Bramwell and Mr. Baron Channell. Assizes to be holden at Hertford, Chelmsford, Maidstone, Lewes, and Croydon.

Northern Circuit: Judges, Mr. Justice Blackburn and Mr. Justice Mellor. Assizes to be holden at York, Durham, Newcastle, Carlisle, Appleby, Lancaster, and Liverpool.

North Wales and Chester: Judge, Mr. Justice Crompton. Assizes to be holden at Newtown, Welshpool, Dolgelly, Carnarvon, Beaumaris, Ruthin, and Chester.

South Wales and Chester: Judge, Mr. Baron Wilde. Assizes to be holden at Haverfordwest, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Cardiff, Brecon, Presteigh, and Chester.

Counties Judge: Mr. Justice Keating will preside in town as counties Judge.

The pearl fishery in Ceylon is over. The catch has been nearly 9,000,000 oysters, the sale of which has realised more than £50,000.

SIR A. Paget, our Ambassador at Copenhagen, and one of his suite have had a narrow escape from being drowned by the upsetting of a sailing-boat in that harbour. Sir A. Paget supported himself by oars; and, while Mr. Kirkpatrick endeavoured to save himself by swimming, done passers by went to their help just in time, for their strength was all but exhausted.

During the inspection of the West Middlesex Volunteers on Wednesday week, in the Regent's Park, a musket, being carelessly left at full cock, went off as the owner unfixing his bayonet, and so shattered his hand that it had to be cut off, besides inflicting a wound in the neck of the front rank man.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 20.

SUNDAY, June 14.—Second Sunday after Trinity. The Roman Republic established, B.C. 510. Battle of Newby: Charles I. and the Royalists totally defeated by Fairfax and Cromwell, 1645. Victory of Napoleon I. over the Austrians at Marengo, 1800; and over the Russians and Prussians at Friedland, 1807.

MONDAY, 15.—Magna Charta granted by King John, 1215. The Romans defeated by the Turks at Silistria, 1854. Great massacre of the Janissaries at Constantinople, 1826.

TUESDAY, 16.—Victory of the British and the Allies, commanded by King George II., over the French at Dettingen, 1743. Execution of the seven Bishops first tried for libel, 1688. The French defeated by the Prussians at Ligny, and the Duke of Wellington defeated Marshal Ney at Quatre Bras, 1815.

WEDNESDAY, 17.—Alban, first Christian martyr in Britain (third century). Battle of Bunker's Hill, Boston; the victory found useless by the British, 1775. The State-General of France constitutes themselves as the National Assembly, 1789.

THURSDAY, 18.—The English defeated, by the instrumentality of Joan of Arc, the Duke of Bedford, Regent of France, at the battle of Verneuil, 1424. Battle of Waterloo, and ruin of Napoleon I., 1815. Waterloo Bridge opened, 1817.

FRIDAY, 19.—Establishment of the British Empire in the Black Hole at Calcutta, by order of the Nabob: 123 suffocated: 1756. The Military Asylum, Chelsea, founded by the Duke of York, 1801.

SATURDAY, 20.—Translation of Edward, King of the West Saxons. Death of King William IV., aged 72, 1837. Accession of Queen Victoria, 1837.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 20, 1863.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
W	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h
0	29	0	51	1	13	1	36	1	58	2	20	2	43
m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m
5	0	5	21	5	43	6	5	6	27	6	49	7	14
P	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h	h
0	29	0	51	1	13	1	36	1	58	2	20	2	43
m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m	m
5	0	5	21	5	43	6	5	6	27	6	49	7	14

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS
MADE IN THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION,
Lat. 51° 30′ 40″ N.; Long. 0° 9′ 16″ W., Height above sea 24 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETERS.				WIND.		Rain in 24 hours.
	Barometer corrected and reduced to 32°.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	At 10 A.M.	At 10 P.M.	Maximum in 24 hours.	Minimum in 24 hours.	General Direction.	Resultant Velocity.
	Inches.	Deg.	Per cent.	0 to 10.	Deg.	Deg.	Deg.	Deg.		Miles per hour.	Inches
7	29·666	49·0	61·0	·64	58	49·0	70·1		S. WSW.	1·0	·000
8	29·656	49·8	67·0	·57	59	49·8	69·8		WSW.	1·0	·000
9	29·677	50·8	59·1	·97	19	45·7	62·3		W. SW. SSW.	3·87	·000
10	29·677	50·8	59·1	·97	19	45·7	62·3		W. SW. SSW.	3·87	·000
11	··	··	··	··	··	49·8	61·6		··	3·51	·167
12	29·719	50·1	61·0	·71	··	49·8	61·6		··	3·51	·167
13	29·769	54·6	64·0	·63	6	49·5	67·7		S. SW.	2·32	·048

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in inches and decimals of an inch:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected	29·677	29·677	29·678	29·685	··	··	29·667	29·713
Dry Thermometer	51·9°	51·9°	51·9°	51·9°	··	··	51·9°	51·9°
Temperature of Evaporation	51·9°	51·9°	51·9°	51·9°	··	··	51·9°	51·9°
Elastic force of Vapour	··	··	··	··	··	··	··	··

THEATRE ROYAL, LYCEUM.—MONDAY, and every Evening during the Week, A SUDDEN ATTACK—Messrs. Thorne, Harrison, Webb, and Miss Woolgar. Preceded at 7 by THE MAGIC OF LOVE. At 10 by the Two Grand Ballets of the Romantic Drama, in Three Acts, and Prologue, entitled THE DUKE'S MOTTO. Characters by Mdlle. Rosati, Mdlle. Cellarius, Mdlle. Vandenhoff, supported by Messrs. Stone, J. Houghton, H. Wilkinson, G. Jordan, F. Charles Gordon, Raymond, Bennett, Lyon, Cormack, Lacy, Hall, Ryan, Lee, Wilkinson, Cormack, and Mdlle. Upex. Box-office open Ten daily.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Mr. and Mrs ALFRED WIGAN every night in the new and greatly successful comedy of FINESSE; or, Key to Intrigue. Preceded at 7 by a translation of the celebrated Vaudeville, LOVE AND LAW. To Eight. FINESSE; after which, EASY STANDING, by Leader Scott; with Mr. Compton, Mr. Howe, Mr. Rogers, Miss Amphlett, and Miss Fanny Wright. Box-office open 10 to 5.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER.—On MONDAY and TUESDAY, THE WILLOW COPSE. On WEDNESDAY, THE ROSE OF AMIENS. On THURSDAY, THE MAID AND THE MAGPIE. On FRIDAY, THE MAID AND THE MAGPIE. On SATURDAY, THE WIFE'S SECRET. Mr. Webster, Mr. Wright, Mr. Paul Bedford, Mr. Leigh Murray, Mr. Wilkins, and Mr. Wigan; Mrs. Keeley, Miss Woolgar, Miss Oliver, Miss Fitzwilliam, and Mrs. Webster. Commencement of Performances every Evening at Seven o'clock. Box-office open daily from Ten to Five. Private Boxes, Stalls, and Places may be secured by letter or telegram. Doors open at half-past Six. Commence at Seven. Carriages at Eleven. Acting Manager, Mr. Wright.

ROYAL STRAND THEATRE, under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. SWANBOROUGH.—Every Evening, at Seven, the extraordinary revival of ALADDIN; or, the Wonderful Scamp, supported by old favourites. Box-office open daily from Ten to Five.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Week ending Saturday, June 20. Open Monday and Wednesday at 10 in addition to Saturdays.
Orchestral Band and Chorus Performances every Afternoon at Three and Evening at Seven. Grand Display of Fireworks every Evening at Nine. Illuminations and Fireworks on Tuesday and Thursday Evenings. Instantaneous Photographs of Animals in Motion. Colossal Statues and other Sculptures. Models of Machinery in Motion. Fountains. Gardens. Aquarium. Refreshments. Lectures on Coal and Coal Mines. Concerts in the Centre Transept, at Three.
MONDAY, June 15.—Tenth Sol-fa Choral Meeting: 6000 Voices, on the Great Orchestra.
TUESDAY.—Grand Miscellaneous Concert.
Admission: Saturday, Five Shillings; on all Tickets bought beforehand, Half-a-crown.
WEDNESDAY.—Grand Miscellaneous Concert. Open at 10 A.M. Season Tickets free.
Progressive admission after 1.30 on Sundays on showing their tickets.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—GREAT TONIC SOL-FA CHORAL MEETING, on MONDAY, June 15, when 6000 Voices, trained by Mr. Curwen, will sing in the Great Orchestra on WEDNESDAY NEXT, the 17th inst., when a selection of Handel's Choruses will be performed by 2000 Voices, the remaining 4000 Voices, commencing at 7 o'clock precisely.
Conductors—Mr. John Hullah, Mr. John Bishop.
Open to Season Ticket Holders at 10 A.M.
Admission, One Shilling.

ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S GREAT SHOW, on WEDNESDAY NEXT, JUNE 17. Open at the Gardens, Roads at Hyde Park Corner, from Eleven to Seven. Admission, 7s. 6d.; or, by Ticket purchased before the day, 5s.
ROBT. ELLIOTT, F.R.H.S., FELLOWS, JUNE 15.

HORTICULTURAL GREAT SHOW AT SOUTH KENSINGTON, WEDNESDAY NEXT, JUNE 17. The Gardens will not be open till 1 o'clock.

SECOND GREAT SHOW AT SOUTH KENSINGTON, on WEDNESDAY NEXT. Tickets, until Tuesday, 5s. each, to be had at the Gardens, and at the principal Nurserymen and Seedsmen.

AGRICULTURAL HALL, Islington.—Mr. SIMS REEVES in the CREATION.—Mr. J. RUSSELL has, in connexion a grand performance of Haydn's Oratorio, the CREATION, on FRIDAY NEXT, JUNE 19. Miles. Lemmens-Sherrington, Milan, Giuglini, Mr. Lewis Thomas, and Mr. Sims Reeves. Band and Chorus of 1000 Performers. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Commence at Seven. Tickets, 10s. 6d.

EXETER HALL.—Alboni, Sims Reeves.—Mendelssohn's Last Great Work, ELIJAH, on MONDAY NEXT, JUNE 15, at Seven, under the direction of the NATIONAL CHORAL SOCIETY. Conductor, Mr. G. W. Martin. Band and Chorus of 1000 Performers. Miles. Alboni, Lemmens-Sherrington, Mr. Sims Reeves, Signor Gassier, Vocalists. Mr. Stanley and Mr. Sims Reeves' Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Sofa Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Balcony, 7s.; Area, 5s.; Gallery, 2s. 6d. Tickets at Novello's, 69, Dean-street, and 24, Berners-street; and at Austin's, St. Peter's-alley, Cornhill.

MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.—THE DIRECTOR'S BENEFIT, and LAST CONCERT of the SEASON, on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 15, when Mr. CHARLES HALLE will perform Beethoven's Sonata in C minor, Op. 111, and Chopin's Nocturne in F minor, Op. 55, No. 2; Charles Hallé's Variations, Op. 82, for Pianoforte and Violoncello, Miss Saloni-Dalby and Mr. Sims Reeves will sing; Mr. Charles Hallé, Mr. Sainton, Mr. Zerbini, Mr. Lucas, Mr. Aylward, and Signor Piatti will perform Mozart's Quintet in E flat, Beethoven's Quartet in C minor, Op. 18, No. 4, and Mozart's Quintet in G minor. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Stalls, 3s.; Admission, 1s. Doors open at half-past Seven. Commence at Eight.

MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.—ST. JAMES'S HALL.—LAST TWO CONCERTS of the SEASON, on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 22, and MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 29, when Mr. CHARLES HALLE will perform, for the last time this season, his Pianoforte Recitals. Beethoven—Leopold Auer (second time in England); Ries, Weiss, and Pinelli. Pianoforte—Charles Hallé (last). Violins—Ernst, Hill, and Pinelli. Tenor—Sainton. Violoncello—Piatti (last). Double Bass—Howell. Violas—Hill and Aylward. Conductor—Benedict. Programmes and Tickets at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street; and at Austin's, St. Peter's-alley, Cornhill.

MUSICAL UNION.—TUESDAY, JUNE 16, Half-past Three. Quartet, No. 6, in D minor, Spohr; Quartet, No. 3, in C, Haydn; Sonata, Pianoforte and Violoncello, in C, Beethoven; Quartet, No. 3, in G minor, Op. 15, Spohr. Executants—Pianoforte, Madame Arabella Goddard; Violins, Sainton and Goffrie; Violas, Hill and Pinelli; Violoncello, Piatti. Conductor, Mr. Ella. Stalls, 3s. Tickets at Cramer and Co.'s, Chappell and Co., Olivier and Co., Austin, at the Hall; and Addison and Hodson's, Piccadilly.

HERR ORBETHUR'S THIRD HARP MATINÉE will take place at his Residence, No. 2, Talbot-terrace, Walbrook-row, York, on SATURDAY, JUNE 27, when Herr Orbethur's Grand Duet on "Norma" will be performed.

STATE VISIT OF THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES TO GUILDHALL.

INAUGURATION OF THE PRINCE CONSORT'S MEMORIAL IN THE HORTICULTURAL GARDENS, SOUTH KENSINGTON.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

Of SATURDAY NEXT, JUNE 20,

will contain the following Engravings:—

The City Ball—Presentation of the Freedom of the City to the Prince.
The Procession Passing along the Corridor.
The Royal Quadrille.
The Supper Room.
The Gold Casket in which the Freedom of the City was Presented to the Prince.

Page Engraving of the Scene in the Hall.
Page Engraving of the Inauguration of the Memorial.
The Company Assembling under the Western Dome.
The Royal Party Viewing the Memorial Statue from the Platform, &c.

Price 5d.; Stamped, 6d.

Office, 198, Strand.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1863.

THE debate in the House of Commons on Tuesday night was a remarkable one. It was upon Mr. Buxton's proposal for relaxing the subscription of the clergy of the Church of England to the Prayer-book and the Articles; and it not only called up the best debaters, but it compelled them to speak out with a certain freshness of tone and frankness of admission. A theological debate, in which Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Disraeli, Mr. Bright, Mr. Milnes, Sir George Grey, and Lord Robert Cecil take part is tolerably sure to be interesting; but when each is forced into offering a sort of creed of his own upon Church matters the discussion acquires a psychological as well as a Parliamentary interest. We may remark, at the outset, that the Government proposed that the House should decline to record any opinion upon the subject, and that the Opposition acquiesced in the arrangement, but asserted a wish that Mr. Buxton had been put in a direct negative. The proposer himself had little choice in the matter, and accepted as a victory the admission by the Home Minister that the question is by no means in a satisfactory state.

It is not necessary to ask whether the agitation of this subscription question is due to the personal feelings and convictions of a class that desires to enter the service of the Church, or to the alarm that has been caused by the repeated announcement that candidates of the highest class are falling off, and that the Church is in danger of having to take the hands of an inferior order of clergy. We are inclined to believe, in spite of Mr. Disraeli, that the money question has a great deal to do with the matter, and that, if the youth of England are so generously ardent that they are ready to subscribe whether a prize will pay or not, they are blessed with friends who are less generous, and who think for them. There is now no profession in which a man without influence has so poor a chance as in the Church of England, unless he happen to be one of those rare combinations of genius and energy that force their own way. Cæteris paribus, twenty years of good hard work will place the member of any other profession in a better place in life than the same period passed in the Church. To continue to take the same worldly view of the matter, there are, no doubt, certain counterbalancing advantages on the side of the clergyman. He is at once put into a position of some authority, for which laymen have to work: and if he be a somewhat weak but vain man, this breeds rank and charms for him. Then, again, a young clergyman has great opportunities of marrying. He is necessarily thrown constantly into intimacy with the best female members of his flock, especially if he be a country minister; and if that frequent association and consultation which, with a marriageable young officer getting up private theatricals would be called flirtation, is elevated to a graceful and pleasing duty when it is the marriageable young Curate getting up a coals and flannel society. Generous as our youth is, it is not unaware of the great things to be obtained by marriage: and even Mr. Lyle, in "Coningsby," fascinates the gracious heiresses. Status and a good match are two excellent things, procurable by entering the Church, and we may set these against the bad incomes and the small chance of promotion.

Some of the debaters were not afraid to advert to the pecuniary side of the question: and it was reserved for Mr. Disraeli to rebuke such low views, and to declare that the Church of England had not been deprived of his prospects of pupils from any such reason. But the nominal point for discussion was whether, conceding that persons are kept out of the Church by the subscription, it would be well to provide for their admission by doing away with what are called the scruples of the Church—by revising her title-deeds as the leader of the Opposition said, somewhat forgetful of technicalities with which he must once have been familiar. Mr. Gladstone, who has not pleased certain portions of the Church lately, made an eloquent speech in which he defended himself of some very plain utterances. He spoke as a lay Churchman, and declared that he could not consent to remove restraints upon the ministry, for that the freedom of the clergy meant the slavery of the laity. Nor did he think that a revision of the Liturgy could be undertaken with the smallest hope of success. Subscription was a system that had grown out of the necessities of the Church. And in reply to the alleged opposition between the Prayer-book and the Articles, the Chancellor of the Exchequer said that there was a far sharper opposition between declarations of St. Paul and of St.

James. True harmony could arise only from a comprehensive comparison of differences. The Church worked very well, and we ought to be thankful, and not to seek for change. Those are the present sentiments of one who will, in all probability, lead the House of Commons one of these days, perhaps with the highest Ministerial title; and it is well that auspicious or discontented clergy should know the views of the distinguished member for Oxford University. The prospects of his enemies have not been improved by his lucid speech of Tuesday.

Mr. Beresford Hope, whose brilliant debut on the Italian question was one of the incidents of the Session, and who spoke of himself as the member who was latest from the University, bore a young man's testimony to the fact that the minds of young men were not contaminated by the rigid requirements of the Church, and that this subscription excluded them from orders. Mr. Henley, who "lived near a university," had heard of nothing of the kind, and thought it odd that, if there had been any such feeling, he should not have been aware of it. Mr. Henley is one of the shrewdest, honestest, and best men in the house, and has been a man of the world in his day, and, had we the honour of his acquaintance, we know no man to whom we would sooner go for advice in any country difficulty or other matter requiring that gentlemanly kindness which is utterly removed from attorney-craft, but which does the work of the latter so well. But "Cato's a proper person to intrust a love-tale with!" and perhaps it is not exactly open to every waiter to speak. Mr. Phillips has materialised that a young and troubled candidate for priesthood would refuse his theological woes. We may believe that there are mental disquietudes among University men which are not confided to Mr. Henley. His wonder that he was not consulted is not touching, but his clencher was more in his peculiar Socratic way. What do you want? If you don't want to teach our doctrines go away, you shall not have our money.

Mr. Walpole complained that the "great rewards" of the Church were few, and hence young men preferred other callings. Mr. Newdegate thought the Church in danger, and had been pained by Canon Stanley. His pain might be less would he study to understand the Canon. Lord Robert Cecil thought that a rigidity of creed was the best way to avoid tyranny which Bishops would set up were there no tests provided without their aid. And Rome came in at last, in the person of Sir George Bowyer, who made a bitter, perhaps not a guilty, an attack. He had had much of policy, of prudence, of expediency, but nothing about the Truth. The Church was to teach truth, and to tell every one who differed from the Church that he was wrong, and to cast him out. That was Rome and Sir George was heroic Rome all wrong. He had literally the last word; but Mr. Disraeli had adroitly provided for him, and had reminded the House that in the Church of Rome dissent was forcibly repressed, schism adroitly managed, and heresy helped to the safety valve of monastic orders. Sir George was tripped up, by anticipation, by the farsighted debater who leads the Opposition. And so closed an interesting debate on a subject which can never fail to be interesting to Englishmen. The general tone of the discussion showed that laymen may be trusted to debate upon the Church, and it did not increase the proof that Convocation is absolutely necessary.

THE COURT.

The Queen, accompanied by Prince Alfred, Princess Helena, Princess Louise, Prince Leopold, Princess Leopold, Prince and Windsor Castle, from Balmoral, at nine o'clock on Saturday morning. Her Majesty's birthday was celebrated as usual. The Prince and Princess of Wales visited her Majesty.

On Sunday the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and younger members of the Royal family, with their suite, attended Divine service in the private chapel. The Rev. Lord Wriothesley Russell officiated.

On Monday the Queen, attended by Lady Augusta Bruce, walked and drove in the grounds. The Princess of Wales visited her Majesty.

On Tuesday the Queen went to London, and, having been joined at the Paddington station by Prince Alfred, proceeded to the Royal cultural Gardens, where her Majesty inspected the memorial of the late Prince Consort, with which she expressed much satisfaction. Thence the Queen drove to Marlborough House, where the Princess and Princess of Wales. Here the Prince of Orange visited her Majesty, and the Queen returned to Windsor in the afternoon.

On Wednesday her Majesty walked and drove in the grounds. The Princess of Wales and the Royal family went to London and visited the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House, in order to be present at the ceremonial at South Kensington.

INAUGURATION OF THE MEMORIAL OF 1851.

The Queen, accompanied by the younger members of the Royal family and attended by the Royal suite, left Windsor on Tuesday by special train and travelled by the Great Western Railway. Her Majesty was met at the Paddington station by Prince Alfred, and proceeded direct to the Horticultural Gardens to inspect previously the memorial to the Prince Consort. The Queen was received at the gardens by the Duke of Buccleuch, president, and Sir W. Dilke, Bart., vice-president, and on reaching the memorial was received by Mr. Durham, the sculptor; Alderman Challis, chairman of the committee; and Mr. Godwin, the architect, to whom her Majesty was being presented to her Majesty. The Queen made a minute and careful inspection of the memorial, and repeatedly expressed her satisfaction with it from every point of view. Her Majesty also manifested much interest in the portraits of the eminent and accomplished men which are graciously declared herself well pleased. In the gardens were also present to meet her Majesty Earl Granville, Lord Stanley of Alderley, and the executive committee. Her Majesty drove to Marlborough House to visit the Prince and Princess of Wales, and have the Prince of Orange pay his respects to her Majesty. The Queen afterwards returned to Windsor.

The formal inauguration of the memorial took place on Wednesday, in the presence of the Prince and Princess of Wales, who were accompanied by Prince Alfred, Princesse Helena and Louise, and Prince Arthur and Leopold, and attended by a very numerous retinue of the Indies and gentlemen of the Court. The Duke of Cambridge, the Duchess of Cambridge, and Princess Mary were also present. The Royal party arrived at the International Building at four o'clock, and were conducted to their places on the platform under the western dome. Their presence was announced by a flourish of trumpets and the playing of "God save the Queen," by the three Guards' bands united, in the nave-garden. The uncovering of the memorial to the Prince Consort by order from the Prince of Wales was announced by a flourish of trumpets and a salute of artillery, after which martial music was performed and the fountains played. The line of procession, formed four abreast, was marked by banners, and the whole was conducted with admirable judgment and success.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

This has been a busy week for their Royal Highnesses. The last closed with Ascot and the Garter Day at Windsor.

On Monday occurred the Royal visit to the city of London, on the morning of which day the Prince of Wales held a Levée on behalf of her Majesty, having returned to town from Frogmore for that purpose. His Royal Highness was accompanied to the Throne-room by Prince Alfred, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the Hereditary Prince of Reuss-Schleiz, Prince Frederick of Holstein, and Count Gleichen. The presentations were upwards of 400 in number. An account of the City entertainment is given in another column.

On Tuesday the Prince and Princess of Wales received address of congratulation from the clergy of Canterbury and from the clergy of the cities of London and Westminster. The Archbishop of Canterbury, with the Bishops and clergy of the province, arrived at Marlborough House in their convocation robes at two o'clock, and were shown into the suite of rooms on the ground floor, where the Prince and Princess, attended by the ladies and gentlemen. The Lord Bishop of London and the clergy of London and Westminster followed soon after. The addresses were attentively listened to, and gracious replies were given. The Prince of Wales was attended by the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, Sir Robert Maude, and Lieut.-Col. Keppel. The Princess was attended by Countess De Grey and Ripon, Lady Caroline Barrington, and Miss Knollys, Her Majesty's Private Secretary, was present with the Prince.

On Wednesday their Royal Highness the Prince and Princess Alfred, attended by Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel, rode on horseback. The Princess of Wales took a carriage drive. Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Prince Leopold arrived soon after three o'clock at Marlborough House from Windsor Castle. Prince Arthur, attended by Major Hepburn, arrived at Marlborough House somewhat before four o'clock the Prince of Wales left Marlborough House to uncover the Memorial of the Exhibition of 1851 and the statue of the Prince Consort. Their Royal Highness was accompanied by the Princess of Wales and all the members of the Royal family who were staying at Marlborough House. Life Guards.

The entertainment given to the Prince of Wales by the Merchant Taylors' Company, on Thursday, was on a most magnificent scale. The fine corporate hall of the company in Threadneedle-street was splendidly decorated, and a distinguished company assembled to meet his Royal Highness. Previous to the banquet the freedom of the company was presented to the Prince, the ceremony taking place in the picture-gallery.

PRINCE ALFRED.

His Royal Highness Prince Alfred left Balmoral on Thursday, June 4, and remained in Edinburgh the next day. The Prince resided at the Duke's residence, Holyrood Palace, where he slept. Prince Alfred left in the forenoon and visited Holyrood Palace, where it is understood his Royal Highness will take up his residence for some weeks in the autumn, for the purpose of attending the classes of the University. In the course of the day the Prince visited the Royal Botanic Garden, and in the afternoon he was received by the Lord Provost at the Prince's large assemblage of ladies, a fine specimen of the Albion Institution, a handsome and comfortable new structure in Nicolson-street, and named after the late Prince Consort. The Prince left Edinburgh by the six o'clock train to join the Royal train at Greenhill on its way to Perth.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales will honour the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London with a State banquet on the 24th inst. at their mansion in St. James' square.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary Adelaide left Cambridge House for Ireland on the 11th and 22nd.

Field Marshal the Duke of Cambridge held a levée on Tuesday in the Horse-guards, about forty officers being presented.

His Royal Highness the Duke de Chartres was married on Thursday to his cousin, Princess Marie of Orleans, daughter of the Prince and Princess de Joinville, at the Catholic Chapel of Kingston-on-Thames.

The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough leave town to-day for Blenheim, to entertain their guests, the Prince and Princess of Wales.

Field Marshal Viscount Combermere and Viscountess Combermere arrived in town from Worthing on Saturday evening. The noble Viscount is in his 80th year.

A marriage is arranged between Colonel Aldworth, of the Royal Fusiliers, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Aldworth, and Lady Mary Howard, eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Bandon.

MUSIC.

"Un Ballo in Maschera" was produced at HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE on Saturday last, and repeated on Tuesday. Of this work it would be impossible to speak in terms of the best of Verdi's works, is very strongly cast at this theatre. Tilions as Amelia, the dark and unhappy wife of Riccardo, the gallant and fickle husband—Giuglini as the unthinking but noble-minded Sovereign—Mdlle. Ilma di Murska as Oscar—and Graziani as Volpini as the gay Court page, who throws a gleam of sunshine over the gloomy subject of this dramatic poem—a combination of talent rarely met with on the stage. Mdlle. Volpini is a débutante, and promises to be a great acquisition to the theatre. She is young and handsome, of beautiful appearance, with intelligent eyes, fine grace, and sings charmingly. Amelia is one of Tilions's finest parts; and will rank in the list of her triumphs with Norma and Lucrezia; with Delle-Sedie's great powers, both as a tragedian and a singer.

The opera season at HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE has made a sensation in France and Germany, was performed at Her Majesty's Theatre on Thursday, for the first time in this country. Next week we shall have some remarks on the merits of this new opera.

AT THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, Mdlle. Adelina Patti has made six additional appearances in the character of the heroine of Rossini's "Il Gazza Ladra." The part is well suited to her, and has afforded her another triumphant success. She looks and acts the simple peasant girl to perfection, and sings the music with remarkable brilliancy and variety of expression. We cannot help remarking, however, that Mdlle. Patti occasionally errs in the use of the shake in her fioriture and embellishment. Into her aria d'introdi, "Di piacer mi balza il cor," she introduces a shake on every possible occasion, in which Rossini is not responsible that the composer's text is often entirely lost sight of. This, however, is matter of detail. Other singers have done the same, and it is not that her execution of the music, consonant and all, is exquisitely finished and beautiful. This the opera, one of Rossini's masterpieces, is well performed as a whole at the theatre. Neri-Baraldi is a good representative of the young soldier; Graziani, especially as the mad old father, and as the veteran, Ninetta's father; Rotconi shows his comic humour in the existing vein, and the other parts, Fabrizio, Giannetto, and Mdme. Didiée is delightful in the little part of the boy Peppo.

The last of MR. LUMLEY'S benefit performances was given at Her Majesty's Theatre on Saturday last, when the performance was in two of her best parts—"La Traviata" and "La Figlia del Reggimento," and the second time in the season of Mdlle. Titiens, and the most eminent members of the bands of the Philharmonic and Her Majesty's Theatre, and of the Queen's private band; a chorus of a hundred select voices, together with a number of our most eminent singers and solo performers; and Professor Sterndale Bennett, jointly with Mr. Costa, acted as conductor. A benefit concert like this evinces a degree of artistic spirit not often met with. Mr. Costa manifested his high reputation as a pianist by a most masterly performance of Mendelssohn's concerto in G minor, which he executed with a power and effect that drew forth the warmest applause. The serenata composed by him in honour of the marriage of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and performed on the opening night of Her Majesty's Theatre, was now repeated with much greater effect, and received with the applause deserved by a work of such distinguished genius. The solo parts were beautifully sung by Mdlle. Parepa, Mr. Wilbye Cooper, and Mr. Santley; and the chorus, so remarkable for their broad and simple harmony, were given by the excellent body of choral voices with great precision and power. Though this concert was, on account of the temporary purpose for which it was written, cannot be often repeated as a whole, yet there are portions of it—particularly the duet, "Parigi o cara," and the quartet of the song, "Adone there is a star;" and the trio, "Daughter of the Realm, hail"—which are calculated to be very popular at chamber music. The miscellaneous pieces were selected with great taste and judgment; and the concert, distinguished as it was for elegance and refinement, was one of the most successful, as well as one of the best, of the season.

MR. HOWARD GLOVER'S concert at St. James's Hall, on Saturday last, was of the monster description, as usual. The programme was of enormous length, and a host of performers, vocal and instrumental, were employed in getting through it. There were Mdlle. Carlotta Patti, Mdlle. Artôt, Mdlle. Trebelli, Mdlle. Parepa, Mdlle. Michal, Mdme. Sainton-Dolby, Mdme. Alboni, Mdme. Weiss, Signor Giuglini, Signor Bettini, Signor Delle-Sedie, Signor Vialetti, Signor Gassier, Mr. Lawler, Mr. Santley, Herr Reichardt, and a host of lesser stars; and there were Mdme. Arabella Goddard, M. Hallé, and other instrumentalists. The concert was attended by crowds of people, not habitual frequenters of operas and concerts, who desire an opportunity of hearing the most eminent vocal and instrumental performers in London.

MR. WALTER MACFARREN'S Matinée at the Hanover-square Rooms took place simultaneously with Mr. Glover's concert at St. James's Hall. Mr. Macfarren, one of the most eminent professors at the Royal Academy of Music, is a composer and pianist of established reputation, and his entertainment was attended by a large and numerous assemblage. In a sonata of Beethoven for the piano and violin, Mr. Macfarren and Mr. Henry Holmes, who is also a pupil of the Academy, and Miss Rate Loder (Mrs. Thompson) for the piano, violin, and violoncello, in which number Mr. Macfarren was accompanied by Messrs. Sainton and Piatti, he showed his talents as one of our most accomplished pianists. Several vocal performances by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby and Miss Robertine Henderson gave an agreeable variety to the entertainment.

THE THEATRES.

HAYMARKET.—A new farce was produced on Thursday, entitled "An Unlucky Mortal," and adapted from a French vaudeville. The scene, as in many other pieces of this class, derives an effect from being divided into two compartments. It consists of lodging apartments in an old roadside inn on the way to Newmarket. Here is the jolly landlord (Mr. Buckstone) in the usual flow of spirits by the aid of brandy-and-water potations in honour of his daughter's wedding-day, a character admirably supported by Mr. Buckstone. It happens that Mr. Henry Vincent (Mr. W. Farren), who is on his way to the races to a post-late with a thousand pounds which he has received under the will of his uncle, instead of an estate, becomes the occupant of one of those very rooms, engaged by a Miss Blanche Tremaine (Miss Maria Harris), who is also on her way to Newmarket, and to whom the estate in question had been devised. They are thus brought together, and, after a little flirtation, make an exchange of their circumstances, offering to restore the fortune of which she had been the means of depriving him. Vincent, of course, insists on taking the title with the estate; and, as she has no objection, the curtain falls on their happiness. So slight a story depends altogether on the treatment it receives, and these are indeed skilful. Miss Harris's acting of "Finesse" improves on acquaintance, and attracts a fashionable audience.

PRINCESS'.—A new farce was produced here on Monday as a lever de rideau, under the title of "Cousin Tom." We are familiar enough with the plot and characters, but it loses nothing in the effect on that account. Mr. Belmore has in it a capital character, of which he makes the most. It is that of Mr. Newington Gosling, who passes himself off for Cousin Tom, when the family has not seen for five years, and thus wins Lucy Gosling (Miss M. Oliver), the daughter of the rag- fair romantic attachment to her cousin. Tom Vane (Mr. R. Cathcart) comes homes just in the nick of time, but so embarrassed that he is willing to disclaim all relationship to Lucy, and assist in the deception. The part of the irascible father was well supported by Mr. Frampton, and the new comer was worthy of such strength. The melodrama of "Court and Camp," is gradually establishing its claims as a clever and effective piece, aided with many judicious cues, scenery and striking machinery. Miss Amy Sedgwick, as the Countess Du Barri, gives dignity to the action, and Miss George Vining supplies the dash and vivacity which we had not forgot from Celeste Thompson, who, as a soubrette and danseuse, has a lively little part, which she well plays.

OLYMPIC.—This house has also produced a new farce, adapted from the French by Mr. J. M. Morton, and entitled "A Lad from the Country." The prevailing idea of such a piece may be readily imagined. Nor is the idea falsified by its conduct. John Chickabiddy (Mr. Paul Bedford) is sent to meet at all diminished to take advantage of his London acquaintance. Having come to town to spend proceeds of having found a rich uncle sheep in the country, he finds employment under Mr. Peckover (Mr. R. Soutar). This gentleman, being in difficulties and expecting to be arrested for debt, to prevent his house and furniture from being seized, makes both over for the nonce to Chickabiddy, whose notions are at first confused by the unexpected investigations of bailiffs, supposing that they perplexes the country lad, who misconstrue master's affairs with his own, and answers their questions as he thinks they relate to his connection with the sheep. When enlightened on this point, he is disinclined to relinquish his hold on the property, and, in the end, he and his uncle are released from such a character and the situations implied was climbed by Mr. Atkins, who played with force and ability to nature.

STRAND.—This house re-opened on Monday under the direction of Mr. W. H. Swanborough. The comedy of "The Huntsmen Husband," and the extravaganza of "Aladdin" were performed. The entertainments of the evening concluded with "Marriage at any Price."

ADELPHI'S WELLS.—On Saturday the tragedy of "Hamlet" was performed. The cast was principally indebted to amateurs, among whom Mr. Walter Joyce distinguished himself in the part of Prince Hamlet. He was always clever and sometimes striking, but lacks that ultimate finish without which no man can successfully aspire to high art on the stage. Mr. Joyce has considerable histrionic ability, but must study hard and determine never to be careless. With due attention he might gain a position on the stage.

The National Choral Society will give a performance of MENDELSSOHN'S Oratorio "Elijah," at Exeter Hall, under the direction of Mr. G. W. Martin, on Wednesday, the 24th, at Exeter Hall, under the direction of Mr. G. W. Martin. In addition to the full chorus, there will be a band of fifty performers, and will make her first appearance in sacred music. The band and chorus will be under conductorship of Mr. Benedict.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Paul, who are at present in Paris, gave a matinée on Thursday last, at the Salle Herz, Clichy-road, at which it was unanimously resolved to take steps for the erection in London of a statue (or other befitting monument) to Shakspeare. A provisional committee has been formed, which will shortly take steps to invite the co-operation of all interested in the movement, and to collect subscriptions. The progress already made is reported to be most satisfactory. The Dramatic Authors' Society having promised its cordial support, while other important adhesions are daily received. Communications on the subject are invited by the hon. secretary of the Urban Club, St. John's-gate, Clerkenwell, or the secretary of the Dramatic Authors' Society, 28, King-street, Covent-garden.

THE THAMES EMBANKMENT.

STEAM-BOAT LANDING-PIER TO BE CONSTRUCTED BETWEEN WATERLOO AND BLACKFRIARS BRIDGES, DESIGNED FOR THE METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS BY MR. J. W. BAZALGETTE.

We extract the following description of the proposed Thames Embankment from the report of Mr. J. W. Bazalgette to the Metropolitan Board of Works. We are informed that Mr. Bazalgette's designs, of which we have engraved two, have just received the approval of the Thames Conservators, subject to some small modifications in the details, and that they only await the approval of the Board of Trade to enable Mr. Bazalgette to complete them for contract.

"In preparing these designs," writes Mr. Bazalgette, "my attention was first directed to the depth and character of the requisite foundations, and to the mode of constructing them and the embankment wall. In order to determine these points, borings were made in the bed of the river, along the line of the face of the embankment, down to the London clay. It appears that, with some exceptions, the river mud and sand averages about seven feet in depth, and that below it is a bed of gravel, varying in coarseness and character, overlaying the London clay, and averaging from about 15 ft. to 20 ft. in thickness; and that the London clay is reached at a depth of about 42 ft. below Trinity high-water mark. I am of opinion that a sufficient and solid foundation for the embankment wall can be obtained upon the lower portion of this bed of gravel, at a depth of about 14 ft. below low-water mark and 10 ft. above the London clay, or about the depth of the bottom of the deep-water channel of the river in the mid-stream. In order to get in the foundations to this depth I propose, by excavating within them, to sink a connected line of iron caissons, and to fill them with Portland cement concrete to within 6 ft. of low water. At this depth, and upon the concrete, will be built the brick granite-faced embankment wall. The caissons will be so constructed as to form a full-tide dam, and the work will be carried on in short lengths, so that the upper portion of the dam above low water can be removed as each section is completed, and employed in the formation of the adjoining length; thus the ironwork used as a dam between high and low water will not be wasted, but will become available for other purposes after the whole work is completed. This, therefore, will be a safe, rapid, and economical mode of operation. Behind the embankment wall, and underneath the roadway, it is proposed to construct the subway and sewers, an arrangement which will add much to the stability of the embankment wall.

"The total length of the embankment is about 7000 feet, but it is completely divided by the bridges into three sections, each of which will be viewed by itself, and the line of vision will not ordinarily be continued from one section to the other. The first section is from Westminster to Hungerford Bridge, the second from Hungerford Bridge to Waterloo, and the third from Waterloo to Blackfriars Bridge.

LANDING-STAIRS, ROADS, AND ORNAMENTAL GARDENS BETWEEN HUNGERFORD AND WATERLOO BRIDGES, DESIGNED FOR THE METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS BY MR. J. W. BAZALGETTE.

"A continuous line of embankment wall would not in itself be productive of much architectural effect. The present landing-places for steam-boats are extremely ugly, and there would be much difficulty in connecting the river wall with the existing bridges so as to produce an effective and consistent design.

"At each of the bridges there are, and must be, landing-places for steamers, and midway between the bridges there are landing-places of some description, which will have to be maintained.

"To meet those requirements it is proposed to treat each length of embankment from bridge to bridge as a complete design, and to make the steam-boat piers and landing-places prominent and effective as well as useful and necessary features.

"At Westminster Bridge the roadway, which rises at an inclination of 1 in 80 to the level of the bridge, is set back some 30 ft. or 40 ft. from the face of the embankment wall; and the intervening space would be reserved as a promenade and steam-boat pier, having access from the bridge by a wide and imposing flight of steps opposite the Houses of Parliament. This will terminate without abruptness the varying styles of architecture at this point. Between Westminster and Hungerford Bridges would be landing-stairs for smaller craft; and here it is proposed to introduce the beautiful water-gate now situated at the end of Buckingham-street, and erected after a design by Inigo Jones. On each side of Hungerford and Waterloo Bridges would be steam-boat landing-places, the dumbies for which would be partly concealed within recesses formed by projecting into the river, in front of the general line of embankment, massive granite piers with moulded pedestals rising about 30 ft. above the roadway, and hereafter to be enriched with bas reliefs and surrounded by groups of statuary.

"Half way between Hungerford and Waterloo Bridges it is proposed to construct a flight of landing-steps 60 ft. wide, projecting into the river and flanked at each end with massive piers, rising to the level of a few feet above the roadway, and hereafter to be surmounted with colossal figures of river deities or other appropriate groups. It is proposed to form an approach for foot passengers from the high-level roadway to the river by a second flight of steps, descending to the level of the lower or embankment roadway, which would add much to the effect of this central feature as viewed from the river. On each side of this approach a line of shops could be erected on the land side of the embankment roadway, the backs of which would form a retaining wall to the ornamental crescent and promenade above them.

"Between Waterloo and Blackfriars Bridges, and in front of Arundel-street, a steam-boat pier would be constructed, in lieu of the present Essex-street pier, designed upon the same principle as those adjoining the bridges.

"The embankment wall itself has been enriched with mouldings of a simple character down to the level of high-water mark, the continuous line of moulding being broken by the introduction, at intervals, of massive blocks of granite to carry ornamental lamps, and by occational recesses for promenade seats.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

THERE are still such things as Parliamentary impeachments; and a foremost Minister has been impeached. It may not be remembered that in this column last week we alluded to the circumstance of Mr. Gladstone enacting temporarily the part of leader of the House of Commons, and that we ventured to insinuate an opinion that the right hon. gentleman, with all his high attainments, wanted some of what may be called the lower qualifications for that office. It cheered that after that opinion had been committed to paper a circumstance occurred which went far to prove its accuracy. At one of those impossible hours of the morning when Ministers are in the last stage of physical and mental exhaustion, and when the House is super-luminously of Lord Palmerston's opinion that the Times never sees nature system, a motion for the appointment of a Select Committee was brought forward, the composition of which was undesirable to Mr. Gladstone; whereupon he began to scold, and said sharp things which ended in the suspension of the power of the critical in the fatigue suggestive occurrence, for they are supposed to be unconscious of any emotion when under the Speaker's ban, in truth, suffered severely from part of their duty with much success. On the next day, when the House was in full sitting, up rose in succession two very quiet, sedate, heard-of members, Mr. Dodson and Colonel Sykes, both Liberals, but who are, in their way, as representative men of a class of members, by no means unimportant nor unsound, and, in the case of the latter gentlemanly as to paint the censure which they implied, complained of their honour and impartiality being impugned. A great discussion was made by these appeals, and Mr. Gladstone turned ghastly pale as he listened and observed that impressive silence which always when that gentleman delivered a few calm, measured words of implied rebuke to his friends. There was another occurrence on Monday which deserves recording: the Estimates were absolutely reduced by cutting £400 off 45 vote in supply. In the last ten years the efforts of economical reformers have been successful in reducing the estimates of the like kind, other sums of £300 and £400 having been also cut off: so that in the course of time the country has absolutely saved the interest of less than £1000 a year. Hopeful reductions indeed!

An ordinary observer might suppose that Mr. Pope Hennessy is popular in the House of Commons. At the same time, it is not quite so certain that, because a gentleman's utterances are in a sympathetic tone with every body, and constantly speaking to everybody, there is a positive mutuality of enjoyment under the circumstances. But it it happens that Mr. Hennessy has got friends, let them be sure of his friendship, and warn him against the career he is pursuing in the House. His last manifestation was in which he expressed a virtuous outrage on the chief personage in the House; for he actually brought a charge against the Speaker himself. It is his duty to be present, apparently sleepless, member to remain in the House to the very latest moment of its sittings, and to get up little scenes, as if for the mere purpose of getting his name in the newspapers. He is not a temporary sojourner in which he is entitled by virtue of the votes of the electors of County Cork. On one of these occasions, when he had spoken three times on the subject matter of a bill to bring in which leave was given, when the Speaker put the question on the names of the members who were to prepare and conduct the measure, Mr. Hennessy attempted to reopen the discussion, the House being hard on leaving, by the introduction of the name of the person preceding the Speaker demurred, and prevented his speaking. For this Mr. Hennessy has taken a terrible revenge, in the shape of a libel, and which can be described only in phraseology which we do not care to adopt; therefore complained to the House of the conduct of the chief officer. The Speaker, as we think, suffered his amiable and peaceable tendencies to get the better of him when he attempted to explain the circumstances and indirectly appealed to the House to be protected from petty assaults at times when he is almost prostrated by nine or ten hours' sitting in an uneasy chair listening to a succession of dull and disjointed talk. It may be scarcely worth while to break a guffey on a wheel, but we rather fancy that if Mr. John Bellenden Ker presided Parliamentary gaffies would not have been so prevalent as they are just now. And, with unusually acid of the Attorney-General for Judges, to be an efficient Speaker a man must have a good digestion, a cool heart, and a stern temper.

Will any interested member move for a return of the number of Parliamentary hobbies which Mr. Gregory keeps for his especial riding? He came himself on a different one every time he rises almost every week. His last was rather an undesired and weakly animal, which he rode it with that air of unconscious and easy mastery in jobby-horsemanship in the display of which Mr. Gregory stands pre-eminent. He has a hobby for the success of the Botanical Gardens at Edinburgh on Sundays implies advances to a principle; but it was hardly worth while to POSSE a semi-religious agitation in order to get an opportunity to show off his skill in the working population of the Modern Athens to get into a space of exercise and ventilation within a wall for the people on the Sunday air, the freshness of which, as Lord Palmerston, who was doubtless old to the introduction of the Sunday question, has long been country last year, when dealing with this matter, put it, would be at least doubtful. The decision was not unanimous, and Mr. W. Stirling distinguished himself by making one of those quiet but pointed speeches which seem to filter gently through his lips from an unusually well-stored and powerfully-charged brain. Mr. Stirling is one of the friendly hint which we will convey by recalling to recollection that which is implied in the saying that thought may be used as a spur and not a partridge. On that same night the House did homage to the Prince of Wales by being crowded out because his Royal Highness was going to the civic entertainment in the Guildhall. There was an interesting game of skill going on for some time between Mr. Disraeli and certain members. The Government, having left the necessary officials in the house, would have been glad to have snatched a number of votes in supply in a thin House; but gentlemen, who had been invited into the City, got resolved not to work that night, were also determined that Ministers should not be let off so easily. Members managed to out-manœuvre the whipper-in, and all his efforts having failed, Mr. Disraeli, with a ballot at his rear of members, proceeded to the temporary Government leader that the "mus would not some in," and resigned himself to his fate, which was, that even he was able, after all, to get to bed in the City.

One constantly hears it said that the House of Commons is not a fit place to discuss religious questions, and, as a matter of course, very questions are debated once a week in every Session. A tremendous debate, in the name of heathens, took place on Wednesday night. Mr. Gladstone has been engaged in the relaxation of the system of subscriptions and declarations required of clergymen of the Church of England. As far as could be made out, the principle sought to be established was a kind of clerical free-trade; but we forbear to touch the subject on further. Nothing could have been more characteristic than Mr. Buxton's speech. Indeed, this gentleman seems to have acquired a kind of eccentricity of style, so that such questions than even on matters of finance, into which latter, at times, he seems to have thrown his whole soul and all his energies and faculties. His animation in such cases is modified by the solemnity of his demeanour, and he speaks as if he were trembling lest his tongue should unwittingly misrepresent his conscience. In short, he is evidently and heartily in earnest. Not so the other and newer champion of that Church, which he stated on this occasion he had removed from his forefathers. Again did Mr. Disraeli justify Mr. Newdegate's severe sarcasms, that his conversion to the Church of Rome had a worldly temptation. At least, his adhesion to that institution is declared from rather a philosophic point of view; and the labour of his speech in this debate was so palpable that it was clear that pure conviction was not its basis. In short, the speech was a ponderous mystification. Mr. Gladstone was the chief opponent. The debate was the occasion of the neophyte members—notably, Mr. Morrison, who did very well. Mr. Butler-Johnstone came rather early to rank the fame he had won in the recent discussion on the affairs of Italy. Although his present speech was not up to the mark of his first essay, it displayed much ability, exhibited by subtlety and ingenuity in his reasoning and illustration, with which he is evidently thoroughly imbued; but there is a tendency in his best manner to be too long, indeed, is that not being that which is required for the House, he was but moderately applauded. Mr. Lowe, who is the only man in the House who comes to the House always with a kind of surprise, inasmuch as, speaking, he makes the Government benches look uncomfortable, is of a fearless character. That he is judicious, and apt to learn the trick of the House, was proved by the fact that, having several times earlier in the evening risen to speak, he gave way to others, and did not allow himself of a full opportunity which he had when Mr. Gladstone sat down, but confined himself to a few words, and in a manner at once avoided and gained by constraint. It was "a glorious night to see" for Mr. Lowe with his best manner—very long, indeed, is that manner—he set about to castigate the free-thinking youngsters like Mr. Morrison and Mr. Butler-Johnstone, who had been taking of Mr. Gladstone as if they were giving their opinions on kid gloves or the merits of a fashionable tailor. For the moment the member of the Church of England was the Church militant. Mr. Lowe dealt with these erratic young gentlemen much as we fancy he would with members, in his preface to the sentence he was about to pass upon them.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The Royal assent was given by Commission to the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill and several other measures.

The Duke of RICHMOND, after a second time, an amendment proposed by Lord Berners that it should be read a second time that day six months being carried by a vote of 36 to 34.

The Thames Embankment (South Side) Bill was read a second time, as was the Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act Amendment Bill.

The Bakehouses Regulation Bill passed through Committee.

The Duke of RICHMOND moved the second reading of a bill drafted by the Government in regard to Poland.—Earl RUSSELL said that France and England had proposed to the Emperor of Austria that a Congress should meet. These proposals had been sent to Vienna, and were under consideration by the Austrian Government. It was, therefore, inconvenient to discuss a question of grave interest.—An interesting conversation followed, in which Lord Brougham, Lord Derby, and Lord Granville took part.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

Mr. Villiers's bill for facilitating the execution of public works in Ireland was read a first time.

Mr. Hennessy gave notice that on Monday next, he should move an address to the Crown praying that the Queen would be pleased to direct Her Majesty, on the fulfilment by Russia of the Treaty of Vienna in regard to Poland.

Mr. GREGORY gave notice that he would move for a Select Committee.—Mr. GREGORY moved a resolution to the effect that the Royal Botanical Gardens, Edinburgh, should be opened on Sundays after two o'clock in the afternoon.—The motion was supported by Mr. Stirling, Mr. Grant Duff, and Mr. Dodson, but was opposed by Mr. Ayrton, Mr. Bruce, Mr. Ritchie, Mr. Monk, and Major Hamilton.—Lord PALMERSTON opposed the motion, not because he objected to the principle of opening museums on Sunday, but he did think the House should violate the conscientious objections of the Scotch to the Sabbath.—The House then went into Committee of Supply on the SUPPLY.—The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, and a vote of £4,000 for the building of £4,000 for the new Record Buildings, Dublin, with £6,000 for the Penrhyn Castle Museum, was agreed to.—Towards the end of the Session the Nelson Monument in Trafalgar-square—was counted out.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The Vaccination (Ireland) bill passed through Committee.

Earl Russell laid upon the table the papers relating to Greece, and in doing so observed that the relations between the King of Greece and the people had not been elected to the Hellenic throne by the National Assembly, that he had done so. The Queen, in her speech, had expressed a hope that the crisis would pass away.—Lord DERBY said that he had received the papers only a few days before. Amongst the papers there was also the communication which had been addressed to Greece with respect to the cession of the Ionian Islands to the Ionian Islands to Greece.

The Metropolitan Police Courts Bill, sent up from the Commons, and the object of which is to inflict corporal punishment upon persons guilty of those atrocious assaults with which the public journals have been filled of late years, was, after some opposition, read a first time.

The Marriage with a Deceased Wife's Sister Bill was read a second time.

The Duke of Cleveland moved the second reading of the Ecclesiastical Courts Bill.—The Bishop of Oxford moved an amendment, limiting Mr. Bunsen's residence in England to three months.—Lord Wynford, Mr. Gladstone, and Lord Granville opposed the amendment, but declared that in the opinion of the Government the object of the bill was to afford an opportunity for the discussion of the question Mr. Bunsen's residence within the realm, and Sir G. Grey moved the adjournment of the debate.—Lord Cairns opposed the motion for adjournment. This did not please Mr. Newdegate, who thought the Government should have taken a more decided course. He should, however, be satisfied with the notice just by a direct negative in place of the previous question.—Mr. Hennessy, Mr. Whalley, Mr. Gregory, Mr. Bentinck, Mr. Dodson, Mr. Johnstone, Mr. Disraeli, and others afterwards spoke. Eventually the previous question was agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The Jurisdiction of Justices' Bill, the Savings Banks Acts Amendment Bill, and the Metropolitan Police Courts Bill passed through Committee.

The Local Government Supplemental Act Amendment Bill and the Officers of Royal Naval Reserve Bill were read a first time.

The Elementary Education Bill, which proposed to amend the law relating to election petitions, was, after some discussion, read a second time, it being understood that some amendments would be introduced in Committee.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

The AFFAIRS OF POLAND.—The Earl of CARNARVON inquired whether the courtesy of the Government would lay upon the table the papers relating to the correspondence between the Emperor of Russia and the Queen of England, as if they were giving their opinions on kid gloves or the merits of a fashionable tailor. For the moment the member of the Church militant. Mr. Lowe dealt with these erratic young gentlemen much as we fancy he would with members, in his preface to the sentence he was about to pass upon them.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The Royal assent was given by Commission to the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill and several other measures.

The Duke of RICHMOND, after a second time, an amendment proposed by Lord Berners that it should be read a second time that day six months being carried by a vote of 36 to 34.

The Thames Embankment (South Side) Bill was read a second time, as was the Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act Amendment Bill.

The Bakehouses Regulation Bill passed through Committee.

The Duke of RICHMOND moved the second reading of a bill drafted by the Government in regard to Poland.—Earl RUSSELL said that France and England had proposed to the Emperor of Austria that a Congress should meet. These proposals had been sent to Vienna, and were under consideration by the Austrian Government. It was, therefore, inconvenient to discuss a question of grave interest.—An interesting conversation followed, in which Lord Brougham, Lord Derby, and Lord Granville took part.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

Mr. Villiers's bill for facilitating the execution of public works in Ireland was read a first time.

Mr. Hennessy gave notice that on Monday next, he should move an address to the Crown praying that the Queen would be pleased to direct Her Majesty, on the fulfilment by Russia of the Treaty of Vienna in regard to Poland.

Mr. GREGORY gave notice that he would move for a Select Committee.—Mr. GREGORY moved a resolution to the effect that the Royal Botanical Gardens, Edinburgh, should be opened on Sundays after two o'clock in the afternoon.—The motion was supported by Mr. Stirling, Mr. Grant Duff, and Mr. Dodson, but was opposed by Mr. Ayrton, Mr. Bruce, Mr. Ritchie, Mr. Monk, and Major Hamilton.—Lord PALMERSTON opposed the motion, not because he objected to the principle of opening museums on Sunday, but he did think the House should violate the conscientious objections of the Scotch to the Sabbath.—The House then went into Committee of Supply on the SUPPLY.—The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, and a vote of £4,000 for the building of £4,000 for the new Record Buildings, Dublin, with £6,000 for the Penrhyn Castle Museum, was agreed to.—Towards the end of the Session the Nelson Monument in Trafalgar-square—was counted out.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The Vaccination (Ireland) bill passed through Committee.

Earl Russell laid upon the table the papers relating to Greece, and in doing so observed that the relations between the King of Greece and the people had not been elected to the Hellenic throne by the National Assembly, that he had done so. The Queen, in her speech, had expressed a hope that the crisis would pass away.—Lord DERBY said that he had received the papers only a few days before. Amongst the papers there was also the communication which had been addressed to Greece with respect to the cession of the Ionian Islands to the Ionian Islands to Greece.

The Metropolitan Police Courts Bill, sent up from the Commons, and the object of which is to inflict corporal punishment upon persons guilty of those atrocious assaults with which the public journals have been filled of late years, was, after some opposition, read a first time.

The Marriage with a Deceased Wife's Sister Bill was read a second time.

The Duke of Cleveland moved the second reading of the Ecclesiastical Courts Bill.—The Bishop of Oxford moved an amendment, limiting Mr. Bunsen's residence in England to three months.—Lord Wynford, Mr. Gladstone, and Lord Granville opposed the amendment, but declared that in the opinion of the Government the object of the bill was to afford an opportunity for the discussion of the question Mr. Bunsen's residence within the realm, and Sir G. Grey moved the adjournment of the debate.—Lord Cairns opposed the motion for adjournment. This did not please Mr. Newdegate, who thought the Government should have taken a more decided course. He should, however, be satisfied with the notice just by a direct negative in place of the previous question.—Mr. Hennessy, Mr. Whalley, Mr. Gregory, Mr. Bentinck, Mr. Dodson, Mr. Johnstone, Mr. Disraeli, and others afterwards spoke. Eventually the previous question was agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The Jurisdiction of Justices' Bill, the Savings Banks Acts Amendment Bill, and the Metropolitan Police Courts Bill passed through Committee.

The Local Government Supplemental Act Amendment Bill and the Officers of Royal Naval Reserve Bill were read a first time.

The Elementary Education Bill, which proposed to amend the law relating to election petitions, was, after some discussion, read a second time, it being understood that some amendments would be introduced in Committee.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

The AFFAIRS OF POLAND.—The Earl of CARNARVON inquired whether the courtesy of the Government would lay upon the table the papers relating to the correspondence between the Emperor of Russia and the Queen of England, as if they were giving their opinions on kid gloves or the merits of a fashionable tailor. For the moment the member of the Church militant. Mr. Lowe dealt with these erratic young gentlemen much as we fancy he would with members, in his preface to the sentence he was about to pass upon them.

##

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE take at Ascot Grand Stand exceeded £9000; but the meeting has produced a good deal of soreness among betting men by the decisions in the case of Tomato and Knowsley. In the former the committee of the rooms seem to have delegated their authority to two gentlemen, who ignored the rule, that bets strictly follow the stakes, except when the winning horse is disqualified owing to a default in making stakes; and in the latter, which is the question of Panama v. Ely, 4 lb. too little, no objection was made by Lord Coventry during the meeting. Still, as the horse carried only 9 st. 5 lb., whereas the weight on the card was 8 st. 9 lb., he comes under the exception "false description," which extends the time of objection to a year. On the Tomato case the rule is on flat reflection, and, fortified by the opinions of Admiral Rous and Mr. Greville, they have signed a round robin to the committee of the rooms, requesting that they will reconsider the decision. After the fatal experiment of last year, the authorities are not likely to try it again, and the meeting has a second Ascot meeting, and they are at their wits' end to think what to race. Any can invent for Derby. The meeting has improved the St. Leger prospects by bringing out Avenger, who bids fair to be a very awkward customer. The Ranger; and the King of the Vale chances become mistier than ever, there seems at least a starter in Gladstone. South stable tested Lady Peel, or they have a slow set of hoofs; but Queen Bertha went away from him in a canter over the New Mile, and left him nothing but the ten per cents. The Queen is a very spirited affair, and it seemed odd that the looming dead heat which was just denied us in the Derby and the Oaks should come off at last. Tim Whiffler's owner would have gladly struck him out on Wednesday if "the upper ten" had not backed him so heavily for the Prince of Wales's Stakes. Nothing but Rogers's pig-root would have done it, and Tim's owner, Mr. Hodgkinson, is riding saved him the first time, and taking it along with Challoner's mount, the King of the Vale chances became mistier than ever, there seems at least a starter in Gladstone. South stable tested Lady Peel, or they have a slow set of hoofs; but Queen Bertha went away from him in a canter over the New Mile, and left him nothing but the ten per cents. The Queen is a very spirited affair, and it seemed odd that the looming dead heat which was just denied us in the Derby and the Oaks should come off at last. Tim Whiffler's owner would have gladly struck him out on Wednesday if "the upper ten" had not backed him so heavily for the Prince of Wales's Stakes. Nothing but Rogers's pig-root would have done it, and Tim's owner, Mr. Hodgkinson, is riding saved him the first time, and taking it along with Challoner's mount, the Ascot Cup. Tim is a good-looking horse, and has made three more magnificently-ridden races. With no Eleanor to help him, Tim can be improved; but the secret of his Ascot success had only to follow and quit him when he tilted. Backstone is amazingly improved, and we trust that Cardigan, who is now at Buckenham at even weights. Beverley Bilbury Club and Stockbridge are the scenes for next week. The Cambridgeshire and Cesarewitch are in the Biennial; and Flatterer, Asteroid, Buckstone, Tim Whiffler, and The Marquis in the Steward's Plate at the latter meeting.

When men mean to have a lot it makes very little matter whether it is rain or sunshine, and hence Mr. Blenkiron had a good day's work on Saturday, and realised an average of 103 gs. for 41. Two or three stood him heavily, and some of the commissions were executed so badly as that matters were quite balanced. Mr. Jackson, looking after the Weatherbits, was the life of the sale, and he bore off the top bid, Bercher to Cadmus, for 620 gs. Mr. Rowland attended for Lord Stamford, and made two or three dropping bids; but when the Ratsplan Filly entered the ring there was that in Mr. Rowland's eye as fat, and his relentless "and ten" bore down everything before it. The Hilton Park Weatherbits were not quite the best Weatherbits as true as possible to the old brown type. The dam of the latter was one of the Bagley brood mares, which Mr. Blenkiron purchased in a lot last year. Three of the Weatherbits averaged 140 gs., three of the Maryanes 347 gs., and three of the Hobbie Nobbies 257 gs. Mr. Bagley sold but did not buy anything. The sale was brought out in perfect condition, and not "butter-fat," as tea many are.

The Worcestershire Chronicle states that the local price at the forthcoming Worcester Royal "for hunters entered for the Hurdle Race, in the opinion of judges, equal to 15 stone with hounds," has closed with 27 entries. This is good hearing, as both in numbers and quality, the hunters were wretchedly represented at the last Royal Show.

The Sporting Magazine for June has, among other, two noticeable articles, "An American Shooting-box," by Linton, and "Rookshooting at Gay Hall;" while Bailey's parades the pen of Lord Fitzhardinge, a well-known name in the great M ea of Melton Mowbray, and nearly as long associated with the Quorn as another brother. "One day more with the Quorn" gives us an excellent account of the Quorn sale.

The forces of Yorkshire match, which suffered nearly as much from unpunctuality as bad weather, was drawn, Yorkshire having 113 to get and an innings to do it in. Slim and Greenwood played splendidly, on behalf of Yorkshire, but E. Stephenson outdrawn them with his 97 innings and the marvellous hitting that is his wicket-keeping, to which Mortlock, Caffyn, and Mr. Dowson were martyrs. Mortlock's 72 was a splendid innings, and so was Griffith's 61. Rest beat Cambridge by 16, thanks to the bowling of Willsher and Bennett, and Goodhew's fine batting. The visitor entering Middlesex on his way to the match might have seen, in a meadow near a yard by the roadside, the tombstone of Alfred Mynn, which, on the second day of the match was removed to the cemetery in the village of Churchyard. Sussex has had a terrible defeat in one innings and 92 runs from M.C.C. and Ground, Wootton and Grundy bowling splendidly, on behalf of Yorkshire, but E. Stephenson outdrawn them with his 97 innings and the marvellous hitting that is to prepare resolutions, memorials, and petitions, to furnish arguments for friends or replies to opponents. All these services, which were indispensable to the planters, were gratuitously rendered, Mr. Bacon never consenting to receive any remuneration, directly or indirectly, or even allowing the society to reimburse his personal expenses incurred in their cause.

THE GREAT INTERNATIONAL HORSERACE AT LONGCHAMPS.—SEE PAGE 645.

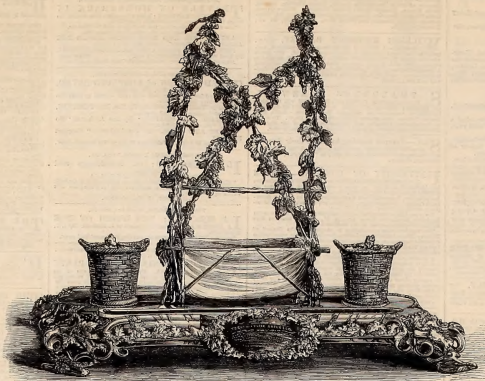
Mr. Bacon is the author of "Plain Facts as to the Excise Duty on Hops," published in 1860. This able pamphlet was more than once quoted as an authority in Parliamentary debates, and received a most favourable notice in the Edinburgh Review of October, 1862.

The cause which Mr. Bacon had so much at heart gradually made way. The Parliamentary campaigns of 1860 and 1861 had been encouraging to the repealers, their ranks had received large accessions, and other associations had been formed upon the model of the original society. They were preparing for a renewal of their efforts, when Mr. Gladstone gracefully anticipated their desires, and himself, on the 3rd of April, 1862, proposed the remission of the detested tax.

Seldom has a testimonial been more fittingly bestowed than on the present occasion. All who have watched the agitation against the hop duties are aware that Mr. Bacon played a most important part in that movement, and those best acquainted with the history of their repeal know that, but for him, the result would not have been brought about.

It may be added that the Earl of Ashburnham, who preceded Lord H. Vane in the office of President of the Royal Association, has also marked his sense of the honorary secretary's services by a handsome testimonial.



TESTIMONIAL PRESENTED TO MR. BACON, OF LEWES.

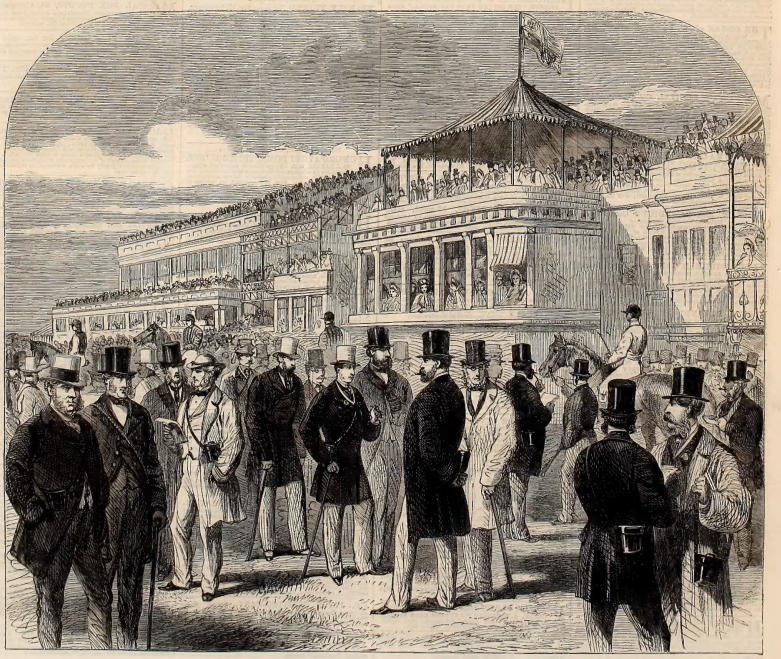
The testimonial was presented to Mr. Bacon by Lord Harry Vane, M.P., the president of the association, at Tunbridge Wells, on the 21st ult. It consists of an ornamental silver inkstand (the work of Messrs. Savory and Co., of Cornhill) and of table plate (supplied by the same firm) to the value of upwards of 100 guineas. The component parts of the inkstand appropriately represent objects connected with hop-picking. The centre is formed by four hop-poles round which turn hop-bines laden with flowers and foliage, as yet untouched by the pickers. Beneath is an open canvas bag, suspended from cleft poles, technically known as a hop-bin, into which the flowers are thrown as fast as they are plucked. Across the bin lies a pole already stripped by the pickers. On each side stands a basket, apparently filled to the brim with hop-plants which have been cut from the poles on which they grew, and are placed near the bin, awaiting the hand that is to gather their flowers and cast them into the bag. These baskets, however, in the present instance, are destined to contain ink-glasses, while the bin is intended to serve as a receptacle for postage-stamps or other small articles required in writing. The massive stand which supports these objects is adorned by a border of exquisite workmanship, representing hop leaves and flowers. In front is a shield bearing the following inscription:—

Presented, with other plate, by Lord Harry Vane, M.P., the President, and other members of the Association for Promoting the Repeal of the Excise Duties on Hops, to George Peter Bacon, Esq., of Lewes, as a slight token of their high appreciation of his constant, arduous, and most valuable services as honorary secretary of that association, which was formed in the year 1858, and dissolved on the attainment of its object by the repeal of the duties on hops in the year 1862.

Every article of the table-plate (which is of a substantial and handsome description) is appropriately engraved with a wreath of hops.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES AT ASCOT.

THE ASCOT Cup Day of 1863 will long be remembered by the sporting and pleasure-loving world. It was noticeable, as our readers will recollect, for two remarkable events—the exciting dead heat between Buckstone and Tim Whiffler for the "Gold Cup," and the first visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Ascot. Their Royal Highnesses, accompanied by the Duke of Cambridge, appeared on the ground just before the first race was run, and, passing to the stand amid an enthusiastic welcome from the large and fashionable company assembled on the heath, entered with interest and spirit into the amusements of the day.



THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES AT ASCOT RACES.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTHS.

On the 6th inst., at Acton Hall, Bishop, the wife of Henry Corbett, Esq., of a son.

On the 19th of April, at Kallang Dale, Singapore, the wife of F. H. Gottlieb, Esq., of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On Thursday, April 2, at St. John's Cathedral, Hong-Kong, by the Rev. J. J. Irwin, Robert, youngest son of the late Joseph Jackman, Esq., of St. Spring-gardens, London, to Emma, eldest daughter of William Rathbone, Esq., Greenbank, Liverpool, and granddaughter of the late Upper Thames-street, London.

DEATHS.

On the 28th ult., at Westgate Warrens, Wentnor-land, Frederick William Whitehead, Esq., aged 32.

On the 9th inst., at Elm House, Lower Clapton, after a few hours' illness, Richard Geoffrey, Esq., in his 63rd year, deeply and decorously regretted.

On the 11th inst., at Goudurch Rectory, Cumberland, Helen, widow of the Rev. B. Cheese, B.D., Rector of Teasford, Essex, and Rural Dean, in her 79th year.

On the 10th inst., at No. 1, Upper Brunswick-place, Brighton, after many months of intense suffering, Charlotte Rose, for more than fifty years the much-loved wife of Charles Harris, surgeon, formerly of Fenchurch-street, and Guildford-street, Russell-square, London, in the 68th year of her age.

W. P. FRITH, R.A.—PICTURE of "THE RAILWAY STATION." The celebrated Picture is NOW ON VIEW, at the PRAED'S FINE-ART GALLERY, 11, Haymarket, from Ten till Five. Admission, by a Descriptive Pam-phlet, by Tom Taylor, Esq., 1s.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS. Pall-mall East.—The FORTY-THIRD EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN. Admission, 1s. Gallery, 3d. Pall-mall opposite Marlborough-house. JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

RAPHAEL.—THE HOLY FAMILY, by Raphael, painted for Francis I., now in the Louvre at Paris, and the Picture which Sir Joshua Reynolds proved to express his admiration of it, is now ON VIEW daily, at 191, Piccadilly, opposite Bond-street.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED, with MR. JOHN PARRY, in their Gigantic COTTAGE, EVERY EVENING at Eight, and MORNING PERFORMANCES every Saturday at Three. Stalls, 3s.; Second Seats, 2s.; Admission, 1s. Stalls may be had at all the Music Warehouses, and at the Gallery.

EGYPTIAN HALL.—The Canoe, the Rifle, and the Gun.—MR. A. E. KNIGHT'S NEW ENTERTAINMENT, entitled THE WILDERNESS, Scenes and Sketches in the Trail of a Trapper and Hunter, illustrated by Diorama, Panorama, and Cosmorama, and Illustrations in Sound, Vocalism, Instrumentalism, and Pantomime. Every Evening, at Eight o'clock, and Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday Afternoons, at Three o'clock. Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Stalls may be had at all the Music Warehouses, and at the Egyptian Hall. Manager, Mr. Alfred Bunn.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—M. GEORGE PERFIER'S ORCHESTRAL and CHORAL CONCERT, on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 15, under distinguished patronage. Vocalists—Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, Miss Palmer, Mr. Wilbye Cooper, and Mr. Weiss. Instrumentalists—M. Sainton, M. Regondi, M. Rosenhain, who will introduce his new Quartett for Four Violoncellos and Orchestra, adapted by the Concentrateur of Paris, and other Novelties. Conductors—Mr. Benedict and Mr. Alfred Mellon. Tickets, 10s. 6d., 21s., and 42s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Reserved Seats, 7s. 6d. Area, 5s. Gallery, 2s. 6d. Stalls and Orchestra Stalls may be had at Mr. Austin's, 28, Piccadilly; and Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street. Doors open at Seven. Commence at Eight.

MR. KUHE'S RECITAL OF CLASSICAL and MODERN PIANOFORTE MUSIC, at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on THURSDAY EVENING, the 18th inst., at Eight o'clock. Vocalists—Mesdames Lemmens-Sherrington, Sainton-Dolby, and Mary Scaramanga. Violoncello—Mr. Pezzi. Reserved Seats, 10s. 6d. Unless such; Family Tickets (Reserved Seats), to admit Three, One Guinea. Tickets to be had of Mr. Kuhe, 9, Wimpole-street; of Mr. York-place, Portman-square, W., and of all the principal Music-sellers.

MR. BEACON'S THIRD and LAST SERIES of PIANOFORTE RECITALS will take place on FRIDAY, JUNE 19, at 3, Grosvenor-street (by permission of Messrs. Collard), at Three o'clock. Vocalists—Miss Dolby, Mr. Sims Reeves and Signor Gardoni. Violoncello—M. Paque. Instrumentalist—M. Sainton. Harp Fantasy, Mr. H. Weist. Hiraoka. Mr. Deacon. Tickets, Reserved Seats, 10s. 6d. each; Admission, 5s. Tickets and Programmes to be had of Mr. B. W. Olivier, 10, Old Bond-street; or of Mr. Deacon, 21, Wellington-street, Strand.

JUNE 22, MR. BENEDICT'S CONCERT, Before the lamentable disappearance of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, By command of Their Majesties, and of the Royal Family, at the ST. JAMES'S HALL, on the occasion of Mr. Benedict's Jubilee. The full Programme is now ready. Early application is solicited for the new remaining Stalls and Reserved Seats at the Librarians, and of Mr. Benedict, 1, Manchester-square, W.

HERR WILHELM JANZ begs to announce that the ANNUAL MORNING CONCERT will take place under the distinguished patronage of their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary, at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on FRIDAY, JUNE 26. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Reserved Seats, 5s.; to be obtained of Herr Wilhelm Janz, 53, Queen Anne-street, Cavendish-square, W.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, REGENT'S PARK.—The GREAT EXHIBITION of PLANTS, FLOWERS, and FRUIT THIS SEASON will take place on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, and not to be obtained at the Garden by Members or Fellows of the Society, price 1s. or on the day of exhibition, 7s. 6d. each. The Gardens will be open at Two.

THE ROYAL MILITARY BAND will attend.

MR. KENNEDY'S SONGS of SCOTLAND, 1st STORE-STREET MUSIC HALL, EVERY MONDAY at EIGHT, assisted by the Land-sister Quartette. "Sweet Scotland." "Bonnie Dundee." "Maitland Willie." "Land o' Green-ide." "Duncan Gray." "Auld Robin Gray." "Auld Lang Syne," &c. Stalls, 3s.; Admission, 1s. Doors open at Seven.

MDME. LIND-GOLDSCHMIDT has most kindly consented to SING at Signor and Mdme. F. LABLACHE'S GRAND MUSICALE, at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on MONDAY, JUNE 29. Mdlle. Parepa, Herr Reichardt, Mr. Sims Reeves, and Signor Gardoni will also sing. The Concerted Music of the greatest masters will be executed. Conductors, Signor Arditi, Signor and Signor Le Cat. Stalls, 1 guinea; Unreserved Seats, 10s. 6d. Tickets, at the principal Libraries and Music-sellers; and Signor F. Lablache, 149, Albany-street, N.W.; and of Mr. Flori, at the Hanover-square Rooms, where the doors of the same are open at Eight.

MDME. LIND-GOLDSCHMIDT. SACRED CANTATA.—ST. JAMES'S HALL, on GOOD FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 3.—Mr. MITCHELL begs to announce that a second performance of Handel's Cantata, "ALEXANDER'S FEAST," will take place at ST. JAMES'S HALL, on GOOD FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 3, when Mdme. Lind-Goldschmidt will sing, with additional vocal and instrumental performers. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Unreserved Seats, 5s. Tickets to be had of Mr. Mitchell, 33, Old Bond-street, W.; and of Mr. Flori, at the Hanover-square Rooms, where the doors of the same are open at Seven.

A FTOMMAS'S BARDIC FESTIVAL.—TUESDAY NEXT, JUNE 16, at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS.—NATIONAL MELODIES. Part I. Instrumental; Concerto of Harp; Demoiselle Parizo, Leider Vincing, Messers. Thomas, Lewis, Evans, Jones, Griffiths, Williams, Rees, Lewis Lewis Thomas, Harrison, Engel Gunz, Hargitt, Archer, &c. Conductors—Messrs. Benedict and Frank Mori. Sofa Stalls 10s. 6d.; Tickets, 5s. and 3s.

WILLIAM KENNEDY BAYLEY, Esq., deceased.—A WILL of the above-named gentleman, supposed to have been executed in the month of April, 1862, who ran attend INFORMATION relative to such will is requested to be communicated to Messrs. Bayley, Sons, and Bayley, 17, Basinghall-street, and any information which may lead to the recovery will be REWARDED.

S. THALBERG'S FAREWELL SOIREES.—S. THALBERG'S FAREWELL MATINEE will take place at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on SATURDAY, JUNE 20, at Three o'clock precisely. Vocalists—Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, Miss Palmer, Mr. Wilbye Cooper, and Signor Gardoni. Violoncello—Signor Piatti. Harp—M. Parish-Alvars. Pianoforte—S. Thalberg. Conductors—Messrs. Benedict and Alfred Mellon. Tickets, 21s., 10s. 6d., and 5s. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Reserved Seats, 7s. 6d. Area, 5s. Gallery, 2s. 6d. Stalls and Orchestra Stalls may be had at Mr. Austin's, 28, Piccadilly; and Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street. Doors open at Seven. Commence at Eight.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.—NOTICE is hereby given that the next EXAMINATION for CERTIFICATES of MATRICULATION in this University will commence on TUESDAY, the 30th June, at Ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the following places:—London, University College; Oxford, Clarendon Laboratory; Cambridge, Queens' College, Liverpool, Mr. Rathbone's College, Manchester, Queen's College, Liverpool, and Mr. Rathbone's College, Manchester.

Every candidate is required to transmit his certificate of age to the Registrar of the University, at Burlington House, on or before the 20th day of June, at the latest.

The matriculation examination is accepted by the Council of Military Education as a qualification for admission to the Royal Military Academy imposed as conditions for admission to the Royal Military College. Candidates for matriculation are required to pass a satisfactory examination in Arithmetic, Algebra, Euclid, and Latin, and by the regulations of the Medical Council it is hence passed some one, at least, of the following examinations:—Greek, French, German, or Natural Philosophy, and Chemistry, Veterinary Science, Botany, Zoology, Physiology, and Civil Engineering.

Further information may be obtained on application at the University, three consecutive days after the publication of the examination, between the hours of Ten and Four, when copies of the regulations and forms for matriculation, and for the several examinations, may be had, price 6d. each.

By order of the Senate,

WILLIAM S. CARPENTER, Registrar.

June 5, 1863.

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES of the CHEST, Brompton.—The Governors and voluntary contributors intended and continuous support is required to meet the current expenditure of the Hospital.

PHILIP ROSE, Hon. Sec. HENRY DOBSON Sec.

DIOPTOSCOPE.—The Proprietors of the DIOPTOSCOPE PRESENTS the Spectacles of H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES to the LONDON STEREOSCOPIC and PHOTOGRAPHIC COMPANY, 54, Cheapside, and 110, Regent-st.

THE NEW PORTRAITS of T.R.H. the PRINCE and PRINCESS.—STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY.

THE SET OF 15 LARGE VIEWS OF EDINBURGH.—STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY.

THE SET of 15 STEREOGRAPHS of SANDRINGHAM, some of the views containing portraits of the Prince and Princess of Wales.—STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY, 54, Cheapside; and 110, Regent-st.

PHOTOGRAPHS of DESANGE'S'S GRAND FESTIVE BALL IN HONOUR OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.—Post-free, 13 stamps; cabinet size, 2s. 6d.; portfolio size, 5s. STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY, 54, Cheapside; and 110, Regent-st.

THE NEW CARTES DE VISITE of the PRINCE and PRINCESS of WALES, and the Seven Princes Years of Sovereignty, on at 12, 42 3s. STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY, 54, Cheapside; and 110, Regent-street. Sent free by post to George Jean Nottage, Managing Partner, 54, Cheapside; and 110, Regent-street.

CARTES DE VISITE. 12 for 2s. 6d. Portraits taken daily, from Ten till Dusk, at the Studio of the London Photographic Copying Institution, 67, Tottenham-court-road. Specimens may be seen, and Lists of Prices (with a copy of the original, which will be returned. Specimens forwarded to any address in the country on receipt of Two Postage-stamps.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE. 1.—The established office of authority in England for furnishing Arms, Crests, Pedigrees, Mottoes, Seals, Dies, Engravings, Books of Reference, &c. by command of Her Majesty and Royal Family.

FOR FAMILY ARMS—the LINCOLN'S INN HERALDIC OFFICE—and Name and County. Arms Painted, Pedigrees Finished, Seals, Dies, Engraved, Books of Pedigrees of Families, 2s.—H. SALT, Gr. Portcullis, Lincoln's-inn.

THE HERALDIC OFFICE, 2.—Engraving by the Laws of Garter King-at-Arms. Crests Engraved on Rings, Seals, Dies, Plate, Steel, Brass, and Wax Engraving for Crests, 7s.6d.; Book-Plate, Arms and Crest, with Name, 10s.

SIGNET CREST RINGS, 18-carat, Hall-marked, Engraved, 15s. Arms Painted on Vellum, Card-board, &c. Dies large for Arms, Crest, and Motto, 25s 10s.—H. SALT, Heraldic Engraver, 2, Lincoln's-inn Gateway, Chancery-lane.

FAMILY ARMS.—All Persons desirous of ascertaining their Family Arms should forward their name and address to CULLETON'S HERALDRY LIBRARY. No fee. Arms, Crests, and Mottoes, with heraldic description, beautifully painted on vellum, 5s. Arms found, Sketched, and Painted for search at St. Martin's-hall, London, W.C.

YOUR ARMS, CREST, MONOGRAM, or Address Stamped on Paper, Envelopes, Cards, or Seals, by CULLETON, Engraver of Seals, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), London, W.C.

YOUR ARMS, CREST, MONOGRAM, or Address Stamped in Silver with Arms, Crest, or Monogram. 50 Cards by any of these processes, 4s. 6d. Arms Painted and Sketched for search on fee, all examples, 10s. 6d. carriage paid. A Catalogue engraved in Gold, Silver, and Colours, 1s. 6d. CULLETON, Heraldic Artist, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), London, W.C.

FAMILY ARMS Engraved on Seals, Rings, and Steel Dies in artistic style. Crest on Seals, 7s. 6d.; gold rings, 15s. Illuminated Pedigrees, Arms painted, 5s. Book-plate, with Arms, 10s. 6d. Dies for Arms, Crest, and Motto, 25s. The Manual of Heraldry, 350 Engravings, 3s. 6d. Arms found, 3s. 6d. Heraldic Office, 23, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, W.C., by appointment. 23, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

MARK YOUR LINEN with CULLETON'S PATENT ELECTRO-PLATE. CULLETON'S is the only invention the difficulty of writing on linen with the pen is entirely obviated. Initials, 1s.; Name, 2s.; Crest, 3s. Set of Moveable Numbers, 1s. 6d. Set of Moveable Letters, 5s. Any one can use them.—T. CULLETON, Patentee, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

ELEGANT PRESENTS. GOLD SHIPPING CASES, 21s. each. Gold Pencil Cases, 10s. 6d. each. Gold Pens, 10s. 6d. each. Elegant and Economical Gold Pens, 10s. 6d. each. Gold Pens and Pencil Cases, 10s. 6d. each. Gold Pens and Pencil Cases, 10s. 6d. each. Gold Pens and Pencil Cases

PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Manufacturing Silversmiths, 11 and 12, Cornhill, London, E.C., and 14, Regent-street, W., have always on hand a large STOCK of Fiddle pattern, 7s. 6d. per ounce; Queen's pattern, 7s. 6d. per ounce. Many other patterns recently finished, plain or highly ornamented.

	£ s. d.		£ s. d.
Fiddle Pattern. Ox	0 6 6	Queen's Pattern. Ox	0 7 6
12 Table Spoons	1 2 0	12 Table Spoons	1 7 0
12 Dessert Ditto	0 16 0	12 Dessert Ditto	1 0 0
12 Tea Ditto	0 11 0	12 Tea Ditto	0 15 0
12 Dessert Ditto	0 12 0	12 Dessert Ditto	0 16 0
1 Gravy Spoon	0 7 0	1 Gravy Spoon	0 9 0
1 Sauce Ditto	0 3 6	1 Soup Ladle	0 4 6
4 Sauce Ditto	0 10 0	4 Sauce Ditto	0 14 0
1 Salt Spoon (gilt)	0 1 0	1 Salt Spoon (gilt)	0 1 6
1 Fish Slice (pierced)	0 3 0	1 Fish Slice (pierced)	0 3 6
1 Pair Sugars	0 2 0	1 Pair Sugars	0 2 6
1 Pair Fiddle Pattern Ditto	0 2 0	1 Pair Queen's Pattern Ditto	0 2 6

A pamphlet is published, with 300 Engravings, as a guide to the Stock in the Showrooms. It contains the weight and price of Dish covers, forks, tea and coffee services and table pieces, with their sizes and dimensions, and also of every article in the trade. It has been carefully compiled from actual sales, and every wholesale, retail, and jewellery. Gratis on application, and post-free to any part of the United Kingdom.

SLACKS' SILVER ELECTRO-PLATE is a combination of new silver and Nickel. Manufactured solely by S. and J. Slack. It has stood twenty years test, and will retain its colour and quality for any length of time. Fiddle Pattern, Thread Pattern, Old Engraved Pattern, Antique Pattern, All to match. Strong Fiddle Pattern Table Forks or Spoons, per dozen ..... 18s.
Ditto Tea and Coffee Set, 3 pieces ..... 3l. 10s.
Ditto Cruet Frame, 5 bottles ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Bottle Stand ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Baking Dish, Silver Plated on Nickel ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Dish Cover ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Corner Dish ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Liqueur Frame ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Cake Basket ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Toast Rack ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Cheese Scoop ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Knife Rest ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Knife Case ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Knife Rest and Plate ..... 1l. 5s.
Ditto Knife Rest and Pair of Plates

NEW MUSIC.

FAUST.—GOUNOD'S Celebrated OPERA, now in rehearsal at both the Italian Opera—The success of this work at the Paris Grand Opéra stamps abroad the best opera extant. Pianoforte and Vocal Arrangements, with Italian Airs, Quadrilles, Waltzes, &c., now ready. The opera complete, with Italian or French words, price 18s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DENMARK QUADRILLE. Dedicated, by Special Permission, to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Composed and Arranged for the Pianoforte by CHARLES COOTE. Illustrated with a Photograph of H.R.H. the Princess Alexandra. Price 4s.; Duet 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CASSIDY (Composer of the Burlesque Galop). Just published in the "Harum Scarum" is the best song ever published. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S WAVING LILY BELLS. Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA VOIX CELESTE. Reverie for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA BELLE MARIETTE. Valse Brillante for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA PRIÈRE D'UNE MÈRE. Reverie pour Piano. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S "THE ANGELS' HARP." Rhapsodie for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S ROYAL WEDDING MARCH, for the Pianoforte, splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NATIONAL MELODIES FOR THE PIANOFORTE.
No. 1. "The March of the Men of Harlech." Price 3s.
"Ever May Ant." Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S REMEMBRANCE. Grand Fantasia on Airs from Rossini's favourite Opera, for the Pianoforte, in popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASANIELLO.—Just published, a Grand Pictorial for the Pianoforte on the Airs from the charming Opera.
CHAPPELL and CO. 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on Favourite Melodies from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the above popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NAVA'S DANISH NATIONAL SONG and AIRS. Arranged for the Pianoforte, beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s. 6d.; Duet, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIRNLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular Song arranged as a very pleasing drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s. 6d., post-free.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIRNLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. This popular Ballad arranged as an easy and effective drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIRNLEY RICHARDS' GOD SAVE THE QUEEN. "As a drawing-room piece, we are disposed to think that Mr. Brinley Richards is one of Mr. Mudie's most striking achievements."—Review. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW and IMPORTANT WORK for the PIANOFORTE. The Second Edition of the Pianoforte Arrangements of the Overtures to the Operas of WEBER, edited and revised by Dr. BENEDICT. Bound in limp cloth and gilt. Price 8s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S MONTHLY SELECTION for the SMALL PIANOFORTE, consisting entirely of Original Compositions, Dances, Arrangements, &c., by Mr. BENEDICT. Published monthly, price 1s. each. Subscription for 12 months, 12s. Prospectus and Specimen Number sent free by post on application.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SACRED WORK FOR THE PIANOFORTE.—Twenty-five FULL or CHORUSES VOLUNTARIES, for the Harmonium, selected from the works of Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Spohr, and Chopin, by Dr. BENEDICT, Price 5s., bound in cloth.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIMBAULT'S 100 PSALM and HYMN TUNES for HARMONIUM, selected from the most eminent Church Composers. Price 4s.; in cloth, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIMBAULT'S 200 CHANTS by the best Church Composers, ancient and modern, selected from the works of the various Cathedrals, and arranged expressly for the Harmonium. Price 4s.; in cloth, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIMBAULT'S 50 SHORT VOLUNTARIES for the HARMONIUM, expressly suited to small Church and Chapels. Price, in cloth, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HARVEST HOME, BY G. B. ALLEN.

MY OWN DEAR NATIVE FIELDS. Cantata by Song, from the admired Cantata. Price 3s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

HARVEST HOME VALSE. By Dr. GOOCH. Illustrated. Price 4s. Played by Coote's Band at the banks.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

HARVEST HOME QUADRILLE By COOTE. Illustrated. Price 4s. Played by Coote's Band at the banks.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

KUHE'S HARVEST HOME. Transcription for the Piano of Airs from this successful Cantata. Price 4s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

KUHE'S SLUMBER, MINE OWN. Transcription for the Piano of the popular Song. Price 3s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

VIRGINIA GABRIELLE "DREAMLAND."

SLUMBER, MINE OWN. This popular Song may be had in Key of E flat. Price 3s.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MDME. OURYS "PURITANI!" Fantasia for the Violin, as played by the Composer at the Monday Popular Concerts. Price 4s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

"THE CAPTIVITY."

MARCH OF THE MEDES AND PERSIANS. From Sir Julius Benedict's Cantata, transcribed for the Piano by RUDOLPH NORDMANN. Price 4s. net.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE POPULAR CONTRALTO SONG.

A WILD, WET NIGHT. Composed by SIGNOR CAMPANA. Price 3s.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 39, Great Marlborough-st., W.

NEW SONG.—"THE SEA IS OUR HOME." Composed by HENRY RUSSELL. Price 3s. 6d. (Sent at half-price). A new song of Mr. Russell's is sure to be one of his favourite Songs "The Ashes" The melody and words are very effective.—DUFF and HODGSON, 32, Oxford-street.

NEW VALSE.—THE ANGLO-DANISH VALSE. By S. G. HIME. Solo or Duet. Price 4s. (Sent at half-price). The Valse, so universally admired, may be had as a Solo or Duet for Pianoforte, and is Parts for Septet or full Orchestra.—DUFF and HODGSON, 32, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG. BIRD OF THE WILDERNESS. Composed by EDWARD LAND; from Balfe's OPERETTA. Price 3s. 6d. (Sent at half-price). Sung by the unrivalled Serenaders in the Entertainment of the Songs of Scotland.—DUFF and HODGSON 32 Oxford-street.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD'S MUSIC CIRCULATING LIBRARY for Town and Country. Terms—Two, Three, and Four Guineas per Annum.

HALF-PRICE ALL FULL-PRICED MUSIC sent post-free on half the marked value by CRAMER, BEALE, WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE' LAPI. The Overture arranged by EDWARD F. RIMBAULT. Solo, 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE' LAPI. The Book of the Words, containing all the Songs, 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE' LAPI. Pastorale Bilgnole, par W. KUHE, 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE' LAPI. Graziosita (charming Redowa). "Oh, sposina." Arranged by R. RICHARDS.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE' LAPI. Mattia Torbellino popular Air, "La bella mia." Arranged by RICHARDS. Price 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE' LAPI. Lauretta Mazzanta, A. MANNS. 3s. Performed at the Crystal Palace.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE' LAPI. Salvaggia Valzer. By A. MANNS. 4s. Performed at Crystal Palace.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE' LAPI. All the Admired Songs, in the Opera, including "Oh, sposina," "La bella mia," "Mattia Torbellino," "Il core sperduto," are now ready.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

RÊNÉ FAVARGER.

Au Feu. Galop brillant	.. .. ..	4s. 6d.
Bouquet de Fleurs non Fanées	.. .. ..	4s. 6d.
Dernière Pensée	.. .. ..	3s. 6d.
Orbanella. Valse	.. .. ..	3s. 6d.
Yvonne. Polka Mazurka	.. .. ..	3s. 6d.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

FARFALLETTA.—Signor ARDITI'S New Waltz. Solo or Duet. Illustrated in Colours. Post-free, 24 stamps. This is also introduced in the new ballet of "Farfalletta," performed nightly at the Alhambra Theatre, arranged for the Pianoforte.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

CIRO PINSUTI.

ROSINA MARGHERITA. Sung by Mdme. Dilda in "The Barber of Seville." Arranged for the Pianoforte. 3s.—CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ENGLISH SONGS.

A Day Dream	3s. 0d.
Alice Lorraine. Sung by Mr. Santley	3s. 0d.
Bird of the Wilderness. Sung by Mr. Lawler	3s. 0d.
I gather a posy each day	3s. 0d.
Johnny Doyle	3s. 0d.
Johnny Nelly Wading	3s. 0d.
Mary Morrison	3s. 0d.
Mother's evening prayer	3s. 0d.
She is a maiden of artless grace	3s. 0d.
Sparkling wine	3s. 0d.
Threaded of dew	3s. 0d.
Wanderer's Song	3s. 0d.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ITALIAN, &c., SONGS.

All'ombra amici. Medaglia	4s. 0d.
Ave Maria (English words by G.)	3s. 0d.
Lilina)	3s. 0d.
Bird's song to Giselda	3s. 0d.
Il Bacio. Valse. Arditi	4s. 0d.
Il Farfallone amoroso. Sung by Mdme. Alboni	3s. 0d.
Il Mio Rimorso. Sung by Mdme. Alboni	3s. 0d.
Non vengo mattin come by Mdme. Bellini	3s. 0d.
Non vengo mattin come by Mdme. Sinico	3s. 0d.
Ricordanza. Sung by Mdme. Alboni	3s. 0d.
Serenata. Sung by Mdme. Alboni	3s. 0d.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

MISS VIRGINIA GABRIEL.

Lady Mabel. Song	3s.
Sunset of the Harp. Song	3s.
If he'd but speak to me. Song	3s.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

G. GRETTON'S PIANOFORTE WORKS, 3s. each, Bella Capricciosa, Op. 30; Fairy Revels, Op. 31, No. 1; Fairy Dance, Op. 31, No. 2; Fairy Fingers, Op. 31, No. 3; Fairy Frolic, Op. 31, No. 4.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

NOTICE.—HALF-PRICE.—All Music, and Music Books, Second-hand, at half-price, post-paid-free for postage-stamps or Post Office order.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

ANOTHER GREAT SUCCESS.

COOTE'S ROULETTE GALOP. Price 3s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S ECLOGNE QUADRILLES. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 4s. Solo or Duet. Played nightly at the ecloghne with immense success.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

INTRODUCED AT THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

COOTE'S PRINCESS ALEXANDRA VALSE. Price 4s. Illustrated with a splendid Portrait in Colours, engraved by EDMUND EVANS, of the Princess.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

The Latest Excitement.

COOTE'S FAIRY VISIONS. Illustrated. Price 4s., Solo or Duet. One of the most beautiful Waltzes for dancing and dreamers.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-st.

THE LIST OF COOTE'S POPULAR DANCES.

COOTE'S CURE LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Pirates of Leven" "My Pretty Page" "Is this a dream?" "Ever of thee" "Sweet Home" "Minnie" "Last Rose of Summer" "Auld Robin Gray" "Cherry Ripe" &c. Always encored.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S VILLAGE BELLS POLKA. Price 4s. Solo or Duet. Illustrated in Colours. Coote's great popularity the acclaimed "Cure Lancers," by the same Composer.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Continued Success.

TINNEY'S SONGS OF THE WOOD VALSE. Price 4s. Solo or Duet. Played by the Bands in the United Kingdom.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COME WHERE THE MOONBEAMS LINGER. Illustrated. Price 3s. Sung nightly.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW BALLAD.

SIGHING FOR HOME. By F. BUCKLEY. Price 3s. 6d. Is exceedingly pretty.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SUNG BY MADDLLE. ALVARO ERDEMANDEZ.

I WAIT TO HEAR THE SWEET GOOD-NIGHT. Illustrated. Price 3s. Sung by Miss Sedi.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

AN EXQUISITE MORCEAU.

KUHE'S SILVER MOONBEAMS. Price 3s. 6d. The most favourite piece by this celebrated Composer.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

ENGLISH CONCERTINAS, by LACHENAL, Full Compass, with all the latest Improvements, warranted for its Climates, and to keep well in Tune, from Two guineas to Twenty guineas each.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

THE SEASIDE MUSIC BOOK, &c. A Collection of new Pianoforte and Vocal Music, especially recommended to Tourists and Travellers, as containing in a small space a large amount of the most popular music of the present month. In neat upright volume, large print and, beautifully illustrated, price 2s. 6d.

Look sweet dearie.—Smart.	The Talisman.—Rimbault.
Mabel's Polka.—Godfrey.	Thine Alone.—Smart.
Marguerite Waltz.—Coote.	Thorold Friar.—Dumas.
Morgan Quadrille.	Tinney Galop.—Wagner.

BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE AMATEUR'S LIBRARY OF PIANOFORTE MUSIC. Price 2s. 6d. Each Volume, full music size, handsomely bound in cloth, containing not less than 64 pp. of New and Popular Music.
1. Challoner's Art of Singing applied to the Piano. With introduction. 2s. 6d.
2. Rubini's Six Transcriptions of Schubert's Melodies. 2s. 6d.
3. Kuhe's Six Transcriptions of Schubert's Songs. 2s. 6d.
4. Kuhe's Cherry Duet and Fantasia. 2s. 6d.
5. Challoner's "Home, Sweet Home," "Minnie," and "Last Rose of Summer." 2s. 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

STRAUSSINI'S NEW FAVORITE WALTZES (the complete set, 8s. 6d.) Consolation and solo, 3s.; large music size, 4s. Consolation, Grand Duke, Wiens, Linda, Floating Spirits, Juristen tanze, Gondoliera, Wien Bleibt Wien.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MDME. OURY'S SIX MOST FAVOURITE PIECES in large book music size, each price 3s. 6d., Solo or Duet, viz., Fairy Dance, Parfum des Fleurs, Le Syrin, Chirley's Minstrels Galop, Amie Lucette, Les nids Infidèles.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—FIVE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING. The most popular of all the Author's songs. Exquisite in the simplicity of the melody and words. Price 2s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—THE TWO NESTS. A beautiful little song for the present season. Very popular. Illustrated by the Author. Price 2s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—YOU AND I. Sung with immense success by Madame Sainton. The most popular song of the year. Price 3s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL LIBRARY.—Every Number contains a Complete Novelette; a splendid Coloured Volume of Illustrated Music, and has the use of Twelve Pieces of Music, value 12s., for Two Years. Price 2d. Monthly Volumes, 2s. 6d. Two Guineas have the use of Four Pieces. Full particulars from 200 Holles-street.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FEU DE JOIE. Out of Doors Polka. Illustrated in Colours by the unrivalled Pianoforte Writer. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S UNE PERLE DE VARSOVIE. Polonaise. A perfect specimen of the stylish and thoroughly effective Polish Dance. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S L'OISEAU DE PARADIS. Valse Brillante. Illustrated in Colours. "Elegant, brilliant, refined, and beautiful." Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ROLIENNE, played by the Composer at his pianoforte recitals at the Crystal Palace to repeated encores. Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE JET D'EAU, played by the Composer at his Crystal Palace recitals with unbounded applause. One of the most popular pieces of the day. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FAIRY WHISPERS. Valse. Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MORNING DEWDROPS, played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace Concerts with unbounded applause. Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DEUXIÈME TARANTELLE. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A thoroughly vigorous, dashing, brilliant, and telling Piece for the Concert-room. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE CŒUR. Grand Brilliant Waltz. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A splendid specimen of the Composer's most effective position. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MASANIELLO. A Fantasia on the Airs in the Opera, with the best Airs in Auber's picturesque and splendid opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

KUHE'S PILGRIM OF LOVE. A most successful and happy arrangement of Halvey's beautiful melody. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

BOYTON SMITH'S NEW SONG, BIRD OF THE WILDERNESS. "Mr. Boyton Smith's melody is there beautiful wants this is considered to be unanimously the best. Price 3s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Miss Poole at the Crystal Palace and other concerts with unbounded success. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop. "One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season. Illustrated in colours. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

BOOSEY'S MINIATURE PIANOFORTE, price 17 guineas, in walnut or mahogany.—We have had the honour of submitting to Her Majesty the Queen and to the Royal Family a Pianoforte of the above description, which will enable them to travel with the pianoforte and accompany the singers which has not previously been even attempted. When fixed in the ordinary manner it occupies only 3 ft. by 2 ft. 6 in., and has a most elastic touch with the tone of a full-sized piano. It has all the latest improvements, including the check action, and is perfect in every respect, and will be found invaluable for the use of the professional musician, for the drawing-room, or for the study. Packed in a box for exportation, or the extreme climate.—Boosey and Sons, 24, Holles-street, London.

EVANS'S ENGLISH HARMONIUMS, with Pedals, Knee-swells, and Percussion Stops, are manufactured in every possible variety, at prices from £ 16 16s. upwards.
BOOSEY and CREW, 24, Holles-street, London.

CASE'S ENGLISH CONCERTINAS. The most perfect instruments, which still maintain their unrivalled reputation, possess a rapid speech, a great quality of tone, and are the most effective instruments for accompaniment.
CASE'S, 191, Piccadilly, corner of Bolton-row, Holles-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO. Like any Pianoforte to which the Price Might not be exceeded. Every requisite for the Drawing-room, Study, or Concert-room, in a perfect cottage pianoforte, admirably adapted to small rooms, parish, and village churches, and for the use of Ladies. It is the most cheapest Pianoforte with sheet action and all the latest improvements. Price, in mahogany or walnut, 30 guineas. A second 25 guineas. A great variety may be seen at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ENGLISH MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE.—To amateurs preferring the pure English tone of the Broadwood or Collard quality, the English model will be found the most perfectly satisfactory instrument, at the moderate price of 50 guineas. It is of the usual cottage size, with the check action, and therefore especially adapted to the country, where the more complicated actions are objectionable on many of account of the uncertainty of climate. Also, with full fine, and in every respect, to other instruments as 80 guineas, price 40 guineas; in walnut, 42 guineas.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S NEW TWENTY-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, with sheet action, in handsome, massive, and full-toned cases. This Instrument has been brought to perfection at a large factory, expressly built with a view to making a really superior Instrument at the lowest price possible. It has the very best sheet action, the full compass; is made in a hard and durable manner, to stand any climate, and is recommended as well as a perfectly suitable pianoforte. Messrs. Chappell and Co. strongly recommend this Pianoforte as superior to all respects to second-hand or other cheap instruments. Every advantage is made in purchasing on a good pianoforte, with a perfect touch, will be allowed within three years of the full value of the Pianoforte. Price 20 guineas; handsomely in a part of Prince Albert's colour in plentiful and cheap.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and ERARD. The best Pianofortes of every description, including all the new Patents, Trichord Cottages, Grands, and Semi-Grands, for sale or hire, by the most liberal system. Lists and estimates free.—Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, in 66 guineas (second), in rosewood, with 7½ octaves. This Instrument has Three Strings and the fullest grand compass. It is made in the most substantial manner, and is recommended as a thoroughly good and reliable instrument in every respect. The workmanship is of the best description, and the Pianoforte is guaranteed for the best climates. The full grand touch is elastic, and the repetition very rapid. No Pianoforte has ever been produced at this price which has given such universal satisfaction. Every Instrument is warranted, and if desired exchanged within six months of the purchase.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ERARD'S NEW BOUDOIR GRAND PIANOFORTE, at 130 guineas, having been now brought to perfection, is pronounced by the Profession to be unrivalled.
ERARD'S, 18, Great Marlborough-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES. CHAPPELL and CO. have a large STOCK of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES for SALE, by ERARD, BROADWOOD, CLARE, &c., at very reduced prices. Also, new Instruments of every description.—Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The largest Stock in London, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c., for Sale or Hire.—50, New Bond-street.

THE ROYAL LONDON MODEL and other PIANOFORTES, by Ralph Allison and Sons (successors to the late firm of Allison and Cramer), 6, Great Marlborough-street, W. These Pianofortes are of the highest class of workmanship. Have all the latest improvements, such as registered keyboards, check actions, trichord scales, &c. Every Instrument is warranted each, may be returned within one month if not found perfect.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S DRAWING-ROOM HARMONIUM, the best and most effective prize organ of its class; other varieties at 35 and 45 guineas. Illustrated Catalogues and testimonials from eminent organists sent free.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM by ALEXANDRE, with 2 rows of vibrators, 8 stops, and 1 octave of pedals. This is the most effective and cheapest organ to all other harmoniums. Illustrated Catalogues free.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS, by ALEXANDER, nearly of not quite as good as new, at about one-third of the price.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S PRIZE EXHIBITION MODEL HARMONIUM, for the CHURCH, 13 stops, 2 rows of vibrators, 2 octaves of pedals, 2 knee-swells, 32 feet tone, &c. Illustrated Catalogues free. Organ-masters may be always seen at CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

THE SICCAMA FLUTE.—Old System of Boehm. Messrs. CHAPPELL and CO. have received instruments are now widely manufactured, at prices varying from 5 to 8 guineas. At the EXHIBITION of 1862, 21st, Regent-street, from whom detail price-lists may be obtained.

ANTOINE COURTOIS' CORNETS-à-PISTONS, Manufacturer of Military Instruments to the Emperor of the Kingdom, are made solely for ANTOINE COURTOIS, 103, Rue Richelieu, from whom price-lists may be obtained.

CRAMER'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY offers peculiar advantages for the choice of a first-rate Pianoforte. There is a very large assortment of Cottage and Grand Pianofortes in the largest and finest Grand, and by all the eminent makers, Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c., and also by the new firms, which are rapidly rising into repute, and which are found to be in every way thoroughly reliable. Purchasers from CRAMER and CO. have the full benefit of the new system of exchange, whereby may be reasonably expected from a selection made with competent professional advice.
Cramer and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 46, Moorgate-street.
Every Instrument fully guaranteed.
Pianofortes by all the eminent makers at any railway station in the kingdom without risk to the purchaser, and at a very trifling cost. Lists of second-hand Pianofortes sent free by post.
CRAMER and CO., 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S ENGLISH PIANETTE, 92 guineas. Cramer and Co. manufacture this capital small instrument. It has the compass of seven octaves, trichord scale, check action, solid touch, agreeable tone. The case is of polished oak or walnut, and is 3 ft. 4 in. high, 4 ft. 7 in. wide, and 2 ft. deep. It is a thoroughly good and reliable instrument, and will stand in the hall and warm in the bedroom. In rosewood, 95 guineas; in walnut, 92 guineas.
Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this instrument is made only by CRAMER and CO., and that no genuine is without their name on the fall-board.
CRAMER and CO., 201, Regent-street, and 46, Moorgate-street.

CRAMER'S VICARAGE PIANETTE, in oak or walnut. Price 70 guineas.
207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANETTE, in solid oak or walnut. Price 70 guineas. The Indian Pianofortes par excellence. The packing-case forms a dressing-table for an officer's quarters. Price 70 guineas.—207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S PORTABLE PIANOFORTE, the most compact and correct yet introduced. The keyboard shuts in, and the instrument, when closed, presents the appearance of an elegant sarcophagus. Admirably adapted for stage tableaux, in consequence of its portability and elegant appearance. Price 50 guineas, manufactured to order in 7 days. Hire, 2 guineas per month.
207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S NEW SEMI-GRAND, with trichord scale, check action, repetition touch, Broadwood and Sons, and Collard and Collard, in the most remarkable manner combine the qualities of the Grand and Cottage Pianofortes, and supersede entirely both. 100 guineas in rosewood; 110 guineas in walnut.—207 and 209, Regent-street.

THALBERG'S GRAND PIANOFORTES. The new magnificent Cabinet Grand Pianofortes, by ERARD, of Paris, and erected by M. Thalberg for his London concerts, have been pronounced by the Profession to be the most perfect Grand ever made, and to be the most legitimate Pianoforte ever finished by these illustrious manufacturers. Messrs. ERARD have the honour to announce that they have now completed a Pianoforte on the same principle, but of a diminutive size, and in a charmingly rural grain. The case are in walnut and rosewood, and the price 120 guineas.—18, Great Marlborough-street.

ERARD'S GRAND PIANOFORTES.—Only to be very best and choicest instruments are to be had at ERARD'S, 18, Great Marlborough-street, where a large stock is always kept.

BOUDOIR GRANDS, at 75 and 80 Guineas—Capital instruments, extremely durable, and possessing a very full and sympathetic quality of tone.—CRAMER and CO., 207 and 209, Regent-street, or Moorgate-street.

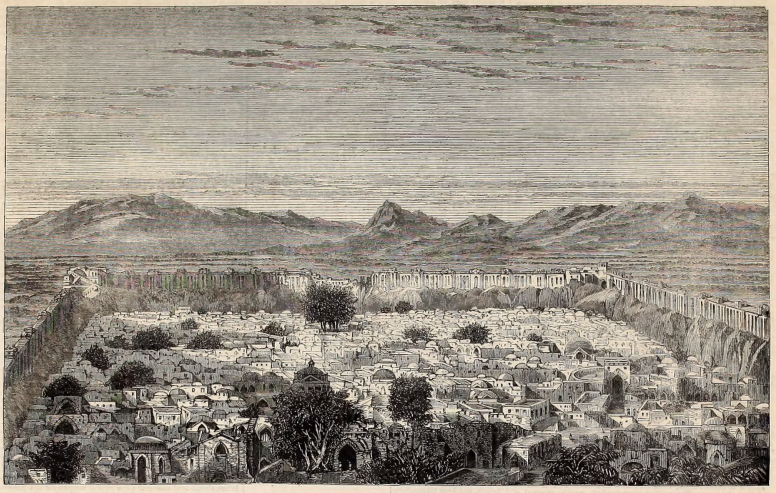
SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES.—A great number of Instruments by Broadwood, Collard, and Erard, and by other eminent makers, for SALE or HIRE.
CRAMER and CO., 207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S NEW ORGAN-HARMONIUM. An Instrument with the most perfect organ tone of any that has yet been produced. Prices from 35 to 60 guineas.
207, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S CONCERTINAS.—PRIZE MEDAL. Prizes, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 12, 15, and 18 guineas.
207, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S CORNETS, manufactured by F. BESSON, the receiver of twenty-three medals. Cramer and Co. are the only firm in London who have the Cornets which have been found to be unanimously approved of by the most eminent professional performers. Lists of prices may be had on application.
207 and 209, Regent-street.

SKETCHES OF HERAT.



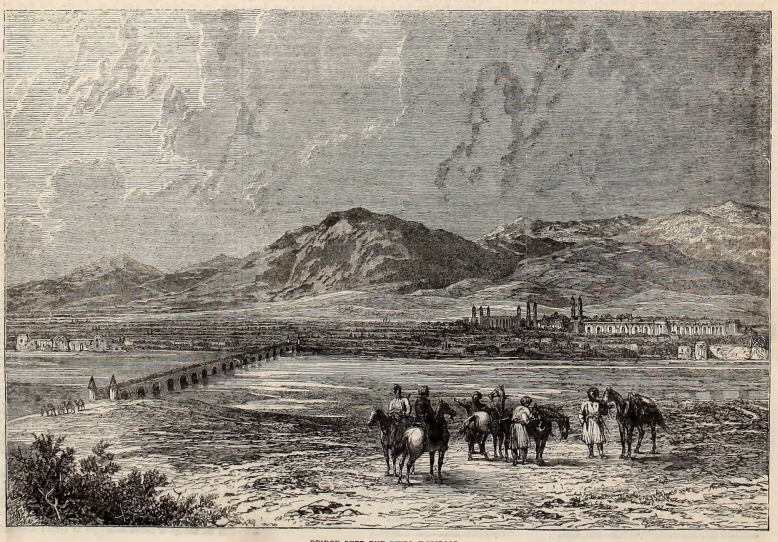
HERAT, FROM THE CITADEL.

(From a Correspondent.)

THE frontier-line between Persia and the Herat territory is by no means clearly defined, but the village of Koosan is generally admitted to be the extreme western point of the dominions of the Herat Ruler. Koosan was formerly a wealthy, thickly-inhabited town, and the ruins of walls in the vicinity, of houses and terraced vineyards, speak to its former thriving state. It has suffered much from the frequent attacks of plundering tribes of Turcomans, who dash across the Persian frontier and carry off to the slave markets of Bokhara every man, woman, and child they have the luck to lay hand on. It was in this town of Koosan that the poor old Suddozye chief, Shah Kamran, was strangled by order of his Prime Minister, Yar Mahomed Khan, who had, just previous to the foul act, usurped supreme power at Herat. From Koosan the road, which eventually enters the Herat valley, turns suddenly towards the south, till it crosses the Herirood.

Once across the river, which here makes a considerable bend to the southward, the traveller, after passing

(Continued on page 648.)



BRIDGE OVER THE RIVER HERIROOD.

BIRDSEYE VIEW OF THE SALMON-BREEDING PONDS AT STORMONTFIELD.

THE Stormontfield ponds, for the rearing of salmon on the artificial plan now coming into general use, are situated on a beautiful shelf on the River Tay, at Colinhaugh, about five miles from Perth. Visitors wishing to see them must hire a vehicle, as they are not at present accessible by railway. The ponds were completed with great rapidity, having been constructed in the short space of a month; and on the 23rd of November, 1853, they were for the first time filled with fecundated salmon eggs. In consequence of the river being only one reception-pond for the young fish it has been found impossible to have a hatching office than once in two years. The reason for this peculiarity is obvious—the transfer by ova cannot be made from the home ponds discovered by the older occupants of the pond. In every suite of breeding-ponds it is therefore advisable to have two reception-ponds, which would admit of an annual hatching of fish. It may just be necessary to remind our readers that the full call of a salmon ascending in any particular year depart for the sea at the age of twelve months, the other moiety, curiously enough, requiring to live for two years in the ponds before they can be induced to come upon their way. Naturalists have never as yet been able to assign any reason for this curious phenomenon, and it is only by the observation of the Stormontfield ponds that we have been able with certainty to know that the year discrepancy appeared to be a distinct law in the race, and not became a small at the age of one and two years respectively.

The Stormontfield breeding-ponds are admirably constructed for the purpose for which they are designed. The supply of water for the hawe and feeding and reception ponds is obtained from the mill-race, which is sent in the background of our birdseye view. The water is carefully filtered through pipes, in order to have it pure and free from reptiles before it is allowed to flow into the ponds. These are filled with nice clean gravel; indeed, it is advisable to boil the stones before they are used, so as to free them from reptiles and every other impurity: and a shallt cut at the top of each box allows the water entrance and exit. At the top and bottom of the ponds runs a little canal, which at the top equalises the supply and at the bottom receives the fish immediately on their being hatched. From the bottom canal there is a small rundle to let away the water, and also to lead it from one another to admit the fish into their growing-pond. There is likewise another rundel, which carries the water from the ponds to the Tay at the proper season, and at the end next the river a small chamber has been constructed in order to keep the young fish in it. All the different rundels are provided with sluices to prevent the escape of the fish and the entrance of enemies of all kinds. A small dyke admits of the water being cut off in order to allow the pond to be cleaned. There is also a pipe from the mill-race to the pond, so as to have more water from time to time when it is required. The total cost of the ponds was under £500, and the cost of spawning the fish and watching the hawe-ponds was very little; and for these sums so many as three hundred thousand salmon can be reared every little every two years, and be produced with certainty till they are of an age to look after themselves and seek their own food.

This protection is the special advantage of the artificial system, for hundreds of thousands of salmon fry are yearly in our rivers and destroyed by the fish and fowl of various kinds that prey upon them. Countless countless of the adult salmon also fall victims to the same cause. It has been calculated that not above ten per cent of the salmon spawn which are annually brought to the breeding-ponds ever attain the weight of 10lb., and that not two per cent attain 15lb. weight! It is hoped that, under the protecting system, a larger percentage of grown salmon will be obtained; and it is known as a fact that the experiments at Stormontfield have already raised the rental of the River Tay considerably. Up to the present time upwards of a million of smalts have been thrown into the river from the Stormontfield breeding-ponds.

The process of artificial spawning is exceedingly simple, and was known in ancient times, when the luxurious Italians were famed for their gastronomy. The natural spawning-beds are first searched out—the proper reason for fish that are about to deposit their eggs; and it may be stated that no male fish will attend to the impregnation of the eggs of two or more females. It is well that this should be known, as the male fish are not so plentiful as the female, and there is but a small quantity of milt will fecundate a large number of eggs. It may be also stated, as a curiosity of the fact, that when the salmon have been more than once spawned at Stormontfield, the fish having been marked on each occasion. The modus operandi of artificial spawning is as follows:—As soon as a female fish has been taken, the ova of the female must be immediately discharged into a fish containing water; this is done by pressing the abdominal and abdominen of the fish; the male fish must be treated in the same way, care being taken to hold it under the water while this is performed. When the milt has been obtained the contents must be stirred about with the hand. After the lapse of a minute or two the water must be poured off, leaving enough, however, to cover the eggs, and fresh water must be supplied in lieu of it. Another change of the water is made, and then the eggs are ready to be put into the hawe-boxes; little tin pans or large spoons with water in them may be used to distribute the ova into the boxes. In mild winters the ova will hatch in about 100 days. The young fish, so soon as they enter the reception-pond, require to be provided with food. For this purpose a few crumbs of boiled and grated liver should be thrown over the ponds. By means of the artificial system it will be quite possible to re-stock all our great Scottish salmon rivers. A pool capable of turning out a million fish per annum might, we think, be constructed for a couple of thousand pounds, which would be a mere trifle to the proprietors of a great stream. With an additional reception-pond the boxes at Stormontfield would be capable of greater power. We are surprised that the proprietors do not finish what they have so well begun.

A letter from St. Helena, of the 27th of April, states that the Emperor Napoleon I.'s ancient residence of Old Roare continues to be the object of numerous pilgrimages. It has been completely restored, and there is no trouble touching at the island visit that celebrated spot. In one day sixty persons of all ranks, in spite of the distance and the difficulty of access to the mountains, went to Longwood and inscribed their names on the registers.

The natives of India at last appear to be awakening to a sense of continued action. The Bengal Hurkaru of April 4 states:—"A fatige is about to be thrown across the Ganges at Cawnpore, which will not only be exclusively furnished by native landowners and capitalists, who have made choice of Mr. Wilson, C.E., to carry out the work. The Cawnpore Bridge Company is being started by a native, to supply the town with omnibuses to run from Bingaw Road to Kalighat and Allypore. The Company will, in short, do things—at these conveyances, to start at intervals of ten minutes, and conducted by every hortless proprietor of a public vehicle in the town. That something of the kind is much wanted is obvious enough; but the difficulty will be in inducing men of different castes to ride in the same vehicle, though the railways have done much to efface that prejudice. In India, as elsewhere, there is no teaching an old dog new tricks."

The ninth annual report of the Postmaster General has been issued. During the past year the expenses of the Office, which are sidewise extended, in the addition of more offices, more free delivery, more rural posts, and more day mails, have increased £200,000 more than the United Kingdom in 1862 was 695 millions, an increase of twelve millions compared with last, and established as many as 1,000 new offices for the conduction of the penny postage. The distance over which mails are carried daily is that United Kingdom is 100,000 miles. The following will be the amount chargeable upon each letters:—Addressed to India, Ceylon, Mauritius, Australia, Tasmania, or New Zealand, not exceeding half an ounce in weight, 10d.; above half an ounce and not exceeding 1 oz., 1s. 8d.; above 1 oz. and not exceeding 2 oz., 2s. 6d.; above 2oz. and not exceeding 3 oz., 3s. 4d.; every ounce after the first, 1s. 8d. Addressed to Penang, Singapore, Hong-Kong, China, Java, Labuan, Japan, Borneo, the Moluccas, or the Philippine Islands, and exceeding half an ounce in weight, 1s. 8d.; above half an ounce and not exceeding 1 oz., 3s. 4d.; above 1oz. and not exceeding 2 oz., 5s. 4d.; above 2oz. and not exceeding 3 oz., 8s.; every ounce after the first, 2s. 8d.—By command of the Postmaster-General, ROWLAND HILL, Secretary.

THE GREAT INTERNATIONAL HORSERACE AT LONGCHAMPS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

A colossal silver vase offered by his Majesty the Emperor of the French, two thousand pounds given by the city of Paris, two thousand pounds given by the Jockey Club, and various minor prizes, were the inducements to enter offered in the summer of 1862 to the owners of horses never trained in 1863, of every quality, and of every country. The conditions of the race were:—Entry, £40; 24ft feeler, or £20 only if declared by the 15th of April; the weight for a mile and a half, 2400, and the third £200, out of the entries. Weight, 8st. 9lb. for colts and 8st. 5lb. for fillies. Distance, 2400 mètres, or 200 yards more than a mile and three-quarters. Thirty horses to be selected, and no race. To be run on May 31, 1863.

The following list of entries sent in by foreigners was the inscription of the names of the most distinguished owners of horses throughout Europe—Her Majesty the Queen, Lord Stamford, Lord Derby, Lord Uxbridge, Lord Stamford, Lord Strathmore, Lord St. Vincent, Lord Chatham, Lord Hastings, Lord Westmeath, Lord Alexander, Lord Savile, Ten Brook, Naylor, Day, and many other of our turfites, contributed fifty entries on the English side; the remainder of the fifty-two entries in the list was filled up by the Jockey Club of Paris. This club was composed of twenty-four horses representing the best stables of France, Belgium, Austria, and Russia.

The interval which had elapsed since the entries were made had deprived of many a ci-devant favourite; the fine-looking weanes of the French Derby, La Touques, and the second for our popular Epsom event (Lord Clifden), were no longer considered to have the race between them that only fifteen ventured on appearing at the "correct cards" for the Grand Prix de Paris distributed at Longchamps. Of the fifty-two entries, only the Emperor's Fadladeen, Dainier, Lord Clifden, The Orphan, The Ranger, Saccharometer, Donnybrook, Fourth, and Lord Clifden, Gouter's riding of Miss Agnes, and Demon. Mr. Naylor's Carnival, the Earl of Uxbridge's Mueller, and Mr. Melville's Mr. Ambrose, were selected 13, 14, and 15 on the card, did not, I believe, cross the Channel.

The Grand Prix de Paris, the fourth race on the card, was set for 3 p.m. past three, and the Champs Elysées, the Bois de Boulogne, the beauty, consisting of the Emperor and Empress, the ex-King of Portugal, the Duke de Morny, Count Walewski, and others, and escorted by a detachment of Spahis, imparted a fresh animation to the scene. The Emperor's arrival at the course by the Porte de Longchamps, the Imperial pavilion was the signal for an outburst of enthusiasm on the part of the English visitors such as our neighbours have rarely witnessed.

While the preparations for the Grand Prix were going on the Spahis, dispersed in groups over the course, gave the public a series of equestrian performances on their beautiful steeds. Startling feats of horsemanship were executed by these sons of the desert, who, mounted on full speed, or burning off abruptly with the most graceful curvetting, their long burnous floating behind them in the wind. During one of these Arab divertissements the bull ring, the twelve numbers went up, and, in the midst of intense excitement as the pets of the Jockey Club paraded before the stand, they went off to their preliminary gallops. The French crack looked all over a winner, and so was the favourite nearly fifteen pounds in front of Fadladeen, who, with The Ranger (by Voltigeur, out of Shrimshire's dam), Lord Clifden's Dainier, and Saccharometer, formed the first five, 2 to 1, and 6 to 1. The start was well effected at the first signal, and off they went. The Orphan (Lord Clifden's pilot) first, and Lord Clifden last. M. Aumont's Fadladeen, by Stockwell, dashed to the front, but, coming down the incline and entering the straight, Mr. Henry Custance's Saccharometer, by Orlando, out of Sister to Doyle on the French mare, and the encouraging cries of the French spectators, which, as the horses neared the Grand Stand, at the height of their voices, maintained his advantage, winning by a length, Mr. Wilson's second, Saccharometer third, Donnybrook fourth, and Lord Clifden fifth.

Gouter's riding of The Ranger was most clever, and merited the applause which he received. Fadladeen was beaten by his defeat of his return to scale. After the race, the Emperor's gift was exhibited in front of the Grand Stand. It is a splendid piece of silver-gilt workmanship and considerable value, and will no doubt be kept as a permanent memorial of the first international race. Above, above, above besides the large stake of £4240, out of which he generously offered £200 for the benefit of the poor of Paris.

The defeat of Lord Clifden was a great disappointment to her French and English backers but the manner in which the out down Saccharometer and Lord Clifden, after the last of the Spahis had left the course of her year, and should encourage our neighbours to persevere in their efforts to improve the breed of horses, which is second to none in Albion. The racing spirit is certainly aroused in France; never, there are the shadow, was a meeting more aristocratically attended, or more successful in a pecuniary point of view, a proof of which is the number of receipts for admission within the immediate precincts of the race-course. The Emperor's Fadladeen, by Stockwell, out of Mencia, will no doubt figure a large number of entries for the race of next year, when French and English horses will meet on more equal terms, and probably take rivalry to dispute, on the picturesque racecourse of Longchamps, the still more important stake of the Grand International of 1864.

James George Ferguson Russell, Esq., a third secretary, has been appointed a second secretary in her Majesty's diplomatic service; and A. J. Dalrymple, Esq., a second secretary, to be third secretary to her Majesty's legation at Athens, to be second secretary to her Majesty's diplomatic service.

A. J. Dalrymple, Esq., a French Canadian, has, it is said, lately made an important archæological discovery on the banks of the Saguenay, not far from Lake St. John. Below or the Grand Discharge of the lake, he has explored, at the interest monument known as Cap 399 by the name of Indian's Tomb, and has found numerous graves, in which are placed considerable quantities and other objects of a desirable workmanship. M. Dalrymple has also found the remains of the village of the family of which the chiefs of Alexander or one of his successors. Other tombs exist to the locality.

Dr. Dowler, of New Orleans, has invented a gas capable of being used for the South Dublin Board of Guardians to examine the bread, in spite of the adulteration. The gas is to be used in the oven, and the bread is then subjected to the action of the gas. The process is said to be a spurious article, consisting of sugar, alum, and flavour, and that no such result would be produced by the gas. The sugar be found extremely damp, containing a very large proportion of water, and a considerable quantity of the adulterations mentioned, such as particles of meat, entrails, and starch granules. It contained also in great confidence with the bread, and the latter was found to be of a dangerous and nature the lowest which, by borrowing in the sale, produces the. It is an opportunity, therefore, for the public to know that in the loaf there are 100,000 of these insects in every pound of sugar. In 10 grams weight I reckoned 200, being the proportion of 2000 to the pound, and in one loaf 4000 or 5000. Such sugar is not only detrimental to health, but the last economical fraud that can be practised upon the public, and the contractors and the guardians have resolved to take the proceedings against the contractors.

Lord Campbell has appointed Mr. Edward Bullock Denison to be connected with gambling, and there are regular gambling houses, where one sometimes sees as much as £1,000 on the table. Mr. Denison, in the case of Mr. Bullock, is not only more than 17l. high being made. In another, one of the baker's dozen, a small building standing back on about 100 yards, a counter, for the same purpose. Fortune-tellers are frequent, some of them of great notoriety. Mademoiselle Lenormand, a celebrated, and Count everything held out quite in Persian's sign—even a private room, at which cakes and refreshment of more or less relief, according to the size of the customer. There were also bits of price hanging to against the walls. The gentlemen are smoking wonderful. They eat, square, brick-built houses, rather than any of the neighbouring shops, and quite forgreat from outside. There are of different classes, some leading money for three months, some for eight months, and others for three years. I went over one, and the acreage—as all the articles was very custom, every separate article being carefully done up in paper and labelled.—Letter in the Times.

WORK FOR WAGES.

WHAT is to be done with the Lancashire operatives has become a very great social difficulty. Up to the present time we have dealt most successfully with it. The cotton operatives of Lancashire have been maintained in tolerable comfort, in excellent health, and have, to a certain extent, been employed. Having first met their calamity from their own resources, in the hope that better days would speedily arrive, they were obliged, when these were exhausted, to throw themselves upon the arm which was held out by the country to keep them from falling. That arm—a magnificent private charity—has sustained them for more than one year.

The sister industries of the country are not yet tired of this self-imposed burden. Some of them have already begun to feel they could endure it for another season were the system of relief now adopted likely to prove the last. But there is no assurance that with the commencement of last winter all went well enough. The labour test and task-work, introduced to relieve the unemployed operatives from pauperchosis, the reading-classes, or open parish work: and while the novelty of the plan lasted, all went well. When tasks grew out, and strong men wearied of going to school, and when both became irksome, we found it irksome work to be thus confined week after week, the difficulty of passing from one extreme to the other was found to be insuperable. It was clear that the whole population would be deeply demoralized, if, when the cotton famine was at an end, the habit of idleness had in a severe position to take advantage of it than if they had been occupied with ordinary work, in which their hands might have lost some of their pliancy.

It is not surprising that the temper of the people is changing for the worse. Which is the more humiliating—healthy at home, or, as a gift, becomes very soon a help chained sullenly as a right. With regard to the Lancashire operatives, we suppose the whole of them find themselves enlisted in an ungrateful service, with no prospect of relief from it. Every day and every week in the Swamp-spaces, roads and all operations for temporarily dealing with the stoppage of the cotton, may have been good for that purpose, but they could not be used for anything but a temporary purpose. The moment it ceased the public mind was alarmed by the violent outbreak at Stalybridge, which was regarded as the symptom of a state of hatred and revenge that everywhere else in Lancashire, and had nearly chanced to find utterance there, but for the timely and judicious interference of the authorities. The depreciation of the factory hands was the only thing to be considered. It was not to be supposed that as far as to see that the staple manufacture of Lancashire had better be broken up, if its destruction were consequent upon any large colonial exodus of the people engaged in it, for that would be a national calamity that could not but be opened. This was preceded by a tempting grant made by the authorities of Canada to any of the cotton operatives (with their families, to that colony. Canada is about to adopt a similar course. The Government of Canada is going to call upon the Government a large amount of the wild land for the benefit of the distressed of Lancashire. There is some regret expressed on the part of Canadians that the £25,000 voted towards relief in 1847 by the British North America was not, in part at least, sent expressly to secure emigration to Canada, instead of being sent to Ireland to feed 6000 people—a healthy blood-letting to a plethoric constitution. Other colonies, also, are ready to receive a portion of the able-bodied men of Lancashire to their soil; but as yet with no very successful result. It is clear enough that there are, for the most part causes—ties, the lack of good information with respect to the matter, a disinclination to quit a certainty in England, however poor, for an uncertainty abroad, however promising—which tell against it, as the vitality of the cotton trade—the great mass of the unemployed remaining at home. The question is not to substitute one industry for it remains therefore, to devise some means by which these people may be employed in their own work, and receive the proper wages for remunerative toil.

In the month of March it was suggested that the Legislature should lend money at a low rate of interest for the purpose of maintaining and keeping the working population of the cotton districts from starvation. It was thought by those who were acquainted with the circumstances over that the country need not be put to expense with regard to the matter, as the local authorities, with the funds at their disposal, but that the bulk of the operatives, would be willing to go to their homes, where they hope soon again to live in comfort, must be prohibited by law. The Chancellor of the public journals this question has been pretty well discussed, and there are two points of opinion. The first point to issue two conclusions which really are of values. For those we are mainly indebted to Mr. Denton, who has addressed a letter to Government to embody his views in a memorandum, which was read by Mr. Ferrand in April last for a Royal Commission. There are 450,000 persons now supplied by the rates or charity, 80,000 of whom are able-bodied men, capable, with due diligence and skill, to execute the work. Mr. Denton suggests that of these 80,000 two-thirds can be usefully employed in the construction of public conveniences, in grounds, cemeteries, public walks, and new roads;" and the remainder, he thinks, might be employed in cultivating the land at a short distance from towns, upon the improvement of landed estates by drainage, by the planting of fences in fields, road-making, planting, trenching, and leveling of irregular surfaces. Mr. Denton dwelt more particularly upon this latter mode of employment because the occupation of the General Drainage Company has made him most conversant with such labour. "The Lancashire Public Works Act," he further remarked, "passed by the present distress" he states to be "sufficient to employ, in underdraining alone, 100,000 men for two years." Another writer, living Lancashire on the north and Cheshire on the south, the district comprises 2500 square miles, in which are to be found 850,000 acres of wet land which may be drained. Already he has had some experience in this work, for Mr. Tollemache, M.P. for Cheshire, has given him the superintendence of his own landed estate at Mottram and Tintwistle, through the General Land Drainage Company, with a view of giving employment to the operatives of the locality a means of work." Again, he suggests that men might be profitably engaged "in trenching hillsides too precipitous for cultivation, and planting them with wood. Also in making the roads and other trees used for mine props and sepias." Portions of sterile moors might be advantageously let to the poor, as has already taken place on the western side of Lancashire, to the north of Liverpool, as far as Southport and Ormskirk. Mr. Denton has also supplied us with a hand labour in various ways, and, being more readily moved by the land than heavier land, as better fitted therefore for unskilled workmen."

This mode of employment is not new. Forty years since the hundreds of thousands of men, who were then out of employment, executed a road across Chat Moss several miles in length. Some other instances might be mentioned, but we will not multiply precedents. St. James's Mount, Liverpool, in reports of these works the engineer has expressed his opinion that the labourers, and Mr. Denton, speaking of those engaged under him at Mottram, says that "the occupants of the mills are by no means unwilling to undertake the work, but their work will bear comparison with that of agricultural labourers of equal experience." The facilities for borrowing money for such improvements are great, for Mr. Denton tells us that the Act of 1846 has established the principle of charging estates with the cost of draining, repayable by instalments, and the Improvement Act of 1860 further has so relaxed which enable landowners to charge their estates with borrowed money, and especially in districts where the improvements are of a permanent character. There is practically no difficulty in obtaining any amount of money at about an average charge of 4l per cent. Some difficulties, however, lie in the way of the Government promoting agriculturist improvements, owing to the fact that several land improvement companies having already established themselves, and would be interfered with were Government to offer money at a lower rate of interest than they.

For the present, therefore, Government has confined itself to that suggestion for drawn improvement which emanated from others besides Mr. Denton. Mr. Bowlinson was forthwith directed to visit the cotton-manufacturing districts, to put himself into communication with the various local authorities, and to report upon any sanitary or other works upon which the people could be employed. He set out on this mission on the 2nd of May, and handed in a report on the 19th, from which we make a few extracts.

In the borough of Ashton-under-Lyne he found 7137 unemployed persons, of whom 2000 were shareholders men. It is governed under the powers of a local Act, which enables the Corporation to borrow up to double the annual rateable value, or £132,000. There is, however, a local debt for waterworks, and Townhall, which incurs £30,000 to be borrowed; and public works, such as sewerage, water supply, land and street improvement, public park, are required which would involve an outlay of £40,000. At Blackburn there are powers to borrow £200,000, and the existing debt is £107,000; so that £182,000 are left to act to work 3000 shareholden men, who are unemployed, in completing the sewerage, forming and paving about four miles of streets. The total cost of which will be £75,000. The Corporation of Rochdale have power to borrow an additional £40,000; have 2000 shareholden men to carry out the formation of a park and other public recreation-ground, sewers, streets, and roads, requiring an expenditure of £70,000. At Bolton, 2000, too, a public park is wanted, the main sewers require to be completed, streets to be formed, and the river to be cleansed. There are there, also, shareholden men willing to work for wages.

It appears, in fact, that there is abundance of work for the people, and no difficulty in getting the money to engage them in it. All these authorities have been brought into existence specially during the war for cotton-spinning, which swallowed up every other consideration. No body could be spared for public work; and Corporations abstained from engaging in them during the reign of high wages. The roof to shatter the workmen's cottages that was introduced the days of cheap corn his house and the roads that led to it were matters of no moment. With respect to Manchester, Mr. Rawlinson, one of the Local Government Inspectors are now at work for wages of 1d. per hour, the cotton barrow labour, levelling land, and excavating foundations. I have watched them at work and spoken to them; they are shareholders from the relief schools. The only complaint made to me was that they, the men, were not allowed to work all day and every day 'rather work than sit stewing in the schools.' I remarked to one of the men, 'You are getting pay you cannot do good cotton work.' His answer was, 'But we both can and will if we have the chance.' Without doubt, with legitimate work, proper tools, regular hours, reasonable pay, and efficient teaching and superintendence, more than a quarter of all the men out of work will in one month be enabled to create as good work for open wages as well as any cotton-spinning mill in Great Britain. No gang should be without a leaven of educated labour, and to these must be forwarded petitions, plans, &c., before any loans will be granted. All such Government loans will be under the control of the entire rateable property of each district at a remunerative rate of interest, payable at stated periods by instalments.

As it is our intention to recur to these works from time to time, we shall say no more here, but conclude by expressing our strong hope in the sanitary improvements of towns, combined with the improvement of estates, may together give active and useful employment to a fine class of men who must, under the present system of industry, become utterly worthless to the country.

THE BREADALBANE FEERAGE.

At sessions, with a recital of £70,000 per annum, is now the subject of competition between the claimants—a number of whom, we believe, are prepared with any expectation of succeeding to it. When the late Marquis of Breadalbane died, in January, 1862, Parliament was not sitting, and no immediate relatives capable of inheriting from him in the ordinary course of descent. There were persons who took it for granted that the Queen would appoint at once but for ever to the Campbells. It is true that the English nonconsuite, created 1831, as well as the Scotch creation of Glenorchy, conferred on the late Earl at the same time, and the barony of Breadalbane, which he had held since 1806, because created in the male issue. But the Scotch peerage, viscountcy, and barony, vested in the same family in the reign of Charles II. were saved by a provision made in favour of the present from a similar extinction. The patent, dated on the 18th of August, 1681 (though it was provided that he should take precedence only from the 28th of June, 1677), was granted to Sir John Campbell of Glenorchy, Earl of Breadalbane and Holland, Viscount Campbell of Tay and Paintland, Lord Glenorchy, Benderaloch, Lochawe, and Tay. By the 3rd Anne Session 2, it was further limited in the patent to the one of his sons whom the father might appoint. Failing such appointment, the succession was to devolve which was to his eldest son by his male issue in general. The effect of such an instrument was to perpetuate the peerage after the failure of the heirs male of the body of his heirs male. That contingency has occurred, and the late Marquis's eldest son, created Lord John, the second. He was followed by his brother, Lord Chandos, and he by that upon the death of this third John Earl of Breadalbane and Holland. Strange limitation which we have explained came into operation, and the honours were transferred to and vested in any remote male heir of the body of the first Marquis. The name of this kinsman happened to be John too, and he it was who obtained the peerage, earldom, and marquisate in the year 1831 of the limited kingdom. He was succeeded by a fifth John, whose death, a few months ago, has led to this litigation.

In order to understand the position of the two rivals who are about to contest the matter in Parliament, we must carry our minds a little backward. The common ancestor of the first Earl and the late Marquis was a certain Sir Robert Campbell, of Glenorchy, who lived in the early part of the seventeenth century. From his two elder sons sprang the two families, of which the one acquired the title, and the other, inheriting the estates, that of the late Marquisate. But there was a third son of Sir Robert, who must now be mentioned, and from him was born that Scotch gentleman who is the claimant. We said that the title of this pedigree pension by generation, for nothing turns upon the entire exclusion of the female line, except that in the right of which he was a Viscount, Earl of Glenlochie, finally descended from the third son of Sir Robert Campbell, of Glenorchy, who was succeeded in the title by several collaterals. The second of these collaterals, Viscount Glenlochie, was John Alexander Gavin Campbell, who now solicits the Queen to call him "Earl Breadalbane," which Earl of Breadalbane? The sixth of these collaterals, John, was the grandfather of Lieutenant Charles Willis Campbell, who now claims to be Lord, and has petitioned Parliament for a writ of summons to adjudicate upon that claim and to sequestrate the Breadalbane estates in the meantime.

The whole dispute is as to the validity of an alleged marriage between J. A. G. Campbell's grandfather and grandmother. If they were legally married there is only one step in opposition's case; if they were not married there are half a dozen. There seem to be very few material pieces of evidence on this point. The only one of which the grandmother to the Viscountcy of Glenlochie and her alleged husband in 1807. A photograph of this curious document has been procured from the War Office, and proves that it was drawn up in very correctly acquainted with grammar. Her story is that she was married to James Campbell, on 1st September, 1787, at Edinburgh, "by the Reverend Mr. Gaile minister," after which she accompanied him to America. Quite recently, even in the time of the present Marquis of Breadalbane, she did not register behind him; the only witness of the marriage was also dead, and the Act of 1855 (17 and 18 Vict. cap. 80) had not been in America. Such was the widow's statement, and it may, for aught we know, have been true; but then there is another, we think, in the case. Whether this be really the only proof of a marriage, we cannot say; but Mr. J. A. G. Campbell can only we have no means of judging until the parties have come into Parliament.

There is also before us an extract from the parish register of Drimpton Sherborne's establishing a former marriage between James Campbell and Elizabeth Gaile, at Drimpton, in Dorsetshire, on the 3rd of October, 1784, having executed a will in 1786. There is no doubt, we think, of the discovery of the marriage; the difficulty seems to be in the proof of the identity of the Mrs. Campbell. The simple question is whether this document signatories to the will are the same persons as the parties to the marriage. If so, then all the clapping of the union contracted with James Campbell in 1784 are, of course, legitimate, and among them William John Campbell Glenlochie, the father of J. A. G. Campbell, of Glenlochie, Stockwell, the single foundation upon which the whole structure of ancient title, estates, and rentals is built. Upon which humble reeds of the finest parts of Scotland, ultimately rest.—Times.

* There are, we believe, some obstacles than these one to this splendid prize. For example, Mr. Campbell, of Glenlochie, has no baptismal name as a Christian name. Campbell, of Glenlochie, is descended from Duncan Campbell, eldest son of John, first of Breadalbane. Then there is Mr. Campbell, of Monzie, descended from Colin, second Breadalbane, who of all claimants to have made out, will be, in the opinion of many, the most formidable. It is a pity that through a number of first Marquis the order of the Peerage has not been followed. Then there would be no room for any proper claimant, the Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords.

A large fire broke out at Gallipoli, on the night of Sunday, the 24th ult., which destroyed one hundred houses, three khans, and 200 shops. It was finally mastered by the crew of the French steamer Darlaca. The property destroyed is valued at £20,000.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO THE CITY.

On Monday evening the Prince of Wales, accompanied by the Princess, proceeded in State to Guildhall for the purpose of taking up the freedom of the City, which he claimed by right of birth, his illustrious father having been a citizen. An immense crowd lined the streets through which the Royal cortège passed, and the Prince and Princess were very warmly greeted by the City multitudes as evidences of their loyalty. Profiting by the experience of the 7th of March, extraordinary precautions were taken, and the metropolitan force lined more than two-thirds of the City thoroughfares. The Life Guards guarded the avenues leading to Ludgate, Cheapside, and the Poultry.

The best energies of the Corporation and its officers were directed to rendering the visit, which, it will be remembered, originated with the Council Chamber, appropriated as the supper-room for the Prince and Princess a chamber in which, on the occasion of one of the most distinguished guests, was splendidly decorated by Mr. Crace for the banquet given at the end of the Council. Here were placed two buffets laden with the finest works of the goldsmiths' and jewellers' art from all the great livery companies. At the opposite end the wall was covered with crimson velvet, in front of which was placed a small jet of water, which fell upon a bank of palms, tree ferns, rich plants of foliage, and flowers, which had been selected by Mr. Gibbs, gardener to the City Chamberlain. The reception-hall was a temporary structure, covering the whole space of the Guildhall-yard. It was constructed with marvellous rapidity by Mr. Myers, from the design of Mr. Allen, in the classical, though indeterminate, style of Dunning, the City architect. This hall is 120 feet in length, and 40 in width, and had an upper and a lower room; the upper one, supported by rows of Ionic columns, formed a kind of gallery into bays and aisles, being used as a supper-room. The roof of the reception-hall was composed of coloured cloth, resembling awnings in the front facing the south, for purposes of ventilation. The walls were covered with crimson cloth, and were richly garlanded with flowers. Two of the Courts of Law were also floored over at the time corresponding with that of the large supper-room, and the three together accommodated about 3000 persons. The entrance for the Prince and Princess was a perfect gem of its kind. It adjoined the Chamberlain's official residence, and was built entirely of coloured glass of lace drapery and festoons of beautiful pink rose and rosebuds. In the centre was a magnificent chandelier, with pendants, vases, and vases and jardinieres with lovely flowering plants decorated the space between. The Lord Mayor's carriages leading to the great hall were sufficiently decorated in pink and white flowers, with crimson cushions and groups of statuary. The recess near the Aldermen's Chamber was filled with a large vase, by Copestake, Moore, and Crampton, residence of Prince Christian, and former home of Princess Alexandra. The Prince's Chamber, in the Aldermen's Court, was filled with pendant coronas of gas, from which hung baskets of gilt wire-work with flowers and evergreens, and similar sides. The main arches and each end were ornamented by lines of gas, and stained walls, gas also around the columns. The hall had been relieved in gold and colours by the use of white and crimson drapery. The walls and the main features of the architecture were brought prominently forward with the aid of a "transparent sketch of estate" bearing the arms of the Prince and Princess, shown on a rich tapestry, produced from one made for the Prince's great ancestor, Henry VIII. Above it was the royal standard of England, and the Prince of Wales, and executed in the finest spun glass, like dropping silver. Beneath the velvet canopy of state was placed the throne for the Prince and was the orchestra, built up with mirrors and crimson draperies, with the Royal arms and those of the Prince of Wales, and the colossal statues of the quaint old Danish demigods God and Hermod, guarding the door. Above, from the walls, hung the banners of the companies, and half-way down the hall were suspended the arms and shields beautifully grouped. The floor was covered with a crimson cloth, and the passages were matted, and richly carpeted.

The guests—exceeding two thousand in number—arrived early, and were received by the Lord Mayor, Lord Mayor, the Lady Mayoress, and a committee comprising most of the prominent members of the Corporation. The band of the Grenadier Guards—mounted aloft in a small orchestra—performed a selection, and dance-music as the company entered. Mr. Jullien's band was also in attendance, and on the dais were a number of state officials, and it kept up a strain of melody in the chief hall during the whole of the evening. At half-past seven the Royal carriages were seen to be arriving, but the bulk came before eight o'clock, and the hall and all the approaches were crowded by that hour. A square space near the east end of the building and dais was kept guarded by the members of the Court of the Corporation, but outside this charmed circle, notwithstanding certain precautions, the crowd was very great pretty much as he liked.

About twenty minutes past nine a flourish of trumpets from the heralds proclaimed the approach of the Royal party, and the band began the National Anthem. The Prince and Princess, from the corner facing his unionism of Field Marshal, with the ribbon and star of the Garter. The latter wore white dress, with the coronet and brooch of diamonds given her by her Royal husband, and with the superb City necklace of bullions. Her hair was turned back from her forehead, in the style to which she has given her name, and was set off by a feather, setting off her fair young features and fine, expressive face. The Prince of Wales, in the uniform of the Guards, then came Prince Alfred, in his lieutenant's uniform, his face looking the picture of health and vigour. Prince Arthur, in the full dress costume of a Highland officer, followed, and Prince Leopold, the youngest son of the Queen, in the full dress uniform of a Highland officer, followed. The Princess Louise, in a dress of white silk, with a train of blue velvet, and a wreath of flowers in her hair, followed her mother, and the Princess Helena, in white, with a wreath of flowers, followed her sister. The Princess Louise, in a dress of white silk, with a train of blue velvet, and a wreath of flowers in her hair, followed her mother, and the Princess Helena, in white, with a wreath of flowers, followed her sister. The Princess Louise, in a dress of white silk, with a train of blue velvet, and a wreath of flowers in her hair, followed her mother, and the Princess Helena, in white, with a wreath of flowers, followed her sister.

This procession passed under the old porch into the outer hall, and marched slowly round the building between the dense rows of admiring spectators, who cheered the Royal visitors as they came. The former wearing his uniform of Field Marshal, with the ribbon and star of the Garter. The latter wore white dress, with the coronet and brooch of diamonds given her by her Royal husband, and with the superb City necklace of bullions. Her hair was turned back from her forehead, in the style to which she has given her name, and was set off by a feather, setting off her fair young features and fine, expressive face. The Prince of Wales, in the uniform of the Guards, then came Prince Alfred, in his lieutenant's uniform, his face looking the picture of health and vigour. Prince Arthur, in the full dress costume of a Highland officer, followed, and Prince Leopold, the youngest son of the Queen, in the full dress uniform of a Highland officer, followed. The Princess Louise, in a dress of white silk, with a train of blue velvet, and a wreath of flowers in her hair, followed her mother, and the Princess Helena, in white, with a wreath of flowers, followed her sister.

The Royal party were received at the entrance of the hall by the Lord Mayor, with his Royal Highness the PRINCE OF WALES, the Lord Mayor, with her Royal Highness the PRINCESS OF WALES.

Suites of state then followed, and the Lord Mayor.

The Town Clerk.

The Chamberlain.

Aldermen and Sheriff Lawrence.

The Chairman of the Commission of Sewers, Wyatt Truscott.

Alderman Gibbons.

Alderman Sidney.

Alderman Cubitt.

The Recorder.

The Swordbearer.

His Royal Highness the PRINCE OF WALES, with the Lord Mayor.

The Lord Mayor, with her Royal Highness the PRINCESS OF WALES.

Suites of state then followed, and the Lord Mayoress.

This procession passed under the old porch into the outer hall, and marched slowly round the building between the dense rows of admiring spectators, who cheered the Royal visitors as they came. The former wearing his uniform of Field Marshal, with the ribbon and star of the Garter. The latter wore white dress, with the coronet and brooch of diamonds given her by her Royal husband, and with the superb City necklace of bullions. Her hair was turned back from her forehead, in the style to which she has given her name, and was set off by a feather, setting off her fair young features and fine, expressive face. The Prince of Wales, in the uniform of the Guards, then came Prince Alfred, in his lieutenant's uniform, his face looking the picture of health and vigour. Prince Arthur, in the full dress costume of a Highland officer, followed, and Prince Leopold, the youngest son of the Queen, in the full dress uniform of a Highland officer, followed. The Princess Louise, in a dress of white silk, with a train of blue velvet, and a wreath of flowers in her hair, followed her mother, and the Princess Helena, in white, with a wreath of flowers, followed her sister. The Princess Louise, in a dress of white silk, with a train of blue velvet, and a wreath of flowers in her hair, followed her mother, and the Princess Helena, in white, with a wreath of flowers, followed her sister.

The Royal party were received at the entrance of the hall by the Lord Mayor, with his Royal Highness the PRINCE OF WALES, the Lord Mayor, with her Royal Highness the PRINCESS OF WALES.

Suites of state then followed, and the Lord Mayoress.

This procession passed under the old porch into the outer hall, and marched slowly round the building between the dense rows of admiring spectators, who cheered the Royal visitors as they came. The former wearing his uniform of Field Marshal, with the ribbon and star of the Garter. The latter wore white dress, with the coronet and brooch of diamonds given her by her Royal husband, and with the superb City necklace of bullions. Her hair was turned back from her forehead, in the style to which she has given her name, and was set off by a feather, setting off her fair young features and fine, expressive face. The Prince of Wales, in the uniform of the Guards, then came Prince Alfred, in his lieutenant's uniform, his face looking the picture of health and vigour. Prince Arthur, in the full dress costume of a Highland officer, followed, and Prince Leopold, the youngest son of the Queen, in the full dress uniform of a Highland officer, followed. The Princess Louise, in a dress of white silk, with a train of blue velvet, and a wreath of flowers in her hair, followed her mother, and the Princess Helena, in white, with a wreath of flowers, followed her sister. The Princess Louise, in a dress of white silk, with a train of blue velvet, and a wreath of flowers in her hair, followed her mother, and the Princess Helena, in white, with a wreath of flowers, followed her sister.

Mr. Rowell, Clerk of the Chamber, read the official record of his Royal Highness's title to the freedom, which was in these terms:—

Chamber of London, eighth day of June, 1863.—Born without the liberty of the City, Albert Edward Prince of Wales, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, Prince of Saxony, Prince of Saxe Coburg Gotha, &c., &c., &c., a citizen of London, came before the Chamberlain the day and year aforesaid, and desired to be admitted into the freedom of the City of London by patrimony, as he legitimate, and was born after the admission of his father into the said freedom. The admission of the father is entered in the book kept for that purpose, and bears date the twenty-eighth day of August, in the fourth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lady Victoria, and in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty.

Mr. Scott, the City Chamberlain, then delivered the following address:—

May it please your Royal Highness,—The Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City in Common Council assembled, with very unfeigned pleasure that your Royal Highness would be pleased to assume the freedom of the City, by virtue of your birth, as the son of our late lamented father, and your Royal Highness having condescendingly presented yourself to comply with the legal requirements incident to the exercise of that privilege, the Corporation of London, to address a few words to your Royal Highness. The Corporation of London is proud to welcome to the City a prince inheriting your Royal Highness's illustrious name, and claim as of right that citizenship which, under the circumstances, it is needless to say your Royal Highness's father, the late Royal Highness to take the oath and sign the roll, in accordance with the invariable practice of the City, but the present proceedings are in accord with the remarkable change which has occurred in the Monarchical system—in the position of the present, it is believed, to the first instance in which the representative of the Sovereign has personally presented himself for the purpose of receiving admission to citizenship. The congratulations subsequently to his father's accession to the throne, and the presentation, on that occasion, of an appropriate casket which has been prepared for its reception, and I very cheerfully request that you will do me the honour to hand it to your Royal Highness, and to present you the right hand of fellowship as a citizen of London. In addition, I am directed by the Court of Common Council, the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen, and the Sheriffs, to present a copy number of the honourable Court, as earnest with and heartfelt prayer that your Royal Highness may be enabled to fulfil your Royal Highness's duty as a citizen of London, and to discharge the duties of the honourable position and great responsibilities that devolve upon you as the heir apparent to the throne of this realm, and that your Royal Highness may be enabled to imitate the example and emulate the virtues of your illustrious father, to win and enjoy a large share of the affection and esteem of your people, and comprehends within its fold the greatly believed subjects of the Queen of these realms.

After the delivery of this address the memorials of citizenship were handed to the Prince, in a casket, which appeared to give the highest satisfaction to the Prince, and which is built from a drawing of the casket in our next Number.] When his Royal Highness had received this gift, and signified the acknowledgment of allegiance to his Lord Mayor and his City, he read the following address:—

My Lord Mayor, Mr. Chamberlain, and Gentlemen,—It is, I assure you, a source of sincere gratification to me that I should have received and being invested with the privileges you have stated you are unable to confer on me, because I am born to me by inheritance. It is a patrimony that I am proud to claim—this freedom of the corporation of the city of commerce, which holds its charter from such an ancient date. My pride is increased when I find that it was conferred on my father, and that you have thus honoured the citizens of London, when I connect with that the beloved father to whom you have adverted in such warm terms of eulogy and respect, and I assure you how I am touched by the gift of the casket. I thank you, my Lord Mayor and gentlemen, the Princess and myself heartily thank you for the pleasure your loyal and affectionate reception of us this day. Queen—for the manifestations of this evening token of sovereign, and for all your prayers for our future happiness.

The Prince stood during the whole of this quaint ceremony, but the Princess sat upon the throne.

The Royal party quarrelled with the Council meeting the Royal party retired for a short time to their apartments for refreshment, and after a few minutes returned to the hall, and opened the ball about ten o'clock. The Prince quadrille was formed by the Prince of Wales, the Lord Mayoress, the Princess of Wales, and the Lord Mayor, the rest of the set being formed by Lady Mary Lawrence, Lady Truscott, Bigg, Lady Bury, Miss Amy Salomons, Hon. Mrs. Stonor, Miss Stonor, Lord Lawrence, Mr. Truscott, Mr. Gibbons, Mr. Rose, Mr. Deputy Lott, Lord Bury, Lord Harris, Colonel Keppel, and others. At this it is dancing was also kept up by the general company with great spirit, both in the great hall and in the supper-room, which was used as a supplementary ballroom.

At a quarter to twelve another flourish of trumpets announced that the Royal supper was served, and the procession was formed once more, and marched round the hall. The company sat in the horseshoe table in this chamber were for the Royal party, the Lord and Lady Mayoress, Lord Granville, Lord and Lady Palmerston, Sir George and Lady Grey, and the Lord Chief Justice and Lady Victoria beside. At the table in the Exchequer Chamber were Prince Princess of Wales and of the Duchess of Cambridge, and a brilliant assemblage of ladies and gentlemen. The large supper-room was that erected over the reception-rooms, and corresponding with the area of those apartments. The supper was provided by Messrs. Rings and Brymer, and the Royal table was decorated by Messrs. Messrs. Elkington and Co. Nothing could surpass the excellence of the arrangements by which the company of 2000 persons were enabled to sit down in perfect comfort to a well-served repast.

A few minutes after one o'clock the Royal visitors left Guildhall, escorted by Life Guardsmen. The cortège presented a strange and unusual sight, as the carriages passed through streets on its way to Marlborough House, the illuminations still blazing, and were still lined by policemen, and continuous crowds still lingering to bestow a parting shout on the Royal visitors of Princess.

Thus ended one of the most brilliant entertainments which the City has ever given, and the Royal visitors to Marlborough House at an hour when the sun was already high in the heavens.

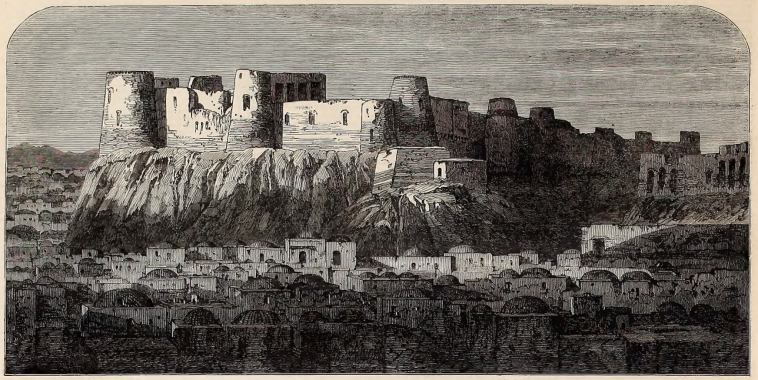
The Levant Herald publishes intelligence from Teheran, viâ Bushir, announcing the arrival of Sir Charles Alison at Ispahan on June 8. He was continue the defence of the city.

Mr. Herbert, Attaché to the British Mission at Lisbon, has been appointed Attaché to her Majesty's embassy at Washington, and Mr. Bruce, Attaché at Washington, is appointed Attaché at Berne. Mr. Bruce is appointed from Berne to Lisbon.

The Belgian Moniteur publishes a report made by MM. Faits, Hennequin, Gallait, and Gluck, members of the Mixed Commission charged with the question of covering the dioptrum. The commission unanimously recommends that it should not be placed on the roof of the Cathedral, but in front of the Conservatoire de Bruxelles; that a type of it should be deposited at the Royal Academy of Antwerp, and that the director of that school should be charged with the kingdom; and that the headmasters of all the regiments of the army should be charged with the duty of causing the soldiers to practise singing, and amplify their instruments accordingly.

FRENCH-PRUSSIAN TRADE.—The number of oysters taken by the boats of Granville in the season of 1862-3 was about 4,000,000. The open sea fishing only produced 500,000 oysters, which, being of small size, and in its usual, in consequence of the little profit which the fishermen expected. The oysters having been sold at 20f. the thousand, the total profit of the season has been 78,000f. The number of fish just mentioned, and the amount obtained, are the number and amount known in a month at Granville. The fishermen of Granville have not been more fortunate, in consequence of the unprecedented state of the sea, formerly so productive, but which for some years past have been worked by too large a number of boats. In the season 1862-3 the Granville boats took 1,500,000 oysters, which, being sold at 80 fr. the thousand, produced 241,000f. The Granville season of 1862-3 produced 99,000,000 oysters, which sold for 720,000f. The Cancale fishermen then obtained about the same result, although oysters were only worth 4f. or 6f. the thousand on the 1st of May, which must be put in consequence of their scarcity.

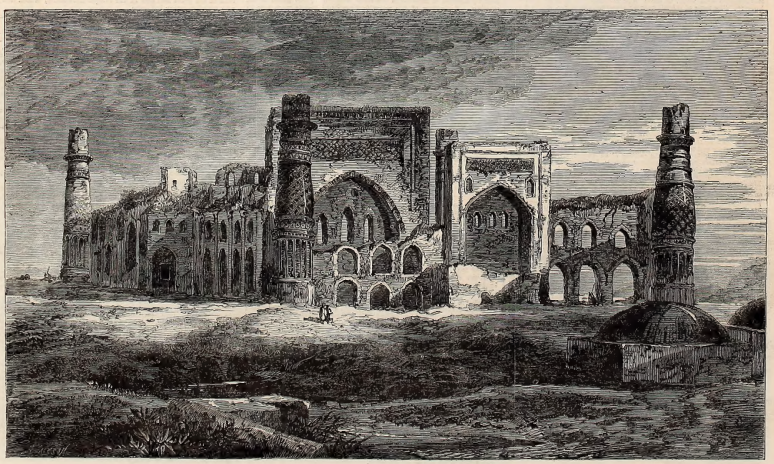
SKETCHES OF HERAT.



THE CITADEL.

(Continued from page 645).

through the inclosed gardens and vineyards of Zungee Zawar, sees stretched before him a magnificent plain covered with forts and villages. Towards the south, presenting a strong contrast to the cultivated plain, is a rugged range of sterile hills. Looking over this plain the eye first rests upon the town of Ghorian, with its numerous surrounding suburbs, fine vineyards, and extensive gardens. Next to Herat, Ghorian is the largest and most inhabited of the towns in the Herat valley; the only other places of importance are Shamilan, Obi, and Koork. Ghorian, with its extensive vineyards and rich garden lands, suffered much during the invasion of the country by the Persians in 1856-7. The new fort was their first point of attack upon entering the valley, as was the old fort in former days, when Mahomed Shah marched upon Herat. Ghorian, owing to its position, and owing also to the generally-reputed wealth of the town, has ever had to stand the first shock of the invader from the west. Against Mahomed Shah, with whose artillery were skilled Russian officers, Ghorian stood out a protracted siege; it was held against a vastly superior force with great gallantry, and, when finally it fell, the old fort was demolished by the conquerors; and now, above the ruins, stands the new mud-built fortress, which has all the appearance of strength. This was held, during the last Persian invasion, by an old chief of the Burdoorance tribe, for about ten days. He had neither guns nor provisions; and, after making some desperate sallies upon the Persian camp, he surrendered the place. He and his relation, Tanoo Khan, were held as prisoners by the Persians; but the two eventually escaped to Herat, where, during the siege of some fourteen months, they proved among the most gallant and most distinguished of its defenders. The old chief Medjid Khan has been badly wounded on several occasions; but, notwithstanding his wounds and his age, he is, or was till three or four years ago, one of the most fearless and daring of horsemen. When the Persians had once possessed themselves of the fort, they destroyed, as much as lay in their power, the defences and outworks; they wantonly pulled down the dwellings in the town, and recklessly burnt the beams and rafters of wood that supported them. Throughout the surrounding country—in the villages, in the gardens, in the vineyards—traces for many years to come will be seen of the wanton havoc and destruction committed by the lawless Persian Sirbuz. From Ghorian a perfectly level plain stretches away to the east in the direction of the city of Herat. The breadth of the so-called Valley of Herat—the well-watered plain that lays between two parallel ranges of rocky, bare hills, and towards the eastern part of which the city is situated—is from some ten to fifteen miles. It contains, according to the inhabitants, nearly 200 towns and villages. These are for the most part fortified by high mud walls, with bastions and turrets, but rarely with a ditch. The entrance to these villages is strangely confined and narrow; so that on the slightest alarm it can easily be shut, or blocked up with stones and earth, which are always at hand, ready for an emergency. With timely warning, the inhabitants can make themselves perfectly secure against the attacks of the predatory tribes of horsemen that frequently sweep down in large bodies across the northern frontier of the territory from Turkistan. These Turcoman hordes bring no artillery with them of any description, and, consequently, dare not venture an attack upon the defences of the village or town. Should they attempt to do so, a thing they are rarely known to do, they invariably meet with heavy loss at the hands of the villagers, who man the walls and pour down upon the horsemen a heavy matchlock fire. These inroads of the Turcomans are dreaded throughout the length and breadth of the land—in Persia even more than in the Herat territory. If no timely warning of the approach of these mauraders reaches the unfortunate cultivators of the soil, they fall an easy prey, and are carried off strapped to horses' backs, and sold eventually as slaves in the far-distant markets of Khiva and Bokhara. Very few of these unfortunate men ever find their way back to their native country, but die, as they have lived, in a hopeless, cheerless, captivity. The valley of Herat, and the lands in the vicinity, occupied by wandering nomadic tribes, have suffered much from time immemorial at the hands of these predatory Turcoman horsemen. Only during the rule of the Wuzeer Yar Mahomed Khan does the Herat territory appear to have been free from their attacks. The inhabitants, speaking of that period, recount with pride how a single traveller might ride in perfect safety from Herat to Meshed—the first town of importance within the Persian frontier—with perfect safety from attack by the dreaded Turcoman. Since Yar Mahomed's death, CARAVANS are always escorted by a large body of horsemen, who are relieved by horsemen from the different villages on the road. From Ghorian to Herat the greater part of the road skirts or lies immediately through large cultivated tracts of country. The waters of the Heirood are conducted by means of numerous deep canals across the plain. Under the usurper Yar Mahomed the system of irrigation was well attended to. Within a range of many miles of Herat, east and west, but little of the rich land remained uncultivated. He employed a thing they are rarely known to do, they invariably meet with heavy loss at the hands of the villagers, who man the walls and pour down upon the horsemen a heavy matchlock fire. These inroads of the Turcomans are dreaded throughout the length and breadth of the land—in Persia even more than in the Herat territory. If no timely warning of the approach of these mauraders reaches the unfortunate cultivators of the soil, they fall an easy prey, and are carried off strapped to horses' backs, and sold eventually as slaves in the far-distant markets of Khiva and Bokhara. Very few of these unfortunate men ever find their way back to their native country, but die, as they have lived, in a hopeless, cheerless, captivity. The valley of Herat, and the lands in the vicinity, occupied by wandering nomadic tribes, have suffered much from time immemorial at the hands of these predatory Turcoman horsemen. Only during the rule of the Wuzeer Yar Mahomed Khan does the Herat territory appear to have been free from their attacks. The inhabitants, speaking of that period, recount with pride how a single traveller might ride in perfect safety from Herat to Meshed—the first town of importance within the Persian frontier—with perfect safety from attack by the dreaded Turcoman. Since Yar Mahomed's death, CARAVANS are always escorted by a large body of horsemen, who are relieved by horsemen from the different villages on the road. From Ghorian to Herat the greater part of the road skirts or lies immediately through large cultivated tracts of country. The waters of the Heirood are conducted by means of numerous deep canals across the plain. Under the usurper Yar Mahomed the system of irrigation was well attended to. Within a range of many miles of Herat, east and west, but little of the rich land remained uncultivated. He employed



RUINS OF THE MASELLA.

HERAT HORSEMEN AT EXERCISE.

numerous agents, who prevented any undue waste of water. Since his death troubles of various sorts, clan feuds, invasion, and a protracted siege have marred the beauty of the smiling fertile plain. Yar Mahomed was the governor of the territory some thirteen years. Though a cruel, bloodthirsty man, he was a wise ruler, and his rule was a time of prosperity to the city and surrounding country. He was succeeded by his son, Sid Mahomed Khan. After a short rule of some four or five years, and after a career of reckless and debauchery and violence, he was strangled, and his body thrown into the ditch of the citadel. Upon his death, a variety of intrigues arose among the chiefs and partisans. Finally, a nephew of the old King, Shah Kamran, assumed the rulership. He had been but a few months at Herat when, upon an alarm that the Dost was threatening the city from Afghanistan, he applied to Persia for assistance. The assistance came, and consequent upon it a long string of misfortunes fell upon the denuded city. A protracted siege, a famine, endless in various forms, and the death of many of whose people, sallied in rallies upon the Persian beleaguering force. England, ever interested in the fate of Herat, entered upon and carried successfully to an end what may justly be called one of a great country's little wars. Twenty years previous, under much similar circumstances, Lord Auckland, for the preservation of the independence of Herat, had pushed towards the north-west frontier one of the finest armies that had ever been assembled in India, a greater portion of whose proud legions, owing to a curious shifting of events, perished amid the snows of Cabul. At the present time we have the Persian army in a state of siege. This time it is an Afghan force that is besieging another Afghan force within the walls. That redoubtable warrior, Dost Mehemed Khan, has vowed that before he dies he will take the city. A large Persian force, under a Prince of the blood Royal, however, is on the frontier, ready at a moment's notice to march to the aid of the besieged garrison, or, in other words, to man the strong fortress with Persian troops. Herat, with its rich provinces and territory, appears ever to have the evil destiny of being the bone of contention between the Persians and the Afghans, and the apple of discord between the Czars of Russia have at different times made Russia aspire to conquest on her eastern frontier there is no doubt but the idea of holding Herat, with the aspect that events wear in the country, can hardly yet have taken any fixed shape in Russian politics. If it is, it surprises us that a Russian political agents so quick to act as Russia's, has taken no active measures to support a man who was placed in the Lieutenship of Herat by Persian influence, and mainly by the noiseless advice of Russia. It is quiet intelligible, added possibly to the nominal Dost Mehemed Khan, that he should be, as he is, fiery Barukzye, and have carried Herat by a coup de main. If so, the man who, looking back on his long career, can scarcely claim kindly feelings in his behalf from the Persian shah, will have the "key of India," as it was once called, and as it is still deemed by people to be, in his possession. The Persian army, with British Government, aided by the wisdom of the Foreign Office, will be with regard to this new Herat almost exactly where we have yet to be, and we trust we may yet have cause to admire.

THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA: REPAIRING DAMAGES IN THE CASEMATES OF FORT SUMTER ON THE NIGHT OF THE ATTACK.—SEE PAGE 653.

Few and far between, telegrams regarding the state of the city of Herat are handed westwards from the Government of Bampy from Constantinople. By the last accounts it would appear that the besiegers were, as it were, in the midst of a beleaguered force. A great scarcity of provisions prevails in the Dost's camp, while the besieged Heratees suffer forth and return from the granaries of the rich fertile valley. The city itself, inclosed as it is by a deep moat and lofty massive walls, is impregnable to any Afghan or Persian force. During the progress of the siege, it is said, some rash Persians, aided by skilled Russian and French officers, have twice laid mines to the town. On both occasions the saps were proved of a year. On the first occasion the Persians, after having sustained great losses, desisted from the place; on the second occasion, the city, but the capture was effected by the aid of treacherous Afghan troops within. Herat, though the Dost's army be reinforced, would, it was affirmed, be the mighty massive walls, that still tower proudly above the level garden country around. The four sides of the fortress, facing the four cardinal points, are each nearly three miles in length. The area of the city inclosed, consequently, is about that of a square mile. Long before the traveller approaches the city, the lofty, mud-coloured walls are seen rearing themselves aloft to a height of some hundred feet above the level of the plain. The foundations of the walls are of sun-burnt brick, solid, and of very ancient construction. The Retrieved, whose waters, by a system of most perfect irrigation, feature the whole valley, flow into the city by some seven four or five miles. Sultan Ahmed Khan, a report of whose death has recently reached the Europe, having been the chief of the Tim is the man who, under the name of "Sultan Jan," was well known during the Afghan War as one of the most active friends of the British cause in the tent when Akbar Khan shot Sir William Macnaughten, and it is said that, on a signal from Akbar, he severed the victim's wrist immediately previous to the perpetration of the fatal shot. He is closely allied to the Dost, both by blood and marriage, in a triple relationship. In addition to being a nephew of the Dost, he is also his son-in-law, for he married the Dost's favourite daughter, and the Dost's eldest son has married the favourite daughter of Sultan Jan. The standing this close but somewhat curious relationship that exists between them may have for many years been the cause of distrust of Sultan. The Heratees at exercise, as represented in my sketch, are fine daring horsemen, and equally well skilled in the use of the sabre and spear, and the firing of a fire-arm from the back of a steed across them as the top of his speed. The Pool-i-Malan is a very ancient ruined bridge, about which a great battle was fought. The arches are in ruins, laden camels still make their way across the Hurirood when the river is low. In any means at the present period of the bridge, when, in spring, owing to the melting snows, the river is at its highest, all communication is stopped. The citadel is an irregular, massive work, built on some ground rising in the north-east face. A few guns firing from its lofty bastions would search the whole town. Its small, badly-lighted rooms, and narrow passages, even by night at broad noonday, have been ever the scene of treacherous deeds and foul murders. Entered the citadel is the Ark, or palace, with its own walls of the city, and in a northerly direction, are the imposing ruins of the Musalla. Four columns, connected with brilliant arches, stand and faced at the base with large slabs of highly-wrought marble, stand at the angles of the ancient building, which, in the halcyon days of Herat was considered a great seat of learning by all the surrounding countries.

The monthly returns of emigration from Liverpool during the month of May have just been compiled by the Government emigration officers and forwarded to the Board of Trade. From these returns it appears that during the month sailing vessels cleared outwards with 12,910 and 28 ships sailing under the Passenger Act were 13,910, we make up the 27 ships of the latter, 39 steamers carrying 22,000 passengers cleared outwards for the United States; 1,000 for the British colonies and 200 were cleared outwards for foreign ports. For New South Wales there was only 1 ship, with 386 steerage passengers; for Victoria there was 1 ship, with 1 cabin and 350 steerage passengers; for Queensland there was 1 ship, with 13 cabin and 439 steerage passengers; for New Zealand 2 ships, with 400 steerage passengers; for Otago, or those not sailing under the Passengers Act, sailed to the number of 31. Of these 14 were to the United States, 1 to Canada, 1 to the West Indies, with 800 passengers; three were for Nova Scotia, with 11 passengers; 1 was for the South Wales, with 20 passengers; 2 were for Victoria, with 82 passengers; six were for South America, carrying 54 passengers; and 1 was for other countries, including the ports of the Mediterranean, with 1 passengers. The total number of emigrants during the month of May was therefore 1,000 in all; they number of vessels showing a decrease of 1821 on the month. In May 1862, the total number was 16,361, showing an increase of 1,000 in the month. This should be compared with the same month of last year. From the 1st of January to the 31st of May the present year has shown a decrease and also an increase of 36,750, as compared with the same period of 1862. It should also be noticed that during the month a number of vessels cleared for the ports would have been carried out but for a scarcity of ships, the quantity of shipping not equal to the demand.

At the last meeting of the Royal National Life-boat Institution, a memorial was presented to the Duke of Northumberland, of the life-boats of the society at Hastings and New Brighton (near Liverpool), for the gallant and successful rescue of the crew of the brig Levant, of Bristol, and four men from the smack Britannia, of Rye-sands, which were wrecked during the gale of November 14 last. The Hastings life-boat had also been the means of bringing to a place of safety the schooner Volcano, of Dublin, which was observed to be in distress, and the crew of a have broken from her moorings off Lyme. The silver medal of the institution and a copy of its vote on parchment were given to Mr. Thomas Parker, the Chief Officer of Coastguard at Pevensey-bay, and to Mr. Alexander Fenton, ship-builder of Hartlepool; and the bronze medal and parchment vote were written and £2 to W. J. Parsons, A. Gray, J. Simmons, and two other coastguardsmen, belonging to the district of Pevensey-bay, for their gallant conduct in the risk of life eleven out of fourteen of the crew of the ship Union, of Liverpool, which, during a very heavy gale of wind and high surf, was wrecked some time since on Rackray Rocky Rocks, near Petershead. Parsons obtained the silver medal and parchment vote, and £2 each was given to the other three coastguardsmen. It was reported that the members of the late Mrs. Ann Gibb had paid to the society her munificent bequest of £1000. The trustees of the late Mr. James Miller, of Glasgow, had also paid to the institution a legacy of £100 left to it by that gentleman. It was also reported that at the annual meeting of the Manchester Unity of the Independent Order of Oddfellows held on Saturday last it had been resolved to make a voluntary subscription throughout the order in aid of the National Life-boat Institution in consideration of its philanthropic and national character. Payments to survivors to £5 having been made on various life-boat establishments, the proceedings terminated.

LITERATURE.

COTTA'S ILLUSTRATED SCHILLER.

The year of Magenta and Solferino (1859) was also remarkable as the centenary anniversary of the birth of two great poets, distinguished not only for their literary eminence but for their character as popular writers, so intimately connected with the national life of Germany that the nations to which they respectively belonged as to be entitled to rank as representative men, the chosen expositors of those peculiarities of thought and feeling which constitute the distinctive characteristics of their countrymen. We allude to Burns and Schiller. That could be no more unexceptionable witness to this representative character of each than the enthusiasm with which Scotch and Germans vied in their honour on their favourite bards. There was nothing unreal or affected about either movement: neither was perverted into a machine for puffing or a speculation for profiting on the dead. Scotland's national poet was not long to take the matter into their own hands, and managed it right well, as will always be the case when a nation feels that it has a real interest in the fame of a great representation are fresh in the memory of all. The German enthusiasm was equally characteristic and genuine. Schiller was not a Scotchman, except for a certain tinge of political feeling among the Tudons. There could be no more striking difference in the external phenomena of the two demonstrations. When the speeches had all been spoken, the dinners eaten, the toasts drunk, the poetical addresses recited, it remained to be seen what practical effect the memory of the departed with the popular effervescence might have left behind. We doubt not Scotland would be found to give a practical answer to the question, business is with Germany, where there is certainly no lack of visible and tangible results. Not only have the literature been benefited by the celebration, and cannot any one acquainted with the peculiarity of book-engendering Teutons imagine what their means? Besides, there are handsome editions of the poet's works issued for the purpose of encouraging art and letters in the spirit of the defunct. Again, Mount Schiller, at Stuttgart, has been crowned with a magnificent pile of portrait sculpture that ever proceeded from the inspired chisel of Thorwaldsen. Then, the monument to Schiller at Berlin, the first resurrection of another statue at Munich, said to occupy one of the finest sites in Europe. Yes, and there is a statue at Vienna, which as we would be most aptly settled by the process of arbitration known to youth as "laying a copper," we nevertheless ventured to rain an opinion that Goethe was the more deserving person on the whole. Vive pleas de semaines general. But if the comparative popularity of these great poets is to be made the ground of comparison, it must be settled by the fidelity with which they have respectively reproduced the thoughts, feelings, and character of their countrymen, by the excellence of their nation, if they are to be regarded in their narrower Teutonic, rather than in their general European character. Schiller, as we have indeed, were for banishing the Centenary of 1859 has decided it irrevocably in favour of Schiller. Nothing like the same exuberance of enthusiasm was manifested on the occasion of the Goethe centenary of the following year, ten years previously; and although this might, doubtless, be accounted for by the fact that the latter was not a year of political affairs, it was nevertheless evident that the nation had an instinctive consciousness that the occasion was not one which was of such interest concerned.

Had Europe, instead of Germany, been called upon to determine the relative claims of the two poets, then this decision would, doubtless, have been reversed. Beyond question, Goethe is the greatest mens in modern European literature, and his fame will be more and more enhanced so wide an influence, and, if to the impression of his own writings we add that which he has exercised through the medium of Carlyle and Emerson—whose inspiration is to a great extent derived from them, and the effect wrought in turn by the imitators of both—it must be allowed that Goethe's is but three-score years of cultivation to be found who is not directly or indirectly indebted to Goethe. Schiller's influence is far more limited. He has not the same universal and effective within its sphere. Goethe's cosmopolitanism is a source of perplexity to many. Schiller's is a source of joy to the true patriot into tongue—the calmness of his vision is deficient in eagerness and fire. Goethe is always looking at everything from the height of a level of his latter years, bears the stamp of youth as evidently as Goethe's does of completeness and maturity. Hence, he is ever acceptable to the generation in succession, and will continue to be so as long as youth last, but ceaseless aspiration towards the Good, the Beautiful, and the True. Schiller was ever young, and therefore, perhaps, more universal but not expressed by years and experience. One of his finest poems is a hymn to the Ideal, and the ideal was the object of his desire in almost all his glowing stanzas. He did not indeed possess that magical imagination which "educates worlds and then imagines new," and which can "people Heaven, Earth, and Hell" as Shakspeare's Ariel does. Nor had he, like Keats, that intuitive perception of the conditions of a past state which enabled him to call back and realise the life of the ancient century England; nor had he so imbibed the spirit of antiquity as to reproduce the beauty and simplicity of ancient art as Goethe has done of Goethe. His imagination was rather of that kind which, profoundly impressed with the grotesqueness of modern society, presented to that shield to shroud him in manner towards that glorious ideal which ever remains an abstract conception in the poet's mind. By a process, as it were, of mental crystallisation, he gives form to the unlovely, or low, or comparatively prosaic is detached and falls away as incoherent in the presence of the beautiful, which is strengthened, and brought forward, and made to loom more prominently upon the vision. Hence, in the case of Schiller, the ideal is always there, till at length the entire scene or incident is displayed as nearly as may be in harmony with the conception formed by the poet, whose mind is as it were, the focus in which the rays meet to reproduce the higher imaginative truth which underlies all the accurate picture of the world of sense. Of this the ballad of Fridolin is a beautiful example, and nothing in them is so remarkable as the rapidity of thought and the concentration of style which they exhibit. Not an anything be more admirable than the composition of the "Knight's Glove," and how perfectly are the characters of the knight and chaste; highly wrought without the appearance of effort, and in general, a most perfect specimen of ballad composition. The poetical equilibrium between expression and matter, not a word too little or too much. The description of the lion's den is more graphic and picturesque than the pictures in "The Bride of Messina," which hurry along with the rush and energy of a torrent rapidly pent in between the barriers of rock which obscure its course, and yet with perfect diction. The same principle lies at the root of Schiller's great drama of his latter years, "Wallenstein's Camp," which, in addition to its picturesqueness, its power to conjure the imagination, to people the mind with a throng of living beings, is a most perfect work of art. Indeed, Schiller was deficient in some of the requisites of the dramatist. But whatever the defects of his plays as wholes, he has, at all events, created a gallery of picturesque whose well-defined individuality and picturesque attributes leave an indelible impression, and, from their vigour and salience, are admirably adapted to dramatic impersonation. Hence his dramas retain an ever-new possession of the stage, and no decline in their popularity is apparent. Everybody in Germany is familiar with them, and the celebration of the centenary excited pleasant recollections in the breast of every playgoer in the land. No wonder that they all flocked to do him honour. Everywhere under the sun the people's heart is with the objective writers, who represent action as well as feeling, rather than with the more reclusive and delicate geniuses who draw out, with minute anatomy and exquisite dissection, the emotions of a solitary breast. Especially will this be the case where an intensely objective writer is at the same time intensely national. To a certain extent, Schiller is at once the Burns and the Walter Scott of Germany. Though his songs, properly so called, are few in number, and far inferior in merit to those of Goethe and Heine, his ballads go far to make up the deficit, and constitute him the favourite lyrist of the nation; while his "Wallenstein" and "William Tell" are to Germany almost what Scott's novels are to Scotland, or Shakspeare's historical plays to English history, seizing upon the heroes of popular story, and framing the to-thing traditions of the past into vigorous pictures. Wallenstein is as far and wide for his subjects; sang of the East like a Persian, and treated classic themes like a Greek. The genius of Schiller, even when selecting a story from a foreign source, always remained a German.

The magnificent work from which we have this week selected two illustrations is to be regarded as the great publishing house, Cotta's, chief contribution to the Schiller centenary. It is a folio edition of Schiller's lyrical poems, superbly bound, printed on the best paper, and illustrated by the most distinguished artists of Europe by some of the best artists in Germany, including Ehrley, whose picture of "Love in the Banners" we produce so great a success at the International Exhibition last year, his brother, and other well-known names. Two of these designs are of a light and airy sort, while their characteristics are such as to bring the chief distinctions of British and German art into prominent contrast. The strength of the former lies in the effective force that of the latter in the expression of elevated sentiment and the treatment of the human form. As a general rule, the British artist's sculptures in lofty conception disappointed expectation. The subjects were not very interesting; the colouring appeared to be void of reality; there was nothing to rivet the popular eye or produce an abiding impression in the mind, with the single and memorable exception of the great work already referred to. But in Germany, where the Government were most inadequately represented, and, indeed, from the native of the country, all the works exhibited in every exhibition of pictures should display them on an equal footing with their competitors. Their greatest works are the result of public taste, fostered by private purchasers, but frescoes, designed for the decoration of public buildings. The State is the great patron of art in Germany, and, in consequence, the works of the best artists are undertaken on a great scale, and belong to the highest class of art, while the subordinate branches are comparatively neglected. Then, on the other hand, the artist depends upon his dexterity in hitting the taste of the mass, and the current of popular feeling, and therefore he is apt to paint for style to which most of our so-called historical pictures really belong. It is only an exhibition like that which will venture, as a man of independent resources like Mr. Watts that can afford, to follow his own inclinations; and so, in spite of the traditions of Reynolds, and with the conventionalities of the Royal Academy on the top of its official exponents, our school has come to be more nearly allied to the Dutch than to any other. The reality of Wilkie Mulready which constitutes so large an ingredient in the national character, is artificially excluded from the national school of art. In landscape, whether the leading feature of the picture or a subordinate adjunct, the British artist is beyond rivalry. It is not that the Germans usually fail, as, not only in the mere portrayal of external nature, but in the perception of natural effects of light and shade, they are often highly successful, the general impression conveyed to the eye by a picture over the German departments is but rarely that of actuality experienced from. Compared with the British or the French walls, the spread of German canvas seemed cold and dull. But the tide of popular opinion is much towards disguising this unfortunate impression; for, as already stated, the selection of pictures was unsatisfactory, and deficient in those evidences of genius which, of something like commonplace, pictorial artifice and technical conventionality—which irradiate the mind with a sense of beauty and power and make us unconscious of the sad deficiency of these exalted qualities among our own. Modern art has no such triumph to boast of as the Cartoons of Raffaelle, now decorated the magnificent Tropponhau in the Museum at Berlin. Each of these six colossal pictures is an epic in itself—the conception of a daring genius inspired by study, nourished by devotion, guided by the soundest learning and the most enlightened and comprehensive views of the history and the purposes of man's existence. Something of the same kind was visible in the fair interior work of Cornelius, though the technical execution might well be criticised; but the conception was grand, and the treatment original, evidently proceeding from a cultivated mind familiar with the aspects of the period it endeavoured to represent. In the book before us we find the same indications of the spirit and of the power of the artist with the same lack of the author they undertake to expound, accompanied with that freedom and skill in the delineation of the human form which the educated artists redeem their failures as colourists. Of course, the illustrations are not all equally successful; we prefer the finest of the number Ferdinand Foley's illustration of the famous ballad, "Too Diver," which, we trust, is intended to be executed in fresco or oil. The composition is admirable, the dramatic dignity and propriety. The centre is occupied by the cold, stately figure of the tyrant, who has just cast the cup into the monster's den. The page is profusely stained and dull from his former immersion, is on the point of springing out of the arena, and has already overtaken and seized the young Princess, who, with her attendant, forms an admirable balance to the composition. Behind are the King's retinue, and at a window peeps upon his halbert, explores the chasm with cautious foot and scrutinising eye. Equal to the larger design but for variety and protrusion is the figure of the knight as he dives from his fated successful plunge, as, emerging slowly from the grey waste of thunder, he holds up the cup in his left hand, and displays the Royal party on the summit of the rock with a look of triumph, fearlessness of a different character from that which the admirable genre pictures, "The Punchbowl," "The Harpsichord," "The Learned Lady," and, most charming of all, "The Assignation," by Homberg. After the knight has descended to the depository of the lover, and the arch countenance of the damsel who steals behind him is seen peering over the edge of the fatal reverse. Another illustration by Romberg, "Dido and Æneas at the entrance of the cavern," is also extremely pretty, and the figure of Dido, with the wild luxuriancy of passion reminds us a good deal of our own Poole. Carl Foley's Thekla singing has famous song is also extremely pretty, and the expression of feeling is commendable, but is injured by the imperfection of the landscape, which is far more disagreeable the one in the picture of "Fridolin's Request," and also by the absence of the drowsy poetry of "Hero and Leander." The fault consists in a sort of hurriousness and want of finish. Much the same observation made by a witty writer to the effect that a German painter never completes a picture, which, however, is not the ability of German artists to succeed in landscape when they choose; the first, in particular, is a real gem, and the artist would have had his own only fault be found with the execution of the landscape portion of an other picture, "The Lay of the Minnesinger of Dyrow," by the reprint design, recalling a famous work of Titian. The same artist's "Damon and Pythias" deserves equal praise for its masterly composition, and for the truth and spirit of the figure of Damon, as, utterly exhausted by excitement and fatigue, he falls at his friend's feet, and protests by vow that he has accomplished the task appointed. On the whole, any one who will examine these works in an unprejudiced spirit, and with a knowledge of history is far beyond England in all the requisites of historical painting. It is, however, equally true that England has adopted and advanced a style of art which is less capable of being rendered the vehicle of fine and poetic feeling, but to which Germany is a stranger. We allude to the romantic style of painting invented, as it would appear, by Giorgione, where the subject is purposely indefinite, and the aim is to excite a vague and ideal tone of feeling, such as might be aroused by a strain of melancholy music. The conclusion of the whole matter is, that both German and English artists might gain much by a better acquaintance with each other.

The first of the illustrations we engrave accompanies the spirited ballad "Count Eberhard the Weeper," and represents the stout old knight mourning over his son. It is by Ferdinan Foley. Together is by Homberg: the subject speaks for itself, and we need only add that it refers to a passage in the "Song of the Bell."

Taken as a whole, this volume is most creditable to German art, German national feeling, and the enterprise of Messrs. Cotta. We only trust that Shakespere's tercentenary next year may leave some equally satisfactory memorial behind it. The anniversary is certain to be commemorated in Germany; and it is time that it should begin to occupy the thoughts of those among ourselves whose position might avail to prevent its becoming an engine in the hands of mere speculators.

THE ANGEL IN THE HOUSE. By COVENTRY PATMORE. Two vols. Macmillan and Co.

Hence, an invaluable authority, more than nine years as the propriety time for an author to bear his MS. by him before sending it forth to try its fortune with the public. He does not say whether, on the principle of reciprocity, the public is bound to suspend its judgment an equal space of time. By the end of which a period (as the more than twice the lifetime of the second French Republic) the book and the judgment must both be tolerably matures; and, indeed, the fact of any book surviving to be talked of nine years after publication may safely be accepted as a symptom of remarkable goodness or badness, or, more probably, commonplace, as well as greatness. Exactly this magic period happens to have elapsed since the first instalment of "The Angel in the House" was given to the world. Warmly praised, vigorously attacked, the work has, at all events, given ample proof of vitality. It has lived, it has thriven, it does not show the proofs of superfluous limbs, it has developed itself from the original germ into the two handsome volumes before us. Good, bad, or indifferent, as it may be pronounced, it is, at all events, a fact—something of which the student of our modern literature must take cognisance, whether he will or not. The title has become proverbial, quotations continually turning up in the most unlikely places; it was but the other day that we met our eyes in Bell's Sporting Memories. Without entering into any detailed or elaborate criticism, we are about to enable those of our readers who may not have seen the poem to form some opinion of it for themselves. It is, of course, a love-story; and the subject of book the first is sufficiently explained by the title, "The Betrothal." Mr. Vaughan, a gentleman from his Continental travels to his country house in Wiltshire, and proceeds to renew acquaintance with the family of the good Dean Churchill :—

Once more I came to Sarum Close,
With joy half memory, half new;
And breathed the sunny views that rose
And blew the shadows o'er the grass;
And in the elm-arched avenues
And in the chestnut-planted nooks
I filled my nostrils with perfumes
And adopted the clouds to wills and names,
And watched down the serious strain
Of Sarum's bells, when, time by time,
I reached the Dean's, with heart and brain
Tranquilised to the trembling strings.
"Twas half my home six years ago,
The six years had not aged it a
Red-brick and ashlar, long and low,
With terraces and with orchis lit;
Geranium, hydrids, rose arrayed
The windows, all wide open threw,
And some one in the study played
The "Wedding March" of Mendelssohn.

The above is but one specimen of the many lovely pictures with which this book is replete.

The title of the next book, "The Espousals," also carries its own explanation with it. This canto seems to us hardly equal to the former, not from any deficiency in beauty, but from some little want of a story. Slight and uneventful as is the story of the preceding book, it still exerts fulness of the main action of a plot by constraining the writer to observe a certain order. Every incident had description in a place prepared for it by the exigencies of the narrative, into which it falls as a matter of course. The total impression is that of a work of art. The arrangement of "The Espousals," on the other hand, is almost entirely arbitrary, and no beauty of detail can altogether compensate for the asceitics of form and order. The opening nature of the fine detail will be appreciated from passages like this, selected from a host of equal merit :

Then when the spread time of May
Brings all the hedges with her wreaths,
And on the sweeps of wooded hills
Fewer than fleecy clouds to breathes,
When like to like is finally mated,
And each thing joins in Spring's refrain,
"Let those love now who never loved,
Let those who have loved, love again:"
Then I, to whom the year brings round
Lay stretched within a lonely glade,
Abandoned to delicious thought
Beneath the softly-twinkling shade.
The leaves, all stirring, animated well
A neighbouring rush of waters cold,
And as the sun or shadow fell,
So these were green and these were gold;
In dim recesses hyacinths drowsed,
And breathin of primrose lit the air,
Which, wandering through the woodland, stooped,
And gathered perfumes here and there;
Then the spray the squirrel swung,
And careless songbirds, six or seven,
Poured songs the leaves among
Fit for their only listener, Heaven.

The following lines must serve as a specimen and brief example of the terse and profound chapters of reflective poetry, which are interspersed throughout the first two books, under the title of Preludes :—

As if I chafed the sparks from glass,
And said, "It lightens, hitherto
The songs I've made of love may pass
For all but for proportion true;
But likeness and proportion, well
Here fail, as it a child in play,
Catching the lakes of Heaven, should think
Crying "Leviathan!" where, here's the sea."
Yet, by the help of what's so weak,
But not diverse, to those who know,
And only unto those I speak,
May far-inferring fancy show
Love's living sea by oasts uncurbed,
Its depth, its mystery, and its might,
Its indignation if disturbed,
Its glittering peace of its delight.

These few passage, "for all but for proportion true," may, perhaps, serve to exhibit the general character of the poem thus far. It is pre-eminently a book for lovers—a book whose a manly and earnest purpose is associated with cheerfulness of tone and ease of execution. The next part, "Faithful for Ever," is in a different vein; it is the story of noble but unhappy love. The earlier cantos of this section are perhaps the finest among Mr. Patmore's writings, wrought up with tragic energy, and a deep but suppressed intensity of passion, but we have no space to devote to them, or to the last division of the poem, "The Victories of Love." We can only quote the concluding lines, in which the writer utters his aspirations with a clearness as well as a force which separate the necessity of any commentary from us :—

Ere wrath or rot destroy
Of England's state the fair,
Oh! might I be its charm declare
That in new lands, in far off years,
Delighted he should cry that here
"Twas to the Lord that somewhat best Works, to the wonderer' the rest!"
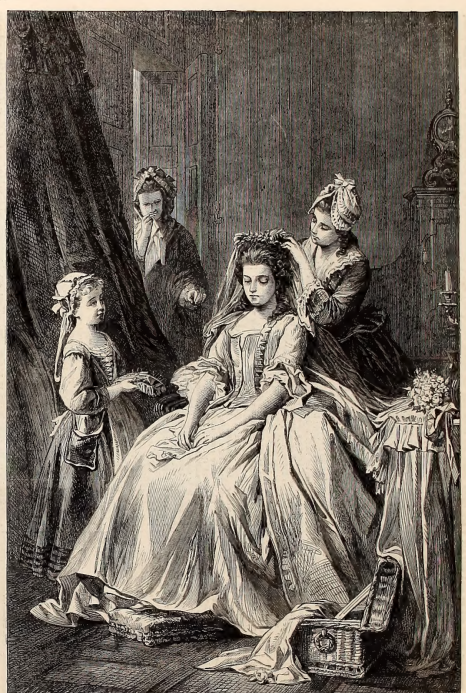
We, in our day, have better done
The thing or that than any one;
And who but we, still admiring, now
How exellent for images
Was Greece, for laws how wise was Rome;
But read this Poet, and say if home
And private love did e'er so smile
As in that ancient English Isle!

OTTILIO MALATESTA. By T. ADOLPHUS TROLLOPE. Three vols. Chapman and Hall.

Deeds of love and deeds of war; maidens wooed in shady grove or, haply, in cathedral cloister; youthful heroes dying in the breach; manly warriors covered with glory; the Amazon leaving her distaff behind and shouldering the musket side by side with father or brother, husband or lover; constancy rewarded by ultimate triumph, and perjury punished by bitter remorse and—as thunder never tires us—many romances. And such Mr. Trollope has chosen for his book, with bountiful laity for the scene of his drama. The date at which the story opens is 1505, when "two individuals," as Mr. Trollope calls them, "were completing the battle even math of their mediæval course at Bologna." One was a marked contrast to the other. The first-named was a handsome, greedy, courtly, fashionably dressed, and of high rank; the other was a scholarly, unpolished, poverty-stricken, and of humble origin; and yet the latter has exercised a moral influence upon the former which accounts for the title—Ottilio Malatesta, instead of Sigismondo Pandolfo Count de La Mandorna di San Luca. In fact, the noble has condescended, in deference to the protests of the plebeian, to take a wife named Matilda Tasca but Ottilio is the first, so he says; but a lie is in his heart, for, though he goes through the ceremony of marriage, he secretly loves the humble student as a witness to it, he has reason to feel sure that the marriage is invalid. Matilda is a mere puppet in the hands of Malatesta, and her life becomes a great Marchese: how he wins the love and—what was less perhaps to him but more in the eyes of the world—the fortune of Bella the Great Book of Nature, and the Great Book of the Human Judgment of the Royal Humane Society; how he fights for his bride, and how he scandalises the world by the way in which he treats of a father but in search of a mother, and finds her—all this will be recommended to the attention of the reader. Suffice it, for the present at which we are first introduced to Giulio in 1848, that stirring epoch when the coming events seem to make the very shadows of the past cast more marked shadows before; and Mr. Trollope has not omitted to avail himself of them for the purpose of still further heightening the interest of his readers. The ecclesiastical mismanagement have both been enlisted in his cause and Garibaldi and Mazzini have come to the assistance of the romancist and professional episodes. Nor is it only the mismanagement of Ecclesiastical affairs that Mr. Trollope has undertaken to expose, but appears to be unexceptionable; but then that is when not priests but young ladies have to do with them. For instance, Maddalena's description of the convent of Sant'Orsola, with the Abbess, Sister Angelica of her face, and hands, and figure will be pronounced admirable; and a shade of regret will fall for a moment upon the mind of the fair readers to think that such opportunities are not forthcoming in Protestant convents. Sister Angelica, however, is a Roman Catholic saint, is, for the most part, very pleasant reading. It is not absorbing, but it has plenty of incident; the tediousness of the Marchese Malatesta is a fine contrast to the ease relieved by the sprightliness and piquancy of Carlo Beranzi and Stella Altamiri; and glimpses of the machinery thereby evolving from the Papal Government and the Austrian domination given earlier and more vividly than would have suited Mr. Wilkie Collins, in the case of those who need to be told what is going on and

"COUNT EBERHARD THE WEEPER," FROM COTTA'S EDITION OF SCHILLER.



PREPARING FOR THE WEDDING ("SONG OF THE BELL,") FROM COTTA'S EDITION OF SCHILLER.—SEE PAGE 650.

THE ASCOT CUPS.

THE recent Ascot meeting, which, thanks to the presence of the Prince and Princess of Wales, was the most prosperous on record as regards Stand receipts and general attendance, did not come behind previous years in the beauty of its cups. Her Majesty's "Gold Vase" was an Elizabethan silver tankard, surmounted by a group from the legend of "Herne the Hunter," manufactured by Messrs. Garrard and Co., and modelled by Mr. W. F. Spencer. It was won by Mr. Crook's Adventurer, ridden by Clement.

The Ascot Cup was also the work of the same eminent firm and designer. It is a flagon in the Renaissance style, ornamented with bassi reliefi.—Henry V. at Agincourt, and a scene from Shakspeare's Henry IV., act ii., scene i.—"Oh monstrous! but one halfpennyworth of bread to this intolerable quantity of sack!" The struggle for it produced the third dead heat which has taken place for this cup since its establishment in 1807. Mr. Merry, who won it this year with Buckstone, ridden by A. Edwards, was alike fortunate in 1861 with Thormanby.

The Royal Hunt Cup, which fell to the lot of Mr. Hodgman's Victor, is, appropriately enough, a richly-ornamented vase, silver-trusted and polished, with a stag, doe, and fawn at its base, which were pronounced by that great hunting Nestor, Mr. Charles Davis, to be the perfection of modelling. There are also bassi relievi of deer and dogs on the concave panels. The handles are fashioned to resemble branches of the oak, and on the cover are figures of Diana and greyhounds. It was manufactured by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, and designed by Mr. A. J. Barrett.

BUCKSTONE, WINNER OF THE ASCOT CUP IN 1863.

THE three great weight-for-age cup-races of the year are not prolific in dead heats, and, out of 167 contests for them, there have only been four dead heats—three for the Ascot, one for the Doncaster, and none for the Goodwood. That between Kettledrum and Brown Duchess, at Doncaster, which was, perhaps, the most memorable of the four, was not run off. Brighton and Egham's contest in 1808 seems quite forgotten, but records tell us that the former won. Rowton's and Camerino's was made especially famous by the fact of Chifney and Robinson riding in it, and the St. Leger winner's leg giving way in the decider. The one of last Thursday lost some of its interest from the fact that Tim Whiffler's legs were hardly in a state to encounter the iron-bound ground; and it was evident from his way of going that he was not the Tim of last year. Buckstone is a four-year-old, by Voltigeur from Burlesque by Touchstone, which died a short time since, leaving a colt foal, full brother to him. She was the property of the late Lord John Scott, and came into Mr. Merry's hands when he purchased all the Cawston mares, &c., in a lot from his Lordship. It was at Ascot that he made his début, in 1861, winning his maiden race—the Queen Stand Plate—over its T.Y.C. He was twice beaten that year by Arvelation, and ran third for the Derby, second for the St. Leger, and second for the Doncaster Cup last year, in which a £500 Newmarket match was all that he scored.

His success this year has been somewhat varied; and, after the severe fit of megrims with which he was seized on the course at Epsom, where he ran second to Atherstone for the Cup, the public, although ever ready to follow Mr. Merry's lead, did not regard him with any remarkable favour. The improvement which he has made quite justified the stable's confidence, as he has ripened at last into quite a cup horse, with good length and immense propelling power. He seemed to go with a fine, sweeping stride, without being affected by the ground, which, with other considerations, reduced the field to six. Lord William Fowlett started Eleanor to make a pace for Tim Whiffler, but, although she went off with the lead, the deciding heat, when the horse had to make his own running, was the faster of the two. Opposite the Grand Stand Buckstone appeared to have the best of it, but Rogers "sailored" for a few strides, and then, sitting down on his horse, gave him two tremendous strokes with the whip, got up in the last stride, and made a dead heat of it.

In the deciding heat Tim Whiffler jumped off with the lead and made the running to the distance, where Buckstone closed with him. Just opposite the end of the Stand Edwards, who had waited with great patience, called on his horse for a final effort, to which he immediately responded, and, quitting his opponent, won by two lengths amid most tremendous cheering.

The cup was worth £300, and the stakes, after all deductions, £390; and Mr. Merry won a good amount in bets.

Our Engraving is from a portrait by Mr. Harry Hall, of Newmarket.

THE CATHEDRAL OF TOLEDO.

TOLEDO, the ancient capital of Spain, has been strangely neglected by our painters. Of the many English artists who (as we had occasion to say last week) have found in Spain an El Dorado of the picturesque, nearly all have confined themselves to the glories of Seville, Granada, and the Alhambra. Mr. Read has struck upon a new vein of richest ore. He showed us, by a sketch in the Winter Exhibition of the Society of Painters in Water Colours, that the very site of this ancient city is one of the most remarkable anywhere to be found: for Toledo stands on the top of a steep hill, crowning it with many massive and stately buildings. And now, in the drawing we have engraved from the present exhibition of the same society, he convinces us that the interior of the very ancient cathedral is one of the most impressive and effective in Europe, owing to its great magnitude and the quantity of its painted glass. It would be still more magnificent were it not so much divided and subdivided. The painted glass is superb, and fills, we see, the choir, the great wheel-windows of the transept, and the ends of the aisles, and even the clerestory. The quantity of this, together with the massiveness of the architecture, renders the interior very solemn—fully as sombre, no doubt, as Mr. Read has represented. Going into the cathedral from the sunny streets, it is said to take a considerable time before the eye can distinguish objects in the masses of shadow. The effect of the lovely iridescent light—as of fused rubies, emeralds, and sapphires—thrown, from the windows where the sun falls, on to the piers and pavement, has been successfully caught. Standing where the artist places the "point of station"—i.e., the north transept, looking towards the high altar—we see the immense grille entirely dividing the choir from the transept, and, to its left in the aisle, the great monument to the celebrated Cardinal Mendoza. The general style of the Gothic is simple, but the form of the triforium is peculiar. Mr. Ford, in his "Handbook of Spain," says:—"The spoliations and appropriations have tended to dim the former magnificence of this once splendid temple, which now lacks the spirit and movement of life; for here solitude and melancholy brood enshrined, and sad is the livery of Toledo. The pomp and ceremonies used to be remarkable even in Spain, where a really Divine service was performed. Then the vast space was crowded with restless myriads, and the city of the sleeper awoke as by a touch of the wand and filled the streets, changing into stir and crowds their usual deathlike monotony." Mr. Read has enlivened his picture and heightened its interest with one of these gorgeous ceremonies. A procession of the Archbishop, with his priestly attendants and acolytes, is bearing, with all the pomp of embroidered vestments and canopy, tapers, cross and crosier, a gilded effigy towards the high altar.

"THE CATHEDRAL OF TOLEDO," BY SAMUEL READ, FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

There is a valuable library still attached to the cathedral; but the University of Toledo, formerly of great repute, has long lost its estimation, and was entirely suppressed in 1807. In conclusion, we have to thank Mr. Read not only for the novelty of his subject but likewise for a very admirable drawing. The largest and most elaborate, it is also one of the best works we have seen from his pencil, and fairly establishes him among our very foremost painters of architectural subjects, and as especially distinguished for his ecclesiastical interiors.

THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA.

REPAIRING DAMAGES IN THE CASEMATES OF FORT SUMTER ON THE NIGHT OF THE ATTACK.

(From our own Correspondent.)

AFTER the Federal fleet had retired, which they did about half-past five p.m., working parties from the garrison were told off to strengthen those portions of the casemates which had been damaged. The injuries in every case were only round the openings or embrasures, the piers supporting the arches remaining untouched. Some hundreds of sandbags soon set everything to rights, and the next morning we were ready, anxiously and vainly expecting a renewal of the attack.

FINE ARTS.

THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

The exhibition, for the present year, of works by old masters and deceased British artists, the contributions of the "governors" of the British Institution and other collectors to the gallery in Pall-mall, is of great and varied interest—more so than may appear from a first impression. Although there are few salient features, the small but incisive but most precious truth pervades every collection of this kind, that one is here constantly tempted to compare for other than favourable to contemporary art. It is only just, however, to remember at all times that when we compare a collection of old masters with a modern exhibition, we have on the one the indiscriminate produce of a single year and of a single country, while on the other we have the choicest examples of the art of all the schools of Europe, carefully culled and weeded during several centuries. And not only does Old Pimm select with judgment, he has a power of toning and embellishing his treasures we can hardly hope to wring from the living. The mere discovery in the midst of the glowing colours, leisurely he spreads over them film on film of hardening varnishes ensued, till we can look into them as into the core of the carbuncle or the heart of the ruby, the sapphire, the emerald, or the chrysoprase. But, though the modern artist can never hope to rival the cunning of this oldest of the old masters, it would be absurd to suppose that any artist can learn nothing from the study of the finest lacquered ware that has come down to us centuries.

In every gathering of such gems of art precedence is always due to works of Italian origin, distinguished as they always are by sentiment, solidity, or sense of beauty. Of these, there are many in the Pall-mall Exhibition gallery, though not adequately representative of the nobility of purity and elevation of early Italian art as a means of inspiration. Illustrating its history in the most noteworthy in the velvet pictures of Prince Gualdobrio di Montefeltro, afterwards Duke of Urbino, Raphael's early master, handling the portrait of the reigning duke of Urbino (38), by the Umbrian painter, Melozzo da Forli. This picture is remarkable for the delicacy of the modelling of the face, the hair, and at this early period, and still more for the perspective of the carpeted steps leading to the throne, the architectural detail of the Renaissance. It also reminds us that Melozzo was one of the first to paint ceilings with figures—as the Italians say, sotto in su—that is, foreshortened as seen looking up from below; and of this the ceiling of the Santi Apostoli, at Rome, an "Ascension of Christ," by him painted in 1472, is a remarkably antiquated but interesting work. Correggio in the capols of Parma. The niche behind the saint shows the influence of Mantegna and his school. The "Christ bearing the Cbild," by Botticelli, is very similar to the naive examples in the National Gallery. A profile portrait of an Italian lady (25), ascribed to Fra Lippo, is a most beautiful example of the painted portraiture when it seemed to aim only at giving a diagram likeness, not a picture as well.

Coming to the period of the contemporaries of Raphael and the painters of the sixteenth century, we find a portrait of Julius II. (40), self attached to a very remarkable portrait of "Monsignor Leonello Pucci" (65), in Raphael's second manner, which was formerly attributed by the Marquis of Abercorn. The handling in the face and eyebrows, and the coldness of tone equally, however, we think, indicate this to be the work of Sebastiano del Piombo, who excelled in the fine modelling of the features, particularly the nose, admirable exemplified by Lord Lansdowne's portrait of a lady (54), and by that of Lord Ashburton, which, though representing this personage engaged in the fashionable pursuit of hand ball, is not the less full of dignity with the severe and sedate character of the Roman school. The very powerful relief of the head and the blackness of the shadows seem to invite the sculptor to Sebastiano's studio. Such also is the hardness in the marking of the eyes inducive us to consider it an early work of the master. The "Assumption of the Virgin" (39), in Pall Mall Art" contributes a small study of "St. John" (24), attributed to Leonardo da Vinci, which is a little gem, and one of the best in the Louvre. There is a small but striking picture—"Christ walking on the Sea, rescuing St. Peter" (41), by Andrea del Sarto, the "star-spangled" boy a peculiar effect. It is said to be by Daniele da Volterra, but shows the influence of Raphael's Roman style more than that of Michael Angelo. The portrait of Andrea del Sarto's wife, "La Fornarina," (42), by G. Bellini, is remarkable for force; and Lorenzo di Credi's "Annunciation" (43) for the delicacy and refinement of expression and delicacy of finish.

The Venetian school is extensively illustrated in examples of Titian, Tintoretto, Veronese, Moroni, and other leading masters, besides the Bellini just mentioned. Titian's large and splendid "Holy Family, St. Elizabeth, St. John, &c." (1), from Lord Stratford's Collection is more valuable than even some specimens of greater completeness and truth in the drawing, because it strongly represents one of that golden glow which steeps and suffuses nearly all the works of this master and with a lying reputation, which is the very perfection of Venetian sunsets. A similar harmonious richness, though within a somewhat subdued scale, pervades his portrait of "Doge Gritti" (65), from the Marquis of Westminster's contribution by the Duke of Hamilton. The State robe of the Doge, stiff with gold embroidery, helps to the richness of colour here as the severe dress of the lady does in the coding picture. A certain lack of vigour, however, betrayed in the painting of the hands, made Titian employ Paris Bordone to paint them. The silvery ivy of Paul Veronese's colouring may be contrasted with the golden glow of these in a splendid "Rape of Europa and Farms" (32), from Warwick Castle, which is, however, a rather heavy example, and wanting the usual freshness and spirit in the marriage of Bacchus and Ariadne. Jacio Cagliari, the son of Paul, is represented in a pretty St. Barbara, bearing a vase of Venetian glass.

Turning to the Spanish school, the grandeur of conception, power, and fertility of resource are well exemplified in a picture, "Venus, Vulcan, and Cupid" (120), from the Earl of Ellesmere's Gallery Collection. Venus, seated on one of the carved chests, or cassone, in which Italian ladies kept their wedding garments, is caressing Cupid. Vulcan, who sits beside her, draws her attention to a mirror, in which his own averted head is reflected, held by a female attendant in the background. The colouring and drawing of the figures in the foreground has invested a dog with his own snarl, bow, and quiver, and the whole painting is to us in the highest conventional equipments. Though in great part little more than a careless and coarse sketch, with the exception of the principal figures, the apparent, and probably painted in a few hours, it has very fine passages, and throughout gives unmistakable evidence of mature mastery and power. The contrast with the "Holy Family" (123), by Moroni (65), has that look of intense individualised character which so impressed Titian, and which, to induce him, in the opinion of a renowned Moroni as a better portrait-painter than himself. When we have mentioned the mythological "Venus and Cupid" (122), and landscapes, with "Tobit and the Angel" and "Mercury and Argus," by Salvator Rosa, expressive painter in his best style; a head of the Virgin, by Sasso Ferrato, in which sweetness of expression forms the place of natural sentiment; an example (50) of the great illuminator, Julio Clovio; specimens of landscape by Domenichino and the mature horrid scenes masquerading as well as the figures; several Canalettos, and Guardis, we have, we think, noticed all the principal Italian works here not before noticed. We must, however, add a few words on the Canalettos, as they possess a very rare charm in the more usual views in Venice, but three pictures painted on the artist's visit to the country at the invitation of his great patron, the first Duke of Northumberland. One of these (101), a view of Alnwick, the seat of this nobleman; another and better work represents his town mansion at Charing-cross, with the façade, the statue of Charles I., &c., precisely as we see it at the present day; and a third, of Whitehall, which shows us the ancient Westminster gatehouse, mature horrid scenes masquerading as well as the figures; several Canalettos, and Guardis, we have, we think, noticed all the principal Italian works here not before noticed. We must, however, add a few words on the Canalettos, as they possess a very rare charm in the more usual views in Venice, but three pictures painted on the artist's visit to the country at the invitation of his great patron, the first Duke of Northumberland. One of these (101), a view of Alnwick, the seat of this nobleman; another and better work represents his town mansion at Charing-cross, with the façade, the statue of Charles I., &c., precisely as we see it at the present day; and a third, of Whitehall, which shows us the ancient Westminster gatehouse, built as the principal approach to the monastery, the scaffolding for the erection of Westminster Bridge, the old houses in "Privy Gardens," and other sites interesting to the antiquary. The wriusenblance, the architectural precision, the air and daylight of Canaletto, seem to owe its especial advantage in these homely subjects.

The Spanish school is excellently represented in Lord Overstone's large "Glorification of the Virgin," by Murillo, which worthily occupies the place of honour. In colour it compares advantageously with the great picture by Murillo which the present Duke of Pimm purchased for some £24,000. In no other work by this master do we remember the colouring to be more intense and rich, yet clear. In expression it is, however, much inferior to the Louvre picture. The Virgin has not the rapt expression which elevates that great work of art above the ordinary naturalistic feeling which the painter evinced by so frequently taking his models from common Spanish life, while the satin draperies of some of the cherubs is irreverent and dis-illusionary. There is a curious story connected with this picture. It was painted, like most of Murillo's works, for a convent, and on the invasion of Spain by the French the monks cut out and buried the central portion occupied by the Virgin and Child, and replaced the missing portion by a careful copy of a similar work of the master's, which is now in the Louvre. When the Parisians fought the central group, and quite recently recovered, through Sir Charles Eastlake, the long-missing canvas from the Louvre. This is now so skilfully united that the mere "chill" of the restorer's varnish will separate the two pictures, and restore the original. Of Murillo's "Immaculate Conception" (93), sacrificed to Murillo, is much inferior to Lord Overstone's picture. A "Magdalene" (90) by the same master, and "St. Jerome Penitent" (91), is, however, equal to the first-named work in sweetness of colour, but, though chaste, not made deserving of the name. A "St. Francis Praying" (92), by Murillo (89) completes the number of Murillos, and, with two colossal black and white portraits of "Philip II." and "Philip III." (—Gualdobrio), the examples of the Spanish school.

Rembrandt stands first in the head of the northern painters with his "Descent from the Cross" (contributed by Viscount Clifden) of "Burgomaster Six" (26), the painter's friend and best patron. Nothing more like perfection in the painting of living and breathing flesh than this aristocrat has evolved from the mystic medium of his shadow-haunted canvases, and the "Descent from the Cross" is, we believe, the one to emanate than this ineffably quiet, thoughtful, and vital portrait. The magnificent drapery and the rich accessories are worthy of the same glamour of chiaroscuro, but, as a work, evidently executed with unusual care and consequently showing the painter's method more distinctly than in his more impulsive interest. The "Descent from the Cross" (27), from the Grosvenor Collection, and the "Descent from the Cross" (28), from Lord Ashburton's, with the first-named examples, even had the subjects been equally favourable, contrast in style with the "Descent" by a pair of Rembrandt's pupils, little sketch of a boatrait (52). By Snyders, the friend and assistant of Rubens, there is a picture (53) of "Fish, Fowl, and Game," and a small study of fish, flesh, fowl, and fruit, called "A Flemish Larder" (54). Among the Netherlandish pictures should be noticed as an "Interior of a Church" (55), by Van Eyck, and a little gem of which has scarcely been equalled by Meissonier, the first and modern, Gerard Dow's "Dropsical Lady" (56), with the old woman picking the pocket of a man asleep over his head (57). Of Teniers there are eight pictures, "The Village Fête," a detail, the figures of which, as in nearly all Dutch pictures, are drawn from the boors and vrouws of peasant life; sexpieces by Ostade, Van Mieris, Gerard Douw, and Peter de Hooge. Dutch and Flemish landscape-painting is further exemplified in two fine examples by Cuyp (70), in the wooded scenery of Hobbima (74), and in some sombre pictures by Ruysdael (75). The "Dutch Interior" (80) should not be overlooked. Other painters, besides the last mentioned and Rubens, who have been domiciled in the Netherlands, are Mytens and Vandyke, who have been nearly "By the former there are no less formal and hard portraits of "The Countess of Westmoreland" (—Fetherstonhaugh), of "Lord Bacon" (—Verulam), of "Wentworth, Earl of Cleveland and Family" (62), the eldest branch of the latter family of Wentworth, Earl of Strafford. By Vandyke a portrait of "The Abbé de St. Cyran" (21), the head of the Jansenists, by the French painter Philippe de Champagne, is curiously characteristic, but not otherwise remarkable.

Of the deceased British painters, Romney is most prominently represented. There are "Lady Hamilton" (141), as Sappho, illustrating his tentative and progressive styles, and of some considerable merit, though not equal to others of the artist. The same has earlier and hard manner, soon after his return from Italy, belong to "Lady Hamilton" (142), "Lady Hamilton" (143), and her sister, Miss Delaval (143), afterwards Lady Mochorough—all three from the collection of Lord Yarborough. "Mrs. Lloyd" (144), Romney, or rather Mr. Delaval has a musket in his hand, in allusion, together with the costume, to the Volunteer movement. The picture is the descent on the French coast under Lord Anson, in which he, with many other volunteers, took part, and which the Duke of Richmond and Lord Ashburton and Mr. Delaval themselves chiefly by their accession. Later in style are the portrait of a lady drinking coffee (145), from Lord Yarborough's Collection, and "Mrs. May; the full-length of the "Duchess of Cumberland" (painted in 1766), which is much inferior to a similar figure known as "The Lady in the Window Looking Out," and "Lady Hamilton" (156), which is much inferior to a similar figure known as "Contemplation," in Lord Yarborough's Collection. Romney, as a sketcher, and in a similar attitude to that which he used for the Comic Muse in his famous Garrick between Tragedy and Comedy. The "Lady" (157) is a most charming work, and the "Mrs. Lloyd" (158) is one of his few landscapes, and shows how assiduously and by what careful study he worked to attain excellence in this art.

Romney's great fault was sketchiness. The few of the many works here which show completed elaboration are those which seem to be formed of his powers from the splendid portraits by him exhibited in this gallery last year, and from others equally fine. The "Lady Hamilton" (159) is one of the most exquisite equal to those of Reynolds's best works; and his manly full-length of "Admiral Sir Francis Geary" (160), from the Earl of Yarborough's, is, like the portrait of Sir Joshua's portraits, on the stone rampart of a fortification overlooking the sea, and is a work of the highest merit. "Mrs. Elizabeth Ward" (165), so sculpturesque in pose and disposition of the drapery, is another example of the highest excellence. The two portraits of "Lord Stanley and his Sister" (180), subjects of portraiture in which Reynolds peculiarly excelled; his lovely "Mrs. Trench" (181), and his "Lady Cockburn and Her Three Children," the latter and adventurous son of Lady Mary, are such and all to be placed beside the works of the most renowned of Italian painters, and convince us that Romney is not yet fully appreciated. In several brilliant and highly-finished works by Gainsborough, from the seven miles which bewitched the painter so long, and while at first stimulating, perhaps ultimately checked his genius, the "Portrait of Mrs. Graham" (186), from Lord Lansdowne's, was painted in illustration of his friend Hayley's forgotten poem, The Triumphs of Temper." The "Portrait of Gainsborough Dupont" (187), as he walls when built by Boydell to exhibit his Shakspeare Gallery, and Lord Yarborough's "Mrs. Siddons as Tragedy" (188), from Reynolds's Hoppner's blank but others are fine portrait of Pitt was finished only in the sense that it was painted to completion. The "Portrait of Lady Cockburn and Her Three Children," by Hoppner, is another work painted in replica many times by the same painter. Among other noteworthy English works are Wilkie's "Card Players" (118), which, though in parts rather hard and opaque, is, on the whole, very brilliant, with the best Dutch picture here without fear for the result: the "Painted Children" (119), by Sir Thomas Lawrence; the "Cottage Girl" (170) Hogarth's Sketch of Sarah Macolms, the murderess (169), made in the dock, and Gainsborough's "Girl with Pigs" (171), Carrying a Pan of Milk" (184), by Gainsborough, much inferior in many similar works of the artist's pencil, and a small fresh study on the sea-coast, with fishermen and boat (185), and a sketch made by our English Vandykes from the great Vandyke of the Pembroke family (192). It is said that Gainsborough went with a party to see the Vandyke Room at Wilton, and that he was so struck with this picture that he asked permission to stand before it till his friends returned from making the rounds of the rooms, and that from his recollection of this examination, and with the aid of a print, he painted this sketch. Also, Constable's fresh and vigorous though somewhat coarse "Hadleigh Castle" (—masterly study of a clump of trees, by Old Crome (162); examples of Wilson, F. Nasmyth, and Muller; and the humorous and, in some parts more than usually brilliant "Rivals" (148), by the late O. R. Leslie.

ACCEPTANCE OF THE GREEK THRONE BY PRINCE WILLIAM OF DENMARK.

The Greek deputation had an audience of the King of Denmark on Saturday last, at the Castle of Christiansborg. Admiral Kanaris, the spokesman of the deputation, made the following speech :—

May it please your Majesty,—Upon the 18th of March the National Assembly of Greece proclaimed that it had chosen Prince William, son of Denmark as King of the Hellenes, under the title of George I. Addressed to the Sovereign with the intention to offer him the throne, this resolution, Sire, we deposit the decree containing this choice in your Majesty's hands, in the hope that your reply will fulfil the wishes and expectations of the Hellenic people. This choice, Sire, is as much an act of homage to the person of the august Sovereign who, by the decrees of Providence has placed the destinies of Denmark as a proof of confidence in the talents of the young Prince. The choice will have, Sire, the effect of drawing still closer the relations so happily established for ages and particularly during the present century between Greece and the Danish Royal family. The Greeks have all hopes upon the powerful protection of your Majesty, upon the support of the protecting Powers, in possessed with the conviction that she will one day see the fulfilment of the ardent wishes.

The King of Denmark replied :—

My answer, Sire, must be dictated by our relative, to which he has been called by the Greek people. In the negotiations at London of the great Powers, who largely contributed to the establishment of Greece, and manifested a special their interest in her progress, we stipulated as the condition of the acceptance of the throne by a Prince of Denmark that he should with the then consent of [illegible] opinion in expressing our cordial expectation that this union will soon take place; and we entrust Admiral Kanaris with the duty to say to people, should be linked in birthing with him the fulfilment of this well-founded, long-cherished desire. We hope that we will succeed in the cooperation of the Greek people, in developing the rich resources of the country and in consolidating the internal and external peace. This hope is shared by all who perceive the realization of the heroic combat of Greece for independence; and when your people shall have found in the new house this new guarantee of happiness Denmark's King will people.

Dursting in the Greek language.

The King next conducted the Prince to the highest step of the throne, kissed him three times, and said, with deep emotion and hearty kindness,

Receive the blessing of your King, and may God be with you.

King George subsequently gave audience to the deputation at the Palace of Fredensborg, when Admiral Kanaris read the following address, concluding as follows :—

Greece is convinced that your Majesty is filled with a sense of the high duties to which you are called, and will devote yourself to the welfare of the country and to the happiness of the nations. Greece, Sire, will have a brave king enough, after having seen this day, to exclaim with Simeon, "Lord, now lettest thy servant depart in peace."

King George replied :—

I receive the first greetings of the representatives of the Greek people with deep joy. I am deeply impressed that I have been chosen to be the first branch of the new whose name is linked with everlasting fame to the regeneration of Greece. I am convinced that the noble nation which has chosen me as its Sovereign has fallen to my lot, and will dedicate to it the utmost powers of my life. I am sure that I shall succeed in uniting my people for the accomplishment of our common object—the happiness of Greece. I have grown up in a country where hospitality is a virtue, and I am grateful for the hospitality which my son has thereby attained large and felicitous development. The bonds I have here formed will be dear to me on my new country, and I shall always bear in my heart the motto of the King of Denmark, "The love of the people is my strength."

The new King of the Greeks was much cheered by the people upon leaving the Castle of Christiansborg.

A large concourse of people assembled in the streets to greet the deputation, and the windows of the houses and many houses were decorated with flags.

The banquet given in the evening by his Majesty the King of Denmark was of an extremely brilliant character; 250 guests were present.

The King of Denmark proposed the health of King George of Greece, saying that he had always himself endeavoured to find happiness in the love of his people, and he hoped that the young King to proceed in the same course.

The King of Greece replied that he would faithfully observe his Majesty's advice, and that it should be his constant endeavour to do honour to the land which had chosen him.

The Greek deputation had an audience on Sunday of the King of Denmark, at which his Majesty conferred high Danish orders upon the members of the deputation.

CIVIL LIST PENSIONS.

The following pensions have been granted on the Civil List :—

Alder, Mr. Joshua, of Newcastle, £70, in consideration of his labours as a naturalist, especially in connection with marine zoology, in which he has evidently enlisted to poverty by circumstances over which he had no control.

Atkinson, Mrs., £50, in consideration of her valuable contributions to geographical science, the fruits of six years' explorations in Eastern Siberia and Mongolia, undertaken by her accomplished husband, and, after his death, in record of his researches—and of his having expended all his means in these efforts, leaving her and her children unprovided for.

Bartlett, Mr. George, £100, in appreciation of his pursuit of the natural and physical sciences during a long period, and resulting in the publication of the "Devon and Cornwall Natural History Society," and the publication of many works, but one in particular, entitled "Antiquities of the Caribs," &c.

Brown, Miss Frances, £100, on account of her works in prose and poetry, which have been much admired by the British public.

Fellows, Mr. S. W., £70, in consideration of a long career as author and traveller, and of his having published a work on Asia Minor.

Hughes, Mrs. Thomas, £100, in consideration of the literary merits of her husband, and further in high service as founder of the Greenwich Hospital Schools, and of the original conception of "Tom Brown's School Days."

Lees, Mr., £100, in testimony of the value of his Arabic dictionary, the product of twenty years' labour, and which is now passing through the press, but after accomplishment of the task.

Lowe, Mr. Robert, £100, in appreciation of his eminence in the studies of grammar, philology, and etimology, and of his contributions to the knowledge of the latter.

Maclear, Sir Thos., £100, in consideration of his services as astronomer to the Royal Observatory at the Cape.

Massey, Mr. Gerald, £70, in appreciation of his services as a lyric poet, serving from the Chartist movement.

O'Donovan, Mr., £60, in consideration of the late Dr. O'Donovan's valuable contributions to Irish literature and archæology.

Redding, Mr. Cyrus, £70, in consideration of his labours in the field of political and social literature, extending over more than half a century.

Strutt, Mrs. Elizabeth, £70, in consideration of her structural circumstances and of the merits of her father, the late Joseph Strutt, engraver.

Tregelles, Dr., £100, on account of his valuable labours on subjects connected with biblical criticism, and of similar merit in hand.

The House of Lords have recognised the Earl of Shrewsbury's title to the office of Lord High Steward of Ireland. This office, which is attached to the titles of Earl of Shrewsbury and Earl of Waterford.

A Shakspeare Memorial Theatre.—The Metropolitan Association for Shakspeare announce a grand entertainment to take place on the 30th inst., at Drury Lane Theatre, in commemoration of the birth of Shakspeare, and which we have signified their intention to be present. The performances will consist of a grand miscellaneous concert, a lecture, interesting musical relics, and from the principal theatres.

THE SULTAN'S CASTE OF VISITE.—On May 22 a monster reception, numbering 20,000 signatures, was presented to the Sultan at the Sweet Waters, by a deputation of sixty persons, headed by Ismail Bey, on the occasion of the latter presenting his Majesty to sit for portrait of the native photographic artist, and which he had for circulation and sale in Europe. The reception was received with considerable ceremony, and with great affability, by his Majesty, at the entrance to the Imperial Kiosk, in front of which the huge cylinder of thick paper, mounted on linen and protected by waterproof, was unrolled and its proper read by an accomplished Armenian secretary. Along with it was presented a short address, expressed on parchment, from the members of the Corps Diplomatique, adding their solicitation to that of the native crowd for a sitting in the universal interest to "Abdulhak." After hearing both documents read, his Majesty graciously intimated his readiness to comply with the wish of the petitioners. Curios of Sultan Abdul Aziz will be in great demand, and will probably be the chief of the popular "articles" of the day. Shade of Othello, but we live in advancing times!—Levant Herald.

INDOOR AMUSEMENTS.

ROUND GAMES.

Round games, though they furnish great amusement to the family circle, are yet objectionable if played with any other object than to entertain a mixed company of adults and children, when the growing branches condemned to unbend, and to become boys and girls for the nonce. The reason round games are objectionable is, that there are wanting no motives, unless played for money; consequently that which encourages gambling, for round games are games of chance, or at least chance predominates greatly in them; neither do they afford sufficient openings for the exercise of tact and skill like whist, piquet, and, we may add, cribbage. For these reasons, such games as vingt-et-un, pope joan, loo, lansquenet (which is the same as round betting for money), are very properly tabooed, where more scientific games or cards are entered into. Our readers will find rules for all these at home and elsewhere. It is very justly thought, that where money and not the exercise of the mental powers is the object in play, the old saying, "Much labour, little advantage," to the temptation of which some even of it is spared for indigestion, you had better not be found. Those are the views of the highest social position: have not the princes of the realm witness the many and reports that have been made within the last thirty years. The well-known bon mot of Sheridan was apropos of a similar subject. "I know a man who can't play whist, and I do not like to expose him, what shall I do?" "Back him," was the unwritten golden rule of the senatorial wit, another of whose sayings was more recondite, for he once said to another shows how sometimes the idea of gain may swamp the sense of fair and honourable play. The idea of a great nobleman having lost a racing bet to a "professional" and paid it, not the recovery of it a few days after, and again paid the amount. Our two last anecdotes are illustrative of a brother betting—can be what he should do with it, whether keep it or return it. After a little consideration the latter course delivered himself of this memorable opinion:—"When you negative him (the schoolmaster) you had better keep it." Not a bad idea. Another story to the same purpose is told of the celebrated Philippe Egalité, father of Louis Philippe, which proves that it is not only persons are not always above playing for money. "At the time of which we write there was a public lottery in France, licensed by the Government, and to whom both they and others paid a certain fee. There were various ways of staking money in the lottery, one of which was popular on the continent, namely, which, having only to pay five francs to a million times his venture. The chances against drawing a quine were more than a million to one, but the fact of the prizes in the lotto delivered himself of this memorable opinion:—"When you negative him (the schoolmaster) you had better keep it." Not a bad idea. Another story to the same purpose is told of the celebrated Philippe Egalité, father of Louis Philippe, which proves that it is not only persons are not always above playing for money. "At the time of which we write there was a public lottery in France, licensed by the Government, and to whom both they and others paid a certain fee. There were various ways of staking money in the lottery, one of which was popular on the continent, namely, which, having only to pay five francs to a million times his venture. The chances against drawing a quine were more than a million to one, but the fact of the prizes in the lotto being so great, and the number of tickets issued so small, that the chance would come up once in a million and a quarter of years. These numbers are so enormous that the mind can scarcely realise them. The chances of the lottery existed and brought home to the understanding in this way—The chance of drawing a quine is less than the chance of throwing an ace of spades named pecune, of fifty years of age, carried off by apoplexy in the course of a given day. To remember the chance of drawing a quine, and it is now generally believed that this piece of good fortune was due to an eccentric, achieved by a Paris, and the lotteries drawn at Lille, Strasbourg, and Bordeaux. The sum gained on this occasion was so great that the contractor of the lotteries refused to compound with the winner, and after that event the quine was abolished. Even though not a monopoly, there is a serious objection—that chance predominates, and which accounts for its being often played for large sums of money. It is worth saying that there is no play at cards is partly true and partly untrue. there is a great deal of play at cards, even in playing the cards, but there is far more than the knowledge expressed in the eyes, the countenance or a nervous and hurried manner of playing often betray the hand, though the writer is not aware of any work on "The Art of a finished card player," "until you have four eyes in your head nor put your glass in your eye." In a series of articles which we published in the latter part of the reign of George II., when gambling was much in vogue, the proprietary to gaming at the clubs, and to place in the cards a concise description. If display the parasites' got of arms thus arranged:—"The shield is charged with cards, dice, and moneybags, and is surrounded by a wreath which hangs a label, inscribed 'cheat;' supporters, two knaves; crest, a hand holding a dicebox; motto, 'Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die.' The train of anecdotes with a moral in connection with our heading, "Round Games," it is we would advise both young and old playing cards to be persuaded into playing round games for money. Let us assure them that the only legitimate object of round games is to while away a few hours in a lively manner when they are assembled, and are incapable of enjoying more severe games; and, bearing in mind the temptation to play for money in all games of amusement, let us say with Martial, in venturing a paraphrase of his epigram,

> I cheat at cards, nor think I any crime;
> I play for sport, but cheat and fleece for time.

There is a good deal of traditional evidence that cards have been known in Hindostan from a very early period. Cocoanut and the palm leaves, dressed, lacquered, and painted, afford admirable material to the half-naked Malays at the present day. It is asserted that the Tamuls have had cards from time immemorial, and that they are to be of equal antiquity with the Brahmins, who possess cards still and claim to have invented both them and chess. The Chinese, though they did invent, and Sir William Jones is of opinion that cards were first suggested by chess. In the museum of the Royal Asiatic Society are three packets of Hindostanee cards, one of which is said to a thousand years old. This pack was given to an English officer by a high caste Brahmin. The Brahmin pointed out the principal cards in order to enhance the value of his present, for it is extremely difficult in India to procure complete cards, as they are subject to reductions. The cards in question have a very recent appearance; they are circular, about two inches and a half in diameter, are not varnish, but so stiffened with varnish that each card looks like a piece of wood. All the figures and marks are executed by hand. The cards are not unlike, as an oblong box.

Playing-cards appear to have been known in China ever since the beginning of the fourteenth century. According to a work of that period, the amusement of the concubines of the Emperor Yeou-wang, who reigned 1170–30. The name of the cards was Yay-pae—"paper tickets." They were first made of bone or ivory, and consisted of thirty-two pieces. Those now commonly used in China are about three-inches square, a thousand sheets constitute a card." There are thirty cards in a pack—viz., three suits of nine cards each. The first suit—nine units of tens; second suit—nine tens—nine units of cakes; and Kew-ko-so—nine units of chains; and three single cards. These were the names of the cards in use in Hung-hwa—the red flower; and Fih-hwa—the white flower.

Since cards have been known in the East for so long a period, it seems remarkable that the first positive mention of them in European history is in connection with Charles VI. of France, in 1393. Charles VI., for the reason, in connection with cards, is the first. In that or the following year this entry appears in his treasurer's account:—"To John le Jacquemin, illuminator, for three packs of cartes s or et s diverses couleurs, ornés de pluiseurs devises pour porter devant le dit seigneur roy, pour son esbatement en la ville de Paris." Menestrier, who first pointed out this passage, hastily concluded that the game of cards was then invented for the amusement of the king, and that melancholy; and his account of the invention long passed without question, especially as the true history of the introduction of cards into Europe had been completely overlooked, or still veiled in obscurity. It may fairly be concluded that, though cards were probably not in use to a few persons in the East in the fourteenth century, they were not in common use till towards its latter part.

Two kinds of European cards are distinguished by the learned in these matters—viz., Tarots, or Tarocchi; and Numeral or Four-suit Cards, now universally adopted. It is still disputed which of these two kinds is of the greatest antiquity. The place of honour is generally awarded to the tarots. The game called "Tarocchino," played with these cards, was invented by an Italian, who resided at Bologna, early in the fifteenth century. The earliest known specimens of tarocchi cards are those preserved in the Bibliothèque du Roi, at Paris. They formerly belonged to the governor of the grandchildren of Louis XIV., who bequeathed them, with his prints and drawings, to the King, in 1711. They are seventeen in number (a complete set of tarocchi cards contains fifty). Their subjects and the order of the cards now in use. They are painted on paper, mounted on thick pasteboard. The ground is punctured burnished gold, surrounded by silver lines, and, together with the backs, which are also of Italian illuminated manuscripts of the first half of the fifteenth century. The French assert that they formed a portion of the three packs painted for Charles VI.

Some of the earliest numeral cards known to exist are some stencil cards preserved in the print-room of the British Museum. The outlines and general forms of the figures being cut out of a thin plate of metal, the staining is performed by passing over the plate a brush charged with colour, which, entering into the cut-out lines, imparts the figure to the card beneath. On a careful examination it becomes evident that the cards to which we refer were thus depicted. The Museum purchased them of Colnaghi, and they are said to be of the fifteenth century. They are not coloured, and not cut into single cards, but contain several cards on the same plate. The figures are of the same character as those of the tarocchi, and have been produced by a Venetian cardmaker about the year 1440.

In 1463 it would appear that cards were well known in England, for, by an act of that year, the importation of foreign manufactured cards was prohibited. We have evidence, too, that about this time, or a few years later, cards were used at Christmas, as in 1465 the Archbishop of York "gave his servants New Year's gifts." Entries are found in his privy-purse expenses of money issued for his Majesty's losses at cards.

Henry VIII., though not very particular himself, was the terror of those evildoers, the gaming-house keepers, and made the persons and property of his subjects was such as the world had never known before. Cardmakers are also mentioned, that in his reign some forty thousand (!) thieves were executed. In the thirty-third year of Henry VIII.'s reign we find the following:—"No artificer or his journeyman, labourer, servingman, apprentice, husbandman, yeoman, mariner, fisherman, waterman, or servingman shall play at tables, tennis, dice, cards, bowls, or other unlawful game, save only in his master's house, or in the time of Christmas, or then out of their master's house or presence, and then but for small sums of money, and that openly in open places out of his garden or orchard in pain of six and eightpence."

In spite of this and similar enactments, cards were played, more or less, during the reigns of the following Monarchs. Both Mary and Elizabeth were fond of playing at cards, and in the reign of James I. the fashionable game appears to have been nine.

By a proclamation of Charles I., dated 1621, it ordered that all foreign cards should be sealed at London, and packed in new covers; and in 1623 the Star Chamber fined a cardmaker £1000 for offending.

In the reign of Charles II. (1670) an Act of Parliament was passed which enacted that any person winning money at any game should, if he refused to pay, be compelled to do so by action at law. A similar Act passed in the reign of Queen Anne, are now repealed. The Act 9 Geo. II. cap. 19, prohibits playing at cards in the streets, because it is said, of penalties to the amount of £500,000 being likely to fall on some unconscious offender.

In the reign of Queen Anne cardplaying seems to have attained its full tide in every part of civilised Europe, and to have been the favourite pastime of the people. Cardmakers of the Guelph period were annually imported, chiefly for the purpose of making cards, but in the reign of George I. cardplaying began to show signs of threpence. Though the cards were much smaller than at present, and the value of the pack was only 1s. 6d., the duty was so heavy that how they were manufactured at so low a price. In this reign (1711) the duty was first imposed, amounting to 1d. per pack, and the total duty being fixed at sixpence a pack. In Charles I.'s reign the Lord Treasurer levied a tax of five shillings a gross on cards, but without any restriction as to their size. The duty was afterwards increased by the Commons as arbitrary and illegal.

During the reigns of George II. and III. cardplaying was still in high vogue, and several Acts passed against gaming appear to have had but little effect. In the reign of George III. cardplaying greatly promoted by the establishment of clubs and assembly-rooms, where people of position could indulge with their equals and be secure against the intrusion of "blacklegs." Even at the present day a Club was a matter of such public notoriety as to call forth a pamphlet on gaming addressed to the Members of the Union Club, and a book which was entitled "The Humours of Whist, a Dramatic Satire, as acted every day at White's, and other coffee-houses and assemblies."

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

BATHS OF OXYGEN GAS.—M. Langier, in a note read at a recent meeting of the French Academy of Sciences, adduces cases which, in his opinion, prove the efficacy of oxygen baths in certain forms of paralysis, and where the circulation of the principal arterial trunks is preserved, the nervous influence remaining intact. He recommends the employment of oxygen baths of oxygen gas.

M. Adolphe Bobierre, son of the eminent French philosopher and academician, Antoine Cesar Becquerel, has been elected a member of the Academy of Sciences, in the room of the illustrious Despretz, recently deceased. M. A. E. Becquerel has long been an able contributor to the Academy. His researches have principally related to the constitution of the electric light, and has also published his researches on "The Chemical Effects of Electricity," "Experimental Researches on the Isothermic Lines of Frances," on "The Electric Effects Produced by the Contact of Heterogeneous Bodies," "Researches on Electricity," and "Light," in 1810. Of the 85 voters in the Academy on the day of election, 42 voices were for M. Becquerel, 41 for M. Jamin, and 2 were thrown away (one for each candidate), and 2 for M. Jamin.

A Report on the Silk Trade this year in the south of France and in Spain on the night of April 30 and May 1 last. In the Eastern Pyrenees it is stated that the crop will be a full one, but that the worm commenced to eat earth-rain, and sent a report thereon to the French Academy of Science. Experiments were made with the earth-rain, and the result was ascertained to contain the trick-rot disease. When healed, in a close vase, it became black, and disengaged a considerable quantity of ammoniacal gas, and also a slight carbonised animal matter; heated in air, the earth assumed a reddish colour. The earth-rain was found to contain a large proportion of carbonic dioxid, carrying off carbonates of lime and magnesia and oxide of iron. Among those who have made experiments with earth-rain is Mr. Alexander Rook from the earth-rain a small quantity of a resinous substance very soluble in alcohol. The earth-rain contained a small quantity of nitrogenous organic matter. The presence of phosphoric acid was very manifest. The analysis of the earth-rain was made by Professor Frankland, of Owens College, recently. M. Borin considers these rain as exceedingly valuable for agriculture, and that they are not injurious to silkworms.

THE CHEMISTRY OF STEEL.—M. Caron has laid before the Academy of Sciences a memoir containing researches on the following subject, in which he treats especially on the expulsion of phosphorus from iron. It is well known that the phosphorus contained in cast-iron cannot be entirely removed by the ordinary processes of puddling, and that the alloyed steel brittle when either hot or cold; and that by forming a mixture of this iron with a certain quantity of oxide of iron the phosphorus is removed; and it has therefore been concluded that sulphur and phosphorus either actually exercise a reciprocal action, or that they combine simultaneously either with the scoria or the gases of the furnaces). M. Caron was led to study this question from the fact that the iron of Algeria, which is found to contain a method of expelling phosphorus from the castings of steel. Details of experiments are given in the memoir, and the author arrives at the result in the mixtures in question neither the sulphur nor phosphorus disappear, but remain in the iron, and that the latter is combined with the foreign substances particles in a larger quantity of metal, which consequently possesses the defect of brittleness in a less degree. M. Caron considers phosphorus the element most available in the manufacture of steel for industrial purposes.

PHOSPHORUS IN ALLOYS.—In the course of researches at high temperatures, chemists are continually checked by the difficulty of finding suitable vessels in which to conduct their experiments. Platinum and iron are now rejected on account of the mixture occasioned by a metal to which it is alloyed, and porcelain and clay are also found to be unsuitable, as they are brought into contact. A recent member of M. E. Becquerel has suggested to M. Debray the employment of phosphorus as a reducing agent. M. Debray has accordingly made many experiments, and has arrived at the conclusion that they have found out the true cause why platinum proved so unsatisfactory in the hands of Deville and Debray. Messrs. Matthey and Johnson, of London. This idea, of cast platinum, weighs 1076 grammes, and is of excellent quality, and about 1 millimetre thick.

AN INDUCTION-COIL OF GREAT POWER, and its effects, are described by Mr. Spottiswoode, President of the Physical Society, in the last number of the Philosophical Magazine, with details. About three years and a half ago he made a powerful induction-coil—the secondary coil, made of No. 34 iron wire, consisted of 280 miles, and weighed 400 lbs., and 16 lbs. dry. The entire length of the secondary coil is about 8½, and the length of the secondary wire about 110,000. With three cells of the Marquois battery, in each of which the zinc plate was 4½ square inches, the coil gave sparks about 1½ inch long, and with six cells 2½ inches long, and with nine cells 3½ inches. With five cells of the same size the sparks were only 1½ inch, but were much louder than the sparks produced by three cells. Within 15 minutes of starting Mr. Callan made a new primary coil nearly 4ft. long, with a wire about 0ft. 4in. in length, and increased the intervals between the secondary coil and the primary, and also the insulation of the latter part of the secondary from each other, since these changes were made this coil the negative end being occasionally a pale glow continuing a negative discharge, and the positive coil with a pointed wire gave sparks 1½in. long with a single 4in. coil of the Marquois battery. With 6 cells of the 4in. coil the sparks 2½in., and with three cells of the same size they were 1½in. in length. Mr. Callan having determined to make a powerful battery, has lately been at work by connecting a large plate of any metal with the negative end of the coil, made a series of experiments to determine the effects upon the electric plate, and the effect of connecting plates in various ways with the ends of the coil. Some of the plates were of cast-iron, others of sheet-iron, and others of zinc, and in accordance with the commonly-received theory regarding the distribution of electricity over the surface of bodies, he met with the very remarkable fact, the height to which a lightning-conductor should project above the roof of a building in order to afford full protection. Full particulars in next refer readers to Mr. Callan's paper.

INSTITUTION LECTURES.

Professor Ansted, in his eighth lecture on the 4th inst., again considered the Beds of Fossiliferous Rocks, and the sequence of Geology, more especially of the mountain districts of the British Islands, and of Europe generally, as a means of investigating the history of the earth, and to which the nature of the rocks of the geological series at the time and its physical geography. Where the nature of Professor Ansted's lecture admitted of it, he illustrated the original mountain form and amplitude found in the paleontic or primary period, of the great marine depths of the ocean, and of the lands and seas of the subsequent geological periods of the tertiary period—all of which were amply illustrated by diagrams. The nature, also, of the rocks of the primary period, as of aqueous origin, were also duly considered, and also the application of the study of fossil remains to the determination of the relative age of the rocks, their classification, and development of species, with special reference to the startling theories of Lamarck, and the more recent development theory of Mr. Darwin. The lecture was concluded with a notice of the recent discoveries of human remains, their nature, and the importance of their occurrence in the drift, with the values of the investigation in relation to human history, with especial reference to the recent discoveries in the valley of the Somme, and in the cave deposits of the debris of human food (termed Kjökkenmöddings) on the shores of Scandinavia, Denmark, and Sweden, and in Ireland, and which we did not now found in those northern seas. All these facts, referred to in the lecture, gave evidence of the gradual progress of man from a low condition in life—geology especially reminding us of the prevalence of a unity of design in creation and the progress of organic development in the long course of time through all time.

Mr. Spottiswoode gave the Friday evening discourse on the 5th inst. on the subject being, "Electricity in Motion," and in which he said that the most striking and well-known outward diagram, he gave not view of the history of electricity was that which was known as the "electric shock," as at considerable length on the materials of which they consist (Cura lis sonus, "talk, ha, ha, ha"), and the various methods by which it may be given, by which they had been shaped or sculptured. He referred to the extraordinary effects produced by the action of electrical, chemical, and magnetic forces in dealing with the materials of the crust of the earth, the formation and relaying of an isolated, and the production of the various forms of crystalline matter, and the transformation caused by pressure, contraction, expansion, heat, &c. Professor Spottiswoode then proceeded to the consideration of the law of the force of electricity, stating that it varied as the square of the distance and density of and removation. The present formation of the Alps he said, was due to the contraction of the earth's crust, "frank" storm, dealing with the surface of the earth as with the sea, forming gigantic waves, and the mountain ranges, which in every direction we see. He especially referred to many facts in relation to this subject observed by himself during his recent visit to the Alps and Switzerland. The study of the nature of the mountain he mainly imputed to the disintegrating action of water, both in the form of rain and of glaciers, and he adopted the theory of Mr. Croll—now a theory upheld by Professor J. D. Forbes, saying, "that a glacier had no more power of moving than a river, and that it moved in the same manner." A mountain torrent cuts its way through the rocks like a vampire; while a glacier, by the pressure of its mass, tends to crush them. The latter is concluded with remarks on the universal existence of unceasing change going on, even in matter, which, to the eye, appears to be at rest, and that it is the most immutable substance in nature. Sir Henry Holland, Bart., F.R.S., was in the chair.

Professor Tyndall, on Tuesday, the 9th inst., gave his second lecture "On Electric Telegraphs" on Saturday last, the 6th inst. He began by remarking that the electric telegraph was essentially a mechanism for producing and mechanism for diverting it, means for transmitting energy, and an intermediate contrivance for effecting a change of direction. The simple voltaic element consists of either platinum, platinised silver, or carbon, (3) "negative metal," and (4) "positive metal," zinc. The sum of the chemical result of water maintain a difference of electric potential between two places. The electric telegraph was invented in 1837. To increase the force of the battery other forms have been invented. In some, two liquids are employed. In Daniell's battery a plate of copper surrounded by a negative plate of copper; and in Grove's battery nitric acid and a negative platinum plate. In Smee's battery a plate of platinised silver is employed, with sulphuric acid mixed with the water, are connected by a fine wire an electric current is produced. The object of the battery is to keep the positive plate to be dissolved; to cause hydrogen, copper, or decomposition of nitric acid to appear on the negative plate. The electric bell consists of a bar of soft iron, a magnetic needle, if there be any in the neighbourhood, to bend across the direction of the wire. In order to cause the magnetism to cease, he used a polarised light passing inside the wire, in a direction perpendicular to it, he found that the plane of polarisation was turned round by the magnetic force. The electric telegraph consists of effects arising from the electric telegraph we have the source and the "sending instrument," the line, and the receiving instrument. The source is the battery, the sending key being in the voltaic battery or in the body of the operator, who by his muscular power works the sending instrument when that is employed. To send voltaic element consists of either platinum, platinised silver, or carbon, (3) "negative metal," and (4) "positive metal," zinc. The sum of the chemical result of water maintain a difference of electric potential between two places. The electric telegraph was invented in 1837. To increase the force of the battery other forms have been invented. In some, two liquids are employed. In Daniell's battery a plate of copper surrounded by a negative plate of copper; and in Grove's battery nitric acid and a negative platinum plate. In Smee's battery a plate of platinised silver is employed, with sulphuric acid mixed with the water, are connected by a fine wire an electric current is produced. The object of the battery is to keep the positive plate to be dissolved; to cause hydrogen, copper, or decomposition of nitric acid to appear on the negative plate. The electric bell consists of a bar of soft iron, a magnetic needle, if there be any in the neighbourhood, to bend across the direction of the wire. In order to cause the magnetism to cease, he used a polarised light passing inside the wire, in a direction perpendicular to it, he found that the plane of polarisation was turned round by the magnetic force. The electric telegraph consists of effects arising from the electric telegraph we have the source and the "sending instrument," the line, and the receiving instrument. The source is the battery, the sending key being in the voltaic battery or in the body of the operator, who by his muscular power works the sending instrument when that is employed. To send a magnet

THE ASCOT CUP.

THE QUEEN'S VASE.

THE ROYAL HUNT CUP.

ASCOT RACE PLATE.—SEE PAGE 654.

BUCKSTONE, THE WINNER OF THE ASCOT CUP.—SEE PAGE 654.

MALE AMERICAN OSTRICH INCUBATING.

It is not generally known that in all the different species of Struthious or ostrich-like birds, as far as we are acquainted with them, the male performs all the duties of incubation, and takes charge of the young brood when he has hatched them; whilst the female never seems to take the least concern in the matter after she has once deposited her eggs. This has been shown to be the case with the African ostrich in France, where birds of this species have been hatched and reared in captivity in the neighbourhood of Marseilles. The same curious habit has been manifested in the American ostrich, or Rhea, the Nandu's Cassowary, or Mowrin, and the Australian Emu, which have all bred in this country in the Zoological Society's Garden in Regent's Park. It would appear, therefore, to prevail in all the forms of the Struthious order, of which the four above-mentioned birds are examples.

Our illustration represents a male American ostrich (of the species named Rhea Macrorhyncha) who is now engaged in the duty of incubation at the Regent's Park Gardens. He sits soberly and steadily at his work, and never quits his eggs except to take a hurried meal, being evidently quite aware of the important duties he has to perform. The female of the common Rhea (R. Americana) with whom he is united wanders about the inclosure, and seems not to take the slightest concern in the proceedings of her liege lord. She did not even trouble herself to lay her eggs in one place when she was depositing them, but left them kicking about the grass until her partner selected the spot he thought best adapted for a nest and collected them together for the purpose of incubation.

The Rhea commenced to sit this year on the 8th of May; the period expected to hatch about the 12th of the present month, five weeks being about the period of incubation in this bird. We trust he will be not less successful this year than last, when he brought out two fine young birds, which may now be seen growing into adolescence in the adjoining inclosure to that in which he is confined.

MAJOLICA PLATEAU FROM THE LOAN COLLECTION, SOUTH KENSINGTON MUSEUM.

MAJOLICA PLATEAU FROM THE LOAN COLLECTION, SOUTH KENSINGTON MUSEUM.

THIS majolica plateau, from the Art-Loan Exhibition at South Kensington Museum (No. 6056), is a beautifully-painted and richly-tinted work (signed and dated 1526) of Maestro Giorgio Andreoli, the finest of the majolica painters, whose authenticated works are very scarce, but for which works of his "botega" are often mistaken. His hand may be known by general artistic excellence and by the peculiar light olive colour of the shadows of the flesh. The plateau is in the collection of the Rev. Thomas Barney, of Broom Hall, who has forwarded an interesting conjectural elucidation of its subject, from which we quote the following:—The subject represented, Mr. Berney believes, is the beatification of Taddeo da Carmagnola, Duke of Mantua II. della Scala, a lady whose name was rendered "illustrious by her philanthropy" and "singular virtues" and "the many good deeds which she did before she died, which were infinite," and as "the foundress of the Casa di Pietà, in Verona." It is copied, with some additions, from a well-known drawing by Raphael, the subject of which has long been a mystery, though engraved by Marc Antonio Bartsch (XIV. 45), who had probably heard the engraving called simply "La Dama della Scala," the proper title of Taddeo after her husband's death, in 1351, and mistaken Dama for the Madonna and Scala for the steps of the throne, calls it merely "Notre Dâme à l'escalier."

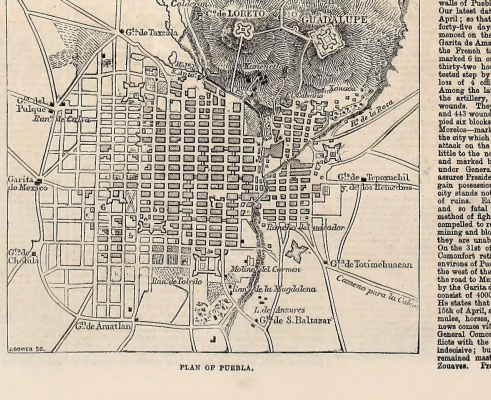
Three things Maestro Giorgio has introduced, which help to clear up the subject and put the intention of Raphael's treatment of it beyond the possibility a doubt:—1. A figure on the flagstaff in the background, on the tower of "Il Pistro-in-Castello," similar to the female figure holding a spear, found on various coins (tessaræ mercantile) of Verona of this period, with the Gospel and the winged lion of St. Mark on the obverse. Its disproportionate size suggests that the figure had been displaced, and that it was drawn in from one of the well-known coins, the better to indicate the city. 2. An accurate view of Verona, called in the Middle Ages THE LITTLE JERUSALEM, taken from the side of the present Castle of San Felice-di-fuori; but the buildings in the foreground are merely fanciful. The view contains in the middle distance those places which were named after the most sacred places of the Holy Land. (Its accuracy is attested after careful reference to numerous works, views, and plans of Verona, from Brunnius, 1572, to the Descrizione, 1826). The water seen below with the stockade, forming the north-eastern boundary of the city, was evidently supplied from Montorio; for hence "by a secret canal, in which much water was collected, they could go in a little boat to the Castle of Montorio," where rose the rivulet Fiumicello. Besides a part of the wall of Charlemagne on the hill called Mount Calvary, are seen the shafts of the Three Crosses, and the Chapel of the Holy Sepulchre (or S. Rocchi Minorie); and on each side of it the Valley of our Lord and the Mount of Olives; near which also were Bethlehem and Nazareth (see Brunius). In the distance are seen the Rondola of Bacolla, in line with the distant towers of Castel Vecchio; and to the right, the Bastion of Rocaare (153 ft. in diameter) and the B. of S. Giorgio, dated 1523. Behind them is the River Adige, and beyond it the N.W. part of the city, with the only three large buildings in it, the Basilica of S. Zeno Maggiore, with its lofty campanile; the square tower of the monastery suppressed in 1770; and the church of S. Procolus Archipresbyter-tus. 3. A ladder (scala) of gigantic size, yet leading nowhere, it being the arms of the Scaligeri, and intentionally placed, not on a shield, but in the landscape, and in the centre of the plateau, thus connecting the subject of it with the city of Verona and with the family of La Scala.

In Litta's "Celebri Famiglie Italiane" is a coloured engraving of the picture over the altar in the Chapel of the Rosary, in the church of Sta. Anastasia, in Verona. It contains portraits of Taddeo da Carrara and her husband Mastino della Scala, kneeling before the Virgin. Mr. Henry Farrer, of New Bond-street, a recognised authority in these matters, decided that this portrait is identical with that of her who is being led by the Madonna to the Saviour, both in the engraving by Marc Antonio after Raphael and in the Plateau. The Scaligeri lost Verona in 1387, soon after her death, but the family existed at the end of the sixteenth century. Among her many illustrious descendants may be mentioned the Emperor Frederick III., and Maximilian I., Philip Archduke of Austria and Burgundy, and his son, the Emperor Charles V., and the Emperor Ferdinand I., who succeeded him, and Philip II., King of Spain.

The Saviour is represented "upon the throne of David," surrounded by his Apostles. The subject is treated conventionally. The whole dress of Taddea is that of a married person of rank; but the long neckchain at once decides her condition, for no one but a person of position, and that person a married lady, could, at that period, wear this long necklace, with the invariable medallion of the husband consealed in the bosom. This at once sets aside the suggestions that she might possibly be Martha or Mary Magdalene. She has also the nimbus of Catholic sanctity as a widow.

Of the group she is leaving behind her, the first is her son, Cangrande II. Her husband, soon after their marriage in 1382, became Mastino II. della Scala, Prince of Verona, and died in 1351. About this time she secluded herself in her own palace, "of which she devoted a part as a Casa di Pieta for the reception of distressed children from the barbarity of their parents, might be thrown upon the world." She died in 1376, and her name is handed down to posterity as illustrious for piety and reverence to Christian charity.

Messrs. Colnaghi and Caldesi have published a large photograph of the plateau.



PLAN OF PUEBLA.

THE SIEGE OF PUEBLA.

THE French army in Mexico, under General Forey—numbering, with its garrison in Vera Cruz, 35,000 men, according to the statement of M. Fould—took up its position before the walls of Puebla on the 16th of March last. Our latest date come down to the 30th of April; so that the siege had already lasted forty-five days. The French attack commenced on the south-west corner, near the Fuerta de Amatlan. On the 25th of March the French took the fort of San Javier—marked 6 on our plan. The contest lasted thirty-two hours, and the ground was contested step by step. The French admitted a loss of 4 officers killed, and 20 wounded. Among the latter was General Lorencez, of the artillery, who has since died of his wounds. They had also 55 privates killed, and 443 wounded. The subsequent days occupied six blocks of houses and the redoubt of Mexico—marked 7. This is the only part of the city which the French have gained. Their attack on the Plazuela of San Augustin—a little to the north of the aforesaid redoubt, and marked b—was repulsed by the forces under General Ortega. Ortega's forces assured President Juarez that if the assailants gain possession of the ground on which the city stands nothing shall cover it but a heap of ruins. Each house becomes a fortress; and so fatal have the French found this method of fighting that they feel themselves compelled to resort to the severe measures of mining and blowing up these coverts, whence they are unable to expel the Mexican troops. On the 31st of March the Mexican General Comonfort retired from his position in the environs of Puebla, and took up a position to the west of the town, about three leagues on the road to Mexico, which issues from the city by the Garita de Mexico. Comonfort's forces consist of 4000 cavalry and 20,000 infantry. He states that he defeated the French on the 16th of April, and captured 500 head of cattle, mules, horses, and ammunition. The latest news comes via San Francisco and New York. General Comonfort has had two further conflicts with the French, the first of which was indecisive; but in the second the Mexicans remained masters of the field, capturing 100 Zouaves. President Juarez has left for Cenesford's army to urge offensive operations. The French have continued the bombardment, and the Mexican General has thrown 15,000 troops into the city. The siege of Puebla bids fair to rival in its duration the siege of Vicksburg, though in the former there is no great river and its confluent, no bluffs and gun-boats to give it nerve effect.

Puebla, capital of the State of the same name, one of the departments of the Mexican Confederation, is finely situated on a declivity, 70 miles from the city of Mexico, next to which it is the largest city in the Confederation. It has wide, regular, and well-paved streets, supplied with fresh water, houses generally three stories high, with flat roofs, and large and elegant squares, in the principal one of which is situated the cathedral, a magnificent structure. Among the public buildings of Puebla the most noted are the churches, which, for their dimensions, the richness of their decorations, and the number of their paintings and sculptures, are not excelled in the world. Next to the cathedral, the College of St. Peter and St. Paul, the Episcopal Palace, and the Hospital of St. Roque, that of St. Dominique are the most markable buildings. In all, there are seventy-two religious edifices, including the convents and churches; and above a hundred towers rising above the houses impart a characteristic feature to the city. There are also several theatres, a mint, and a number of almshouses and hospitals. Puebla contains schools, and a number of literary institutions, among which, about 60,000 inhabitants. It has manufactures of cotton, wool, and earthenware, which, however, have greatly declined since the commerce of Mexico has been thrown open.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The Prince of Wales has become an annual subscriber of ten guineas to the Cambridge Asylum for Soldiers' Widows.

The screw-corvette Cadmus, 21, 400-horse power, is to be immediately taken in hand at Pembroke Dock for the division of the hollow stern-reserve in readiness for immediate commission.

General Sir Thomas Arbuthnot, G.C.B., Colonel of the 90th Regiment of Foot, died on Sunday night, at his house in Charles-street, Berkeley-square, after a severe illness. He was in the 69th year of his age, having entered the Army in 1793, and had in his early career seen much active service.

Mr. Reed, the new Chief Constructor of the Navy, on Wednesday and Thursday, last week, paid an official visit to Woolwich Dockyard. Mr. Reed was first received by the Superintendent and Chief Engineer, and then inspected the Repulse, Wolverine, Dartmouth, and the other ships about to be converted into the new system. In the afternoon he visited the factories, with the intention of establishing a school of naval architecture in the dockyard. Mr. Reed, it is said, will make small alterations in the model of the frames of armour-plated ships, and especially the stores of midship and teak with which they are filled in the present system.

MILITIA.

The Northumberland Light Infantry Militia, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Lord Lovaine, completed its usual term of annual exercise on Tuesday, when the regiment was reviewed and minutely inspected upon the grounds in front of the castle by Lieutenant-Colonel Hardy. The regiment was assembled for inspection, including the new recruits, for almost seventy-four men each, and they presented as extremely clean and soldier-like appearance. The men were dressed in the full uniform of the regiment, and were addressed in commendatory terms by Lieutenant-Colonel Hardy at the conclusion.

The disbandment of the Royal North Lincoln Militia took place on Wednesday week, after the men had been up to the depôt at Lincoln for the usual training. The regiment has been only this year three or any time previously, there having been no regimental training for the last two years, owing to the services of the regiment being accepted. General Pipon, from the War Office, who spoke very favourably of the regiment, and Lieutenant-Colonel Wilkinson, to whom it has been very good. Lieutenant-Colonel Wilkinson has been in command. Major Lord Monson and Major Sibthorp have also been with the regiment.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

In our account of the naval and military demonstration at Southend we omitted to mention, among the volunteer corps which took part in the sham fight, the Civil Service Volunteers. The battalion marched to Tarbell and Adjutant de Crespigny were also present. The above, with the 23rd Essex, 2nd Kent, and the Belfast Rifles, formed the opposing force. Captain Brett was under the command of C. W. C. de Crespigny, Lieutenant-Colonel, 1st Middlesex.

The third annual prize meeting of the Surrey Rifle Volunteer Association took place on the Wimbledon Common range, on the day after the Wimbledon Common. The challenge cup, value £100, with gold medal, was won by the 1st Surrey, 11th Surrey; and 2nd Surrey, 4th Surrey, 5th Surrey, and the third prize, £5, by Major Sir H. Fletcher, 6th Surrey. The Lord Lieutenant's cup, the volunteers' prize of £40 for the 1st Surrey, and the 10th Surrey. The prize for the best volley-firing, a cup value ten guineas, was carried off by the 10th Surrey. The Queen's prize, value £250, was won by Mr. Ross, who made 35 out of a possible 35.

The annual inspection of the West Middlesex by Colonel Erskine, Inspector of Volunteers, took place on Tuesday week in the Regent's Park in the presence of a large number of spectators. The battalion marched to the number of about 500 men, forming six companies, under the command of Lord Bradford, assisted by Major Bridgeman and Captain and Adjutant Pershouse. The ground was admirably kept by a considerable force of the 19th Middlesex, under the command of Captain Lee, the old adjutant of the regiment. Colonel Erskine, at the conclusion of the evolutions, said he should not fail to make a most favourable report upon the battalion, which was, he was not only as to the efficiency of the battalion, but as to the able manner in which it had been handled.

The rifle match between thirty members—viz., five officers, ten non-commissioned officers, and fifteen privates—of the 1st and 2nd Middlesex and Victoria Rifle Corps, was shot off yesterday week at the shooting-ground, near Hampstead. The team were to fire at 200 yards, each man were 900 marks; by the Victorias, 856 marks. The four highest scores on the winning side were as follows:—Sergeant Bear, 91; Lieutenant Colonel Barber, 61; and Private J. W. Smith, 46. The four highest on the Victoria side were as follows:—Sergeant Major, 89; Private Ellis, 87; Private Hall, 86; Corporal Mortlock, 86. The three highest scores on the winning side are entitled to £3 each, and the fourth, £2, paid for by the Victorias. The match is that of Captain Bent and Lieutenant Mariner, and resulted in favour of the former.

Last Saturday the District corps, in honour of her Majesty's birthday, assembled on Wimbledon Common, when the Queen's prize, after a short battalion drill, they advanced, they afterwards engaged in attack and defence, and finally in the grand review, which was held by the officer in honorary Colonel of the regiment, and others. A rocketing catechism was held at the close of the operations, and Captain Bent, after the manœuvre, they proceeded to the ground some hours before the corps. By the aid of a most excellent cooking-apparatus, provided by Messrs. Soyer and Procter, they prepared dinner for the regiment. There were about 400 of all ranks to partake of the meal, which was served with "Soyer" fare. There was of bread, and half a pint of beer, at sixpence per man. The athletic sports succeeded at eight p.m., being fine, dark, and with a cool temperature. Some and a very pleasant afternoon was spent.

On Thursday, the 4th inst., the 2nd battalion of the Glamorganshire Volunteer Corps was inspected by Lieutenant-Colonel Clarke on the practice-ground in Aberdare. The men were assembled at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, and, after the evolutions in a highly creditable manner. The battalion mustered 600 strong.

There is to be a volunteer field-day at Harwich on the 29th inst., when the brigade assembled will be under the direction of Lord Rosslyn. Several corps from Ipswich, and the 1st Norfolk Artillery, are expected to be present, in addition to local Essex corps. The redoubt at Harwich will be manned for the occasion.

The review of the rifle corps of Oxford and Cambridge took place on Monday last, on Port Meadow, a few miles from Oxford, on some thousands of spectators witnessed the movements. Both corps were put through various field movements, most of the evolutions executed in a highly creditable manner, particularly the skirmishing and the marching past. At the conclusion of the review, the inspection of the camp and of the tents, and briefly addressed by Colonel M'Murdo, who expressed the pleasure he felt in meeting so many of the two universities, and the high gratification he had experienced in the excellent manner they had gone through the various movements. He was particularly pleased with the marching past, if they wished to make good and efficient soldiers, to pay attention to company and battalion drill.

Miss Rye states, in a letter dated March 16, that, with the exception of three or four servants, who would probably be placed in a few days, the whole of the young women she took out to Otago had obtained suitable employment—the governesses at salaries of from £60 to £40; the servants at wages of from £30 to £20 a-year. Emigration to that part of the colony, she says, ought never to cease. "Indeed," she remarks, "if another dividend of wreaths and the government survey of my selection is completed, I would undertake to place them all within a month of their landing." She bestowed special praise on the manner in which Captain Cargill, the agent for the emigrants, ships, and looked after their arrival, as the "immigration brokers," and on the superintendent that office should be made to remedy the glaring defects of the present system.

THE LAST OF THE OLD BRIDEWELL OF LONDON.

WITHIN a few days the greater portion of the old Bridewell of London has disappeared, and the ground will shortly be marked out for more profitable appropriation. It was one of the oldest historic sites in the city of London. Here stood the ancient palace of Bridewell, which extended nearly from Fleet-street to the banks of the Thames, and was founded on the remains of a building supposed to be Roman, and inhabited by the Kings of England previous to the Conquest. Here our Norman kings had their palace. Henry I. gave stone towards rebuilding the palace; and in 1847, in excavating the site of Cogers Hall, in Bride-lane, was discovered a vault, with Norman pellet moulding, and other remains of the same date. The palace was rising, neglected, until, on the site of the old Roman building, Henry VIII. built "a stately and beautiful house giving it to name Bridewell, of the parish and one of the Wards of Farringdon Without." On the occasion of Charles V. of Spain, though only his nobles were lodged here, "a gallery being made out at the back over the wall by Fleet-ditch, and through the wall of the City into the Emperor's lodgings in the Blackfriars." (Stow.) The whole third act of Shakspeare's Henry VIII. is laid in "the palace at Bridewell," which is historically correct. Subsequently the King granted it to the City of London, to fall to ruin. Then the "wide, large, empty house" was next presented to the city by Edward VI., "to the intent that the poor children of Christ Hospital, who begged it of the King as a workhouse for the poor and a house of correction; also as a provision for "sturdy rogues," and for "the idle which be daily seen vagrant in the streets, to run through their own business." The gift was confirmed by charter only a few days before the King's death. Holinshed says, "Certain years before Queen Mary confirmed her brother's gift; and in February, 1555, the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of London, accompanied with seven hundred marks, land, and all the bedding and other furniture of the house of the Savoy. But the house soon proved costly and inconvenient to the city authorities, being thither idle and shameless people from the outskirts of London, when the Common Council sensed such a number of vagrants coming to the city." In 1668, the City erected here timber large granaries for corn and two warehouses for coals; and in 1733 the ancient chapel was enlarged. In Aggas's plan of London, the buildings and gardens of the hospital extend from the present side to the Thames, on the back of which the large embankment wall is represented, as also in Van der Wyngaerde's (1543) view, in the Bodleian Library; but in Rollas's view, circa 1560, the Fleet River only is shown flowing eastward.

BRIDEWELL HOSPITAL, IN 1720.

The hospital was rebuilt, as represented in the annexed Engraving, by Sir Roger Pratt, in 1663. It was quadrangular, the principal side fronting the Fleet River, now a vast sewer under the middle of Bridge-street. Within the present century were built the communication and prisons; the chapel was also rebuilt and the whole latterly formed only one large quadrangle, with a handsome entrance from Bridge-street. In Bridge-street, on the right hand, was sculptured with the head of King Edward VI. Hatton thus minutely describes the original in 1708:—

It is a prison and house of correction for idle, vagrants, loose, and disorderly persons, who are kept to hard labour, &c. These are set to hard labour, and have correction in their own houses, but have the clothes and diet during their imprisonment at the charge of the City.

It is also an hospital for indigent persons, and where twenty art-masters are to shew the trades to such children as are committed to them by the governors, &c., have houses, and their servants or apprentices during about 10 or 12 years' time, and are to have such allowances as are agreed on for the keeping of their work, do often advantage by this means their own fortunes. And those boys having served their time, have the liberty to set up their trades, and also £10 each towards carrying on their respective trades, and many have even been admitted into the freedom of the City.

The Bridewell boys were distinguished by a particular dress, and attended fires with an engine belonging to the hospital. In 1753 the Bridewell boys were ordered to attend the funeral of Queen Anne in the streets as to be a great annoyance to peaceable citizens. Their peculiar punishment was by the "Correction," or treadmill, and whipping. The flogging at Bridewell for offences committed without the prison is mentioned by Ned Ward, in his "London Spy," where the offenders were whipped on their naked backs, before the Court of Governors. The president sat with his hammer in his hand, and the culprit was taken from the prison into the hall, stripped to the waist. In Ward's "Progress," given the peculiar feature of the place. In the Fourth Rake men and women are bowling below, and the eye of a savage taskmaster, and a lad, too idle to work, is seen standing on tiptoe to look over the wall. The Fourth Rake opens with "Bridewell, as I was written, "Better to work than stand thus." When Howard visited Bridewell he found the building damp and unhealthy, and the prisoners idle, and almost naked, and the boys in the hospital had specimens of a prison.

"Lob's Pound" was a cant name for Bridewell, the origin of which puzzled Nares, who notes "Who Lob was is a little known as the Lord of Misrule." Lob's Pound, or Lob's Prison, is employed as a name for the stocks, into which the Knight put Crowdero:—

Crowdero, whom, in irons bound,
Lob's Pound shall keep a month.

Miss Baker's regretion is reasonable—that the name originated from Lob, in the sense of worm, rather than any individual. Bridewell being the place of correction for the petty offences of that class of offenders, the name stuck to it.

Bridewell was, until lately, used as a receptacle for vagrants from the City, and for those who could not find money for decent lodging for persons previous to their being sent home to their respective parishes; and a certain number of boys were brought up here, and taught the shoemaking business, under the direction here by the Chamberlain. The male prisoners sentenced to hard labour were employed in grinding logwood, by which the corn was ground for the supply of Bridewell, Bethlehem, and the House of Occupation. The younger prisoners, not yet sentenced to hard labour, were employed in picking junk and oakum in the yard. The females were set to work in mending, and setting up the bed and bedding of the prisoners, or in picking junk and cleaning the prison. The punishments for breaking the rules of the prison were whipping, the treadmill, fasting, and, in the case might be. In 1842 were confined here 119 prisoners, of whom 253 were sentenced to hard labour, known or reputed thieves. In 1815 no employment was furnished to the prisoners. The seventh report of the Inspectors of Prisons returned Bridewell as answering no one object of improvement except that of safe custody: it did not correct, deter, or reform; and nothing could be worse than the association to which all but the City apprentices were subjected. However, in 1829, there was built, adjoining Bethlehem Hospital, in Lambeth, a range of buildings, whither Bridewell young prisoners are sent from Bridewell to be taught useful trades.

The Bridewell Hospital, in 1720, was a hospital for the sick poor. The committals are now made to the City Prison at Holloway, which, notwithstanding its large extent—once thought by alarmists to be needlessly vast—is now nearly full of prisoners. Meanwhile a portion of Bridewell Hospital will be reserved for the detention and reformation of incorrigible City apprentices committed here by the Chamberlain from time to time; that jurisdiction being preserved by the Court of Chancery in dealing with the matters which concern the disposal of the building and the estates of the governors of the hospital. Reformatory schools are also to be built from the revenue of the hospital, to the extent of £20,000 per annum. At the Social Science Congress, in 1862, the worthy Chamberlain read a paper on the peculiar jurisdiction of his Court, which is a valuable contribution to the transactions of the Society. It should be added that, under the new arrangements, the Chamberlain will not have the power to bind the apprentices making the acquaintance of the low vagrants and misdemeanants who ordinarily occupied the building. The apprentices were taken in small cells, each 9 ft. by 6 ft. wide, with double doors, each one sound as effectually as sight; communication was, therefore, nearly impossible. Separate cells for the apprentices will be erected here. The number of committals rarely exceeds twenty-five annually, and, although the Court of Chancery will not work, there will be no interference confined there. Although the annual number is so small, the power of committal to Bridewell in addition has not been altogether ever asserted, and successfully maintains, acts as a terror to evildoers by keeping in restraint 3000 of these lads of the City.

The vacant ground will, for the present, be one sense, were, at once vast, a gloomy scene. Here is a piece of ground which is leased for the head-quarters of Bridewell Hospital, whereon Holywell Church, the old and faithful friend of Dr. Johnson, and an inmate of his house, was buried, in 1781. Here also stood the ancient building materials. The noblest feature of the later buildings was the court-room—50 ft. long, by 28 ft. high—wainscoted and lined with the portraits, by Holbein, of Edward VI., presenting the Royal Charter of Endowment to the Mayor. Beneath was the cartoon of "The Good Samaritan," by the youthful artist Dadd. Two other pictures are a full-length of Charles II., by Sir Peter Lely; and portraits of the Presidents, including the Duke of Wellington. There is very large wainscoted room with St. Paul's in the background. But the most valuable embellishments were the portraits, running round the walls, of the 24 dispensilled in gold characters. In this hall the governors dined annually, each steward contributing £15 towards the expenses, the cloth-cloaks being thrown off, and kitchen hands, cooks, &c., hired for this purpose. This hall and kitchen were taken down at the close of last year.

In the entrance-corridor from Bridge-street, are the old chapel gates—remarkable for their fine workmanship. Sir Wm. Walworth, Lord Mayor, and on the staircase is a bust of the venerable Chamberlain Clark, who died in the present year, 1863. The COLUMN FOR THE CURIOUS.

THE Roman pavement recently found near the site of the portion of the East India House in Leadenhall-street has been removed to the of the rooms of the British Archæological Association, where it can now be seen to advantage. It forms a square of about five feet, set in a floor of common red tesseræ. The pattern is more ingenious and beautiful than it has hitherto been described. Under the pavement were found broken portions of plaster, with red, black, and grey stripes, very perfect as to colour. Leadenhall and Aldgate are fast parting with the old houses in consequence of the India House a noble pile of buildings is in progress; opposite, over against St. Andrew's Undershaft, there remains a lofty house, with overhanging stories—a bit of picturesque old London.

From the new volume of the "Calendar of State Papers," edited by Mr. Bruce, we get some interesting particulars of the Elizabethan Theatre, part of the site of which is still called Playhouse-yard, where was a power of ground "to house a playhouse to be built for ever of Nov. 16, 1633, we find:—" Notes by Sir. Windebank, of business transacted at his council table on Thursday, Shrovetide, viz. Two players demand £21,000. The councillaours (Sir Henry Spiller, Sir William Becke, [Laurence] Whitaker) have valued it at near £30.0. The patahlours offer towards the semering of them £100. An order of the board to remove the coaches from thence, and to lay the enchasment of them open by the back. That no coaches stay between Paul's Chain and the Hest Conduit. The citizes to be punished if they do not thus obey. The Lord Mayor to be spoken with to commandment directed to him, and every ward to be answerable."

In the same volume, Taylor, the Water Poet, sends in this rhyming petition to Lord Cottington on behalf of his Majesty's waterman. He prayer is as plain and unmistakable as prose could make it:—

Shews that your humble petitioner
To pay us, that our order you have signed;
For which we humbly thank you, though as yet,
We eat, and seek, and can no payment get.
We do live, we and our families, in debt,
And we do fear Sir Robert Pye is slack;
Or else unwilling, therefore, we request
Your Lordship to remember him once more.
And we shall pray unto the Power supreme
To bless your Lordship, temporal and eternal.

We are glad to see that the ancient priory church of St. Bartholomew the Great, in West Smithfield, one of the most interesting of the churches of the metropolis, is about to be restored. The church is, in the main, a Norman structure, dating from 1102 to 1123. The choir resembles the earlier portions of Winchester Cathedral, distinguished by unmoulded arches and billet-mouldings. The choir has above the triforium having pointed windows of later date. Parts are of the Perpendicular period, as the large bay, or oriel, with the inscription of a bois' (arrow) and a tun, of Bolton, who was Prior from 1506 to 1532. The roof is of timber, divided into compartments by a tie-beam and king-post, supported by brackets. The brick tower bears the date of 1628. The nave is supposed to have originally extended to the house fronts in Smithfield, where is the entrance gate, an ancient specimen of Early English, with the toothed ornament in its mouldings. Vestiges of old foundations are observable in the churchyard within a few feet of the surface. The canopied tomb, with effigy of Rahere, the founder, bears the date 1405, later date than the church itself. The Perpendicular Gothic, and was coloured originally. The church can be enlarged, restored, it is stated, for about £4000. The edifice is well described in Godwin's "Churches of London;" and a cloister and crypt of the priory, which exist, are ably illustrated in Archer's "Vestiges of Old London." Talking of alterations, we regret to see it stated that the fine old church in Austinfriars cannot be repaired, but is to be taken down and rebuilt. The Rev. Thomas Jones has made the proposition to remove Hewlencer's Church of St. Mary Woolnoth, one of the churches of original character left in the City, and lately placed. A strong letter to the Bishop condemns the scheme.

The City Corporation of Winchester, a large and elegant design of the fifteenth century, but the detail of which has been almost entirely destroyed by injudicious repairs, is about to be restored by subscription. Mr. Gilbert Scott, being the architectural adviser to the Dean and Chapter in researches for the origin of the cross among the monuments in custody of the Dean and Chapter, has found, in examining the Bishop's Register, that in 1440 it was spoken of as ellum crucem, the High Cross. One record states that in Bishop Fox's time (1500-1528) a chapel, which had been brought before the Warden for reading his Dutch Bible, was sentenced to be led round the cross, with the Bible in his hand, three times, by Kingsmill, the city crier, and then to be taken to the place where the book was to be cast into a fire. "From this it would appear that the cross was a market cross, to which the culprit was conducted after the laws were declared, proclamations made, judgments delivered, corpses carried, penances preached, and heretics condemned and executed." (Builder.) The cross is nicely engraved in the first volume of the "Proceedings of the Archæological Institute." The restoration will be a labour of some difficulty; but could be undertaken with more competent architect than Mr. Gilbert Scott.

There has lately been established in the Archæological Institute an oval medallion in bronze, gilt, of Oliver Cromwell, a profile bust in high relief. The head, hair, moustache, and imperial are admirably and finely executed. There is no name or mark by which the artist may be identified; the medallion has, however, brought to be nearly a contemporary portrait.

Modern imitations of ancient coins continue to perplex some collectors. At a late meeting of the Numismatic Society, Mr. Webster gave an account of some forgeries of Scottish coins, mentioning a gold piece purporting to be of James the Second, struck at Edinburgh of England, which has been imitated and adapted from the shilling of Prince Regent Mary. The ignorant forger has not taken the pains to copy the XII. (which denotes the value of the shilling in pence) on to the die of the gold coin, but, having made the coin secur, he has erased the numerals from the coin itself, though traces of them are still to be discerned.

The Church of St. Ethelburga, Bishopsgate, of Perpendicular date, and anciently in the patronage of the convent of St. Helen, has recently been restored with great taste and care by the present Rector: it is well known for the "short services for City men" instituted by one of his predecessors. A somewhat similar institution, say to tradition, is frequented by sailors returning from voyages, or homeward bound, is known as the Sailors' Church. Traces of a reredos were found during the repairs, and Roman coins and pottery have been discovered in the churchyard. The western arch is said to have formed part of the priory of St. Helen's Priory. Under it John Hudson and many of his crew came to receive the Holy Sacrament before they left for the voyage which ended in the discovery of Hudson's Straits." (Gent. Mag.," June, 1863). The churchwardens of St. Ethelburga have, we understand, the offertories collected every Sunday for their Ascension-Day dinner 1686 :—" three quarters of lamb; 600 of sparrow grass, cauliflower, and spinnage; 400 oranges and lemmons, three hams, Westphalia; one tongue, and 12 neats tongues, and the carriage charges for "brew and box to decke ye church :" "hoarbes" for the nume; "wood and carrying up," "cleaning ye church, greene."

A further note upon the handsome "new buildings in Paternoster-row," appears in our Journal of last week, may not be unacceptable. "The Ship and Swan," which have been outplanted in the spandrils from medallions taken from the houses which stood, were the sign of the Ship and Black Swan," in the imprint of Thomas Lanyton, in the titlepage of an edition of "Rowe's Dramatic Works," 2 vols., 12mo, 1725, stated to be the earliest book which bears the imprint of the sign. The Rivington came into Paternoster-row in 1710; and in the reign of Queen Anne, the Rivingtons published the London Gazette. The finding of the bed of manure reminds us that anciently a considerable quantity of manure cultivated the gardens attached within the City walls; and we read, from time to time, in the Coroners' rolls, of mortal accidents which befel youths attempting to steal apples in the orchards of Paternoster-row and Ivy-lane.

In the reports of the ball at Guildhall, on Monday last, our contemporaries are somewhat too brief at the partial illumination in the great western window, the glass of which, mostly restored and modern, is by no means remarkable for colour or brilliancy; so that "the fine old stained windows" are, in part, shams. On Monday evening a larger number of guests, it is believed, were entertained at Guildhall than upon any previous occasion. To the evening entertainment in 1861 the invitations were 1662; on Monday evening the company numbered some 2000.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J. H. SMITH, Rev. G. M'D., F. R. S., F. THOMPSON.—We can only acknowledge the receipt of your communications this week. Our question again time shall be given in the next number.

PHILOMATH.—The copy of "Lolman," exhibited at the British Museum, formerly belonged to Mr. Lewis Evans, of Bristol, who was the possessor of Lord Exmouth's copy. It is now in the library of a gentleman who has probably the largest collection of chess books in the world—Mr. Lowndes.

SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1096, by C. Jacob, S. S. W., Peter, Philo-Chess, D. P., Surrey, D. B., F. R. S., E. F. N., Percy, Tyrocinium, John, Rook, Tipo, Ben and Tom, C. Darnell, Theta, Fanny, Dymmock, Bristol, Rex Paterson, Excalibur Club, W. F., Clerk, Cambridge, Berkeley, old Louis, T. H. C., Lacey, W. C., Mrs. Gandy, Gary, Hereo, P. P., Shelley, Constant Reader, Alpha, Mrs. Pilkington, Mrs. Wilkinson, Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Bowyer, Mrs. Bowyer, Mrs. Bowyer

NEW MUSIC.

THE Hon. ALFRED STOURTON'S NEW SONG, THE SPELL OF THY BEAUTY, transcribed for the Pianoforte, by F. KUHE. "Combines the most attractive tunes in the most attractive form."—Morning Paper.
CRAMER, BEALE, AND CO., 201, Regent-street, and 67, New Bond-street, London; and 63, Queen-street, Cheapside.

FANTASIA on DANISH AIRS, for the Pianoforte. By JULES BRISSAC. 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, AND CO., 201, Regent-street, and 67, New Bond-street, London.

DANISH NATIONAL SEA-SONG, for the Pianoforte. By H. W. GOODBAN. 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, AND CO., 201, Regent-street, and 67, New Bond-street, London.

ELSINORE.—Value brilliante, for the Pianoforte. By H. SMITH. 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, AND CO., 201, Regent-street, and 67, New Bond-street, London.

ALBERT EDWARD and ALEXANDRA GALOP, PANORAMIQUE, composed by JULES BRISSAC, performed at Windsor by the Queen's Band, under the direction of Mr. C. Godfrey, Jun., and at the Promenade Concerts with the Monstre Illustrated Trio. Price 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 63, New Bond-street.

BRIDAL SERENADE. By E. ROECKEL. Price 3s. For the Pianoforte. Price 2s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 63, New Bond-street.

MARCH in BEETHOVEN'S REMONT, performed at the Philharmonic Concerts. Arranged for the Pianoforte by W. KUHE. Price 2s. 6d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 63, New Bond-street.

MOUNT ST. BERNARD. Characteristic Piece. Price for the Pianoforte. By JOHN FRANCIS BARNETT. Price 4s. Performed at the Monday Popular Concerts, and the Crystal Palace.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 67, New Bond-street, London.

THE LULL OF THE WAVES. New Song. Words by Frederic Forsyth, in most pleasing melody—easy, and at the same time very brilliant. Price 2s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 67, New Bond-street, London.

BEATRICE, MAZURKA DE SALON, by FREDERIC BOWEN JEWSON. Price 3s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 67, New Bond-street, London.

WALTER MACFARREN'S NEW PIANOFORTE WORKS.

Flatley	Pianoforte Duet	4s.
Sunday Song	ditto	4s.
Sid Mare	ditto	4s.
La Bon Alsée	ditto	4s.

CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 67, and 63, New Bond-street, London.

DIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS by the Composer.

Time's a Healer. Price 3s.
Fantasia on "Robert" Chorus." ... 4s. 0d.
Ditto Duetto "Di tale in Macchere" ... 4s. 0d.
Ditto Duodonetti "Marino Faliero" ... 4s. 0d.
Ditto Duodonetti "Lucrezia Borgia" ... 4s. 0d.
Vesper Hymn ... Organical ... 3s. 0d.
Sound the loud timbrel ... Arison ... 3s. 0d.
'Tis all gloom, Miriam ... Haydn ... 3s. 0d.
With vertures clad, from Creation ... Haydn ... 3s. 0d.
Hail, bright abode ... Handel ... 3s. 0d.
Rejoice, from Messiah ... Handel ... 3s. 0d.
Selections To Dom—Mozart ... Mozart ... 3s. 0d.
Selections from "Zauber Flote" ... Mozart ... 3s. 0d.
Lobelaite ... Pergolesi ... 3s. 0d.
Dal cor staliato ... Rossini ... 3s. 0d.

Published by CRAMER, BEALE, AND CO., 67 and 63, New Bond-st.

THE SPARKLING MOSELLE GALOP. Composed by C. GODFREY, Jun., Bandmaster to the Scots Fusilier Guards. Performed at the Promenade Concerts.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 67 and 63, New Bond-street, London.

THE ROSE OF SALENCY WALTZES, composed by CHARLES MARSHALL, and performed at the Promenade Concerts.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 67 and 63, New Bond-street, London.

THE ROSE OF SALENCY; an Operetta expressly adapted for drawing-room performances. Written and composed by CHARLES MARSHALL. The words may be had separately, price 1s.; also 40 detached pieces, lists of which may be had of the publishers.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 67 and 63, New Bond-street, London.

NEW SONG. By FRANK ROMER. "THE ENGLISH GIRL'S SONG." sung by Miss Poole.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 67 and 63, New Bond-street, London.

AN ENGLISH HOME, sung by Miss Louisa Pyne. In "Payne Gin." Composed by G. A. MACFARREN. Price 2s.
Published by CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 67 and 63, New Bond-street, London.

FOUR NEW PART SONGS, Song and Chorus written by F. C. BURNAND, Esq., the Music by J. E. TULLY (Bugler in the Queen's Scottish Rifle Volunteers). The Solo and Chorus parts always counted. Price 8s. 6d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 63, New Bond-street, London.

NEW ITALIAN SONGS by GIRONCI.
L'Amante Disperato. 3s.
Ah, Non Credea. 3s.
Oh dei bertati lidi. 3s.
Son bella giovine. 3s.
L'Amante Geloso. 3s.
L'Orfanita. 3s.
La Vendemmia. 3s.
La Contadina e Amore. 3s.
L'Ultimo sin Danza. 3s.
Il Mendicante. 3s.
Ah! quando sarò bella. 3s.
Nanni (in Napolitan dialect). 3s.
Or Sound Bella! in a Volume. 25s.
COCKS, HUTCHINGS, and CO., 63 and 65, New Bond-street, London.

HALF PRICE.—All Music sent post-free at half the published price.
FOSTER and KING, 16, Hanover-street, Regent-street, W.

NEW CONTRALTO SONGS.
Virginia Gabriel. 3s.
The Listening Maid ... Virginia Gabriel. 3s. 0d.
Thou art mine Wife—Caroline ... Lee. 3s.
Welcome ... Lee. 3s.
The Faithful Fostress ... Cross Hope ... 3s. 0d.
The Maid and the Moon ... W. H. Lutz ... 3s. 0d.
The May Bells ... W. H. Lutz ... 3s. 0d.
FOSTER and KING, 16, Hanover-street, Regent-street, W.

GREAT SUCCESS.
HENRY LESLIE'S CHOIR.
Sweet and Low ... J. Barnby ... 2s. 0d.
Annie Laurie ... J. Barnby ... 2s. 0d.
Come, Spirit, come ... J. Barnby ... 2s. 0d.
The Four Winds ... J. L. Hatton ... 2s. 0d.
Hark! the Soft Bugle ... W. H. Cummings ... 2s. 0d.
Reproach Not, Maiden ... Sir H. R. Bishop ... 2s. 0d.
Published by FOSTER and KING, 16, Hanover-street, Regent-street, W. 24 per cent.

FOSTER and KING, 16, Hanover-street, Regent-street, W.

WATCHING FOR THEE. New Ballad. By LINLEY SAMBOURNE DAVIS. Also "Come and Call," and "A Bright Star of Many," by the same popular Composer.
ROBERT W. OLLIVIER, 59, Old Bond-street, Piccadilly.

DIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUMB'S new PIANETTE are very superior to the French, and about one-third the price. Loudly recommended by the leading lovers of the substitute to their friends, and give universal satisfaction. Also, a large assortment of Cottage and Grand Pianofortes, by all the best makers, at wholesale prices. Illustrated lists sent free by post.

BUTLER'S MILITARY BAND INSTRUMENTS.—Important to the Officers of her Majesty's Army, Navy, and Auxiliary Forces, and Bands.—E. BUTLER, successor to the precious CODRINGTON, Manufacturer, Circular Vibrating Horns, Drums, Fifes, Bugles, Trumpets, Cornets, &c., by appointment to the Queen and other English houses. Price lists, corrected to 22nd ult., forwarded on application, or post free for 2s. 6d. A written guarantee given with every instrument. Estimates for bands, and price-lists, with drawings, sent post-free.
BUTLER'S MANUFACTORY, 26, Haymarket, London.

THE NEW STUDIO EASEL, Very simple and effectual.
WINSOR and NEWTON, Manufacturers, 38, Rathbone-place, London.

TWO PRIZE MEDALS, 1862.
THE GAME OF CROQUET. Price from 15s. to 70s. per set.
JAQUES and SON, Patentees, 102, Hatton-garden.

ASYLUM FOR FEMALE ORPHANS, Westminster-road, London.—The friends of Sarah Fardecher and Rebecca Evans return their sincere thanks to those kind persons who, by their votes and interest, have placed the above candidates, and they feel pleasure in adding that both were this day elected.—June 8, 1863.

NORTH LONDON RAILWAY COMPANY. The DIRECTORS are PREPARED to ENTERTAIN APPLICATIONS for ALLOTMENTS of the NORTH LONDON RAILWAY (EXTENSION to CROYDON) NEW CAPITAL, being the amount of the Company's Act of 1863, for the purposes of paying off and extinguishing the mortgage debt of the Company.
The Capital will be raised in shares and stock, and bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, such dividend or interest commencing from the 1st day of July next, and payable half-yearly on the 1st January and 1st July. Applications for shares or shares of stock to the Company.
The amount of stock not being a fraction of a pound, can be subscribed for. Forms of application for shares or stock may be had at the Secretary's office, Broad-street Station, and will be paid half-yearly on the 1st January and 1st July, pursuant to the Company's Act, which will be forwarded to the address of such registered proprietor, on application at the Secretary's office, Broad-street Station.
By order, DANIEL G. HAWES, Secretary.
Euston Station London, N.W., April, 1863.

ISLE OF MAN.—HILL'S ROYAL HOTEL, DOUGLAS, the Leading and Most Central Hotel. Perfect comfort in an elevated Suite and Map of Island.

ARTICLED CLERK.—There is a VACANCY for an Articled Clerk with a high-connexion of Solicitors in the Midland Counties.—Address Gamma, care of Messrs. Crosby and Thomas, Solicitors, Stamford.

THE WIDOW of a CLERGYMAN, residing west of London, offers a superior and careful EDUCATION with every comfort to TWO LITTLE GIRLS. Terms, 50 guineas. PUPILS Vacancies in August.—Address to A. B., 8, Ann-street, Kensington, Middlesex.

ISLE OF MAN.—TO FAMILIES WISHING TO VISIT THE SHARON.—TO BE LET, for a period of six or twelve months, VILLA RESIDENCE, situate on the healthiest and most beautiful Bay of Douglas, handsomely furnished, and replete with every convenience for a family. Rent moderate. Apply to Mr. Cannell, Bay-terrace, Douglas, Isle of Man.

IN consequence of the Division of an Infirmary, Bath, large HOUSE in FOR SALE or to LET, with immediate possession. The House is well adapted for a Boarding-House, and is suitable for an Hotel, a Manufactory, or an Asylum. Apply to Mr. Hall, 1, Bath-street, Walcot, Bath, where the House may be viewed.

MONEY ADVANCED by Mr. LUXMOORE, Stowmarket, &c., of 32, St. Martin's-lane, W.C. (opposite Newton's Coffee-house), on Life Interests, Policies, and Future Income that is usually charged.—N.B. Jewels and plate bought.

THE ST. GEORGE'S CHALLENGE VASE, value 100 guineas, is the Gossamer Prize, and is open to any Great Britain to be shot for at Wimbledon, in no View at Mount Arthur, on Saturday, July 4, 1863.

WHISKIES, Irish and Scotch, Gem of Ireland, 14s. and 15s. per dozen; Glenfield Patent Starch, 6d. per lb.; Finest Mocha, 1s. 4d.; City Office, 76, John-street, Bedford-row.

HEDGES and BUTLER, 155, Regent-street, London, W., and 30, King's-road, Brighton, are the sole distributors of the following Wines, which may be had in Cases of one dozen and upwards, carriage free:—

Port of the celebrated Vintage 1800	7 2 0
Port of the Vintage 1815	6 12 0
Port of the Vintage 1834	4 16 0
Port of the Vintage 1847	3 12 0
Sherry, pale, gold, and brown ... 2s., 2s. 6d., and 3s. per dozen.

GOOD SOUND CLARET, 14s. per Dozen; 28 dtto, 18s. vintage, 24s.; Sauterne, 24s.; Hock, 30s.; Champagne, 36s.; Port, 36s.; Sherry, 36s.; Hollands, and Sherry, 42s.; Cognac Brandy, 42s.; Jamaica Rum, 42s. Terms, cash. Cellars, 86, Fenchurch-street.

INDIGESTION.—MORSON'S PEPSINE WINE, containing the digestive principle prepared from fresh gastric membranes of the Pig, is the most effective and agreeable palatable form for administering this popular remedy for indigestion.
Sold by Chemists by T. Morson and Son, Southampton-row, Russell-square, W., in bottles at 1s., 2s., and 3s. each.

HORNIMAN'S PURE TEA CHEAPER, 2s. 6d. per lb. Sold by all Grocers. Observe the name Horniman's Tea in packets; very choice at 3s. 4d. and 4s. "High Class" at 4s. 8d. and 5s. per lb. 2, Kirby-street, Hatton-garden.

A Delicious Sweetmeat. Sold by Grocers and Confectioners.
FRY'S CHOCOLATE CREAMS.
Made expressly for HOME, COLONIAL, and FOREIGN CONSUMPTION.
LETTERS PATENT 1828. PRIZE MEDAL 1851.

ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS is the only pure and wholesome preparation of Scotch oats. Great Modern chemistry has shown that this food is easy of digestion and highly nutritious.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY is the delicious custard pudding, directions for which have been given by Mrs. C. E. Parnacott. It is also unrivalled for thickening gravies, and is excellent for modern cooking, and has been used with great success by nearly all the Royal Family.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.
Garlick-hill, London.

KEEN'S GENUINE MUSTARD, the best now sold in the Market, is made from Genuine Oleum Kane's essential Mustard and full approval is guaranteed.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.
Sold by Grocers and Oilmen in the Town and Country.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.
Garlick-hill, Queenhithe, London.

OSWEGO
PREPARED CORN,
Puddings, Custards, Blanc-Mange, &c.
Wholesale Depôt, 79, Cannon-street, City.
Sold by Grocers and Oilmen throughout the Country.
It is the original, genuine, and best article of maize, established 1848, commands the highest price from the trade, and offers the best value to the consumer.
Many imitations are offered, but none have been found to have a pure quality, and so delicious.
The Corn is the natural golden shape, and not the chalk white produced by artificial process.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.
Garlick-hill, London.

YEAST SUPERSEDED and INDIGESTION AVOIDED
by using ROBINSON'S BARLEY POWDER, for Bread, Puddings, and Pastry.
Sold everywhere.

VICTORIA PARK LAUNDRY SOAP, or WASHING STRIPS—being strips of soap to be so used as to make a lather without rubbing the clothes. Sold in packets of 1 lb. each, at 6d. per lb., or 1s. per packet of 2 lb. weight.
Making the saving in labour, this soap goes twice as far as the common sort. It does not destroy the linen nor injure coloured goods, and is recommended for its purity and excellence.
Sold by all Grocers and Oilmen. Wholesale Depôt of PALMER and CO., Soiton-street, Clerkenwell; sole manufacturers.

J. C. and J. FIELD, Original Manufacturers of the Self-fitting Patent Candles, beg to inform the Public that the Prize Medal 1862 has been awarded, and their Candles adopted by the Royal Commissioners for the use of the Royal Household, and are supplied to the Queen and all the Courts of Sweden and Greece in the United Kingdom. Price, 1s. 6d. per lb. Also Field's celebrated Sperm Candles, 1s. 4d. per lb. Caution.—The Public are cautioned to see that Field's label is on the packets or boxes. Wholesale and retail at 138, Upper Marsh, Lambeth, and 23, Cornhill.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, used in the Royal Laundry, and awarded the Prize Medal. Sold by all Grocers and Oilmen.

JUDSON'S SIMPLE DYES for LADIES, 6d. per bottle. Any one can use them. Ten brilliant colours. May be had of all Chemists.

BENZINE COLLAS removes grease, oil, or paint from silks, gloves, and every description of wearing apparel without the slightest injury to the most delicate fabric or colour. Sold in bottles, 6d., 1s., 2s. 6d., and 5s. each.—J. COLLAS, 15, Conduit-street, W. In consumers use in Buckingham Palace.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA is an effervescing aperient for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a mild aperient for delicate constitutions. 172, New Bond-street, London; and all Chemists.

GARDNERS' 42 pr. DINNER SERVICES, Richly Ornamented, of the choicest Semi-China, in new and elegant patterns, and which survives in equal vigour at the lowest possible price; table glass of the utmost brilliancy of colour; an entire, from 7s. 6d. per dozen. Illustrated Catalogue post-free. R. and J. GARDNER, Strand, Charing-cross, first-floor from Trafalgar-square; 4 and 5, Duncannon-street (adjoining). Established 1738.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, TEA, and TOILET SERVICES.—A large assortment of new and elegant DESIGNS, combining the most recherché taste with strength and durability, and admirably suited for parties travelling to choose from.
Also a large assortment of Table Glass, superior taste—low prices.
ALFRED B. FRANCE, 37, Lodgate-hill, E.C. Established 1760.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the Best.—The most varied assortment in London, replete with every novelty, at prices to suit the times. Moderator Lamps, per pair, Pinet Oils 12s., per gallon. R. and J. Gardner (by appointment) to the Queen, 4 and 5, Duncannon-street, Strand, from Trafalgar-square; 4 and 5, Duncannon-street (adjoining), London. Established 1738.

CHANDELIERS in BRONZE and ORMOLU for DINING-ROOM and LIBRARY, Candlabra, Moderator Lamps in Bronze and Ormolu, Table Glass, Ornamental China Vases, and every requisite.—DEANE, D., and SON, 46, Oxford-street, W.

OSLER'S GLASS CHANDELIERS, WALL LIGHTS, and Lustres, for Gas and Candles. Table Glass Dishes, Vases, and Ornaments. Glass Shades for Globes.
Glass Insect Services for 12 persons, from £3.
Glass Figures, Ornamental, and Glass Spars.
Ornamental Glass, English and Foreign, suitable for presents.
OSLER, Manufacturer, 45, Oxford-street, London, W.
Birmingham—Manufactory and Showrooms, Broad-street.
Established 1807.

HANDSOME BRASS and IRON BEDSTEADS.—HEAL and SON'S Showrooms contain a large assortment of Bedsteads, suitable for servants' rooms, as well as handsome Bedsteads for the best bedrooms, with Brass Mountings and elegantly-japanned; Plain Iron Bedsteads for servants; every Bedstead in stock is fitted with their Patent Woven Wire Mattress. Birch, Walnut-tree Woods, Polished Deal and Japanned, all fitted with Dovetail Joints and Patent Sacking. Heal and Son's Illustrated Catalogue, Furniture—Bed and Bed, 196, Tottenham-court-road, London, W.

LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF.—The Public are respectfully informed that the Original and the Genuine Spring Mattress is now in factory and maintenance for general use. The Sommier Elastique Portatif is the most luxurious, healthful, and durable bed in use, requires neither hair, wool, or feathers, and is also cheap and durable; and, as it has no stuffing on the top, it is always sweet. Lists of Prices on application to Heal and Son, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

STAINED DEAL GOTHIC BEDROOM and FURNISHING SUITES, well made, having been thoroughly seasoned before furniture is ornamented to design with the Gothic Tracery, and stained and varnished in imitation of Oak, and will last a length of time. Heal and Son's CUTTINGS of STAINED DEAL, by which they invite the attention of the clergy and gentlemen of the neighbourhood to the fact that it is a plain and simple imitation of wood in texture, price.—Heal and Son, Bedstead, Bedding and Bed-room Furniture Manufacturers, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

HEAL and SON'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of the Prices and prices of 100 Bedsteads, as well as of 150 different articles of Bedroom Furniture, sent by post free on application. Heal and Son, Bedstead and Bedroom Furniture Manufacturers, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

WEST-END FURNITURE GALLERIES, 34, Berners-street, Oxford-street.
TO PERSONS FURNISHING.
Good Cabinet Furniture at Moderate Kingdom.
Drawing-room Suites, in Rich Silk, from £15 to £30. Dining-room Suites complete, in morocco, from £20. Bedroom Suites from £2. Handsome Chimney Glasses, in Rich Gilt Frames, from £2. Hollands of unequalled excellence. Kitchen Dressers and Kitchen Requisites. Drawing Tables, in Rosewood, Walnut, and Oak. Dining-Tables, in Rosewood, Walnut, and Oak. Chimney-Glasses in every variety. Persons unable to pay a visit of inspection may receive Patterns and Prices Current by post, free on application. All goods warranted to be of the best quality, and sent out carriage paid, if required.
F. and S. BEVITT. Established 1845.

WALNUT SUITE of DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE, consisting of Couch, Two Easy Chairs, and Six Chairs, to cover in rep, tapestry, or silk, as required, in the Louis Quinze style of carving, and of the best workmanship throughout, price 35 guineas. Also a large and handsome Suite in Walnut-tree wood, upholstered in rich silk throughout, and richly carved in the Elizabethan style, price 50 guineas. A SPANISH MAHOGANY DINING-ROOM SUITE, 38 guineas.—At 34, BERNERS-STREET, Oxford-street, Regent-street.

OLD OAK FURNITURE.—A complete suite for a dining-room, comprising a magnificently carved sideboard (measuring 7 feet by 3 feet 6 inches), with plate glass back, a capacious extending dining-table, and six chairs, the whole in the BEST 42 guineas—half its value. Also four extra chairs and other furniture.—THOMAS WILLIAMS, 3, BERNERS-STREET, OXFORD, W., Mortimer-street, Regent-street.

BOWLES and SONS and CO., 24, Mortimer-street, London (late Gore House Regent-street), undertake to completely furnish Drawing-rooms, Dining-rooms, Bedrooms, Libraries, Curtains, and every necessary suitable for a gentleman's residence, in the most elegant manner, and forward to any railway station in England for £250. A personal visit solicited to select the goods from the most extensive stock in London, or a detailed estimate forwarded by post on receipt of a sketch of the room to be furnished, which will be happy to speak as to quality and style.

SUPERIOR EASY-CHAIRS and SOFAS, to be seen in our Show-rooms, or upon an approval, R. W. STACEY and SON'S Manufactory, 31, 32, and 34, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W. Illustrated Catalogue sent post-free.

REVISION of CATALOGUE.—ATKINSON BROTHERS and CO. beg to apprise their numerous customers, and also the public generally, that they have REVISED the PRICES of their Stock, and that they are now ready to post, or to supply, as below. The advantage of this catalogue over many that are published is that the prices are fixed. The goods, the prices in their showrooms, thus enabling purchasers to judge correctly of the quality of goods they may require. Also, that they are not subject to the inconvenience to be met with in their books.
ATKINSON BROTHERS and CO. are now exhibiting the choicest of the present season's productions in silkless furniture, carpets, and curtain fabrics of every description, suitable for the mansion, villa, or cottage, at their Wholesale Warehouses, 3, Wells-street, Oxford-street, and Lace Warehouse, 4, Mortimer-street. Designs sent to any part of the country, running from the Great Exhibition of 1862.
Contractors to her Majesty's Government and the principal public companies and railways in the kingdom.
ATKINSON BROTHERS and CO., 3, Wells-street, the left-hand side, after passing the New Bridge, from the Houses of Parliament.

CURTAINS.—The most splendid assortment of in Lace Curtains, Muslin Curtains, Chintzes at the cheapest. 3s.—Inclosed Swiss Lace and Lace Curtains, and a lot of Silk Brocade Curtains, at 1s. 6d. per pair, worth 3s. 6d. 34, Berners-street, Oxford-street, Soho, W.

CARPETS.—Now on hand, a large and choice selection of Carpets of every description. Tapestries at 1s. 6d. per yard, Brussels at 2s. 6d., Kidderminsters at 2s. 6d. Axminster—picked specimens, altogether different in quality and at one-third the usual prices. 34, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W. Compton House, Soho, W.

PATENT SPRING PILLOWS.—These Pillows are highly recommended by the medical profession as the most healthful bed that can be invented. They are admirable either for the bed, couch, or carriage. List of prices on application of R. W. STACEY and SON, 31, 32, and 34, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.

EVANS'S PRIZE KITCHENER.—This stainless Kitchener obtained a Prize at the Exhibition of 1862, and is recommended by the Jurors as the best for small families. Also, larger sizes for Hotels, Taverns, and Public Institutions. Evans's Prize Kitchener, with Steam Apparatus, from £20 to £100 complete.
Showrooms, 33 and 34, King William-street, London-bridge.

SEWING-MACHINES.—SINGER and CO.'S superior MACHINES for every class of family use, for tailoring, shoemaking, upholstery, bookbinding, leather, and every description of work. Prize Medal awarded 1862. Regent-street, W., and 98, Cheapside, E.C. They combine every improvement yet effected in sewing-machinery, and are the most elegant, efficient, and low priced. Machines for all kinds of manufacturing and trade purposes. Skilful teachers on the premises. Illustrated prospectuses post-free. Shipping orders executed.

W. F. THOMAS and CO.'S PATENT SEWING-MACHINES.—PRIZE MEDAL.—Contracted on the principle which the patentees have proved to be the most perfect, and imparted by certain mechanical movements to the needle and shuttle a uniform and reversible motion. They imparted on their feed instrument a self-adjusting power, which accommodates itself to the work produced alike on both sides; is unequalled for strength, beauty, regularity, and durability.—66, Newgate-street, London, E.C.

100 PATTERNS SILKS, POST-FREE. All the new and beautiful Coloured Silks for summer wear, commencing at 1 guinea the Dress.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street. Established 26 years.

100 PATTERNS SILKS, POST-FREE, including plain coloured Glacés in every shade, and great bargains in Checked and Striped Silks and Moire Antiques.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

5300 YARDS BLACK FRENCH GLACÉS, at 2s. 11d. per Yard. Rich Black Gros Grain Silks. Messrs. NICHOLSON are now selling the above, bought from one of the most noted Paris manufacturers, at the price of common makes, from 4s. 11½d. to 7s. 6d. per yard, and post-free. Some of these Silks are 24 inches wide.
50 of 55, St. Paul's-churchyard, 245 to 249, Regent-street.

3000 UNINFLAMMABLE SILK DRESSES, 12 yards for 18s. 6d., or 24s. per yard, all Warranted Fast Colours, and Unspotted by Wine.
NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 55, St. Paul's-churchyard.

1863.—NOTICE.—Messrs. NICHOLSON beg to announce that they have purchased the whole of Messrs. Foster's 50 to 55, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD (corner of Churchyard), and 245 to 249, Regent-street, Stock.

DO YOU WISH YOUR CHILDREN WELL DRESSED?—Buy Boys' Clothes from Dolls, from 18s. 9d.; Useful School Suits, from 25s. 9d. Patterns of the Cloth, Directions for Measurement, and 67 Engravings of the Newest Dresses post-free.—NICHOLSON, 50 to 55, St. Paul's-churchyard.

PROMENADE, EVENING, and BALL DRESSES.—The Newest Designs and Colours are now ready. The Skirts made and Trimmed.
SEWELL and CO.
Leslie Ladies to Queen's Bench, beautiful selection of Evening Costumes, in Tulle, Tarlatan, Grenadine, and other light fabrics, now ready in their Crystal Warehouses.
Compton House, Frith-street, Soho, W.

NEW DRESSES FOR JUNE, in all the new Fabrics, from 1s. 11d. the Full Dress of 12 yards, representing a £2 200 stock.
PETER ROBINSON.
All orders executed in the Country on receipt of Patterns.
NICHOLSON and MOUNT.
Oxford-street and Regent-street.

ELEGANT SILK JACKETS and MANTLES, one guinea each.
NICHOLSON and MOUNT
Crystal Warehouses,
61 and 62, St. Paul's-churchyard.

NEW SILKS for JUNE, 11 and 14 yards wide, with Patterns, representing the New Silks to be worn in London, post-free.
To insure a reply and the delivery of patterns the same day, it is positively necessary that all orders be addressed to the Crystal Warehouses.
NICHOLSON and MOUNT,
Crystal Warehouses,
61 and 62, St. Paul's-churchyard.

MARRIAGE TROUSSEAUX and INDIA OUTFITTING ESTABLISHMENT.—The Proprietors solicit an inspection of their economical and fashionable STOCK, now replete with every article of the most recherché description, for which trade terms has been noted for upwards of seventy years.
Charles Clarkson, 11, Bruton-street, Bond-street.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN BY APPOINTMENT.
Established in 1778.

BABIES' BASSINETS
Trimmed and Furnished
ready for immediate use on receipt of carriage.
Also
Trimmed and Furnished to correspond.
Cradles, Cots, Perambulators, Chamber Commodes, &c.
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post.

BABY-LINEN, one-third less than usually charged, Infants' Layettes, Baskets, Bassinets, and Robes, newest styles and lowest possible prices.—MOYE and MOYE, 295, Regent-street, corner of Vere-street, Cavendish-square. Descriptive Lists sent free by post.

HOOD'S RIDING HABITS.—CAUTION. W. HOOD and CO., Habit-makers to the Queen, the Empress of the French, &c., beg to say that they have no connexion with any advertising house of same name.
Ladies' Habits, 4 guineas; Hats, 21s.; Hats-street, Cavendish-square.

CRINOLINES.—The Patent Ondina Jupon allows the dress to fall less gracefully than illustrations, with Patent Steel Springs.
Price 21s., 25s., 30s., 35s., 40s., 45s., 50s., 55s., 60s.

SHIRTS.—Morning and Evening Shirts of every description, fitting with precision and ease, at moderate prices. Illustrated self-measure and Price List forwarded on application.—CAPER and WATERS, 30, Regent-street, London.

ROUND SHOULDERS, Stooping Habits, and Weak Chests.—Dr. LAYCOCK'S PATENTED CHEST-EXPANDING BRACES, for both sexes. They are especially recommended to the Clergy, Students, Governesses, Dressmakers, and Sedentary Persons. Prospectus free.—Dr. LAYCOCK, 2, Argyll-street, Regent-street, London.

LADIES' KID ELASTIC WALKING-BOOTS, with Heels, 8s. 6d. Ladies' Elastic Home Boots, 7s. 6d. Gentlemen's Elastic Walking-Boots, 8s. 6d. Elastic Military Heels, 12s. 6d.; with two rows small Buttons, 15s. 6d.
HOBBS, 10, New Bond-street, corner of Conduit-street, W.

THE 16, HAIR-WAVER (the Original).—A Lady can produce in a few minutes, at her own residence, the most elegant Hair Dress, or Wave in the Tresses of Waves, in a few minutes, without hot water or machinery. Price 10s. 6d. Sold by all Perfumers, and by the Inventor, J. TAUSTIN, Inventor, 1, Ainsworth-terrace, Grove-lane-road, N.W.

PIESSE and LUBIN'S LILY WATER, Rose, Frangipanni, Jockey Club, Bouquet, Ambrosia, and Verte gives it the perfection of fragrance, and is recommended by the faculty and nobility as the most refreshing to the skin. Sold by all Perfumers. 24, Hay-market, London.

DESTACHIO-NUT TOILET-POWDER for the Complexion, Whitening the Hands, and Softening the Skin. Sold by all Perfumers, and by the Inventor, 24, Hay-market, London.

A BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION. ROWLANDS' KALYDOR, as applied by the Ladies of the Court, the Nobility, and Gentry, produces a beautiful complexion, removes cutaneous eruptions, freckles, tan, sunburn, and heat of the skin, and renders it delightfully soft, fair, and blooming. Rowlands' Kalydor, 20, Hatton-garden, Holborn. Sold by all Chemists and Perfumers.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, exquisitely enamelled on gutta-percha, incorruptible, purest materials and best workmanship, fit perfectly and perform all the functions of the natural teeth. Messrs. GABRIEL, Surgeon-Dentists, 34, Ludgate-hill, City, and 56, New Bond-street, London, W., are the only Dentists who have received Prize Medals for their Inventions and Improvements in Dentistry. Messrs. GABRIEL'S INVENTION. Messrs. GABRIEL'S INVENTION. Messrs. GABRIEL'S INVENTION

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1209.—VOL. XLII. SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1863. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE CONSOLIDATION OF THE LAW.

FOR the last two or three years, and until the present Session, the Speech of her Majesty on the opening of Parliament has contained, with a certain lonely specialty, mention of a single measure of law reform. The vague generalities of that constitutional document were relieved and the specific mind of the Administration declared only by an announcement of that kind. During the years here alluded to those isolated measures thus indicated struggled into actual existence. They were two in number—namely, an amendment of the law of bankruptcy and the establishment of a system of registry of titles to real estate. All of them, as they passed into the shape of statutes, were pronounced by their projector to be but maimed and imperfect representations of the reforms which were intended, while they were put into action accompanied by a confession of their inadequacy to the requirements which they were designed to meet. This was caused by no lack of labour or diligence in their preparation, no want of comprehension of the principles on which they were founded, no failure in the application of details to the elucidation of those principles; while personal zeal and unwearied attention in the conduct of the bills through Parliament were still less wanting. But a legislature which was so busy in making new laws was unable to bestow the time and the trouble which were necessary for the remodelling and amending of old ones; and the law reformers, who undertook the onerous task of dealing with the eccentricities of a free, a very free, popular assembly like the House of Commons, were fain to take what they could get, and to hazard their reputation by casting their half-completed measures on the troubled waters of judicial criticism. It is not very surprising that the most ardent law reformer, who had watched his bill safely hustled and his provisions labour nearly thrown away, should shrink from again encountering such an ordeal. Perhaps, daily experience of the working of the measures in question, which has been anything but satisfactory, owing to the defective condition in which they were perforce put into operation, tended to increase the natural aversion for new essays on the wisdom and practical capability of Parliament in this line which previous experiments had generated. For it has been observed that a legal reformer, who was active in attempts at the amendment of the law when he was an overworked Attorney-General, gave no sign of persistency in that vocation when enjoying the comparative leisure of a Lord Chancellor. No statement in the Speech from the Throne of contadled last session was vouchsafed this year, and no voice proclaiming a crusade against legal abuses issued from the woolsack for the first four months of the Session. It was, therefore, with a sense of agreeable surprise that those who had watched the doings from Lord Westbury in the capacity of a Minister of Justice have learned practically that this year is not to pass without some measure of law reform from him.

STATE VISIT TO THE CITY: PRESENTING THE FREEDOM OF LONDON TO THE PRINCE.—SEE PAGE 678.

The scheme which the Lord Chancellor has promulgated has been conceived in the spirit of a statesman rather than that of a lawyer; for, with a candour which his high position enables him to adopt, he lays down that the amendment of the law had suffered greatly from the circumstance that it had generally been left to being exclusively in the hands of a great philosopher, who was nevertheless also a lawyer, he declared that lawyers when speaking of legislation discoursed, in chains and shackles, that their views were bounded by their profession, and their horizon limited by the cases they having been so long familiar only with professional objects. Freed from these chains and shackles, with a horizon no longer limited, though a great lawyer, the present holder of the Great Seal proceeds to deal now with the question of law reform as a philosopher. It is unquestionably a subject of the breadth of conception in a plan which proposes to classify and consolidate both the statute and common law, for such is the object Lord Westbury has in view in a measure which he has introduced into the House of Lords. In this he undertakes a laborious task; but, difficult as it is, it is not necessarily an impossible one. So far as the statute law is concerned, an attempt has been made at its revision and purgation, and a commission has been nominated to work for some years to that end, the forty threes or four thick quarto volumes, which contained the Acts passed from the twentieth year of Henry III, down to the present time, such statutes as are obsolete or repealed, and in arranging them in something like intelligible order. But this important duty having been confided to two gentlemen on such terms as rendered it necessary for them to continue in the active pursuit of their profession, they have only been able to devote their spare hours to the performance of a task which ought to comprehend the undivided industry of a body of active and intelligent men. It is proposed to remodel and to make efficient the agency by which so desirable and, as we think, quite accessible, an object as the putting into one harmonious whole the present crude and arbitrary enactments may be attained. We believe that the body of statute law may be, if not codified, at least classified and rendered intelligible, easy of reference, and reconcilable in spirit, and it is stated that when the purgation has been duly performed the forty quarto volumes will be reduced to a very modest number of sensible octavos. We hope that this part of the Lord Chancellor's plan will be put into operation at once, seeing as we do no serious obstacle to its being ultimately carried out.

As regards the other part of the scheme—namely, the consolidation of the common law as it is contained in the records of judicial decisions—we confess that we are by no means so hopeful. The history of this system, as it was delivered by the Lord Chancellor in his speech on the occasion of the introduction of his measure, may be studied with advantage by laymen as well as by lawyers. It will be seen how that traditionary, unwritten system, which is known as the common law, has grown up into a vast collection of recorded judicial decisions, which have all the force and power in the courts of legislative enactments. The Judges, in a great degree, made the laws; and, as early as the time of Richard I, the jealousy of the English people for liberty and justice prevailed so far as to cause the reason for the judgments of the Judges to be entered on the court rolls. At the end of the reign of Edward II, on the beginning of that of Edward III., the practice of reporting the decisions of the Judges began, and has been continued from that time until now. This was a great security to the public, because it was an approach to certainty in the law. The origin and reason of that arrangement was that distinctive peculiarity of the English mind, a love of precedent rather than of abstract reason. The reports were kept for a considerable period under the superintendence of the Judges themselves, and great care was taken in sifting and ascertaining the grounds of their decisions. In the course of time, as the reports multiplied and the personal superintendence of the Judges was withdrawn, they were characterized by less accuracy, and were not received as the best expositors and the surest evidence of the common law. As early as Lord Bacon's time it was felt that these books of decisions should be revised and authenticated; but nothing was done then, nor in the two hundred and fifty years which have since elapsed has any attempt been made to remedy an acknowledged evil. The mischief works in this way. When the Judges have a new case before them they do not pretend to arrive at what is the law applicable to it by reasoning on the facts, by independent inquiry, but seek only to discover among the records of former decisions cases which are supposed to be analogous; and from them they derive the rule which they apply to the determination of the particular case. Thus it may well happen that the law is misapplied when a ruler and land-marked ago binds a highly-civilised and more learned period. It is for the perpetuation of such a system that the lawyer's library comprises eleven or twelve hundred volumes of reports. How many conflicting decisions are to be found in those reports even it is easy to imagine; and it is not less easy to conceive how, from time to time, one decision is quoted as conclusive because its absolute contradiction has not been laboriously dug out, or has escaped mention which has no arrangement beyond that of chronological order.

It is proposed by the Lord Chancellor that competent persons shall be appointed, whose business it shall be to sit down before these numerous volumes of reports, to compare, revise, and expunge from them all decisions that are contradictory, that are in opposition to each other; to prune out and cut away all matter which is not warranted by the present state of society. Another process is to be that of the reduction of the law to three periods—namely, that which preceded the Revolution of 1688 or the beginning of the reign of Queen Anne; the next class embracing the period from the beginning of the eighteenth century to the end of the reign of George III.; and the last the period comprehended in the present discussion of George IV. to the present time. Giving all credit to the Lord Chancellor for good intention and for some skill in the development of this part of his scheme, we fear that its aptitude for the attainment of the object in view is at least questionable. As to the second part, undoubtedly, it is entitled to every consideration; although it may be considered doubtful whether codification would secure certainty in the definition of the law. Far be it, however, from us to be critical on the first step in a measure which unscientiously made towards the simplification of our law, and therefore we wish all possible success to a project which has at least the merit of being based on a good principle, and which has been undertaken by a great Chancellor.

From some such statement made by the Lord Chancellor, rather than from any actual statement made by him, we gather that, while endeavouring to deal with the statute and common law of the past, as collected in their present forms, he is desirous of making provision for the future. Decisions, Acts of Parliament should be better moulded and assume a more regular and uniform shape. We hear of a plan for reducing to something like an organisation the present very wild system of law reporting which is left to the private profits of publishers, and for its authority the recognition by the Judges of the professional gentlemen who manipulate the reports. It is believed that an attempt will be made to secure greater responsibility than now exists in reference to the reporting of law cases, and that steps will be proposed to be taken to prevent the accumulation of conflicting decisions. It may also be inferred that precautions will be taken for the better preparation and composition of bills which are laid before Parliament, with a view to their being in a more immediate results from the propositions which the Lord Chancellor has made to Parliament, we may at least congratulate ourselves on the fact that some movement has been made towards the amendment of those statutory ways in which our sages of the law are too apt to take their stand.

The cost (amounting to £5000) of the Bude Haven, Cornwall, new line of steamers between that town and the National Steam Institution by the surviving children of the late R. T. Gardner, Esq., of Rivers Lynd, Ireland, who died on the 19th of March, 1860, at his residence in Bude.

A society, called the Railway Officers' and Servants' Institution of the United Kingdom, has been formed. The members of the society number about 1000, and the objects are, as its name indicates, the formation of a friendly society.

Two telegraphic messages, addressed to Mr. Cyrus Field, which left San Francisco June 2, at 9.30 p.m., were brought by the China, which sailed from that port on the morning of the 3rd, and arrived at Queenstown on Friday night. In the first message Mr. M'Clellan, the director of the California Telegraph Line, San Francisco, congratulates Mr. Field upon the prospect of his final efforts to lay the Atlantic cable. In the second message Mr. M'Clellan says:—"We congratulate you on the prospect of the early success of your great undertaking. In the meantime we are doing our best, but our efforts are not idle. Already we talk to you across an entire continent, as it does to-day, from year 1 to year 2. We are in communication with Oregon, Victoria, and British Columbia; another year with Mexico; and three years with London by way of Behring's Straits and Amoor and St. Petersburg." Subsequently to the above message was dispatched to St. Petersburg on Saturday morning, having been sent by the Russian Government from Nicolaievsk, a distance of 700 miles by land and 5000 by sea. It was received in traversing the Atlantic by steamer, and forwarding in quick succession by the Russian lines of telegraph to St. Petersburg, Berlin, Hamburg, and the principal cities of Europe, and will, almost to the frontiers of China, will be able to communicate with San Francisco, and consequently with the British possessions in North America.

BUREADALBANE PEERAGE.—(From a Correspondent).—Touching the note on this subject in last week's ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, the Marquis of Breadalbane may know legally, but he has no book of proving Scotch peerage. It is true that the Scotch Act of Union is silent as to the peerages of Scotland which formerly existed, but the Act declares that in which whatever was interposed to prevent unlawful assumption, except the Crown, the Crown alone had the right of determining claims to peerages. In challenging the vote, and consequently the right of any Scotch peer to sit in the House of Lords, Lord Redesdale has raised a constitutional question—viz., that all Peers of Scotland succeeding to their peerages by descent, whether descent, or by decease of a brother, should, in the first instance, make good their claim to the Crown before they can sit in the House of Lords. Now, from the minutes of the House of Lords of last year, it appears that, on the 25th of July, 1862, this valuable resolution was rescinded. Therefore, despite of the 11th and 12th Vict. c. 69, an Act passed for regulating the elections of Scotch Representative Peers, any person, however fairly his claim, may be pressed, on the death of a Scotch Peer without issue or immediate relatives, assume the title and hold it until such time as an election of a Scotch Representative Peer occurs. The evil of this is that it gives a momentary position to a party who may have no right. But to all honourable claimants, in such a case as that of Breadalbane, one straightforward and simple course is still open—viz., to petition the Crown by petition to the Crown, which proceeding will bring the matter at once before the House of Lords; and really no party can be looked on as Duke of Breadalbane until this is done.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The Moniteur gives the following as the results of the ballotage, or second elections, which have just taken place. In the Charente, the Seine, the Seine-et-Oise, the Seine-Inférieure, and the Seine-Inférieure, the Opposition candidates are returned, M.M. Jules Favre and Guéroult being among the number. The candidates of the Government have been elected in the Gironde, the Nord, and the Haut Rhin. In the Rhone one Imperialist has been returned, as well as a member of the Opposition.

Count Nesselrode, Director-General of the Museums, has just published a report of his management for the last twelve years, by which it appears that 20,000 objects have been added to the different national establishments. The value is calculated at 4,000,000 francs at the Museum of Napoleon III.

Monday's Moniteur contained General Forey's report on the capture of Puebla, and also a letter by the Emperor to the General, signifying the great satisfaction with which the taking of the city had filled him, and expressing his appreciation of the perseverance and courage of the army. His Majesty took occasion to add that his "aim is not to impose on the Mexican nation any institutions which it does not so make his success save to the triumph of any party whatever." On the contrary, he is convinced that the nation may be left free to act, and that shortly, regenerated by a Government founded upon the national will, the principles of order and progress, and respect for international law, she may, by establishing friendly relations with France, acknowledge that it is to France that she owes her peace and prosperity."

PRUSSIA.

On Monday the Queen left Berlin for Brussels, where she paid a visit to the King of the Belgians. On Wednesday she embarked at Ostend for England, on a visit to Queen Victoria.

The Crown Prince and Princess arrived at Marienburg on the 7th. The authorities and the municipal council had resolved, by a majority of twenty-five to one, that no congratulatory or political circumstance so fêtes should take place. Some members of the magistracy and of the municipal council, in addition to the railway station, where the Royal visitors, but no presentations took place. Their Royal Highnesses were received, amid the ringing of bells, by five gala dresses only.

Notwithstanding the orders of the Prussian Government, the German Gymnastic Society has resolved on sending a deputation to the King to petition him to withdraw the press ordinance and convoke the Diet. The King, however, refused to receive the deputation; and a Ministerial journal of Berlin has been instructed, "to call the attention of the press," to warn its fellow-newspapers that some addresses and petitions "are not to be received," and to render their publication objectionable in view of the law on the press."

AUSTRIA.

The Council of the Empire met on Thursday. The following is a summary of the speech from the Throne, received through Reuter's office:—"The Emperor has convoked the deputies to a solemn meeting of the Reichsrath, and expresses a hope that Transylvania will also shortly take part in its deliberations. His Majesty continues:—

The Reichsrath does not, however, come under the hereditary peers, which the Government will endeavour to maintain undisturbed. Thanks to the liberal institutions of the empire, its material and intellectual life is everywhere being rapidly developed, and its influence and position as a great Power are continually increasing in consideration.

The financial condition of the empire is becoming more and more satisfactory. The expenditure of the public services will be considerably improved. It has been unnecessary to apply for any extraordinary credit. The budget for 1864 will be laid before the Reichsrath in time. It has been prepared with the greatest possible economy. Bills relative to taxation will be submitted to you, the object of which is to re-establish the equilibrium of the finances in five years' time. You will also be introduced upon the reform of the administration of justice. As respects the military system, the army will be more specially organised. It will comprise one precipitous, publicity, and trial by jury.

The bills for the reform of the civil code relate to bankruptcy, the private arrangement of debts, and the right of domicile.

THE INSURRECTION IN POLAND.

Telegrams from Berlin announce a decree on the part of the Poles, whilst, according to a despatch from Warsaw, the Polish leader Rochowski, has been severely and badly wounded.

Various executions by the Russians are reported. The insurgent chief, Ababi, and the Capuchin priest, Konarski, were hanged yesterday week in front of the new prison at Lublin. It is stated that the National Government, directly after these two executions, conveyed a warning to the Grand Duke Constantine that if he did not "stop them he will be responsible for his safety."

Many remarkable placards appear of the ascendancy of the secret National Government at Warsaw. It is stated, for instance, that the Commissioner of Police, Trepka, appointed by and under the Government Treasury in that city, discovered that Russian banknotes, Polish bonds, and gold half-imperials, to the amount of 7,000,000 roubles (£700,000) had been stolen. Trepka at that place was left a receipt signed by the National Government. Four officials, and the heads of the numbers of the stolen bonds were entered, had also disappeared.

The women of Warsaw have imprisoned at Warsaw for singing religious hymns to the national air have been set at liberty after having been flogged.

A telegram from Stockholm informs us that Colonel Lapinski's Polish expedition, which had so long been lying at Malmö, had hired a Danish vessel and sailed from Ronne on the 30th ult. But a landing was attempted, during a storm, near Polangen, but the attempt was fruitless, and the brave Pretender was driven downward. The expedition has since returned to the Swedish island of Gothland.

The Morning Post says that the scheme of the Polish Peace have been dispatched to St. Petersburg, and that they are nearly identical in terms, the only marked difference being that Austria does not suggest, in the form employed by the others, a suspension of arms.

AMERICA.

By the arrival of the Canadian mail screw-steamer Hibernian we have telegrams from New York to the way of Further Point, to the evening of the 6th inst.

WAR NEWS.

General Lee has evacuated Fredericksburg and abandoned the line of the Rappahannock to the enemy. He has not been driven, and General Hooker has crossed the river and occupied Fredericksburg.

The intelligence from Vicksburg reaches to the 2nd inst., at which date General Grant's position was more close to the works. One division of General Grant's army has gone up the Yazoo River. Confederate forces are concentrating at Jackson. On the 29th ult. the gunboat Cincinnati, while attempting to pass Vicksburg, was sunk by the fire of the Confederate batteries. More than twenty guns were either killed by the enemy's shot or drowned when the vessel sank.

The Confederate army under Gen. Bragg has retreated on the 27th ult. by the Federals, under General Banks. The defences were completely invested, while gun-boats co-operated from the Mississippi. The assault, which was made on the 27th ult., was unsuccessful," and 3000 Federal soldiers were killed or wounded, but "fighting was still progressing.

Letters from New Orleans, of the 23rd ult., report that two Confederate ironclads from Mobile had run out to the Mississippi and captured the Federal ship of war Vincennes and sank the store-ship Relief, which were lying at Ship Island.

A body of Federal cavalry was making a successful inroad into Alabama, had captured some prisoners and supplies at Florence, and was destroying railroad property. Guerillas, also, are prevailed through the country.

The vanguard of General Price's army crossed the Arkansas River at Fort Gibson, Indian territory, on the 20th ult., but was met and forced to fall back by the Federals, under Colonel Phillips. In the skirmishing that occurred Colonel Phillips lost thirty men killed.

General Hunter is reported to have notified to the Confederates that, unless the order for the execution of white officers of negro troops was immediately rescinded, he should execute every Southern officer and slaveholder in his possession.

Blockade-running at Charleston is said to be very active. Several captures of blockade runners are reported.

Admiral Foote is to relieve Admiral Dupont in the command of the South Atlantic squadron.

Commodore Lardner is to supersede Admiral Wilkes in the West Indies. It is asserted that Wilbee has been superseded in consequence of representations made at Washington by Lord Lyons.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Great Eastern sailed from New York on the 6th inst.

A great Democratic meeting, held in New York, has passed resolutions, declaring that the Federal Government had no right to coerce the States by military force, and recommending that hostilities should be suspended, and that a convention should be summoned to settle existing differences. Fernando Wood was the chief speaker.

The Islandigham meetings have been held in Buffalo, Newark, Philadelphia, and other places.

General Burnside is carrying matters with a high hand in his command, and some of his proceedings savour of the Spanish Inquisition, which he had suppressed, had caused apprehensions of a collision between the people and the military authority. President Lincoln, moved, no doubt, by the warmth with which the Illinois Legislature was proceeding to act in the matter, has revoked General Burnside's order; and the Chicago Times has consequently resigned.

The Chicago convention for the construction of a canal between the Mississippi and the Atlantic was very numerously attended, and a committee has been appointed to make arrangements for carrying out the undertaking.

That the sympathies of the Dissenters of the South are with its struggle for independence is shown by a Government published this week by the London Confederate organ, the Index. It is entitled "An Address to Christians throughout the World," and is signed by ninety-six ministers of various Christian denominations—including Methodists, Baptists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Lutherans, German Reformers, and some members of the Church of the United States of America, with the annexed notice, that "its origin was from no political motives whatever, but from a sincere desire to promote the Gospel in the city of Richmond." The subscribers condemn the Northern Democrats' "contemptible opposition" to a vindication of the laws of civilised warfare and an attempted barbarity. They say it is the pride that excommunion can be desired by Christians; and finally go on to condemn abolitionism and the Republicans among as those lately adopted by the Bishops of the American Church.

JAPAN.

Her Majesty's Charge d'Affaires at Yedo, Colonel Neale, delivered, on the 6th of April, to the Government of the Tycoon, in the form of an ultimatum, a statement of the demands of his Government for the reparation of the outrages of last June and September committed on British subjects. The demands consisted of a large pecuniary indemnity to the sufferers or their surviving relatives, and the capital punishment of the murderers of Mr. Richardson. Up to the 20th of April no answer had been given, great excitement prevailed among the European community at Yokuhama. Colonel Neale had warned British subjects to be on their guard, and the fleet was ordered to the shipping by the boats of merchant vessels had been organised, in addition to the aid that could be given by the men-of-war.

AUSTRALIA.

VICTORIA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, April 25.

Parliament reassembled on the 21st inst., after the Easter recess. From the decision of the Supreme Court, on a point raised during the trial of Gabbett for conspiring to defraud the revenue, the Land Act, the ballot has forced itself upon Parliament—and even upon Mr. Duffy, the framer of the Act—that the Act is defective in a point which so much was promised and so much hoped, is practically inoperative. In these circumstances, the bill for the amendment of the Act, notice of the introduction of which was given before the adjournment, has been postponed; and it is not improbable that in the meantime we may have a change of Ministry. The state of parties at present is doubtful amongst some of the most influential and independent members of the present Government.

The Governor's Salary Reduction Bill has passed the Assembly, and is now under the consideration of the Upper House. By the bill the salary of future Governors is fixed at £10,000 a year, inclusive of all expenses, except travelling, which will be provided by the State. The bill will not affect Sir Henry Barkly's salary, which will remain at £15,000, nor make him bound to pay his tenure of office.

The sittings of the Intercolonial Conference terminated about a fortnight ago. From what has transpired of its deliberations, it is expected that all the subjects mentioned will be settled by the conference.

Mr. Bruce, the railway contractor, died suddenly on the 5th inst.

Mr. Deniell, who left this place for Paris about twelve months ago, for the purpose of making arrangements for bringing to the colony a flock of alpacas, has returned, and reports that he has succeeded in his mission. The vessel, with a flock of 500 of this valuable animal, may be expected in the port in a few months. The alpaca climate is deemed admirably suited for the alpaca, we may soon expect to materially increase the value of our exports, the wool of this animal being in such demand at home.

Another "new industries" shows it to be established here may be mentioned a woollen cloth manufactory and a boot manufactory. There are ample demand and plenty of the raw material to encourage the projectors of both enterprises to go on with the undertakings.

The Great Britain, regarding the safety of which there were fears beginning to be expressed, arrived on the 22nd inst., after a passage of sixty-four days. She is appointed to sail on the 1st of May. On her return voyage it is anticipated that Parkes's all-England Eleven cricketers will be passengers. I need scarcely say that their reception will be quite as hearty as that of the former Eleven.

The third for Bishop Colenso's work on the Pentateuch has at last been published, and which I may mention that at a book sale the other day Mr. Allen's copy of the fifth edition realised £2 10s. The sixth, just published, price seven-and-sixpence.

The Australian Mail Company negotiated the novel idea of challenging their brethren in England to a match, to be run in Victoria, for £10,000, between English racehorses and the racehorses of Australia. England is to find half the stake, and Australia the other half. The proposal has been warmly espoused by our sporting men, and already a considerable amount of the required sum has been subscribed.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, April 25.

Parliament met on the 9th inst., but little business has been done. The total value of the cereal exports from all parts of South Australia, for the first sixteen weeks of 1863, amounted to £260,000. An increase to the extent of £80,000 has taken place in the month, from Adelaide, as compared with the same time of last year.

Mr. Gisborne has tendered to construct a telegraph across the Cambridge Gulf for a subsidy of £35,000.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

SYDNEY, April 25.

Parliament has been prorogued by proclamation to May 7.

The crab disease is prevalent among the sheep, and a deputation of gentlemen has waited upon his Excellency to present a memorial praying that the Parliament may be summoned without delay for the purpose of adopting some remedial measures for arresting the spread of the disease. The deputation promised to lay the memorial before the executive council at the earliest opportunity.

New South Wales is still the scene of bushranging, mail-robbing, and bloodshed, notwithstanding the efforts of the police to suppress the evil.

The annual commemoration of the Sydney University took place on March 31, at the Convocation Hall, and was numerously attended. Several of the students took their academical degrees, and the usual customary formalities. The Chancellor and the Governor (in his capacity as visitor) delivered suitable addresses.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, April 24.

Parliament recommenced its sittings on the 21st inst. On the 23rd the Assembly passed a resolution condemning Mr. Herbert, the Chief Secretary, for his long-continued absence from his Parliamentary duties—He House deciding that it was unconstitutional for Mr. Herbert to absent himself without first having received the consent of Parliament. The Governor's speech on the occasion of the opening of Parliament was full of promise for the future of this young colony. It is proposed to have a railway between Ipswich and Dalby, to be provided for by a loan. The land-order system is to be revised; and it was stated that an increase of 100 per cent had taken place in the land under cultivation last year. To do electric telegraph is to be extended to Port Denison. Addresses in reply to the speech were passed by both Houses.

There has been a charge made against Lieutenant Carr of shooting a number of peaceable blacks. The matter is to be officially investigated.

NEW ZEALAND.

Affairs in New Zealand remain in an unsettled state. The Maoris have refused to surrender certain land which they had been permitted to occupy while the prisoners were in gaol. Governor Cameron at once adopted a bold line of policy. He dispatched a force under Colonel Carey to Tauranga, in the bay of the same name, in dispute, and occupied it in the face of the natives, the troops intrenching themselves without any delay. The Governor has since been strongly reinforced, and the Maoris had not made any hostile demonstration when the last accounts left. It is said that there will be no war, yet in some quarters it is thought that the Taranaki tribes are preparing to be joined by others to recommence hostilities. A disturbance also recently occurred in the Waikato district, in consequence of which the Maori language had been established, and a party of the natives, headed by Rewi Maniapoto, the head of one of the articles, attacked the printing-office and carried off the press. They have since made restitution, however, and the district is again quiet.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The election of Sheriffs for London and Middlesex will take place on Wednesday, the 24th inst.

The council of the Society of Arts gave a conversazione yesterday evening in commemoration of the completion of the superstitious state of the weather, was numerously and fashionably attended.

The Metropolitan Public Gardens and Works have issued a precept for the abolition of the subordinate manor of Hackney, and for the formation of a vestry for the parish. The road shall be remembered throughout.

The second show of the Royal Horticultural Society will take place on Wednesday at their gardens at South Kensington, and was most successful.

The Dundonald peerage case was decided in the House of Lords on Thursday. The petitioner, Lord Dundonald, is declared to have proved his title to the peerage.

Sir Charles Locock was thrown from his horse on Tuesday in Regent's Park, and was so much injured that he sustained other serious injuries. No fatal result is, however, anticipated.

A grand ball was given on Monday night at the residence of the French Embassy in aid of the "French Charitable Association." The Duke of Cambridge took the chair, and the doors and the proceeds of the sales at the stalls, will be benefited to the extent of £1000.

Last week the births of 1905 children—995 boys and 1000 girls—were registered in London. The average number for the corresponding week of previous number (corrected) was 1791.—For the next time in the present year the deaths registered in London were 1186. The average number of deaths registered during the first week of September, in the last ten years, was 1,143. The mortality from small-pox shows a decrease.

RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE SOCIETIES.—The annual City Festival of the Church Missionary Society was held on Wednesday, at the Guildhall. The Gospel in Foreign Parts was held in the Egyptian Hall, Mansion House, yesterday week, the Lord Mayor presiding. The report of the committee of the society stated that the severe and long-continued pressure of distress in the manufacturing districts had affected the society's income, which, however, was a large income—nearly that which was derived from annual subscriptions and collections. The receipts for the year ending March 31 last were £102,000, being more than covered by an augmentation of receipts under the head of legacies. The total receipts of the society for the year ending March 31 last were £120,000, chiefly £79,425 ! appropriated funds (administered by the society), £9721; special funds, £10,000; collections in London, £1,000; and in the country, £1,000. The Rev. Charles D.D. had been consecrated Missionary Bishop for the Orange River Free State, and the Rev. W. Griffith, M.A., had been consecrated Bishop of Sierra Leone, in the room of the late Bishop Weeks. The Bishop of London, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and the Bishop of Winchester addressed the meeting. The fifty-fourth anniversary of the Artists' Annuity Fund, which was established in 1810 for the relief of the widows and orphans of the members of the Academy, was celebrated on Saturday at a dinner and exhibition and sale of pictures by members of the profession and artists, as well as by the annual contributions of the members of the committee, during the past year. The exhibition was opened to the public on Monday, and distributed in reviving widows and orphans of British artists, and during the past year the sum of £1,000 was distributed in annuities to widows and orphans of artists, the sum of £1 8s. Subscriptions were announced, including her Majesty's contribution of £50, and the Prince of Wales's £25. The Bishop of London presided at the annual meeting of the Asylum for Idiots for the past year has been a year of great progress. The new asylum at Earlswood for the reception of idiots has been obtained, by which important advantages to the charity have been secured. The number of idiots in the asylum during the year has been 337, in addition to which 25 have been elected to receive the advantages of the asylum when vacancies occur. There is every favourable report of the condition of the inmates generally, and especially of the healthful activity, cheerfulness, and happiness of the children. The last annual report were recorded that of the £7,000 required to the society since the Asylum, £4,000 was paid, £1,000 by the Duke of Cambridge, £1,000 by the late Mr. Alsager, Esq., and £1,000 by Mr. Peto, M.P., one of £75 ; two of £50; and one of £25. The contributions at the anniversary meeting amounted to £1,000. The Archbishop of Canterbury presided. The report contains very interesting details in connection with the management of the institution.

The Lines of Wellington Asylum for Female Orphans was opened on Tuesday. The anniversary dinner of the Royal Caledonian Asylum took place on Thursday, at Willis's Rooms, the Duke of Argyll presiding during the chair. This charity is established for the purpose of giving orphan daughters of soldiers and sailors of Scotch birth a plain education, and those who have died or have been disabled in the service of their country, and also of the children of deceased or disabled soldiers and sailors of Scotch extraction and child. The company numbered upwards of two hundred. The children of the asylum were present, and sang several pieces of music. The Duke of Argyll, in the name of the Earl of Dunmore's piper. They presented a fine appearance. The Duke of Argyll, in the course of the evening, said that he had received a letter from Lord Elcho, the excellence of the Highland regiments in the Army. He said that he was sorry that he could not be present, but he was sure that the Highland Society had added 1000 inmates; but the reason the asylum is not filled is because the funds are not sufficient to keep it up to the number of 150 children for which it was originally founded. The Duke of Argyll received medical attention from the staff.

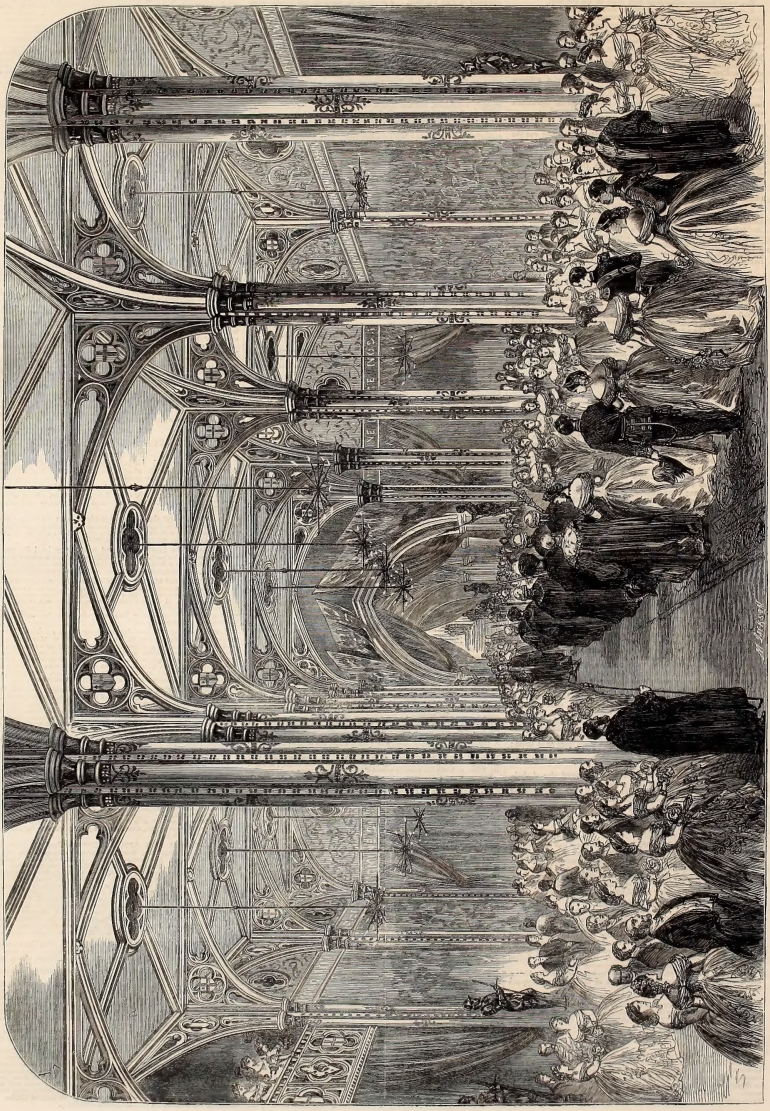
The annual meeting of the Governors of the Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest, Brompton, was held on Saturday in the grounds of the school, Frognal House, Hampstead, which, through the kindness of the trustees of the late Mr. Thomas Wilson, the hospital occupied the chair. The secretary, Mr. Nash, read the report, which stated that the number of in-patients relieved during the year was 1,000, being an increase of 100 over the previous year. The finances were satisfactory. The report then went into details and general health was very necessary of the school, and concluded with an earnest appeal for extended support. From the financial statement it appeared that the total receipts for the past year (including a balance from the previous year of £200 and £600 withdrawn from the funds) had been £2,606, and the expenditure £2,715. Several gentlemen spoke, and resolutions pledging the meeting to support the institution were adopted.

The annual anniversary festival of the supporters of the Consumption Hospital in King's-cross took place at the Albion Tavern on Saturday. The Rev. T. Archer, D.D., Rector of St. Giles's, Cripplegate, occupied the chair as president, and about one hundred gentlemen sat down to dinner. The proceeds of the hospital at King's-cross having been taken down by the Metropolitan Railway, although they have granted them a house in the Pentonville-road, they are about to erect a new hospital in the Caledonian-road, about a mile from the line of the New-road, and in close vicinity to the Cattle Market, and in the centre of a most populous district. During the seven years it has been in existence 10,000 patients have been relieved. One Dreadnought institution, which has been established, with the sanction of the Bishop of London, for the purpose of visiting the sick, has undertaken the first list of subscriptions and donations, which was read.

The annual meeting of the friends of the Royal Dispensary for Diseases of the Ear was held on Thursday week. The report set forth that since 1816, when the dispensary was established, 16,000 cases had received relief, and in 1816. A legacy of £50 had been received from the late Mr. Thomas Peter Williamson, of Bedford-square, who had been a subscriber to the dispensary patient. The number of patients had increased during the year from 1000 to 1,241, and 1,000 attended the clinical lectures.

The annual meeting of the Home and Colonial School Society was held on Thursday, at the Freemasons' Tavern, Lord Ashley in the chair, who was re-elected chairman in the chair. The report shows that 198 students have been duly trained and sent out to fill the established vacancies. The model infant schools and day schools for children are efficiently educated, and a middle-class school for girls has been established at Gravesend, which is now in operation on the premises ceded. After the examination of the children, the meeting was addressed by the Rev. Prebendary Sinclair, Rev. Scott Wiltshire, Rev. Mr. Bourne, Rev. Mr. Moore, and others.

The eighty-ninth anniversary meeting of the governors of the institution, Wellington-street, in the city of London, was held on Thursday, at the Freemasons' Tavern, the Rev. Richard Hutton, M.A., Rector of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the chair. The report, which was read by the secretary, stated that during the past year 1,000 children had been brought under the care of the society. During the past year 1,000 children had been brought under the care of the society. During the past year 1,000 children had been drowning, and 19 beyond recovery in the Thames, which were rescued from suicide. The society had received in various ways 236 acknowledgments of service rendered in rescuing the drowning, and 19 medals and 19 testimonials had been awarded. The society was also to be watchfulness of the society's men, without one fatal accident, and 11 medals and 11 testimonials had been awarded. The society was also to be watchfulness of the saved from drowning, and 19



STATE VISIT TO THE CITY: ARRIVAL OF THE ROYAL PARTY.—SEE PAGE 676.

STATE VISIT TO THE CITY: THE ROYAL QUADRILLE.—SEE PAGE 670.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 27.

SUNDAY, June 21.—Third Sunday after Trinity. Foundation-stone laid of St. Paul's, London, 1675. Battle of Victoria: the French, under Joseph Bonaparte, defeated by Wellington, 1813.

MONDAY, 22.—Battle of Morat: Total defeat of Charles the Bold, of Burgundy, by the Swiss, 1476. Sir Robert Peel's Income Tax Bill passed, 1842.

TUESDAY, 23.—Battle of Plassey; Clive's victory over the Nabob of Bengal, 1757. Sanguinary conflicts at Paris, 1848. Queen Victoria revisits above 48,000 pensioners in Hyde Park, 1860.

WEDNESDAY, 24.—St. John the Baptism. Midsummer Day. Battle of Lutzen, between the Swedes, under Gustavus, over the English, under Count Tilly, 1632. Battle of Naseby: Edward III. defeats the Scots, 1513. Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar produced at the Globe Theatre, 1599. Battle of Solferino: The Austrians totally defeated by the French and Sardinians under the Emperors of Austria and France and the King of Sardinia, 1859. Moon's last quarter, 11h. 19m. morning.

THURSDAY, 25.—The Confession of the Reformed Faith presented to Charles V., at Augsburg, by Luther and Melancthon, 1530. Conference between Alexander of Russia and Napoleon of France on a raft on the Niemen, near Tilsit, 1807.

FRIDAY, 26.—Death of King George IV. and accession of King William IV., 1830. Queen Victoria's coronation inaugurated, 1838. Battle of Prague, 1857. Sir Robert Peel's Corn Bill, introducing free trade, passed, 1846.

SATURDAY, 27.—Gibbon completes the last page of "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," 1787. Calve retaken from the French by the British and Turks, 1801.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 27, 1863.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
1 46	2 31	3 16	4 2	4 49	5 37	6 27
2 0	2 45	3 30	4 16	5 3	5 51	6 41

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Lat. 51° 29′ 6″ N. | Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W. | Height above the sea, 24 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETERS		WIND.		RAIN in 24 hours ending 10 A.M.
	Barometer reduced to 32° and Sea Level.	Direction of Wind.	Amount of Cloud.	Rain.	Highest in the Day.	Lowest in the Night.	General Direction.	Velocity in Miles per Hour.	Amount.	Duration.
	Inches			Inches					Inches	Hours
10	29·667	05.0	69·2	·82	8	69·8	68·1	E. SE. SSE.	320	05·6
11	29·630	05·4	62·2	·63	8	67·6	57·0	SW. S. SSW.	451	10·6
12	29·696	02·7	46·9	·81	9	48·3	40·8	S.	159	02·1
13	29·773	03·4	47·4	·00	0	53·3	40·3	W. WSW. W.	341	02·0
14	29·775	03·4	49·0	·00	0	62·3	44·9	...	194	00·0
15	29·777	07·2	49·5	·17	10	59·7	45·7	WSW. W.	194	03·0
16	29·932	04·0	54·2	·07	10	59·4	54·2	SW. SW.	333	00·3

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, to noon, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected	29·627	29·590	29·684	29·731	—	29·891 29·931
Temperature of the air	60·7	60·6	60·4	60·0	—	57·0 57·0
Temperature of Evaporation ...	54·7	50·8	50·8	50·0	—	52·0 51·0
Direction of Wind	...	S.S.W.	S.S.W.	S.W.	—	S.W. S.W.

OUR CONTINENTAL SUBSCRIBERS.—Mr. Ludwig Denicke, Leipsic, our special agent,—Mr. Gustave Barthin at Ratisbon—including four Double Numbers and the Christmas Number—One Year, 8 Thalers 20 Sgr.; Half-a-Year, 4 Thalers 10 Sgr.; per Quarter, 2 Thalers 5 Sgr.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1863.

THE time will never come when an English journal will need to apologise for mentioning the name of Shakspeare. A time has come when the mention of his name is almost forced upon the journalist. He desire, one and all, to refer to an agitation or demonstration which is at present in hand, and upon which we receive very numerous communications. It is exceedingly probable that, unless a rational and united course of action is adopted, a very ludicrous spectacle will be presented to irreverent Europe by the countrymen of a poet to whom Europe has never presented a rival.

We are happily spared the necessity of going back, as some worthy and intolerable people do in conversation, to first principles. We have passed the greatness of Shakspeare, and also that any demonstration made in his honour should be either worthy of him, or, at least, should have what Mr. Halliwell would call the Shakspearean*y* absurdity. Next year, 1864, three hundred years from his birthday will have been accomplished, and a great number of people have made up their minds that something ought to be done. This, to an English mind, means something with banners, dinners, speeches, and long advertisements. The orators it means an opportunity of bringing themselves before the public. To the smaller poets it means a chance of getting a reading for execrable verses beginning "Sweet Swan" and ending, if the authors sign, with another ornithological term. To the Shakspearoliater it means some stupendous memorial to which Mr. Dutfield's hall is as nothing. Now, out of all this chaotic resolve to do something, had we not better try and get a definite idea, and then carry it out with energy and rationality.

As might have been expected, many small people rushed to the front as the tercentenary approached, and sought to take possession of the field, with much clamour. The melodramatic rhapsodies in which they urged the consideration of their claims to be heard in favour of William Shakspeare were models of ardent nonsense. Honest lecturers, fervent orate actors, and the like, began the cry. But, of course, their "following" was small, and somewhat Bohemian. The real Shakspeareans would not march through Coventry with them. Better things have followed, and a large number of very good names are enrolled as those of men willing to co-operate for a worthy object; but there is, we apprehend, great danger of their energies being frittered away for the want of some one idea, acceptable to a reasonable body. Without pretending to select such an idea, we may do some service to the movement by pointing out some of the propositions which, we think, should be at once rejected, and thus to clear the ground.

We earnestly hope that there will be no attempt at the trashy absurdity called a jubilee. Let us show that we have made some little improvement, that we have advanced a little in taste since the days of Garrick. The display which he made, the mock enthusiasm, "the rites on Avon's bank," were relieved by wine and even in those days, and we merely allude to it because a measure of Lord Mayor's Show and Lady Godiva's procession, as a means of testifying our veneration for the finest intellect the island has produced. Such a thing might have done at Astley's; but certainly we ought not to have it at Stratford, where it should please nobody but the publicans. Then, we think that there is another matter to be taken into consideration. There are thousands on thousands of English people, of the very best class, who read and love the Poet, but who entirely disapprove of the present system of theatrical management. It is not for us to express any opinion on the merits of their opponents do, and to call them bigots, and Claphamites, and so forth. They care nothing for such abuse, and they calmly point to certain black features of the playhouse system, matters which no sycophant puffing can explain away, and they decline to be mere lumping indifferentists. Here with a reference whose immorality is not even attempted to be removed. A Shakspearean demonstration from which this class should stand apart may be very large, but it will not be national. Let us have a tribute to the great Poet, not a mere homage to the play-writer whose plays cannot be acted for want of artists. We do not think that the proposal to build a Shakspeare Theatre, and ask Government to endow it—so as to give us a school of art like the Théâtre Francais—will be acceptable to the country, and we are very nearly sure that Mr. Gladstone, though an enlightened admirer of the old drama, will not lend a favourable ear to the suggestion.

To the foundation of a Shakspeare scholarship there is only the one objection that there is no "Shakspeareanship" about it. Shakspeare himself was not much of a scholar, though he made better use of small Latin and less Greek than anybody of his time did of simpler resources. It would be difficult to prescribe conditions for competition. What is eligible? Is it that the candidate's name be William, or that he be able to stand a preliminary examination in "Othello" and "Love's Labour Lost," or must he have come out of Warwickshire, or must he undertake to devote his life to editing the Bard. The difficulties in arbitrary selection are great, nor can we connect the scholarship with the Poet. Otherwise, any educational movement is a good one, and the most resolute opponent of the ballet and its entourage would not object to aid in rendering the dramatic young man to a University. Then we are advised to urge that a portrait of the Poet be set up, and that a Shakspeare wing should be added to the Dramatic College. This would be an undeniably good work, but not, we think, one that should be effected by an appeal to the admirers of the Poet. Besides that, the present theatrical part of the public would be excluded. For, ably and eloquently as the claims of the actor's family to the charity of those who object to the actor have been urged, the fact that such claims are professional will defeat them with those who believe the profession an objectionable one. Do not let us injure a noble effort by restricting it to a section of the public.

Are we to have a statue? The suggestion has something of terror in it.

> O word of fear, O word of fear,
> Unpleasing to an English ear;

that is to say, criticisms, written or dictated for the most part by unsuccessful sculptors, would have taught John Bull to believe that every work by a successful competitor is a bad one; and until he estimates this sort of carping at its true value he will always be afraid of statuary, though the hideous things that ornament foreign parks might be numbered by the hundred for his comfort. If he makes up his mind to erect a Shakspeare statue and fountain, there are a dozen men who can make him a grand thing of the kind, but as soon as it is made there will be heaps of critics to tell him that he has been cheated. There is no reason why the tercentenary should not be commemorated by the erection of a statue; but it will take a great deal of money, and we must all work together for it. Of course it must be in London, or country people will never see it. On the whole, and unless something better be suggested forthwith, the greatest of artists may fairly be adjudged an art-tribute.

THE COURT.

The Queen remains at Windsor Castle. On Friday last her Majesty paid a second visit to South Kensington; and after an audience with the Royal Commissioners, left for Osborne on Saturday morning. Captain Fowke, who designed, and Messrs. Kelk and Lucas, who erected the building—from whom her Majesty listened with interest to explanations respecting the mode in which, if purchased by the Government, it was proposed to appropriate the edifice—the Queen again passed by the Prince Consort Road to the Kensington Gore and Hyde Park Corner road, then proceeding to the studio of Baron Marochetti, where her Majesty remained some time, examining the works of the artist.

On Saturday her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Helena and Prince Leopold, visited Prince Louis Lucien Lucien Bonaparte Lucien Charles Julien Lucien Napoleon Joseph Charles Marie Bonaparte, Prince of Canino, and Musignano, at Claremont.

On Sunday the Queen, Prince Alfred, Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, Prince Arthur, and Prince Leopold, with the ladies and gentlemen of the Court and household, attended Divine service in the private chapel. The Rev. W. R. Jolly officiated.

On Monday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louisa, drove in the grounds. Prince Arthur returned to Greenwich Park. Princess Helena attended Lady Augusta Stanley's concert, at Windsor Castle.

On Tuesday her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Louisa, walked and drove in the grounds. In the afternoon the Royal Highness Prince Alfred, who was attended by Major Oswell, went to Dover to meet the Princess of Prussia. Lord Alfred Paget was also at Dover. Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. D. De Ros also left the castle to attend the Queen of Prussia to Windsor. On arriving at Dover, Prince Alfred and his suite proceeded direct to the Lord Warden Hotel to await the arrival of the Queen, where her Majesty passed the night, and where the Prussian Ambassador and the Countess Bernstorff arrived to pay their respects to the Queen. Her Majesty is expected to remain a fortnight the guest of the Queen.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales went to Twickenham on Friday to visit the Duke and Duchess d'Aumale. The Princess and Duchess walked with them, in the afternoon, to a magnificent entertainment given in their honour at Northumberland House.

On Saturday his Royal Highness had an interview with the New Zealand chiefs at Marlborough House. In the afternoon the Prince and Princess attended the military concert in aid of Princess Mary's Fund. During the day a deputation, representing the ladies of North Wales, waited upon the Princess to present the jewels offered by the ladies of the Principality, which were graciously received. In the evening their Royal Highnesses honoured Her Majesty's Theatre with their presence.

On Sunday the Prince and Princess and the Duke of Cambridge attended Divine service in the Chapel Royal, St. James's.

On Monday the Prince of Wales accompanied the Duke of Cambridge to Aldershot, to review Royal Military College, Sandhurst. The Princess honored Mr. Heath with a visit, visiting for her gratification, and took a drive in the afternoon. The Prince and Princess had a dinner party at Marlborough House in the evening. The Queen's Private Band was in attendance.

On Tuesday morning their Royal Highnesses, attended by their suite, left Marlborough House for the Paddington station, and travelled by the Great Western Railway to the Pullen station, en route for Oxford, to attend the Commemoration—one of the most brilliant festivals ever held on the banks of the Isis. Oxford was gaily decorated, the streets were thronged, and a scarcely recognised day that the Prince and Princess were greeted with a hearty welcome. The august visitors took a drive round Oxford to the Shiddenton Theatre, where the Prince received from Lord Derby, the Chancellor of the University, his Diploma of D.C.L. The same degree was conferred on Prince Louis of Hesse, and on the chief officers of the household of the Prince and Princess of Wales—namely, Earl Spencer, the Earl of Mount-Edgcumbe, Lord Torrington, and Lieutenant-General Knollys. In the course of the afternoon the Royal party went to Magdalen College, where they were received as he was presented to the Chancellor, and so also were the more distinguished of the visitors, without much distinction of party; but the loudest cheers of all were reserved, as on the previous day, for the Prince and Princess—cheers being called for and given in their honour. In the evening, all visited the gardens. There was afterwards a boat-race, a banquet at Exeter College; and a grand ball at Christchurch, which terminated the round up the festivities of the day.

On Thursday their Prince and Princess, in spite of their fatigues through the week, prolonged till an early hour at the Christchurch ball, were early astir. They drove off to Blenheim Palace, and breakfasted with the Duke of Marlborough and family. Before eleven they paid short visits to the chief colleges and the objects of the greatest interest in the University, and left Oxford as they arrived, A public luncheon was given at two o'clock at Christchurch, at which the Prince and Princess of Wales were present; and at 3 p.m. after taking an affectionate farewell of the Dean and Mrs. Liddell, the Royal party drove to the railway-station, up St. Aldate's and down Queen street, along Botley Road, Hyde Park corner, and the High, and so landed out with wreaths, carpets, and artificial flowers round the windows.

His Majesty the King of the Belgians has been pronounced convalescent. His Majesty has submitted to operations by Mr. Henry Thompson, of University College, which have resulted in perfect success, and King Leopold now takes daily exercise.

His Royal Highness Prince Arthur, attended by Major Elphinstone, honoured the Royal Italian Opera with his presence on Tuesday.

The Duke of Cambridge and the officers of the Royal Artillery will give a grand banquet on Wednesday next, at the mansion, Woolwich, to a distinguished party, including several of her Majesty's Ministers.

The Duke and Duchess De Chartres have arrived in Scotland, on their tricki tour.

Earl Cowley, Ambassador at the Tuileries, is expected in London at his own private mansion, on short leave of absence from Paris.

The marriage of the Right Honourable Augustus Stafford, youngest daughter of Lord Lyndhurst, and Mr. Du Cane, M.P., will be solemnised on Thursday next. A splendid wedding breakfast is arranged for the friends of the Grenadier Guards, and Miss Emily Tottenham, second daughter of Colonel and the Hon. Mrs. Tottenham.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The first stone of the Dublin Exhibition Palace and Winter Garden was laid yesterday week by the Lord Lieutenant.

The Dublin corporation has resolved to present an address to the Queen praying for the union of Ireland and Scotland.

The Queen has approved of Mr. James Smith as Consul at Dundee for the United States.

The tower of Welbeck Abbey, Nottinghamshire, the seat of the Duke of Portland, was struck by lightning and destroyed on Saturday last.

The Conway and Llandudno Railway was opened, on Tuesday, by a passenger-train conveying the directors and a large party of guests.

It is stated that the Institution of Mechanical Engineers will have Liverpool for their next autumnal session.

The inauguration of the statue of the late Lord Herbert of Lea, which is to be erected at Salisbury, will take place on the 29th.

Major Gordon, M.P. for Berwick-on-Tweed, died on Tuesday, after a painful illness of some days.

The Prince of Wales will be present at the opening of the new Townhall of Halifax in July next, and it is expected that his Royal Highness will be entertained by the Duke of Devonshire.

The Oxford local examinations have been going on in various towns and cities throughout the country during the past week. There is an increase in the number of candidates, the total being 1,200, which is an expected more than 1100 would present themselves.

The Worcester Militia will embark for Dublin on the 29th.

Major Gordon, M.P. for Berwick-on-Tweed, died on Tuesday, after a painful illness of some days.

The Prince of Wales will be present at the opening of the new Townhall of Halifax in July next, and it is expected that his Royal Highness will be entertained by the Duke of Devonshire.

The Oxford local examinations have been going on in various towns and cities throughout the country during the past week. There is an increase in the number of candidates, the total being 1,200, which is an expected more than 1100 would present themselves.

The Worcester Militia will embark for Dublin on the 29th.

The Duke of Leinster's Own Yeomanry, about two hundred in number, under the command of Colonel the Hon. Algernon Egerton, have been trained at Lancaster during the present week.

At a town meeting held at Stratford-on-Avon last Saturday, a resolution was adopted unanimously, requesting the Corporation authorities to reconsider their decision against erecting a statue or monumental memorial of Shakspeare in honour of the approaching tercentenary.

Captain Speke and Captain Grant, the discoverers of the source of the Nile, have arrived at Southampton. They are to be met at a meeting of the Geographical Society on Monday evening next.

The Lord Mayor entertained at the Mansion House on Wednesday night to Viscount Palmerston and her Majesty's Ministers. The banquet was the most magnificent ever given by the present Lord Mayor during his majority. The guests were about 250 in number.

Two candelabra, worth £250, were presented on Wednesday night by the inhabitants of Southampton to Sir John Pakington, Bart., M.P., as a grateful acknowledgment for the exemplary manner in which he has discharged the honorary office of Chairman of the Board of Guardians for years. Mr. Alderman Copeland was Lord Mayor thirty years ago, and to the astonishment of all, he is still alive.

The Bromley Collection of ancient pictures was sold on Friday and Saturday last. The whole realised £13,856 6s. Possibly magnificent picture, "The Holy Trinity," was knocked down, on Saturday, amid loud cheers, to Sir C. Eastlake for the National Gallery. The price paid for this great work was 2000 guineas.

At a meeting of the Royal Botanic Society of London held last Saturday—the President (Earl De la Warr) in the chair—his Lordship announced that their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales had signified their gracious pleasure in becoming vice-patron and vice-patroness of the society. Mr. Gibson Craig presented a number of botanical specimens to the society. Professor Bentley presented to the society, from Mr. Hide, some fine specimens of the Chinese edible birds' nests, and learnedly described the uses.

ECHOES FROM ABROAD.

Two Continentals are holding up their hands in astonishment at the gay doings of which London has recently been the theatre. The most determined sulphophobes are now fain to admit that "la reine de Bretagne Angleterre" is a mainmeuse in qualification; and that, although "Albion" must necessarily be "perfidious" to the end of the chapter, she can, nevertheless, be proud, joyous, and brilliant. Yet there were some peculiarities in the late splendid festivities held in honour of the Prince and Princess of Wales that puzzle foreigners, especially the Parisians, grievously. For example: the Guildhall ball. The Parisian press concurs in admitting the entertainment to have been the most gorgeous and satisfactory in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Yet and Megge to be taken to London to be cut up for the benefit of the Brompton builders a pile of guidore, or trusses, or columns, or some other building materials—the matters differ—which, after serving as a tantalising policeman the use for which these objects were designed. "Then," says the guardian of the police, "you have no Minister?" "There's for Captain Fowke's British Museum and National Gallery." The policeman's reply was considered to be a true prophet. The momentous vote of Monday in the British House of Commons has taken the oldest reader of Galignani by surprise. We all supposed that the Legislature had left the fate of the historical Nelson Column Building—facade, picture-galleries, domes, and all—to the ground, and to be dealt with sail and sauce—as the sailors say—as we not remember the almost unseemly celerity with which Parliament, a dozen years ago, expedited the completion of Sydenham. Even Mr. Fraser's exquisitely beautiful structures in Hyde Park? How many minds do we think there are to be sure? The Fairy Palace of glass was ignominiously banished from Knightsbridge to a suburb out at Sydenham. With the blithe indifference our legislators decreed the demolition of a wonderful work, which, in the opinion of many, is to one, the perpetuation of the remarkable brick edifice at South Kensington, and to prevent the Crystal Palace from being decided upon.

Well, there may be found means at all events for mending the ugliness of Captain Fowke's Desideratum building. Lord Palmerston has hinted at the practicability of covering the front with stucco and building up the centre with brick. Why not add to the Nelson Column Rachel and allow her to enamel the entire exterior surface, and so make it "Rachel-proof"? Or, if Rachel be too costly, why not a melancholy impression that not all the Queen's horses and all the Queen's men can make Sir Bull's nursery, will ever make Humpty Dumpty anything but an eyesore.

We might pass over the Metropolitan indifference the prompt of a lamentable and permanent architectural infliction—if the Metropolis of Fowke is only partially blamable—were we not fresh from the contemplation of the most splendid improvements that municipal authorities in Europe can boast. We write this from Paris, and in that capital, as the most casual observer knows, the Second Empire, inaugurated by Napoleon III. has done wonders. Still we are not about to cry up Paris as the ne plus ultra of architectonic skill. The new boulevards, new palaces, new public offices, new hotels, and new churches, have arisen, it is true, as at the touch of an enchanter's wand, and a dirty, confused, and unhealthy city has been transformed into an enchanting place of residence; but we cannot shut our eyes to the fact of the splendid effects that are being marred by much that is garish and much that is meretricious. Napoleon III. is powerful enough to change and to control all this; but he has not been able to prevent his architects from overloading their works with the ill-digested ornamentation which is the sing of greater things. Our wanderings during the past month have been considerable. We have been down to Munich, and seen the Pinacothek and the Glyptothek, the splendid Royal Gallery (Schack), and the Palais and the Pitti Palace), the noble Maximilian Theatre, and the towering Transfiguration. We have been down to Venice, and seen Canaletto and Verona, and gazed upon that almost perfect relic of Roman antiquity, the Amphitheatre. And during a railway took our way to and from Naples and rattled through the salt shallows of the Lagunes till, all at once, on the other of our seat we saw the sea shining, and there suddenly started up a wondrous panorama of churches and palaces, and the most picturesque looking Englishman in the widewaters and green spectacles by our side, who had been gazing steadily at the same sight, for the first time in our life, we were pleased to hear, that Venice was worth seeing.

It is a city that takes your breath away. It is the only city in the world that, despite all you have satisfied yourself with reading about it, does not disappoint—in actual and ocular acquaintance. Directly you land in Venice you begin to dream, and you go on dreaming till you tear yourself away from it. After one day's palace and church and picture crawl you begin to think the Napoleons and the Victor Emanuels and the Louvres a sham. After the second day you arrive at the conclusion that London is a sham, and that even St. Paul's, the Cathedral, is, architecturally speaking, the meanest, basest, shabbiest, ugliest, most series of dingy and dwarfish hovels on the surface of the habitable globe.

Who will paint Venice for us—the real, existing, absolute Venice? Who will depict for us the Venice that was the mistress of the seas of the Adriatic? but how many of them have been successful? Mr. David Roberts's and Mr. Stanfield's Venices are but theatrical scenes. Mr. Holland's is gorgeous, but discursive. The Venice of Mr. E. W. Cooke is extremely fine but too clean and too new. The Venice of Venice is an Austrian one—handsome, but hard and harsh and shiny. The modern Venetian painter, as we do not succeed much better in representing their own city. Bread and wages are too high, the gondolas too, was a scrapegutter, and his Venice smells of the lamps. We begged and prayed, and went on our knees to the Venetian Pre-Raphaelite painter whom we met at the hotel Victoria to betake himself to the delineation of a real, literal, unadulterated Venice. He laughed, and talked about Titian's portraits and Tintoretto's colouring; and we are convinced that when he does paint Venice his pictures won't be the least in the world like it. We pray for the impossible, but it is impossibility. The place may be sung, but not painted. We went to the municipal picture gallery, and looked, and looked, and bought a barcarole, and, lo behold! the vignette on the titlepage of the book was a photographic copy of Turner's "Approach from the Bull." Joseph Mallard William Turner was perhaps the only man who really understood and appreciated beautiful city; but then J. M. W. was quite as much a poet as a painter.

Of the city's many terse sins he has been given by an English traveller, who said that "you went on board a Venice," and that the different idiots were so many vessels in a squadron, and that a fête in St. Mark's Piece was only a ball on board the Commodore. In a similar spirit M. Louis Viardot called Venice "La fleute de pierre!"—the "Stone Flute!" An American we met at the table d'hôte remarked that Austria need never fear national bankruptcy so long as she retained her hold on Venice, for it was her "floating capital!"

There are no fêtes in St. Mark's Place now. When Mr. Disraeli, senior, visited Paris he "did it grand." We found Venice dull; and no wonder. The city is dead. There is no Republic of Venice, save on M. Sivori's fiddle-strings. The saloon of the Bédotto is turned into a waxwork show, admission one Austrian swanger. The most populous of the palaces are converted into hotels or barracks, or have been bought by enriched usurers or retired ballet-dancers. The convents are mostly military storehouses. The vice of the island of St. George the Great from St. Mark's Face is half hidden by an Austrian fort. The Fenice Theatre—one of the handsomest in Europe—has been shut up these five years. There are some native Venetian families left, it is to be presumed; but nobody ever sees them. They remain cloistered, like nuns and monks, in such habitations as are left to them. Yes, Venice is dead. It is the Morgue of Europe. And it is as grand, as sublime, as beautiful as ever.

If you ask the reason of all this—why silence and sorrow reign in a city of such splendour and beauty—why this colossal corpse floats on the bosom of the Adriatic?—why desert-city dreams of the past lie alone at the street corners?—why, for a dozen groups of German, or English, or American tourists, there is not one group of Venetians seen, one single Italian lady or gentleman?—why, when the military bands play in the centre of St. Mark's Place the citizens keep studying or writing—for they are almost beyond the range of hearing?—if you ask questions such as these a finger is directed to the colossuses of Mars and Hope's Palace, where there is an Austrian guardhouse; to the Mint, before which no face is turned smiling; to the harbour, where rides an Austrian man-of-war; to the Austrian steamers that ply to and fro in St. Mark's Church—the masts from which were wont to float the banners whereon were the Lion of Venice and the Cross of Saint Candia, and the Moses; but which are now, on high days and holidays, decorated only with the Austrian double-headed eagle of Austria. That is the reason; that is why Venice is dead.

MUSIC.

Gounod's new opera, "Faust" (as we mentioned last week) was produced at HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE on Thursday, the 15th inst. It was received by a crowded house with great enthusiasm, and the success of the first night has been confirmed by four representations. Without doubting that Gounod's work is one of great merit, and worthy of the reception it has met with, not only in France, but in this country, we also in Germany and Italy, if his success is unquestionably due in part to M. Gounod's music, which displays much talent, and in many parts a still greater degree to the excellence of the drama, which is much superior to the common run of operas. It has no resemblance to Spohr's celebrated opera of the same name. Except the two principal characters, Faust and Mephistopheles, they have nothing in common. Spohr's opera is founded on the old story of the sorcerer Faustus, while in Gounod's the wholly taken from the wonderful dramatic poem of Goethe; and it is to the latter that the success of the opera may be very palpably and striking. The French dramatists, MM. Barbier and Carré, who furnished M. Gounod with his libretto, have confined themselves to that portion of Goethe's work which relates to the loves of Faust and Margaret—the art by which the fend mates the unsuspecting girl, her betrayal, abandonment, and the consequent seduction, despair and madness, with her final rescue, as well as that of her lover, by the intervention of the powers of light. The character of Faust is an abandoned ruffian; in Gounod's he is a man tempted beyond his strength, but who struggles with his better nature to hold on our sympathy. Thus the interest of the subject contributes powerfully towards the success of the music. In regard to the music, it appears to us to be more suitable for the lyric than the dramatic stage, and dramatic; but it shows a disregard or defiance of the existing laws of musical composition, which is sometimes very effective and unpleasing. In this respect it may, perhaps, be regarded as "music of the future," but we do not consider it necessary to add to the fanatics that what offends the ear now may delight it twenty years hence. Unusual harmonies would have been intolerable to Mozart, just as Mozart's would have been intolerable to composers of the present day. But there is much in Gounod's music so flowing and natural that it is not only pleasing to the ear, but grateful to it, and there are many compositions that still seem crude and rugged. The performance at Her Majesty's Theatre is one of the best ever heard in London. Mdlle. Titiens as Margaret, Gassier as Mephistopheles, Santley as Valentine, and Trebelli as Siebel, are all excellent, and Faust could not be met with in any other theatre in Europe. The orchestra, brought by Mr. Mapleson under the direction of Signor Arditi, is magnificent; the chorus is powerful, but not always in tune, and the mise en scène is one that every reason to congratulate himself on the manner in which his work has been brought out before the public.

The seventh concert of the PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY (the last but one of the season) took place on Monday last. The programme presented a selection of the most popular works of the past. The orchestral pieces were Beethoven's first symphony in C, Mendelssohn's overture to "Ruy Blas," Weber's overture to "Oberon," and Cherubini's to "Anacreon." M. Buziau, a young violinist of Belgium, made his first appearance in England with great success. The vocal performers were Mdlle. Artôt and Signor Delle-Sedie. Several of the younger members of the Royal family honoured the concert with their presence, and were received with cheers by the audience.

A concert of Welsh National Music was given by Mr. JOHN THOMAS, the eminent harpist, at the Hanover-square Rooms, on Saturday morning last—similar in form and character to Mr. Thomas's performance of the previous Saturday, which we noticed at length for the attention and interest of the public. It consisted, without any admixture, of Welsh music, vocal and instrumental, performed by the most beautiful songs and choruses contained in the magnificent collection of Welsh melodies, entitled "Caniadau y Cysegr," recently published by Mr. Thomas. The songs were sung by Miss Edith Wynne (the young Welsh lady who has gained so much favour as a singer of her native lays), Mdme. Santley, Mdme. Patey, Mr. Lewis, and Mr. Lewis Thomas. The choruses were sung by a powerful choir, composed of members of the Welsh Choral Association, and students of the Royal Academy of Music, and were accompanied by a band of harps under the direction of Mr. Thomas, who conducted. The songs were accompanied on the harp by Mr. Thomas. Mr. Randles was the pianist. The concert was rendered several of the finest specimens of Cambrian music, the beauties of which it is to have become known to the English public. The duets for two harps—"Rondo Cambrian," and "Rondo Gallois," performed by Mr. John Thomas—pieces which so beautifully display the powers of the harp in the hands of a skilful performer, and written by the composer and Mr. Baley Chatterton in a manner which exhibited, in the most favourable conformation, to create an enthusiasm of the audience. We hope these excellent concerts will be regularly continued, and thus bringing to the acquaintance of the public a class of music hitherto little known, but rich in beauty, expression, and variety to the national music of any country in Europe.

MISS. HELEN CROSMOND, a young lady who has already appeared at her residence in Adelphi terrace. The last was given on Friday, the 16th inst., and, like the others, was attended by a crowded and fashionable audience. Mrs. Crosmond is a most accomplished reader, was once Miss Maria B. Hawes, one of the most accomplished and distinguished singers of her day. She retired from the public popularity, and when her presence was deemed indispensable at every musical festival of the period. She is the widow of the late Mr. Crosmond and withdrew from public life. After a retirement of some years she has come, in her widowhood, to resume her profession and professional labours. She has returned with her vocal powers unimpaired, and has thus overall lost up the blank caused by her disappearance from our concert rooms. We have heard her sing, and sing well, but her declamatory voice, her pure and ex pressive style, and her original genius as a composer and her performance on the pianoforte, show that the fashionable public have not forgotten one of their greatest favourites. Her last concert was a fine selection of us ones, almost entirely of the English school. Mrs. Mercet of course sang several of these pieces, sole and concerted, to which she used in former times to give so much effect. In the place she was ably assisted by Mdme. Weiss, Mr. Dyson, Mr. Carter, Mr. Seymour Smith, and Mr. H. Phillips. Several favourite songs and duets were sung by Mdme. Weiss, Miss Florence Phillips, Mr. H. Phillips, Mr. Dyson, and Miss Allen. This lady, who is a pupil of Mrs. Crosmond, has a beautiful voice of very great power. Her whole entertainment was received by the audience with the warm at ention and approbation which it deserved. Mrs. Crosmond was assisted on the pianoforte by Mr. Edward Mirs. Mercet to give another on Friday evening next.

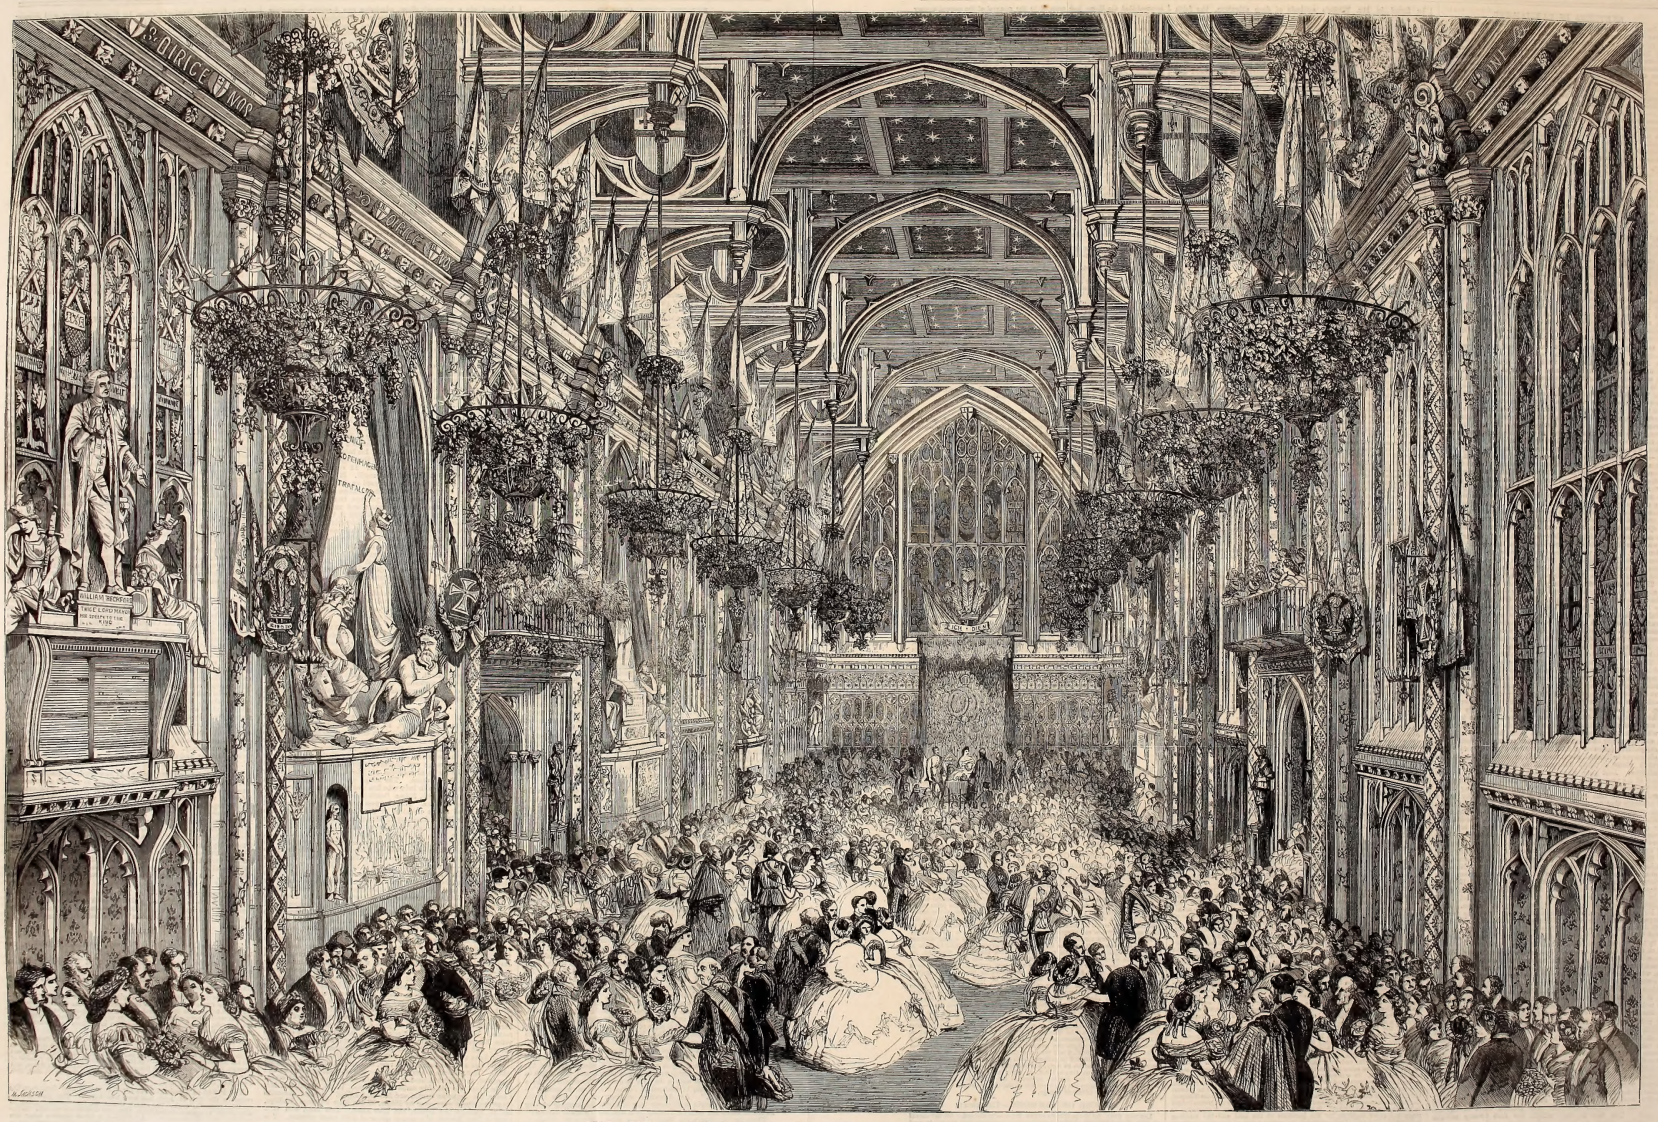
The Matinée Musicale given by Signor ARDITI and Signor PIATTI, on Monday last, at the residence of the Marchioness of Townshend, in Park-lane, was (as may be supposed, both from the locality and the character of the givers) one of the most fashionable and elegant entertainments of the season. It consisted chiefly of the most favourite vocal music of the Italian school, sung by the principal stars of Her Majesty's Theatre. Signor Arditi's immensely popular valse "Il Bacio," was sung by Mdlle. Artôt. The instrumental music was confined to the pianoforte, the flute, violin, and violoncello, played by Mdme. and Signor Piatti and Signor Arditi, and a solo on the violoncello on airs from "Marino Faliero," played by Signor Bottesini. It is unnecessary to add that the concert was crowded by a highly distinguished audience.

HERR RICHARD SCHÖNE Musicale took place on Wednesday week, with a programme of varied attractions. A vocal music, selected from various schools, was relieved by several excellent instrumental performances, including a violin solo by Herr Goltze, Schumann's pianoforte quartet, in which Herr Golimick proved himself an efficient pianist, and Beethoven's trio in B flat, in which Miss Alice Mongold sustained the pianoforte part with admirably-finished execution and intelligent appreciation. This young lady also played two solo pieces—a study by Henselt, and a piece of a masterly character, being loudly encored in the latter piece. Miss Mongold's performances generally, which we have passed in review, power, and, what is much more rare, possessing a distinctive style, in which their most refined and poetical expression, and great vocal touch and liquid tone combine to give a peculiar charm to her playing.

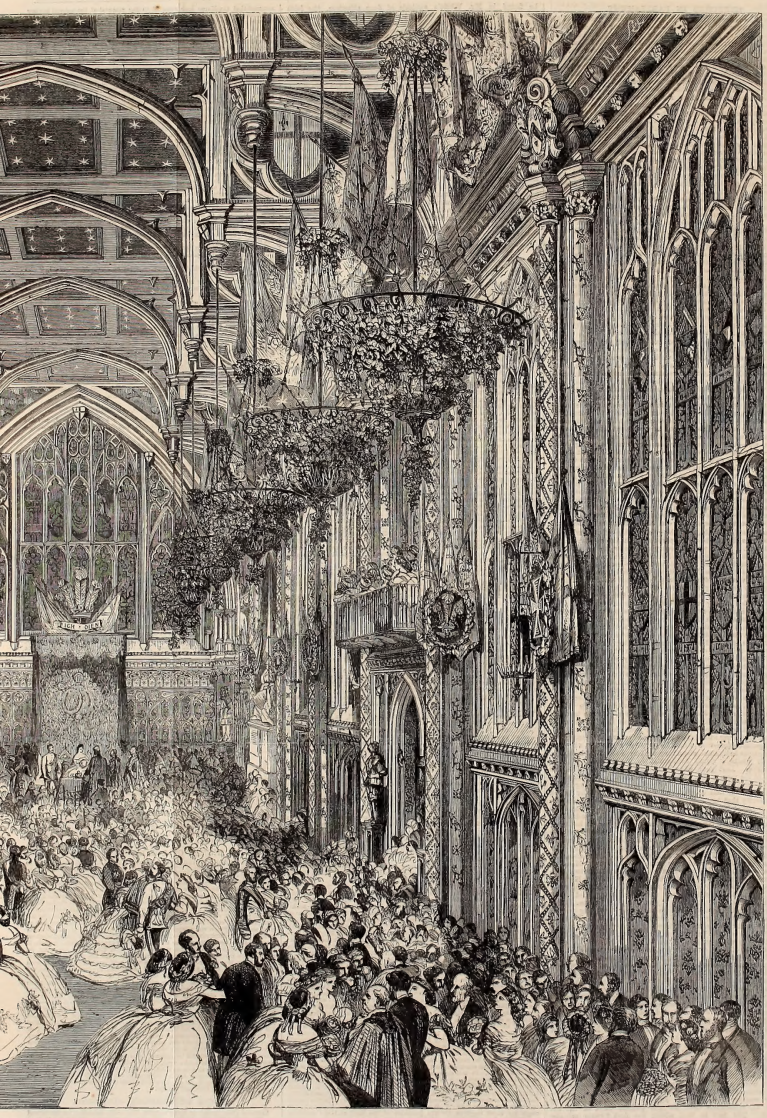
MASTER WILLIE PAPE, the young American pianist (whose Portrait, with a brief memoir, we give in this week's Impression) gave his first pianoforte recital at the Hanover-square Rooms on Wednesday evening. He played an excellent selection of music, in which his extraordinary power as a performer were fully evinced to the great delight of a crowded and fashionable audience. He had the advantage of playing on a magnificent instrument of Kirkman, which, by its rich and powerful tone, often produced the effect of a full orchestra.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—If we may judge from the numerous and fashionable audience on Monday, Mr. Mapleson has done well in making an engagement with Mdme. Ristori; and, in the more artistic sense, the lady's performance was entitled to the highest commendation. To a London audience, in the present deep want of the national drama, and the indifference of our metropolitan audiences, representations like that of "Medea" on Monday suggest the loftiest standard of histrionic art, and the public taste is the better for its desirable direction. We are glad to find that Mr. Mapleson is aware of the service he is rendering to the more elevated literature of the stage in his engagement of the Italian tragedienne. Nothing could be more satisfactory than her acting on the night of her reappearance, and the fine scene in which Medea so magnificently, it was greeted on this. Time, which has matured the genius of the artiste, has not impaired the fire and force which characterised this particular character. Passionate, vehement in declamation, pointed in rhetoric it always was, but the indifference of our metropolitan audiences, a subtlety in the developments of revengeful anger, which the actress had not previously arrived. A perfect command of all the resources of her art, combined with dignified repose in most of the direct distress, is apparent, and determines at once the rank of the performance as that of a great tragedienne. Without dwelling upon the look up to them with the reverence of students who are at once entranced and elevated by the feeling of the sublime. The classical character of the argument offers no impediment to the pathetic effect of the natural situations, but merely invests them with a poetic coolness and a more picturesque ornaments like the robes at once away from the vulgar and familiar to those more majestic relations of our humanity. We find ourselves contemplating the more serious powers and other worlds. Both the poet and his admirable exponent are in possession of the recognition that can only result



STATE VISIT TO THE CITY: GENERAL VIEW OF THE GUILDHALL,—SEE PAGE 678.



THE GUILDHALL.—SEE PAGE 678.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

Very feverish and excited has the House of Commons grown, and the notice of "humdrum" has been effectually dispated. Everybody seems in a state of pressure; everybody wants to get his own particular business on; and in this Session, in which it was supposed that there would be nothing to do, or at least to talk about, constant discussions are going on as to the fixing of days for particular motions, and not a day seemingly is to be had. Take Mr. Dillwyn's motion on the Irish Church, with Mr. Osborne's "anxen" to it. The sojourned debate on that subject had been fixed for a week, and passionate and pathetic are the pleadings to the Premier to give a day. Indeed, your, with your usual, well-known, winning manner, moved to—continue—tears the other evening, because Mr. Hennessy, in a grand and condescending manner, was so good as to allow Lord Palmerston precedence on a morning which the whole House was anxious to argue, the result being that all other motions had to be postponed. Lord John Manners, who was anxious to get on with the reform of the Irish Church is so palpably evidenced by the serio-comic tone he assumed in a very pathetic address to the Premier on bringing the subject on, flung himself with an air of virtuous resignation into the arms of his astonished friend, Mr. Disraeli, who had been made a "miserable dupe!" He never elicited such genuine laughter by any of his most elaborately-prepared jokes. But generally the House is in confusion, the order of business is confused, the rules which everyone supposed clear and established by long custom are questioned, and in a shifty and uncertain way the ever-long-suffering and patient prolongation of his sittings in the chair, is at once being badgered on points of order which are so plain that he will not condescend to expound them. The fitful mood of the House is shown by its private attendance. On the day of the morning upon matters of minor importance on one occasion, and forcing on a division on an important question before dinner, and then collapsing by a count out on another. Then, too, the new Prime Minister in such an exceptional position that his management of the Government is simply a case of "make it or not," now turning up the Liberals and now the Conservatives; his conduct altogether, in addition to a shifty and vacillating manner of address, one was to give an opinion as to what Lord Palmerston's Parliamentary regime is, would be that he is anxious only to get Monday nights towards the end of the week, any thing to grow with a reasonable smoothness until the following Friday. His policy seems to be to retard, but not to stop, but for his own time.

But, to bring something specific out of that which we have characterised as a vague and unsatisfactory debate, the most quietest Irish affair of the last week or so was the debate on distress in Ireland. It was introduced by Colonel Dunne in a new manner, especially for him, and was not at all violent in tone. It was seemed to be seriously impressed with the gravity of the question with which he was dealing, considering the unsatisfactory state in which by the Irish Irish members and Sir Robert Peel treat each other. It was indicious to put up Mr. Gladstone to answer the debate. So put on the Government, and certainly he showed how capable he is of rolling away even such a heavy load as Irish distress. The Government, of none were gentle and conciliatory, and he was quite undeserving of the studied misrepresentation of the best parts of his speech by Mr. Whiteside, who—but why should he take the worst specimen of his country—was remarkably vivacious, not to say hilarious and jocose. Another remarkably able speech was that of Sir Colman O'Loghlen, who can be ludicrous by bad management. It would be difficult for anyone to look at the case of Captain Major Jolley from a more favourable point of view, but really the spasmodic fury of Mr. Coningham, his odd gestures and his well-inconsequent language, impress hearers and beholders in a very disagreeable manner. Sympathetic to such a degree as to be the emolition of Colonel Crawley and the displaying from his high office of the Commander-in-Chief in the best style of the Duke himself the case by spontaneous combustion of one of the members for Brighton.

These are mere sketches, but the general feeling in the early part of this week was the debate on the purchase of the International Exhibition building. There was, as everybody knew, to be a direct opposition, but that was to be led by Mr. Berkeley, who, it was understood, were to mount their highest hobby-horses and to run a tilt at the Premier and the Government. But Mr. Berkeley's attempt was a failure. There was accordingly a largish but not an overwhelming House, and the opposition sense was evidently not strong and determined antagonism to the scheme. Messrs. Gregory and Osborne set aside by side, looking smiling and grim respectively; and their wonderful unanimity was evinced by the cheers with which their chorus and comments with which they simultaneously and in unison accompanied the Premier's speech. The latter showed a lord was unless but prawer than usual, and he put forth all his art as a Parliamentary manager to the best advantage. He commenced, like Macbeth in the comedy, but in this case only figuratively, with the creation of the world. That is, his remarks commenced with as far back as possible removed from the immediate subject-matter, but the argument soon verged ingeniously to the practical point in due time. It may have been a fake-back statement, but it did appear that the Government in his secret heart did not approve of the whole proposition; he, like many others, was led on hand, but he signed the contract for the new building. Still, he was evidently pledged to put the whole scheme before the House, and he did so. When, however, he came to the gist of the matter, to the merits of the building, it did seem to us that he described them with somewhat cooler irony; and that his style of persuasion was something like that of the gentleman who, in answer to a friend's suggestive expression of face, implored an excited crowd not to put an obnoxious individual whom they had in their power in the chair handed under a pump convenient to the locality. Not so Mr. Gladstone. He put his whole heart and soul into what he was equivalent to the present one, except that no land or building were specifically mentioned, and he was not very eminent on very warming in advocacy. But on that occasion he was put on scornfully into a decided enough that he have been stung by such treatment; and, his personal feelings being excited, he came to the front in the more desire of victory point of view, he flung himself passionately into the question. He was in a state of excitement, and he did unconsciously, perhaps, he was playing what we believe to have been Lord Palmerston's favourite game. Only he did not so broadly against the building as to give him an excuse for withdrawing that part of the proposal. The one was, in fact, a division at once, and only on half the scheme—that is, the purchase of the site—the votes were hot and excited, and they yelled at Sir John Pakington, who placed himself as an additional mark as the proposer of the motion. Caroline Coolce assumed when that here stood between Rome and her foes; while Lord Palmerston's attitude was that of Napoleon about to be taken before dinner, and the clock "just chapping" seven. Even one of Mr. Osborne's loudest cheers was a mistake, and came after the din; and, but that Sir Henry Willoughby, with his hands placed upon his knees, had assumed a position like the popular picture of Mr. Pickwick that he caused a burst of laughter, he would have been thrown down by the very windage of the shouts of impatience when he interposed on a point of order. Mr. Berkeley, by-the-by, made a speech. When a tremendous majority gave Lord Palmerston what he really wanted, he simply left the House and the Government to the next important season, which may be, and probably will be, never; and, before they were even at all, the Committee were voting away the money to the missioners of Education in Ireland. Indeed, it was some little time before it was generally understood what was going on. The result was a notable proof of Lord Palmerston's skill in Parliamentary tactics—these who wanted everything and those who wanted nothing.

The earlier part of the week was taken up with Indian affairs, capabilities and tendencies. Mr. Henry Berkeley, if he could and did do all he can every day what he does in the House, no wonder he would take rank as one of the very best comedians, in the dry, humorous style, that ever lived. His annual monologue (for it is very nearly that, and people would like it to be altogether that) on the ballot is the pleasantest event of the Session. This time there were entertained that Mr. Berkeley was going to be dull, and, if so, the subject would probably be never even mentioned in the house—the ballot without pikes has no meaning for members. He seemed physically weaker than of yore, and he began with something very like an intimation that he was getting tired of his one great part. The fact is, that within the day or two before he rose to address the House, and talked; and ominous cries of "Divide!" and other symptoms of impatience were manifested. The only support Mr. Berkeley seemed to receive was that he found in Mr. White's attitude of deep attention, the faith learning in the performances, and his genial cheers of the most communicative sentences. But, by-and-by, Mr. Berkeley warmed up and gave tastes of his humorous quality which were so racy as ever, and even more to than ever; and when he sat down one felt as if he had artfully made the first part of his speech dull in order that the latter part might be all the more brilliant. Lord Palmerston sat behind him, and that was that this was the last of his ballot speeches. The Lord Mayor, of course, did not mean to be comic; his profession was to impassioned denunciation of an unholy thing like the ballot, which might have prevented his return for Southampton if it had been in operation. But the appearance of a high civic dignitary in full robes was supposed to look if he were struggling with a whirlwind in which he had been caught, was not suggestive of the ballot, but of the convolutive of mirth; so that the Lord Mayor must have been content to fall back upon his own resources, and he was not good at really humorous part of the affair, however, was to see Lord Palmerston behind him, and Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Gladstone on the Treasury Bench, who were ranged on the Treasury Bench for the purpose of voting for the ballot, and half denouncing, half joining it out of the House. Lord Naas, who, by-the-by, is the first Irish member that has resisted its introduction into our Constitutional Government, he put Mr. Gilbert Gilbert, Mr. Whiteside, and half a dozen more into the position of dummies, and, by implication, declared, in Louis XIV. style, that "I am the Government."

Mr. Cox spoke to an unreasoning and boisterous crowd, who significantly refused to hear Mr. Whiteside, and when Mr. Cox at last decided manner the motion for leave to bring in a bill to establish vote by ballot was tossed into the Parliamentary waste-basket of the year.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

In Committee on the Prison Ministers Bill, Lord Lyveden moved an amendment, that the Bishop of London should be appointed one of the visiting justices instead of permissive.—This was opposed, on the part of the Government, by the Duke of Somerset and Lord Granville, and supported by the Bishop of London. It was again elaborately discussed. The amendment was eventually negatived without a division, and the Bill passed through Committee.

The Vaccination (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed, as was also the Lunacy Regulation (Ireland) Amendment Bill and the Dying Persons Act Amendment Bill was read a second time.

Lord Derby presented a petition from Irish have been made respecting the health of Mr. Bishop, who is at present undergoing a term of imprisonment in Dublin, for alleged misappropriation of funds entrusted to the Rome. The Marquis of Normanby, however, asserted that Mr. Bishop, since his incarceration, had been treated with the utmost kindness.

THE AMERICAN BLOCKADE.—REFUSAL OF BRITISH VESSELS.—The Duke of Newcastle, in answer to a question from Lord Brougham, said that he had received a despatch from Mr. Adams, the American Minister at the West Indian waters. In a speech of some length he condemned the conduct of the British Government in refusing to allow the American vessels to coal at British ports. He considered, instead of intervening, as they had done, even though war should be the result—that they should have left the Federal Government to fight out their own battle. The trade of which the Marquis of Clarricarde had spoken was not altogether of an innocent character. Representations had, however, been made to the Foreign Government against a reckless seizure of ships, and those representations had been with every attention. He had received a despatch on the subject from Admiral Milne, in which he stated that all the officers who had anything to do with the blockade were acting with moderation.

THE CASE OF SERGEANT-MAJOR LILLEY.—The Earl of SHAFTESBURY inquired whether the Government had come to any decision with regard to further inquiry into the case of Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley and Sergeant-Major Lilley.—The Duke of NEWCASTLE replied that he had not yet had time to give the matter to the effect that it was not usual for the Commander-in-Chief at home to review the decisions of Courts-Martial. He was sorry to say that in the circumstan ces were so exceptional that he had thought it his duty to interpose, and he had done so. He had not yet had time to form a decision on the merits of the subject. Subsequent knowledge of the matter had induced him to fulfil an intention he had formed, and a Court of Inquiry into the whole matter would be taken if he was found necessary, and accordingly he had directed a communication to be made to the Commander-in-Chief in Ireland to that effect. He could not state as to the course to be taken; and the Earl of SHAFTESBURY expressed himself satisfied with what had take place in England and not a Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

Mr. Coningham gave notice of his intention to move a resolution on an early day on the subject of the Mersey court-martial.

A new writ was ordered for the election of a member for Lisburn, in the room of Mr. Lindsay, whose election has been declared void.

On the motion for the second reading of the Bankruptcy Bill, Mr. Hennessy moved the omission of the words, for the purpose of omitting the 31st clause and substituting for it one giving the assignees power to dispose of the property of bankrupts without the consent of the creditors, which he should be done by reference of a court of inquiry. An animated discussion ensued, in which Sir Colman O'Loghlen, Mr. Bass, Mr. Ayrton, and Mr. Cox took part, when real a third time and passed.

The Bermondsey Debt Bill was read a third time and passed.

The London, &c., Diocese Bill was read a second time.

The Public Libraries Amendment Bill was then recommitted, upon which Lord Richard Grosvenor moved that so much of the bill as relates to Rhyl should be omitted, which was accordingly agreed to. The bill was then read a third time.

The Tweed Fishing Bill was read a second time, after a short and pencil.

JAPAN.—In reply to Mr. Liddell, Mr. LAYARD said that the papers had been demanded. Only a few days had elapsed since the treaty for the outrage on British subjects in which Mr. Richardson was killed. The Government had not yet received the full information on the subject, but they should pay £20,000 to the families of the injured men, and that the men who actually committed the outrage should be brought to justice. The further demand of £10,000 had been made for the families of two marines who were killed in the attack on the Legation on the 5th of July, 1854, in revenge for the SUPPLY—PROPOSED PURCHASE OF THE EXHIBITION BUILDING SITE.

The CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, in moving the House into Committee, said that a sum of £177,000 was voted by the House as part of the purchase money of the site of the International Exhibition of 1862, and that the commissioners of the Exhibition of 1851, but it had been repaid by the Commissioners. The Government had come to an agreement with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the commissioners became sole possessors of the estate in question.

In Committee of Supply,

Lord CLARENCE PAGET rose to propose a vote for the purchase of the land covered by the International Exhibition of 1862. He urged that the very wealth and prosperity of the country rendered it liable to be visited with a terribly-ornamental character; and this was owing to the great value of the property which was exposed to destruction by fire, and the difficulty of the insurance companies to respond available. In the first place, a Museum of Practical Science could not be established without a site, and the Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851 had offered the ground in front of the National Portrait Gallery; and additions were required to the building for the Natural History Museum, at South Kensington. The Government, on the best advice they could obtain, had come to the conclusion that the interests of the metropolis, the cost for the land and buildings was calculated at £1,500,000 and £1,340,000 to £750,000. For the land covered by the Exhibition building a sum of £177,000 was voted in 1851, which had been accepted by the commissioners. For the purchase of the existing Exhibition building a sum of £150,000 was required, and for the remainder £423,000 the value of the materials. The building thus obtained with the land was at the present time worth £1,000,000, and would be available for a variety of collections. The building being in its nature temporary, a sum of £261,000 would be required for the permanent industrial, fine arts, and science collections; it; and even with this additional sum it would be found that the whole expense would be far under any calculation of that which would be necessary for the purchase of other land and the erection of buildings, as it would amount to little more than £1,000,000. It was the opinion of some persons that it would be better to buy the present site, and to let the building be cleared away; but it would be a far more economical plan to erect new buildings than to adapt the present building to the purposes required. It was not proposed to remove the National Gallery of Pictures to South Kensington, but the Government thought that the Exhibition building might be considered for the purposes of decoration to move the sums required for the purchase of the site of the Exhibition building, and for the purchase of the site of the Exhibition building, and for the purchase of the site of the Exhibition building, and proposed to bring in a bill on the subject of fortifications very shortly, and he would then state the intentions of the Government.

BREAD DOWN.—In answer to Sir W. Miles, Lord PALMERSTON said the Government had purchased in Bread Street, and intended to proceed with the erection of fortifications there.

BRITISH SALT IN FRANCE.—In reply to Mr. Tollemache, Mr. LAYARD said the Government had been in communication with the Government of France with regard to the admission of British salt into France, but that Commissioners appointed to make an inquiry had not yet made a report.

BUILDINGS IN HYDE-PARK.—In answer to Mr. COWPER said the Government had under consideration a plan for erecting a National Gallery of Art on the site of the Exhibition building, the present gallery to the Royal Academy, and the Government were spending the money received for the latter purpose in the meantime.

THE SCOTCH MUTINY BILL.—Mr. C. BENTINCK asked whether Captain Fowke had made any estimate of the cost of repairing and completing the Exhibition building?—Lord PALMERSTON said that Captain Fowke had made a report, and it would be produced if he hen. member would move for it.—Sir H. WILLOUGHBY hoped the noble Lord would not, when he moved the vote for the Exhibition building next Thursday?—Lord PALMERSTON said he would not.

PUBLIC WORKS (MANUFACTURING DISTRICTS) BILL.—Mr. VILLIERS, in a speech of considerable length, moved the second reading of a bill the object of which was to enable the local authorities in the distressed districts to obtain loans of money at a low rate of interest, and to repay the money borrowed out of Lancashire and Cheshire. The bill was only permissive in its character.—After a brief discussion, the bill was read a second time.

The House afterwards went into Committee of Supply on the Miscellaneous Estimates.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

CALLER OU'S Game's Flats victory created quite a furore among the Hampton sublimity, who feebly thought they had discovered a trifle. A large number, Odiham had, as usual, a pleasant plating festival; and The Doctor, whose Chester running made him first favourite, was somewhat in a field of nineteen, and got home a winner. Where Master Richard's defeat by Hengist in the Champagne Stakes had the effect of damping considerably Bets from the outside. Mr. Child's Ascot performance. Coastguard, by Saunterer, won the Bishop Burton Stakes by a head and Revenge; and Mr. Merry's pair ran out a dead heat terms with Venison and Flyleap, got rid of both by the same distance for the Cup. Thompkins-de-Vere was all the rage again in the Cumberland Plate, a very different handicap to what it was last year.

Professor Varnell, of the Royal Veterinary College, has been appointed Veterinary Professor of Horses, vice Dick Sheridan, retires, to the Royal Agricultural Society, and will commence his duties at Worcester.

Although Lord Lyttelton v. Nottingham match ended in a draw, the former had 241 runs to rub off, and only four wickets to fall. At Bath, 22 of 40 the Bath Club played eleven of the city of the county, and C. Brampton and G. Parr did well. A most unworthy U.A.E. team was got together at Leeds to battle the Lord's on the ground; and Surrey has made a fearful example of Sussex in one innings, to which "Sensuel" Mantell contributed 146 not out. At Dowson 87. Surrey was, however, fairly collared in their first innings with fourteen of Hampshire, a gallant team, and the latter in the matches of Holmes. The batting of Holmes. Mr. Wallace, and W. Humphrey, the bowling of Mr. Frere, the all-round play of Mr. Nepean Watson, the wicket-keeping of Mr. Stewart, and the general fielding were very good. The Surrey innings was a most disappointing one, and with the exception of the first innings, but Caffyn and Mortlock bowled remarkably well, and Julius Cæsar, in his own words, "Veni, Vidi, Humphrey," ended in a Saxon final victory by 168. Mr. Grace, Parr, Lockyer, Carpenter, Hayward, Anderson, Jackson, Caffyn, Cæsar, G. Tarrant, Hayward, and probably Wildsmith or Griffith, will be the men for the left-handers, are the Australian team, and who betids the stamp of the celebrities.

Chambers retains the Thames championship, which he wrested from Kelly on Sept. 29, 1859, and has defended in four matches contests. The Australian, who rowed in a very flash style, was overhauled by Bob's "long pull and a strong pull" in the first mile, and in the last seven minutes (not one-third of the time generally required for the distance); but he attributed his defeat to the fact that he had overtrained, and deposited £5 for a new match with Chambers. London got a slight lead on the Middlesex Cup Ties with Hewett, but the bowling of Wilson almost as easily next day; but on Thursday Newcastle was triumphantly Surrey beating Berwick, having won just as he pleased. Mather, the Manchester swimming champion, has defeated Gardner, of London, very cleverly for the challenge cup. The winner of a style was rather lucky to get home, although it was fair to be as completely "Household Words" on one element as Beau Brummell, Hayward, Roberts, Teddy Mills, and Lillywhite on another.

The equally-famous Mr. Rarey has been varying his attendance on the sick horses of the Federals with a trip in a reconnoitering balloon. The sensation was for "equally strategic reasons," we are obliged, in as a rifle-ball through the edge of the ear gave him sharp notice to quit cloudland.

A newspaper in the English language, the Rio Mail, is now published in the city of Montevideo.

The Brazilian Chamber of Deputies was dissolved on the 12th ult. The Minister of War, General Feldore Gordao, has been replaced by Senhor Antonio Manoel de Mello.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

THE imports of the precious metals having been on a full average scale, and more rather than less than the average being sold into the open market in England, the markets for National Securities has relied somewhat firmer, and the Funds have been enabled to recover somewhat from the loss more doing in the Unfunded Debt than for some time past.

The Consols for the Account opened at £90⅛ to ⅜ for the Imperials. The minimum prices were—On Calcutta, to 1194.; on Bombay and Madras, to 119; per rupee. Within those limits the market remained to £1,200,000.

The interest on the Russian Loan has arranged to purchase the rights and property of the Hudson's Bay Company, giving £30 for every £100 each held by the shareholders. The total value of the property purchased the purchase-money will amount to £1,500,600. The value of the shares is now about £30.

The transactions in the shares of the newly-formed financial companies have continued active, and prices have generally ruled firm. The Land Corporation of Credit, 2½ to 3⅜; and International, 5½ to 6 prem. Those of the Reyptian Pasalaz Company have been at 2½ premium.

American Securities have commanded rather more attention. Erie Shares have sold at 1 Illinois Central, 80 to 81; Illinois Central, 80 to 81; Pennsylvania Central, 20 dis.; Ditto, old, 26½.

Foreign Securities, with the exception of the St. John del Rey Mining Company, remain a divided at 6½ to ⅞ per share, having declined ½ per share afterwards. Mexican Bonds for the Crown colossus have offered £400,000 to Sir Charles Tennyson, £1,000,000 was offered for the Mexican Bonds.

On Thursday prices declined—Consols, for Money, sold at 90⅜ to 90; for Account, 90⅜ to ⅝. American and New Tunes per Cent Certificates, 1865, 3⅞ dis. to ⅜ prem.; India Five per Cents, 104½ to ⅝.

Greek and Turkish Securities have been in request, and a further advance has taken place in the quotations. Most other Foreign Securities have ruled firm, and prices have shown an upward tendency. Confederate Securities what firmer, at 1 to ¼ dis.; Brazilian Five per Cents have marked 100; Ditto, Four-and-a-half per Cents, 90; Ditto, Four per Cents, 80; Chilian Six per Cent Warrants, 98; Chilian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 83½ ex div.; Danish Three per Cents, 65½; Ditto, 1863, 65½; Greek, 49½; Mexican Three per Cents, 19½ buy, 21 ; Mexican Three per Cents, 38½; Mexican, 38¾; New Granada, 19½; Ditto, Deferred, 3½; Peruvian, 1865, 100 sellers; Portuguese, 1853, Four per Cents, 49½; Ditto, 1856, &c., 49½; Russian Old Five per Cents, 94½; Ditto Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 1850, 97; Ditto, 1862, 94; Ditto, Three per Cents, 84½; Sardinian Five per Cents, 85½; Spanish Three per Cents, 48; Ditto, Passive, 9½; Ditto, Certificates, 14½; Turkish Old Six per Cents, 92; Ditto, 1858, 76; Ditto, Small, 76; Ditto, 1862, 71½; Venezuela Three per Cents, 18½; Ditto, Deferred, 3½; Ditto, Four per Cents, 1859, 25½.

There has been less activity in the market for Joint-Stock Bank Shares; nevertheless, prices have, in most instances, ruled firm. Colonials have sold at 10; Australasia, 74½; Ditto, New, 3½; Bank of New Zealand, 11; British and American Exchange, 8½; Continental, 4; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 7½; European and Irish, 4½; Imperial Ottoman, 19½; London and Brazilian, 42½; London, Hanover, Ayrton, and River Plate, 34½; London and Birmingham, and South Australian, 8½; London and County, 44½; London and South-Western, 42; London and Westminster, 81; New South Wales, 8½; Provincial of Ireland, 21½.

About an average business has been transacted in Miscellaneous Securities. Australian Agricultural, 2½ to 3; Ditto Five per Cents, 88; Government Emigration, 1½ to 2; Hudson's Bay, 30 to 31; Ditto, New, 1878, 103½; Ditto, 1888 to 1892, 104½; and Victoria Six per Cents, 113½.

The Miscellaneous Market has ruled steady. Crystal Palace, 4½; East India Irrigation and Canal, 5½; Great Ship, 1; English and Australian Copper, 11; Imperial Mercantile Credit, 11½; Ditto, Deferred, 4½; Ditto, Limited Irrigation, 5¼ per Cent Bonds, 3½; London General Omnibus, 1½; Natal Land and Colonization, 1½; Oriental Inland Steam, 4½; Port Elizabeth Dry Improvements, 5½; Royal Mail Steam, 83½; South African Irrigation Investment, 1½; Ditto, Land, 1½; Ditto, Trust, 1½; Spanish Copper, 1½; and West India Docks, 146.

The opportunities for buying been thrown out, the shares in the London and Brighton Railway have advanced 4 per cent. Otherwise, the Railway Share Market has ruled steady. The following are the closing prices of the leading shares are Thursday's official closing quotations :—

ORDINARY SHARES AND STOCKS.—Great Eastern, 53½ ; Ditto, A Stock, 91½ ; Great Northern, A Stock, 31 ; Great Western, 66½ ; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 111½ ; Ditto, New, 110½ ; Ditto, Thirds, 80½ ; Ditto, Fourths, 80½ ; London and North-Western, 102 ; London and South-Western, 103½ ; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 58½ ; Midland, 112½ ; Ditto, New, 110½ ; North British, 61½ ; North-Eastern—Berwick, 102 ; Ditto, York, 99½ ; South-Eastern, 91 ; South-Eastern, A Stock, 87½ ; Ditto, New, 87½ ; Ditto, Deferred, 87½.

PREFERENCE SHARES.—Great Northern Five per Cent, 111½ ; Great Western—Fours, 97½ ; Ditto, Fours, 1863, 97½ ; Lancashire and Yorkshire, Bristol and Birmingham, 105.

LOAN LEASED OF RAILWAY RENTALS.—Buckinghamshire, 94½ ; London and Greenwich, Preference, 117 ; Preston and Wyre, 103.

BRITISH CONVERTIBLE BONDS.—Caledonian, 110½ ; East Indian, 103½ ; Great Indian Peninsula, 110½ ; Great Western of Canada, 11½ ; Madras, 108 ; Scinde, 92 ; Sterling, 98½.

FOREIGN.—Antwerp and Rotterdam, 8½ ; Babia and San Francisco, 20 ; Eastern of France, 12½ ; Great Luxembourg, 8½ ; San Paulo, 9½ ; South Australian and Londonderry-Ventnor, 2½.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE, June 15.—To-day's market was but moderately supplied with home-grown wheat, but its general quality was good. As there were several inquiries on Tuesday morning, the demand was fair, and prices were supported. Foreign wheat was in limited supply. Foreign wheat—the share of which was extensive—and its somewhat improved condition, the demand was steady, and prices were fully supported. Barley was in good request at late prices. Malting qualities were in short supply. Malt was in moderate request, but was in a very inactive state at 54. per quarter less money. Both beans and peas sold at full prices. Oats were in fair demand, at the quotations of this day week.

Mark Lane.—The wheat trade was extremely firm to-day, at prices quite equal to Monday. Flour was in good demand, at 1s. per sack and barrel more money.

Liverpool.—Wheat, 1s. to 2s. per qr. dearer; flour, 1s. per brl. dearer; maize, 1s. per qr. dearer; barley, 1d. to 2d. per 60 lbs.; peas, 2d. per 70 lbs.; oats, 1d. per 45 lbs.; beans, 2d. per 70 lbs.

Bristol.—Wheat—English and Scotch, white, 12s ; mail, 10s ; red, 10s ; foreign, white, 10s ; red, 10s. Flour, 40s. Barley, 30s. Oats, 22s. Beans, 30s. Peas, 30s.

Leeds.—Limited sale to-day. Wheat, 1s. per qr. dearer; barley, 1s. per qr. dearer; oats, 1s. per qr. dearer; beans, 1s. per qr. dearer; peas, 1s. per qr. dearer. Flour, 1s. per brl. dearer.

Hull.—Wheat, 1s. per qr. dearer; barley, 1s. per qr. dearer; oats, 1s. per qr. dearer; beans, 1s. per qr. dearer; peas, 1s. per qr. dearer. Flour, 1s. per brl. dearer.

Scotch.—Limited sale to-day. Wheat, 1s. per qr. dearer; barley, 1s. per qr. dearer; oats, 1s. per qr. dearer; beans, 1s. per qr. dearer; peas, 1s. per qr. dearer. Flour, 1s. per brl. dearer.

Irish.—Limited sale to-day. Wheat, 1s. per qr. dearer; barley, 1s. per qr. dearer; oats, 1s. per qr. dearer; beans, 1s. per qr. dearer; peas, 1s. per qr. dearer. Flour, 1s. per brl. dearer.

Arrivals this Week—English and Scotch : wheat, 720 ; malt, 1020 ; flour, 310. Irish : oats, 3000 ; flour, 1000. Foreign : wheat, 6000 ; barley, 2000 ; oats, 1000 ; flour, 1000.

Stocks.—Limited as to commercial freely, as full prices. Odds were the small trade is very inactive, and prices are barely supported. Wheat—English and Scotch, red, 40s. to 44s. per quarter; white, 44s. to 46s. per quarter; mixed, 42s. to 45s.; white ditto, 7s. to 8s. per quarter; barley, 24s. to 26s. per qr.; brown mottled and, 24s. to 26s.; white ditto, 7s. to 8s. per qr.; oats, 18s. to 20s. per qr.; beans, 30s. to 32s. per qr.; peas, 30s. to 32s. per qr.; flour, 36s. to 38s. per brl. Irish : wheat, 40s. to 44s. per qr.; barley, 24s. to 26s. per qr.; oats, 18s. to 20s. per qr.; beans, 30s. to 32s. per qr.; peas, 30s. to 32s. per qr.; flour, 36s. to 38s. per brl. Foreign : wheat, 40s. to 44s. per qr.; barley, 24s. to 26s. per qr.; oats, 18s. to 20s. per qr.; beans, 30s. to 32s. per qr.; peas, 30s. to 32s. per qr.; flour, 36s. to 38s. per brl in consequence of some difference of opinion as to the tonnage of the Emmet.

STATE VISIT TO THE CITY: THE ROYAL SUPPER-ROOM.—SEE PAGE 674.

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

This was the last cutter match of the season of this important club, and the usual liberal prizes had been offered for three matches. The first match was for second-class vessels, above 20 tons and not above 30 tons, the prizes being, for the first boat, a handsome silver tankard, value £50; for the second boat (if more than three started), a silver cup, value £20. The second match was for fourth-class yachts, below 12 tons, the prize being, for the first boat, a silver jug, value £30; for the second boat, a somewhat diminutive silver cup, value £10. Prizes were also offered for an extra match between vessels which had never won a prize in the club; but, somehow, the did not fill. Course, from Erith, round the Nore Light and back; time for tonnage, half a minute a ton. The following vessels entered:

Yacht.	Tons.	Owner.
SECOND CLASS.
Octoroon	24	Capt. R. Cromwell
Emmet	25	W. F. Hay
Phantom	27	F. Lane
Waterlily	26	T. M. Bottington
FOURTH CLASS.
Violet	11	Lord Wilton
Octoroon	12	Lord Long
Achilles	8	J. F. Dorney
Wasp	12	Col. A. Iverson
Rose	10	J. H. Hodge
Emily	10	C. Wilson
Quiver	12	Capt. Chamberlayne

The Vampire, Violet, and Emily did not start; Polly, because her mast was sprung on Tuesday, and the others probably because they thought they would be over-matched. The starting-gun was fired at 11h. 43m. 10s.

Octoroon took the lead at once, and kept it. Quiver was driven up to leeward. Wasp's bowsprit broke in Erith Sands and she at once gave up. Off Thames Haven the Phantom and Emmet passed the little boats. The air was singularly clear, the sun shone brightly, and the yachts tore along fiercely, heeling over in the heavy puffs; and in Sea Reach the weather compelled the little Aeolite to retire from the match. Off the Chapman Head Phantom at last passed the Octoroon, and the vessels rounded the Nore Light in slack water, or rather before 12:—

	H.	M.	S.
Phantom	3	34	10
Emmet	3	35	20
Waterlily	3	36	30
FOURTH CLASS.
Octoroon	3	39	30
Quiver	3	34	30
Rosita	3	35	30

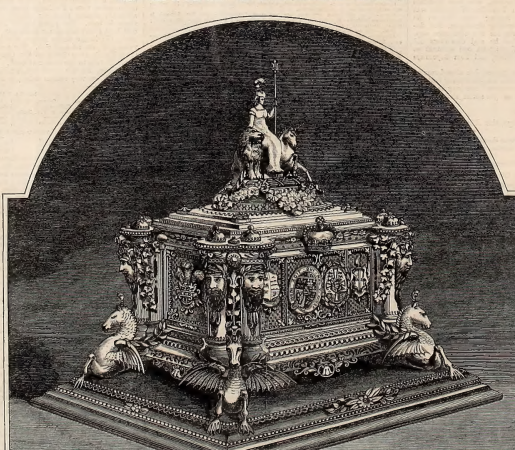
In Sea Reach Emmet seemed to gain on Phantom, but in the half-dozen boards up Lower Hope Phantom must have got more than half a mile ahead. In the lower part of Gravesend Reach the wind increased and the vessels heeled over fearfully, but soon got the wind more free, and no further change took place till they reached Erith Pier.

	H.	M.	S.
Phantom	5	14	10
Emmet	5	15	20
Waterlily	5	16	45
FOURTH CLASS.
Octoroon	5	30	31
Quiver	5	21	31
Rosita	5	24	7

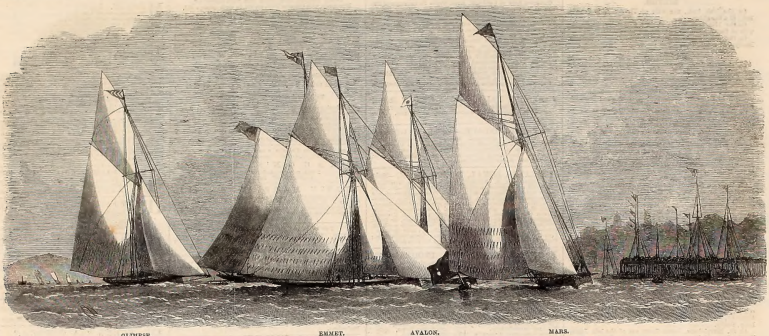
This is the fastest run on record, the whole journey out and home having been accomplished in 9h. 27m. 00s. by the Phantom; and as, including the tacks in the Lower Hope, the distance must have been 64 miles, and she had to get her sails up at starting, it follows that she ran nearly at the rate of 12 miles an hour.

Immediately after the winners had come alongside, Mr. A. Cox, who officiated as president of the match, delivered the first prize to Mr. Lane, this making the Welcome win by the Phantom. There was no second prize in this class, as only three vessels started. Mr. C. Long received the first prize in the fourth class, and Captain Chamberlayne the second.

The Prince of Wales steamer accompanied the match; and in Sea Reach the Waterlily yawl was descried, and on nearing her Lord Alfred Paget was discovered steering his noble vessel, and was welcomed with loud cheers.

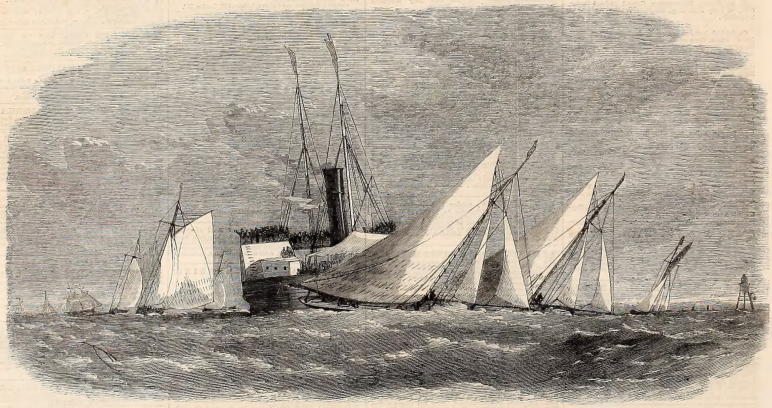


CASKET IN WHICH THE FREEDOM OF THE CITY WAS PRESENTED TO THE PRINCE.—SEE PAGE 676.



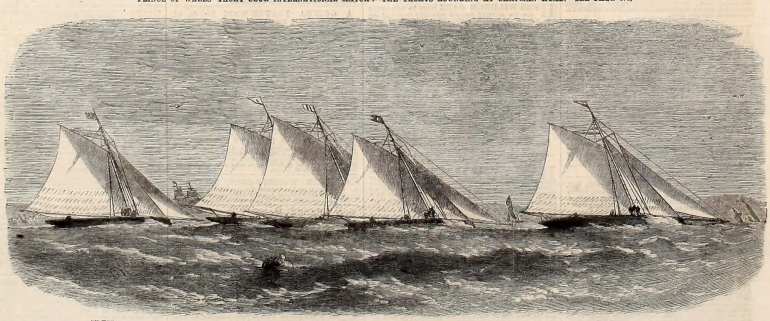
GLIMPSE. EMMET. AVALON. MARS.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB: FINISH OF THE EXTRA MATCH AT ERITH.—SEE PAGE 671.



FOLLY. WASP. BESSIE. QUIVER. OCTOROON. ALEXANDRA.

PRINCE OF WALES' YACHT CLUB INTERNATIONAL MATCH: THE YACHTS ROUNDING AT CHAPMAN HEAD.—SEE PAGE 671.



QUIVER BESSIE. WASP. AEROLITE. OCTOROON.

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB: START OF THE FOURTH-CLASS YACHTS FROM ERITH.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTHS.

On the 10th inst., the wife of Thomas Rich Brandt, Esq., of a daughter.

On the 14th inst., at No. 8, Rue Clerchaise, Paris, the wife of Captain W. Lumley, of a daughter.

On the 15th inst., at Tenure, Pitminster, the Hon. Lady Montyn, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 10th inst., at Preston Deanery, Northamptonshire, by the Rev. Lord Alwyne Compton, Vicar of the parish, assisted by the Rev. R. P. Lightfoot, Vicar of Preston Deanery, the Rev. John Henry Brooke, Rector of Steeple Aston, Oxfordshire, to Charlotte, second daughter of the late Hon. and Rev. Spencer Cecil Compton, Rector of Preston, Northamptonshire.

On the 11th April, at Christ Church, Wanganui, by the Rev. C. H. S. Nicholls, assisted by the Rev. R. Taylor, Charles Brees Watt, Esq., of Bordesley Green, Birmingham, to Amelia Sarah, eldest surviving daughter of the late C. H. S. Nicholls, Esq.

On the 12th inst., at St. Mark's, Regent's Park, by the Rev. Charles Dodd, Vicar of Allhallows-on-the-Wall, Lombard-street, Captain Richard Garnett, late of the 34th Regiment, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, Military District of the Murrumbidgee, to Cecilia Mary, only daughter of Edward Hall Alderson, Esq., Recorder of Cirencester, Ireland.

On the 16th inst., at the Church of the Holy Trinity, Brompton, by the Rev. C. H. Harrison, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Major Herbert Vaughan Mundell, late of H.M.'s 6th Regiment, to Mary Jane, only daughter of John Mackay Tagg, Esq., of Berkeley-square, London.

At Prankfield, in the county of Cork, the Rev. Robert S. Gregg, M.A., Chaplain to the Bishop of Cork, to Blanche, daughter of John H. Ballenden, Esq., of Prankfield.

At Bagamoyo, Pemba, Dr. Maxwell Hay, to Charlotte Harriet, daughter of Staff-Surgeon Major Lord, F.R.C.S., Madras Army.

At Lee, Blackheath, Francis Ward, Major Royal Artillery, to Caroline Elizabeth, daughter of the late Captain Hale her Majesty's 17th Foot, and granddaughter of General Forbes, Royal Artillery.

At Plymouth, the Rev. John Hope, M.A., to Elizabeth, daughter of the late Rev. Thomas Hope, M.A., Rector of Willesden, N.W., Middlesex.

At Ramsgate, Charles Taylour, Esq., 7th Royal Fusiliers, son of the late Rev. Charles Taylour, M.A., of Ash, Kent, to Georgina, daughter of Gordon W. J. Gyll, Esq., of Weybourne, Surrey.

At St. Marylebone, James Cram, son of the late James Webb, Esq., of Bruton-upon-Tyne, to Rebecca, the daughter of the late Hugh Inglis, Esq., and grandaughter of the late Sir John Leslie, Bart., of Wardie, Edinburgh.

At St. Peter's, Eaton-square, Colonel Richard Taylor C.B., to Lady Jane Hay, daughter of the Marquis of Tweeddale.

DEATHS.

On the 11th inst., at the residence, Villa d'Este, Ryde Isle of Wight, three weeks after the death of his younger daughter, Caroline Henry Benjamin Wyatt, Esq., aged in the 77th year of his age, deeply regretted.

On the 12th inst., at Trinity College, Glenalmond, Perthshire, the Hon. Charles Bruce, third son of the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, in the 11th year of his age.

In St. Swithin's-lane, Henry Burgess, for upwards of twenty years Secretary and father of the Corporate of Bankers,' in his 83rd year.

On the 13th inst., the Rev. George Glad, D.D., Vicar of Chatham St. Peter's, Kent, aged 86.

At Cheltenham, Caroline, widow of Andrew Henry Lynch, Esq., a Master in Chancery in Ordinary, in her 78th year.

On the 14th inst., after her arrival from South Africa, Eleanor Mee, wife of the Very Rev. the Dean of Graham's Town, Cape of Good Hope.

At Rockhampton, Queensland, Australia, Thomas Coutts Morton, aged 27, eldest son of Alexander Morton.

At Islington, W.H. Ness, Esq., late Registrar-General of Shipping, Inwards, Customs, London, in his 70th year.

At Carlton Park, Northamptonshire, Arthur Watson Talmer, Esq., late Captain 5th Fusiliers, son of Sir John Henry Tuhner, Bart., M.P.

Edward Thorne, Esq., of Weymouth and Southsea, Paymaster-in-Chief of the Royal Navy.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—On Monday, June 22, and every Evening at 8, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wigan in the new comedy of FITZROY; or, Ivy and Gold-mine; also Mr. Buckstone's farce of LEAP YEAR. Doors open at half-past 7. Box-office open daily from 10 till 5. Stalls, 5s.; Dress Circle, 3s.; Upper Boxes, 2s.; Pit, 1s. Private Boxes, £1 1s. to £3 3s. EASY INSTALMENTS.—Persons desirous of purchasing Stalls, Dress Circle, and Private Boxes for the Season, during the rest of the present season, may pay for the same by Instalments, extending over a period of five years' duration.

NEW ADELPHI THEATRE, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER.—On Monday, June 22, and every Evening this week, THE SHEEP-STEALER, with, at 8 past, a new drama, entitled THE HAUNTED MAN (in which will be introduced Professor Pepper's ghost-illusion), and the Spectral Discovery.—Messrs. J. L. Toole, sen., H. Phillips, Mr. Wigan, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Paulo, Mr. Ryder, Mr. Ashley, Mr. Thorne, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Fenton, Mr. Cullen, Mr. Frampton, Mr. Haines Slaters and Miss E. Kelly. Commence at Seven.

THEATRE ROYAL, LYCEUM.—Monday and during the week, at 8, SCHNEIDER'S DREAM. Messrs. Shore, Gardiner, Hildebrandt, Miss Reynolds and Mrs. Leo Lewis. At 9, for the last time, the new drama of THE WOOD OF HOLLY. Lights by Coleman. Scenery by Three Aids. And (by special request) the PAS DURO MOTLEY, by Paul Feval and John Brougham. Characters by Messrs. J. Rogers, Ryder, Ashley, Thorne, Clarke, Broughton, H. Widdicomb, S. Jordan, Charles Seaman, Raymond, Miss Kate Saville, Miss Fanny Wright, Mrs. Leo Lewis, Mrs. Howard Kilworthy, Lumley, Mrs. Thorne, concludes at Half-past 11.

THEATRE ROYAL ST. JAMES'S.—LAST WEEK BUT ONE OF THE SEASON.—Monday and during the Week, LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET, by Miss Braddon. Mr. Vandenhoff (who has kindly consented to appear) and Miss Herbert. Concludes with LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET.—Mrs. Frank Matthews, Miss Fanny Josephs, and Mr. Charles J. Fenton. Doors open at Half-past Seven. Seven.

ROYAL STRAND THEATRE.—On Monday and during the Week, at Seven, THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Mr. Swanborough; Mr. Shelton; Mr. Clifton; Mr. Garden; Mr. Thirlby; Miss Thorne; Mrs. Rose Turner, Dawson, Miss Lydia Foote, Miss Swanborough. To conclude with the new and original BURLESQUE.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—THE SIXTY-NINTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION IS NOW OPEN at the GALLERY, 5, Pall-mall East (next door to the National Gallery), from Nine till Dusk. Admittance, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d. JOHN F. PENNELL, Hon. Sec.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS. Founded 1831. On the New Gallery of Pictures, 53, Pall-mall, NOW OPEN from Nine till Dusk. Admission, 1s. Gallery, 31, Pall-mall, next the Opera-Colonnade. JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

W. P. FRITH, R.A.—PICTURE of 'THE RAILWAY STATION' NOW ON VIEW, at Mr. FLATOU'S FINE-ART GALLERY (1), Regent-street, from Nine till Seven. Admission, 1s. Descriptive Catalogue by Dan Taylor, M.A.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED, with MR. JOHN PARRY, in their CHARMING COTTAGE, EVERY EVENING (commencing Monday next) at Eight o'clock, and Thursday Morning, at 3. ROYAL GALLERY OF ILLUSTRATION, 14, Regent-street. Admission, 3s., 2s., and 1s. Stalls, 5s. Manager, Mr. Arthur Leslie.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, Regent's Park.—The LAST EXHIBITION of PLANTS, FLOWERS, FRUIT, and VEGETABLES, for the present Season, will be held on SATURDAY, June 27, in connection with the Quarterly Meeting of the Fellows of the Society, prior to, or on the day of Exhibition 7s. 6d., each. The gate opened at Ten.

Three Military Bands will attend.

The next Meeting of the Council will be held on Wednesday, Saturday, June 27.

MR. GEORGE RUSSELL has the honour to announce that his CONCERT will take place at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 29, to commence at Eight o'Clock. Vocalists: Mdlle. Parepa, Miss Palmer, Mrs. Weiss, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, and Herr Carl Stockhausen. M'lle Parepa, Symonetti, and Arthur S. Sullivan. Reserved Seats, 10s. 6d., 7s. Tickets, 5s. 6d., may be obtained at the principal Music-shops, and of Mr. George Russell, 9, Hanover-street, Regent-street; and Beale, 99, Oliver's, 19, Old Bond-street, W.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Week Ending SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1863.

Open Monday at Nine, other days at Ten.

Admission, 1s.; on Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays, 2s. 6d.

The holiday-out of Summer Plants on the Terraces, Slopes, and Rosary is completed; the Alpetic Vases are also filled with flowers, the whole presenting a most delightful prospect. Above 200 Geraniums, Calceolarias, Lobelias, and Verbenas are employed in this service of the grounds alone.

The Handel Festival, the Picture Gallery and Decorative Tricolor Glass Gallery remain open. Immense assortment of Useful and Fancy Goods on sale in the Exhibition Department.

Open Rehearsal of the GREAT HANDEL FESTIVAL, on Wednesday Morning, June 24, at 10 o'clock. Admission, 1s. Conductor, Mr. Costa. Chorus, 2,500 Voices. Band, 400 Performers. Organ, Mr. Stimpson. Children under Twelve, Half-price. Season Tickets free.

Open Rehearsal of the GREAT HANDEL FESTIVAL, on Wednesday next.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—The GREAT ROSE SHOW of the SEASON, SATURDAY NEXT, June 27. Admission, 1s. Children under Twelve, Half-price. Doors open at Ten.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Mr. J. MADDISON MORTIMER, celebrated Piano, "PIANOMANIA OF THE PIANOFORTE," with Illustrations on the Pianoforte of Mr. Mortimer on SATURDAY NEXT, June 27, with scenery, effects, &c. Commence at Three o'clock. Admission, 1s. Children under Twelve, Half-a-crown. Season Tickets free.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. T. SMITH.—A GRAND MORNING CONCERT will be given on MONDAY NEXT, June 22, at Seven o'clock precisely. Vocalists: Mdlle. Titiens, Mdlle. Parepa, Madame Rudersdorff, Mdlle. Artôt, Madame Lemaire, and Madame Lemmens-Sherrington, Mr. Sims Reeves, Signor Gardoni, Signor Belletti, Herr Reichardt, Mr. Santley, and Herr Formes. Pianoforte, Mr. Charles Hallé. Violin, Herr Joachim. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Conductors, Mr. Benedict, Mr. William Cusins, Mr. Frank Mori, and Mr. Alfred Mellon. Tickets, Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Private Boxes, £1 1s. to £3 3s.; Dress Circle, 5s.; Upper Boxes, 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s. Tickets may be had at the Box-office of the Theatre, and of Mr. E. T. Smith, 449, Strand.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. T. SMITH.—A GRAND MORNING CONCERT will be given on MONDAY NEXT, June 22, at Seven o'clock precisely. Vocalists: Mdlle. Titiens, Mdlle. Parepa, Madame Rudersdorff, Mdlle. Artôt, Madame Lemaire, and Madame Lemmens-Sherrington, Mr. Sims Reeves, Signor Gardoni, Signor Belletti, Herr Reichardt, Mr. Santley, and Herr Formes. Pianoforte, Mr. Charles Hallé. Violin, Herr Joachim. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Conductors, Mr. Benedict, Mr. William Cusins, Mr. Frank Mori, and Mr. Alfred Mellon. Tickets, Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Private Boxes, £1 1s. to £3 3s.; Dress Circle, 5s.; Upper Boxes, 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s. Tickets may be had at the Box-office of the Theatre, and of Mr. E. T. Smith, 449, Strand.

BRITISH HOME for INCURABLES.—THE WANDERING MINSTRELS have kindly consented to give an EVENING CONCERT, in aid of the above Institution, on JULY 2 at the above CHARITY, at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, by kind permission of Mr. Gye.

His Royal Highness the Duke of CAMBRIDGE, K.G., President of the Institution, has consented to preside.

The Duchess of Sutherland
The Duchess of Roxburghe
The Duchess of Buccleuch
The Lady Agnes Murray
The Lady Georgiana Fullerton
The Countess of Longford
The Countess of Caledon
The Countess Brownlow,
The Countess Waldegrave
The Countess Granville
The Lady Anne Stanley,
The Lady Emma Talbot,
The Lady Frances Balfour,

The Lady Gilbert Shaw Stewart
The Lady Dunsany
The Viscountess Hawarden
The Lady Augusta Hunter,
The Lady Elizabeth Cust,
The Lady Sophia Power,
The Lady Ashburton,
The Lady Mary Anne Boyle Clifton,
The Lady Hastings,
The Lady Dorothy de Renzy,
The Lady Leigh,
The Lady Caroline Spencer Spencer,
Lady Shelburne,
Lady Dunsany,
Lady Rolleston.

Conductor—The Hon. Seymour J. G. Egerton.

Stalls, £1 1s. each; Reserved Seats, 10s. 6d.; Reserved Half-past Eight o'clock precisely, 7s. 6d.; Unreserved Seats, 5s. 6d. To be had at the principal Music-shops; at Messrs. Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street, and at the Hanover-square Rooms. Doors open at Seven. Tickets to be obtained at Sam's Royal Library, 1, St. James's-street.

By order, EDWARD WRAFTER, Secretary.

MDME. LIND-GOLDSCHMIDT has most kindly consented to sing at the CONCERT of the ROYAL HARMONIC SOCIETY, in the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 29. Vocalists: Mdlle. Parepa, Miss Palmer and Signor and Mdme. F. Lablache. S. Thalberg has kindly consented to perform his Fantasia on the Harp. Violin, Herr Joachim. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Stalls, 10s. 6d. Le Talon Rouge, Dress Circle, Unreserved Seats, 5s. 6d. To be had at the principal Music-shops; at Messrs. Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street, W.; and of Mr. Ella, 6, Princes-street, Hanover-square, W.

EXETER HALL.—Parepa, Alboni, Sims Reeves, Santley, Lablache, and Belletti.—THE GRAND CONCERT of TRADE and ORPHAN SOCIETY, in the NATIONAL CHORAL UNION, on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 29, at Eight o'clock precisely. Mr. G. W. MARTIN. Band and Chorus, 300. Organist, Mr. J. G. Callcott. Conductor, Mr. Land. Tickets, 10s. 6d., 5s., 2s. 6d., and 1s. each. It is said that Mdlle. Parepa will sing.

MR. KENNEDY, under the Patronage of the Lord and Lady ELCHO and the Members of the London Corinthian Rifle Corps, will give a MORNING CONCERT, at 3 o'clock, A NIGHT AT BURNS, assisted by Mr. Lunn at the Pianoforte, at ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place, on TUESDAY, June 30. Last night but one of the season. Admission, 1s., 2s., and 3s., at Mr. Kennedy's, 9, Soho-square.

MISS EDWARD'S MATINÉE MUSICALE will take place JUNE 27 (by kind permission), at the residence of Mrs. Edward, 3, Cambridge-terrace, Hyde-park, when the following eminent artists will appear: Mdlle. Parepa, Signor Gardoni and Poznanski, Messrs. Charles Hallé, Regondi, Blumer, and Lazarus. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Tickets, 1 guinea each, may be had of Mrs. Edward, 3, Cambridge-terrace, Hyde-park; and of Messrs. Cramer, Beale, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

QUEEN'S CONCERT-ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.—Mr. BENJAMIN WILLIAMS has the honour to announce that his CONCERT will take place on TUESDAY EVENING, June 30, at Eight o'clock precisely. Vocalists: Mdlle. Parepa, Miss Palmer, Mrs. Weiss, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, and Signor Gardoni. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Pianoforte, Mr. Benjamin Williams. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Reserved Seats, 7s.; Unreserved Seats, 5s. To be had at the principal Music-shops; at Mr. Benjamin Williams's, 6, Upper Bedford-place, Russell-square, W.C.

AGRICULTURAL HALL.—CARLOTTA PATTI-SAVERDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, commencing at Three o'clock precisely. Vocalists: Mdlle. Carlotta Patti, Miss Palmer, Mrs. Weiss, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, and Signor Gardoni. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Pianoforte, Madame Arabella Goddard. Band and Chorus of One Thousand Performers. Conductors, Mr. Benedict and Mr. Land. Tickets, 10s. 6d., 5s., and 2s. 6d. Tickets to be obtained at Her Wilson's, 24, Queen Anne-street, W.

MUSICAL UNION.—DIRECTOR'S BENEFIT.—Mdlle. Parepa, Madame Rudersdorff, Madame Arabella Goddard, Signor Piatti, Herr Joachim, and Mr. Charles Hallé. To commence at Three o'clock. Tickets to be had of Cramer and Co., 201, Regent-street; Ella, 6, Princes-street, Hanover-square; and Ewer and Co., 390, Strand.

MR. BENEDICT'S CONCERT.—ST. JAMES'S HALL, MONDAY, JUNE 29, 1863.

Vocalists: Mdlle. Parepa, Miss Palmer, Mrs. Weiss, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, and Signor Gardoni.

His Royal Highness the PRINCE OF WALES,
His Royal Highness the PRINCE CONSORT, and
His Royal Highness the PRINCE OF WALES,

Pianoforte, Mr. Charles Hallé. Violin, Herr Joachim. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Reserved Seats, 7s.; Unreserved Seats, 5s. To be had at the principal Music-shops; at Mr. Benedict's, 61, Grosvenor-street, W.

UNDER THE MOST DISTINGUISHED PATRONAGE.

MR. CHARLES HALLÉ has the honour to announce that his CONCERT will take place on WEDNESDAY, JULY 1, at Three o'clock precisely. Vocalists: Mdlle. Parepa, Mrs. Weiss, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, and Signor Gardoni. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Pianoforte, Mr. Charles Hallé. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Reserved Seats, 7s.; Unreserved Seats, 5s. To be had at the principal Music-shops; at Mr. Charles Hallé's, 30, Oxford-street, Pantheon; at Cramer's, 201, Regent-street; and at Mr. Hallé's residence, 7, Mornington-road, Regent's Park.

MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.—THE DIRECTORS BENEFIT and LAST CONCERT of the SEASON, on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 22, at St. JAMES'S HALL. Pianoforte, Mdlle. Arabella Goddard. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Vocalists, Mr. Santley and Mr. Sims Reeves. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Balcony, 2s. 6d.; Admission, 1s. Doors open at Seven. Tickets to be had of Messrs. Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street; and of Austin, 21, Piccadilly.

MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.—THE DIRECTORS BENEFIT and LAST CONCERT of the SEASON, on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 22, at the ST. JAMES'S HALL. Pianoforte, Mdlle. Arabella Goddard. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Vocalists, Mr. Santley and Mr. Sims Reeves. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Balcony, 2s. 6d.; Admission, 1s. Doors open at Seven. Tickets to be had of Messrs. Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street; and of Austin, 21, Piccadilly.

NEW BOOKS.

JOHN THIRWALL'S NEW BOOK FOR THE COUNTRY.
Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, price 10s. 6d. cloth (postage 6d.),

SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY; and a Word for Everybody's Friends. By JOHN THIRWALL, Author of "Hints for Ingenuity Knaves."

CONTENTS: Cottage Gardening—Mushroom Culture—Pot-Herbs and Flavouring Herbs—Pot-pourri—The Game and Stock—Beneficence of Nature—Hints for Ingenuity Knaves—Hints for the Management of a Garden—Early Gardening and Wrinkles on Gardening—Gardening at Enfield—Celebrated Gardens—Curiosities of Bees—Pruning Remedies and Rural Sports.

LOCKWOOD and CO., 7, Stationers' Hall-court, E.C.

Now ready, price 1s. 6d., Part I. (to be completed in 7 vols., post 8vo, cloth, gilt tops, 10s. 6d. per vol.),

MEMOIRS OF VICTOR HUGO.

By PAUL LAFARGUE.

THE COMPLETION OF THE LIFETIME.

Vol. I. (Part I.) Ready, Vol. II. (Part II.) Shortly.

This book contains unpublished works of Victor Hugo: Poems, Letters, Autobiographical Notes, Prefaces, &c., and is the only one in the English language which can be relied on. It is the only complete biography written by MONS. V. HUGO, on points of interest to the public. It is the only Memoir of the century, a history of an important author.

PARTRIDGE and CO., 9, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Now ready, at all the Libraries, a new Novel, by the Rev. JAMES PYCROFT, entitled THE COUNTY VOTE; or, the Unwritten Law.

DRAGON'S TEETH.
By the Author of "Mabel Vaughan," "Beatrice Hyde," &c.
1 vol. 8vo, 10s. 6d., Bentley-street, W.

HASTY PUDDING SAUCE.—Read H. PELLEGRINO, 49, Wandsworth and Weybridge, by Special Appointment to H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES, introduced an Essay embodied in the form of a Sir-hero's advice to his Daughter on the use of Hasty Pudding Sauce. Price 1s. Post-free, 13 stamps.
T. C. NEWBY, Wellclose-street.

Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, price 5s. post-free,

THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER, Revised by the Convocation of 1662. Is accepted to be used.
London: BOSWORTH and HARRISON, 215, Regent-street.

Just published, Fourth Edition, 1s.

THE DUTY OF GERMANY.
By EDWIN LEE, M.D., Author of "The Watering-Places of England," &c.
JOHN CHURCHILL and SONS, New Burlington-street.

HEMORRHOIDS and PILES.—THIS Publication is by Dr. LOBB, Author of "Diseases of the Skin," and will appear in the Journal of the BRITISH WESTERN MEDICAL SOCIETY, for JULY 1.
Price 1s. 6d. By W. FAIRBROOK, 9, Paternoster-row; and sold by all Booksellers.

CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED BUNYAN.
Part I., price 6d., now ready. Notes by Rev. ROBERT MACKEE, D.D., Illustrations by H. C. SELOUS, M.A. Full Prospectus. Sold by all Booksellers.
CASSELL, PETTER, and GALPIN, La Belle Sauvage Yard, London, E.C.

Now ready, price 8s. 6d.

FAMILY FRIEND, Volume for Midsummer, containing Illustrations of the Natural Religion of Christianity, by Rev. J. G. WOOD, M.A.
LONDON: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row, E.C.

TOY DOGS at the INTERNATIONAL DOG SHOW.—An Engraving of the Ladies' Dogs at the Exhibition (these were pronounced the best in the Show), in the ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL, of JUNE 20. Also, the Crowned Prize Pointers and Setters, Mastiffs, Bloodhounds, &c. Price 3d.; by post, 4d.

QLEANIST MARRIAGE at KINGSTON-ON-THAMES.—A special account of this ceremony, with Portraits of the Bridegroom and the LADY'S MAID, in the ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL, of JUNE 20. Also, the Coloured Print Fashions and Paris Modes, and Full-length Portrait of the Princess Dagmar, from her Marriage.

In one thick vol., the Twelfth Edition, price 18s.

MODERN DOMESTIC MEDICINE; a Popular Exposition of the Symptoms, Causes, and Treatment of Diseases; with a Collection of Approved Prescriptions, Forming a Practical Medical Guide for Families and Individuals. By JAMES COPLAND, M.D., F.R.S., Consulting Physician to the Royal Free Hospital, Physician of Kensington, &c.

"Dr. Copland's book is a valuable one, and has gone to a very high edition. It is very ably written, and is evidently the work of a man who has devoted his whole attention to the study of his profession."—British Standard.

"Dr. Copland's work is a valuable one, and has gone to a very high edition. It is very ably written, and is evidently the work of a man who has devoted his whole attention to the study of his profession. It is especially valuable for the following medical treasures."—Bell's Life.

London: LONGMAN, GREEN, and CO., Paternoster-row; and JAMES EPPS, Homœopathic Chemist, 170, Piccadilly.

Price 1s.; per post, 1s. 3d.; or abridged copy, 3 stamps.

MILES ON ARTIFICIAL TEETH, as best adapted for Mastication, Speech, Appearance, and Economy. Sent, "To be had of the Author, EDWD. MILES, Surgeon-Dentist, 33, Soho-square, London, W." Consultations Daily.

50,000 BIBLES, Prayer-books, and Church Services, Hymns, Ancient Books, and Student Authors on Sale, Second-hand, at HENRY G. BOHN'S, 4, York-street, Covent-garden.

A GUINEA PRAYER-BOOK for 6s. 6d. THE PICTORIAL BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER, large type, 1,000 pages, 100 Illustrations, Maps, Chronological Tables, &c., and a Lock and Key for 7s.—Also splendid volumes only to be had of JOHN CHEAP, 313, Oxford-street.

THREE HUNDRED BIBLE STORIES, with 300 Illustrations, and every Incident in the Old and the Young handsomely bound, price 4s. 6d., published at 15s., postage-free.—JOHN CHEAP, 313, Oxford-street, Wholesale, Retail, and for Exportation.

FIELD'S GUINEA FAMILY BIBLE.—Large type, 1,000 pages, 100 Illustrations, Maps, Chronological Tables, Illustrated Volume. The Largest Book in the World, free to, or by order, any Railway Station in England. Separate pamphlet.

5000 CHURCH SERVICES, from 4s. 6d. Elegantly Mounted.
Gold Pocket, Pew, and Presentation Books, 1s. to 2 guineas.
JOHN CHEAP, 313, Oxford-street, Wholesale, Retail, and for Exportation.

NO CHARGE for PACKING CASES and GOTTO'S for Plain Stamping Writing-paper and Envelopes. Colored Envelopes, Cream-laid Note, 4s. per 100. Patent Note-paper (Size and Cut), Initial, and Address Dies cut at half price. The prolific supply of Gotto's Cream-laid Note-paper (the most economical and durable), 4s. per ream. Sold by all Stationers.
GOTTO'S PARCHMENT DEPOT, 24, Oxford-street, London.

9S. PRIZE WRITING-CASE, fitted with 4s. Paper, Envelopes, Distributor-book, Pen-case, &c., and the best portable Inkstand ever made. Superior paper mounted and fitted in every variety. PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street, London.

NO CHARGE FOR STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, or Monogram (Steel Die Embossing, 5s.). Initials, Address, and Business Devices, full size. Sets quoted for 6d. At HENRY ROCHFORT'S, 61, Friendly.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS. Dressing-cases, Travelling-bags, Despatch-boxes, Writing-cases, Jewel-cases, Illuminated and Gemmine Bibles for the Wedding-day, Church Services, Prayer-books, Albums, Envelope-cases, at ROCHFORT'S well-known Establishment, 61, Friendly.

WEDDING CARDS and ENVELOPES Printed and Stamped in Silver, with Arms or Crest, in the finest possible style. Specimens and Estimates free.—HENRY ROCHFORT, 61, Friendly. Cards printed for 4s. 6d. At HENRY ROCHFORT'S, 61, Friendly.

CARTE DE VISITE PORTRAIT ALBUMS to form 24 to 10 pictures. Carte de Visite Portraits of the Royal Family and Nobility, 2s. per dozen. Stereoscopic Slides, 2s. per dozen. Lists free for 24 stamps. At HENRY ROCHFORT'S, 61, Friendly. Catalogues post-free.

NEW MUSIC.

MESSRS. COCKS and CO., of New Burlington-street, have been appointed Music Publishers to the QUEEN DOWAGER.
DAUGHTER OF HEROD, and DO BEND THE PRINCE KNEE. Songs by BENJAMIN RICHARDS. Price 2s. each.
DO BEND THE PRINCE OF WALES. Song and Chorus. Poetry by GEO. LINLEY. Music by BENJAMIN RICHARDS. 2s.
THE MARRIAGE OF THE PRINCE OF WALES. Song and Chorus. Poetry by GEO. LINLEY. Music by BENJAMIN RICHARDS. 2s.
THE MARRIAGE OF THE PRINCE OF WALES, arranged for an Orchestra by the Composer, BENJAMIN RICHARDS. 2s. Also, for Pianoforte Solo, Quadrille, in which is introduced the tunes selected at the Opera.
THE MARRIAGE. Song. 2s. SONGS:—"O! Sweet-flowing Thames!" 2s. "Ye Mariners of England!" 2s. "Oh! I've been a sailor's lass," and "When the Swallows," each 2s. and 3s. 6d.
THE MARRIAGE. Song. Poetry by GEORGE LINLEY. Selected from the Opera. Price 2s.
THE MARRIAGE. Song. Poetry by GEORGE LINLEY. Selected in a familiar style for that occasion. Price 2s. Post-free, 13 stamps.
THE MARRIAGE. Song. Poetry by GEORGE LINLEY. Price 2s.
HAMILTON'S MODERN INSTRUCTIONS FOR PIANO, 104th Edition.
HAMILTON'S MODERN INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE HARMONIUM. "Besides the Prelude Flower." Price 2s.
"Besides the Prelude Flower." Price 2s. Net.
"I'll choose to be a lady." Price 2s. Net.
COCKS and CO., 6, Princes-street, Hanover-square, and 23, New Burlington-street.

HENRY FARMER'S DANISH NATIONAL HYMN. Price 2s. "One of the most effective and best touching Hymns we have ever heard."—Vide Press.
HENRY FARMER, 9, Berners-street, Oxford-street.

HENRY FARMER'S LAST NEW PIECES.
"Rondo, the Prairie Flower." Price 2s.
"Rondo, the Fairy Queen." Price 2s.
"I'll choose to be a lady." Price 2s. 6d.
HENRY FARMER, 9, Berners-street, Oxford-street.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW VIOLIN SOLOS, with Accompaniments for Pianoforte.
No. 1. Rondo, Prairie Flower.
No. 2. Rondo, Fairy Queen.
No. 3. Blue bell of Scotland.
No. 4. The Last Rose of Summer.
No. 5. Hope and a faltering sigh.
HENRY FARMER, 9, Berners-street, Oxford-street.
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Hatton-garden, and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

W. KUHE'S TRANSCRIPTION
BRILLANTE, "OP. SIXTY SUCH LIEBES VOGELEIN."
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Hatton-garden, and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

W. KUHE'S LA GONDOLA." Grande Valse. Price 3s.
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Hatton-garden, and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

THE MARINER AND HIS LINNET. Song. Nobly inspired by Miss Louise Keeley at the Theatre Royal, Sadler's Wells. Sung by C. H. SQUIRE. Music by HENRY HOWGOOMERY. Price 2s.
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Hatton-garden, and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

THREE NEW CHORUSES (or Trios) for Soprano and Contralto Voices. By CIRO PINSUTI. No. 1. "Sweet Spring." No. 2. "Sweet Flowers." No. 3. "Sweet Bird."
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Hatton-garden, and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

PRINCESS ALICE'S MAZURKA and WALTZ, By Sir GEO. ELVEY.
Played (15 Among the Elite) by Mr. G. W. Moore, Sydney Smith's Nonpareils, Mountain Stream, Lily of the Valley, Mr. Godfrey's Band, and Mr. Boosey's Military Band.
ANDREWS and CO., 96, Newgate-street.

AUGENER and CO.'S CIRCULATING LIBRARY of MUSIC, 86, Newgate-street, London. 50, Sloane-street, Pimlico. Prospectuses on application.

MUSICAL BOX DEPÔTS, 32, Ludgate-hill, and 56, Cheapside.—Messrs. NICOLE FRÈRES have just Arrived, a large assortment of Musical Instruments in Tortoiseshell, Ivory, and Buhl Cases, Tambourine Boxes, Lists of tunes and prices gratis and post-free.

PICTURE FRAMES, Best and Cheapest, in every variety of Pattern, Gilt and Ornamental, Portable Frames for Photographs, Looking-glasses, and Chimney-pieces, at GEO. REES', 56, St. Martin's-lane; Factory, 27, Drury-lane.

GILT FRAMES, with Glass and Board complete, 1s. 6d., 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s. 6d., 4s., 5s., 6s., 7s., 8s., 9s., 10s., 12s., 15s., 18s., 20s., 25s., 30s., 35s., 40s., 45s., 50s., 60s., 70s., 80s., 90s., 100s., 120s., 140s., 160s., 180s., 200s., 220s., 240s., 260s., 280s., 300s., 320s., 340s., 360s., 380s., 400s., 420s., 440s., 460s., 480s., 500s., 520s., 540s., 560s., 580s., 600s., 620s., 640s., 660s., 680s., 700s., 720s., 740s., 760s., 780s., 800s., 820s., 840s., 860s., 880s., 900s., 920s., 940s., 960s., 980s., 1000s., 1020s., 1040s., 1060s., 1080s., 1100s., 1120s., 1140s., 1160s., 1180s., 1200s., 1220s., 1240s., 1260s., 1280s., 1300s., 1320s., 1340s., 1360s., 1380s., 1400s., 1420s., 1440s., 1460s., 1480s., 1500s., 1520s., 1540s., 1560s., 1580s., 1600s., 1620s., 1640s., 1660s., 1680s., 1700s., 1720s., 1740s., 1760s., 1780s., 1800s., 1820s., 1840s., 1860s., 1880s., 1900s., 1920s., 1940s., 1960s., 1980s., 2000s., 2020s., 2040s., 2060s., 2080s., 2100s., 2120s., 2140s., 2160s., 2180s., 2200s., 2220s., 2240s., 2260s., 2280s., 2300s., 2320s., 2340s., 2360s., 2380s., 2400s., 2420s., 2440s., 2460s., 2480s., 2500s., 2520s., 2540s., 2560s., 2580s., 2600s., 2620s., 2640s., 2660s., 2680s., 2700s., 2720s., 2740s., 2760s., 2780s., 2800s., 2820s., 2840s., 2860s., 2880s., 2900s., 2920s., 2940s., 2960s., 2980s., 3000s., 3020s., 3040s., 3060s., 3080s., 3100s., 3120s., 3140s., 3160s., 3180s., 3200s., 3220s., 3240s., 3260s., 3280s., 3300s., 3320s., 3340s., 3360s., 3380s., 3400s., 3420s., 3440s., 3460s., 3480s., 3500s., 3520s., 3540s., 3560s., 3580s., 3600s., 3620s., 3640s., 3660s., 3680s., 3700

SOUTH ESSEX WATERWORKS COMPANY.—The High-Service Section of this Company is now prepared to supply Water to Houses and Premises. The water is brought to the level of the front quarter-way from the ground, by steam-power, and is delivered at the constant pressure of about 70 lbs. per square inch. Manufacturers and others on the main can be supplied to any extent. Application for Water, and for Plans and Estimates, to be made to the undersigned, at their Offices, No. 2, Mincing-lane, E.C., or at the Works, Stratford, Essex.

THOMAS HAWKSLEY, Secretary.

The Illustrations on the 13th inst.

HIGHLAND SHOOTING-QUARTERS are conveniently and expeditiously furnished with every necessary, including Waterproof Clothing, Guns, Rifles, Ammunition, Fishing-rods, &c., at moderate charges, by Messrs. HOWARD, Highland Outfitters, 5, Conduit-street, Regent-street, three doors from the corner of New Bond-street, London, W.

In consequence of the Division of an Estate, a large, strongly built, large HOUSE in YORK SALE YARD, Bishopsgate-street Without, with Counting-house, Offices, &c., and Yard for Six or Seven Waggons, to be LET. Apply to R. G., 216, care of Messrs. Hammerton and Vigier, Bankers.

MONEY ADVANCED by Mr. LUXMOORE, 30, Silversmith, &c., of 12, St. Martin's-lane, W.C. opposite Newman-street, on Plate, Jewels, Watches, Deeds, Wearing Apparel, and Household Goods, from £5 to £5,000, at Seven and Eight per cent.

FURST'S CLASS BEDROOM FURNITURE. A. SEDLEY and CO., 119, Regent-street, have for sale complete Suites of the above, including wardrobes, washstands, washing-tables, mantle-top, washhand Suite, dressing-table, with glass, towel-horse, chairs, &c., in polished deal, at 5 guineas; in pine, 4 guineas; in satin wood, 6 guineas; in Italian walnut bedstead and spring mahogany dittos; the whole of elegant design and the best construction. A general bedroom assortment completely furnished with from bedstead and best improved furniture for £5.

A. SEDLEY and CO., 119, Regent-street, W.

SEDLEY'S PATENT EQUILIBRIUM CHAIRS are the most comfortable and elegant yet offered to the public. Capital for India, packing up to less space than any other chair. Also, the Patent Portable Couches, &c., at very moderate prices. 119, Regent-street, London, W.

THE LORD OF DUNDREARY EQUILIBRIUM CHAIR, universally admired, and only to be had of the Inventor, W. L. RUSSELL, Cacl. Co., 326, Regent-street, London, W., Patentee of Equilibrium Couches.

FURNITURE.—ALFRED GREEN'S complete ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of FURNITURE is now ready, and will be forwarded, post-free, to any addressee on application. Every article of the best workmanship and material, and at the most moderate prices. Orders will be executed with promptness, and the most satisfactory guarantee as to material, price.—Alfred Green, Manufacturing Cabinet-maker and Upholsterer, Carpet, and Bed-room Furnisher, 295, Regent-street, London, W.

FERN'S CATALOGUE.—ATKINSON and CO beg to announce their numerous customers and also the public generally that their NEW CATALOGUE, with their NEW PRICES, is NOW READY, and may be had through the post, or by applying as below. The alterations which have taken place in the value of furniture is that the drawings are all made from the pieces of furniture, and not from fancy sketches, and every article is made in the best workmanship and style of the old school, and will be found a most marked in plain figures having reference to the prices given in the book.

A set of two new patterns for the choicest of the numerous productions in cabinet furniture, carpets, and curtain fabrics of every description, including the celebrated Tapestry Carpets, manufactured at Nottingham lace, Swiss net, Muslin and Lace curtains. Those marked in plain figures. Upholstering from the Guinea Chair Bedstead of 1863.

Contractors to her Majesty's Government and the principal public departments, and to the Royal Family.

Address as in G. Northumber Rubbo-road, the left hand side, after passing the Green, and the House is the fourth on the left.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE. 1, 2, and 3, Ludgate-street, and 2, and 4, Queen-street, 66, Tottenham-court-road. W. Cocoma, Feltlines, Colmes, &c., of first-class manufacture, at 10 per cent. under the usual prices.

CURTAINS.—The most Splendid Assortment of in Europe, at CRAPPER and ENGLISH'S CHINTZERIE, at the old place: Sutherland Brass Lace and Nail Manufactory, at the old Manufactory, in Regent-street.

SEWELL and CO., COMPTON HOUSE, Soho. W.

SUPERIOR BEDDING, BEDSTEADS, and CHAMBER FURNITURE.

BRASS and IRON BEDSTEADS of every size and description, GOODS, CARPETS, BEDDING, and CO., 1, 2, 3, and 4, Newman-street.

SLACKS' TABLE-KNIVES. — Best Ivory, 30 Dozen Handle Tables, 18s., 20s., and 22s.; dessert, 14s. and 16s.; carvers, 6s. and 7s. per pair. Best Sheffield plate, fiddle pattern, full size, 36s. per dozen; ditto, full-size, rich pattern, 42s. per dozen; Electro-plated Forks and Spoons, full size, 20s. per dozen.—SLACKS', 336, Strand, W.C., and 69, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

CARPETS.—GOODE, GAINSFORD, and CO. In Consequence of the Alterations in HANDLOOM, BRUSSELS, and WILTONS, Carpets, Rugs, Hearthrugs, Floorcloths, Linoleums, &c., of the Old Patterns, will be SOLD UNDER PRICE.

TO LADIES.—RICHLY PERFORATED STENCIL for Shoes Aprons, 3 Sheets super de medici. Green Thread for Leaves, for working Initials, Monograms, &c. Sample pair as a Design. R. FRYER, Toyo, Maidstone.

PHEASANTS.—Gentlemen rearing Young Pheasants should remember that MEAL will be PURSANT and CO.'make Rearing. Send for prospectus.

PINT PORT, twelve years in the wood, 42s. per dozen; Sherry Similar, 36s., 42s., and 48s. per dozen; Claret, 18s., 24s., and 30s. per dozen.—WILLIAM WALKER, Wine and Spirit Merchants, 16, Clement's-lane, City, E.C.

EVERY ARTICLE of FOOD for INVALIDS and CHILDREN, Prepared Arrowroot, Groats, Barley, Rice, Semolina, Tapioca, Sago, Oatmeal, Lentil Flour, Food for Consumptive, Diabetic, and General Debility.—VAN ABBOTT and CO., Chemists, &c., Prince-street, Cavendish-square, W.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, used in the Royal Laundry, Is the Purest and Best, Sold by all Grocers, Chandlers, &c.

COALS.—COCKERELL'S COALS, price 23s., cash. Central Office, No. 11, Cornhill, E.C.

JUDSON'S SIMPLE DYES FOR LADIES, 6d. per bottle, sold by all druggists and oil men. The brilliant colours May be had of all Chemists.

BENZINE COLLAS removes grease, oil, or paint from Silk, Woollen, Cotton, and every description of apparel and furniture, without the least injury to the colour or texture. Sold in bottles, 1s., 2s., and 4s. each, by Chemists and Perfumers, W., 2, Long-acre, and 24, Rickington-place, Liverpool.

JAMES'S PILLS for the COMPLEXION, Pimples on the face, erysipelas, sallowness, and roughness of the skin.—Sold by all chemists; or a packet sent by post on receipt of 24 stamps.—J. R. DUMMERS, Chemist, 63, Curtain-road, London, (a receipt for 1 year).

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA is an effectual remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a mild aperient for delicate constitutions.—Prepared only by DINNEFORD, Lowther Arcade, Strand, and 172, Oxford-street.

PREPARED FULLER'S EARTH, for nursery use, deprived of all impurity, delicately scented, and finely powdered. Sold by all Chemists, in packets, 6d., 1s., and 2s. each.—FULLER, 106, Oxford-street.

YOUNG'S Is. BOX ABRICATED WHITE FELT CORN and BUNION PLASTERS. Dr. H. YOUNG, 30, Soho-square, London, Author of "Corns, their Origin and Cure." Sold also by Young's 4d. and 1s. box; by post, 1s. 3d.

CHLORODYNE.—DISEASE of the LUNGS.—CONSUMPTION.—BRONCHITIS.—ASTHMA.—COUGHS.—COLDS.—INFLUENZA.—DISEASES of the CHEST.—SPASMS.—HYSTERIA.—PALPITATION.—DISEASES of the SKIN.—KIDNEYS.—INFANTILE WASTING.—AND ALL NERVOUS AFFECTIONS.

CHLORODYNE is unquestionably the most valuable remedy known to mankind.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE, Author of "Chlorodyne: its Nature and Uses," says:—"I consider Chlorodyne to be the most valuable remedy that has been introduced in the present century."

DR. BEASLEY, Author of "The Druggist's General Formulary," says:—"I have no hesitation in saying that Chlorodyne is the most valuable remedy in the whole range of the Pharmacopœia."

DR. DE POLNAY, Author of "Chlorodyne: its Composition and Uses," says:—"I have prescribed Chlorodyne in all cases in which it is recommended, and have found it to answer in every instance."

DR. DOWNES, Late Physician to the Forces, says:—"Chlorodyne is the most wonderful and valuable remedy in medicine."

DR. DOWNES, Late Physician to the Forces, says:—"Chlorodyne is the most wonderful and valuable remedy in medicine."

DR. DOWNES LIGHT-BROWN CHLORODYNE is sold only in Imperial half-pints, 2s. 6d.; pints, 4s. 6d.; quarts, 8s.; corked and labelled with the stamp and signature, WITHOUT WHICH NONE CAN POSSIBLY BE GENUINE, by appointment to Chemists and Druggists, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury-square, London.

ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE. The Authorised offices of Heraldry to Her Majesty's Royal Arms, Crests, &c., additionally, the "Lancaster-ian Manual of Heraldry," 1s. 6d., Illustrated. RALPH WINDUS, Heraldic Artist and Engraver.

FOR FAMILY ARMS—the LINCOLN'S INN HERALDIC OFFICE—send Name and County. Arms found, Sketched, and Painted, 5s. Engraved in Seal or Ring, 6s. Pedigrees of Families, 2s. per Generation. Lincoln's-inn-fields.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE. Engraving by the Laws of Garter King-at-Arms. Crest on Seal or Ring, 6s. 6d.; Arms on Seal, 10s.; Relief Gold Signet Ring for Crest, 21s.; a Book-Plate, Arms, and Crest, with Name, 10s.

SIGNET CREST, Die Sunk, Relief Cut, Hall-marked, Gold Seal for Sealing Wax, Brass Seal for Stamping, Arms Painted, Quartered, and Engraved. Mottoes, &c. H. R. SALT (by Appointment), Heraldic Office, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

FAMILY ARMS.—All Persons desirous of having a correct account of their Armorial Bearings, Crest, Name and county to CULLETON'S HERALDIC LIBRARY. No. 2, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, London, where the Arms, Crests, Mottoes, and Names, with Short Account of Origin, are correctly painted in each subscriber. 12s. Family Pedigrees traced and Arms painted and Engraved. Seals, Dies, Rings, Engraved. Heraldic Painting executed at 21, Martin's-lane, Cannon-street, W.C.

FAMILY ARMS, CREST, MONOGRAM, or Address Stamped on Paper Free of Charge, and an elegant fac simile of the Die sent with it. Arms found and Sketched, 3s. Best paper and 100 envelopes to match or No. Cartridge paid, by T. CULLETON, Seal and Die Sinker, 25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, London.

WEDDING-CARDS and ENVELOPES Stamped in Silver with Arms, Crest, or Monogram. 50 Cards and 50 Envelopes, Stamped with Crest, 4s. 6d. Arms Engraved on Steel, and 100 Cards Printed, 21s. Copper-plate Engraving and Fashionable Note paper, and 50 best Ivory Cards, 3s., post-free.—T. CULLETON, Heraldic Artist and Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square.

FAMILY ARMS Engraved on Seals, Rings, and steel Dies in artistic style. Crest on Seals, 7s. 6d.; with Motto, 10s. Sketches from Name and County, 2s. 6d. Arms Painted in proper Colours, 5s. Arms Quartered, Impaled, &c. Boss Brass Hall mark in the only guarantee for pure gold.—T. CULLETON, Heraldic Artist, Mourning and Die Sinker, 25, Cranbourn-street, No. 10, Cranbourn-street corner of St. Martin's-lane).

MARK CULLETON'S MARKING-INK, for Linen, Cotton, Silk, &c., may be had of all Stationers and Booksellers in the United Kingdom, and of Perfumers and Chemists in Paris. The Arms of all the Sovereigns of Europe, with the Arms of the Nobility and Gentry of England, Scotland, and Ireland, Compiled from the Records of the Queen and of the Royal Family; 3 thicks—The Imperial Family Almanack for 1863, 1s. 6d.; The Parliamentary Companion, 1s. 6d.; and Whitaker's Almanack, 3s. 6d. The Almanack for Lords and British Commons, all stamped in various colours, price 3d. Sold by all Booksellers. Mark Culleton, 2, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, and Hatchard, 187, Piccadilly.

YOUR CREST, ADDRESS, or MONOGRAM Stamped Without Charge, in any Colour, on Paper Manufactured Expressly for Use by HENRY REED, Stationer, 17, Oxford-street (corner of Newman-street). Wedding Orders executed in the best manner, and at moderate charges.

CARTE DE VISITE, 12 for 2s. 6d.—Forward Your carte de visite and 2s. stamps, with address, to the London Photographic Company, 54, Cheapside, Rollington-road, Stockwell, N., and you will receive 12 neat the size and copy of your carte de visite. Photographic Albums, 1s. 6d. each, and all other materials used at that establishment. Address 54, CHEAPSIDE, STOCKWELL.

PHOTOGRAPHIE CLASSIQUE FLANCHER, 31, Edgware-road, Hyde Park, London, Manager, Photographer to the Queen, Prince Albert, the Duke de Cotte de Vichy, the rel.

PHOTOGRAPHIC ALBUMS.—A choice of 900 from 2s. 6d. to £5. A large variety very elegantly bound in morocco. A handsomely ornamented Album for 20s. The public supplied at wholesale prices. PASKINS and CO., 23, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, Photographers.

PENCILS, BLACK LEAD, and COLOURED CHALK. A NEW PATENT POLYGRADE LEAD PENCIL, suitable for Drawing, Writing, Sketching, Colouring, Marking, Setting, and Blacking Eyebrows, &c. Sold by all Stationers.

MESSRS. MECHI and BAZIN, 112, Regent-street, and No. 4, Leadenhall-street, offer to the public the following unrivalled articles, which for quality and finish, excellence of quality, and moderation in price; with a very extensive assortment of Dressing-cases, Writing-desks, Envelope-cases, Despatch-boxes, post-free on application.

MESSRS. MECHI and BAZIN'S DESPATCH BOXES and portable WRITING-CASES are fitted with Drawers, Inkstands, Locks, Bramah's Patent, and every requisite for correspondence without additional cost. Portfolio Writing-cases, Envelope-cases, Dressing-cases, &c.

MESSRS. MECHI and BAZIN have on sale the largest variety in the kingdom of Travelling Dressing-bags, Tea, Writing, and Work-boxes.

ELEGANT PRESENTS. FIVE LARGE SHOWROOMS.

150 Bathtubs, from 7s. 6d. to £10. Dressing-cases, 7s. to £50 Writing-cases, from 2s. 6d. Work-boxes, from 5s. to £20. Tea-trays, from 12s. to £20. Dressing-bags, from 5s. to £50. Envelope-cases, from 2s. 6d. to £5. Chess and Draught Boards & Men. Bowl-cases and Eye-baths. Tea-caddies, from 2s. 6d. to £10. Cabas, Companions, and Tourists' Cases.

THE 1s. HAIR-WAVER (the Original).—A simple invention for giving the greatest wave to the hair, as worn by the Empress Eugenie, Princess Mary of Cambridge, &c. Instruction, Post-free, with instructions, 14 stamps.—J. TRUSSELL, Perfumer, 324, Strand, corner of Wellington-street.

THE ALEXANDRA HAIR-WAVER, invented by HARE, the Hairdresser, to the invention of the PRINCESS and ALBERT, Gives Instantaneously a beautiful wave to the hair, which can be obtained at all times by any lady, in a single minute.

EAU and POMMADE RÉPARATRICE DE FROCHOT, 2 PARIS.—Infallible to restore the Hair to its Original Colour, Strength, and Beauty. Sold in Bottles, 3s. 6d., 7s., and 10s. 6d. each, by CROSBY, Chemist Hôpital, 72, LONDRES and CO., 37, Cannon-street West, London.

A BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION, ROSE and LILY COMBINED, is produced by the use of Lasbar Oriental Rock of Beauty, Powder de Riz et Z. Mousseux,

NEW MUSIC.

FAUST. Opera. By CH. GOUNOD. Performed at Her Majesty's Theatre with unprecedented success. The whole of the Music is now ready. s. d.
Opera complete, Voice and Piano, with Italian or French Words 16 0
Opera complete, Pianoforte Solo 8 0
Opera complete, Pianoforte Duet 12 0
Song (Mephistopheles)—Dio dell' or dal mondo, Signor. Sung by Signor Gassier 3 0
Valse—Ah! Bridge ingrate Etienne Ketz 4 0
Cavatina (Faust)—Salve dimora casta e pura. Sung by Mlle. Trebelli 3 0
Cavatina (Faust)—Ainsi! dancra cesta pure. Sung by Sig. Gillul 3 0
Aria (Marguerite)—Ah! mon ami! quand giudrai! (Air de Bijoux) Sung by Mlle. Titiens 3 0
Duetto (Marguerite and Faust)—Duetto! ancor vestigio! Sung by Mdlle. Titiens and Sig. Giuglini ... 3 0
Trio (Marguerite, Faust, and Mephistopheles)—Ecco il momento! Sung by Mdlle. Titiens, Sig. Giuglini, and Sig. Gassier 3 0
Thematic Catalogues sent on application.

The Waltz and Polka (Faust) 4 0
Air de Ballet, with French Words 3 0
Rustic and Military Band 4 0

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
The Favourite Airs in the Opera, Solos, Duets, Trios, each 3 0
Duke, de Venise, in three books, Richard the Third, each ... 4 0
Rustic Dance, Military Dance, Waltz, Polka, Mazurka, Galop, Solo or Duet, each 3 0
Full Orchestra 3 0
Septett 2 0
The Faust Quadrille, by Charles Coote, illustrated—
Solo or Duet 4 0
Full Orchestra 3 0
Septett 2 0
The Faust Valse, by Charles Coote, illustrated, Solo or Duet 4 0
Set of Waltzes by Godfrey 4 0
Brinley Richards' Fantasia 4 0
" Cherubs Chorus 3 0
Ewbe ... ... Fantasia 4 0
Lindahl ... ... Fantasia 4 0
Linet ... ... Les Soirées de Cosmé 4 0
Leybach ... ... Fantaisie Opéra 4 0
Mayer ... ... Souvenirs 4 0
Meyerbeer ... Les Huguenots 4 0
Kruger ... ... Chœur de valse 4 0
Rimbault ... ... Fantasia on Gounod, in two books, each 4 0
Rimbault ... ... The Waltz, in 2 do. 4 0
Ascher ... ... Fantasia on Airs from the Author ... 4 0
Ad. Le Carpentier ... Les Favorites Mabile sur le Valse ... 4 0
Abel Gury ... ... Grand Fantasia 4 0
A. Smith ... ... Grand Fantasia 4 0
Rosseli de Villeneli ... Chœur de valse, Solo or Duet ... 4 0
" Duet 4 0
Rimbault ... ... Grand Fantasia ... ... each 4 0

No. 1. The Waltz. | No. 4. The Flower Song.
2. The Jewel Song. | 5. Faust and Marguerite, Duet.
3. Kermesse. | 6. Soldiers' Chorus.

J. Barnby Coleman. The Waltz, arranged for the Organ ... 4 0

Ch. Gounod. Meditation on Faust, for Pianoforte, Harmonium, and Violin or Violoncello 6 0

The Favourite Airs for Violin, each 3 0
The Favourite Airs for Flute, Solo 3 0
The Favourite Airs for Cornet 3 0

Grand Selection for Military Band, arranged by Godfrey 1 5
Septett and Chorus, 2s. and 3s., New Band-book.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO
Is the only Pianoforte to which the Prize Medal was awarded—A very compact Cottage Pianoforte, with Check Action, Trichord Treble, and Metallic Plate, which is supplied in small sizes for Foreign Residents. Warranted to keep in tune, and to be less sent and cheaper. Packed complete with Stool, Cover, and the latest improvements. Price, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 75 and 78 guineas. A Pianino Model, 60 guineas.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ENGLISH MODEL
OBLIQUE PIANOFORTE, combines Grand-Pianoforte quality of English tone at the Semibreve or Cabinet capacity. In a plain Model and in Rosewood, with Check-Action and Trichord Treble, at a moderate price. This model is of the most simple construction, and is not liable to get out of order, and will keep in tune for the country, and is not affected by any change of climate. Packed complete for the interior. An inspection requested can, with real free, decided in every respect as the Grand Pianoforte, price 50 guineas; 1, 40 guineas; 2, 35 guineas; 3, 30 guineas.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S NEW TWENTY-GUINEA
PIANOFORTE, fifth Edition, with Check Action, full compass, and full trichord. This instrument has only just been brought to perfection as a thoroughly good Pianoforte, and is now sent out as a thoroughly good Pianoforte. It is constructed in the best manner, and has a full and rich quality of tone, and is capable of bearing any amount of pressure without getting out of tune. The Pianoforte is made in a plain polished Mahogany case, and is perfectly handsome in appearance. Packed complete for the interior. Price 20 guineas.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL
PIANOFORTE, with Check Action, in Rosewood, with Trichord Treble, and Metallic Plate, which is supplied in small sizes for Foreign Residents. Warranted to keep in tune, and to be less sent and cheaper. Packed complete with Stool, Cover, and the latest improvements. Price, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 75 and 78 guineas. A Pianino Model, 60 guineas.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and ERARD.
The best manufactories of every description, including all the improved forms of Grand and Cottage Pianofortes, may be viewed by any intending purchaser, at the option of the Proprietors of the Manufactories, at Chappell's Pianoforte Galleries, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL
PIANO-CORTE, price 70 guineas in rosewood, or in walnut, 75 guineas, is a Cottage Pianoforte, with Check Action, and Trichord Treble, and Metallic Plate, which is supplied in small sizes for Foreign Residents. Warranted to keep in tune, and to stand perfectly well. Packed complete for the interior. Price, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 70 guineas.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ERARD'S NEW BOUDOIR GRAND
PIANOFORTE, in 7½ octaves, having been now brought to perfection, may be viewed at the Manufactory, 18, Great Marlborough-street.
CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES.
CHAPPELL'S large Stock of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES for Sale, by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, ERARD, &c. &c., by every Maker of eminence, and of every description—Cheapside and 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES.—CHAPPELL'S.—The Selection made in London, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c., for Sale or Hire.—50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S DRAWING-ROOM
ORGUE HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 40 guineas; also Model Harmoniums and 12 guineas. Illustrated Lists of Pianofortes and Harmoniums upon application to
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM by
ALEXANDRE, with five octaves, two footboards, and in oak case, suitable for small churches and chapels, and for use at all school sharp harmoniums. Illustrated Lists on application to
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS,
Suitable for small churches, by first-rate makers, for new, or nearly-reduced prices, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S PRIZE EXHIBITION
HARMONIUM, for the CHURCH, DRAWING-ROOM, and VESTRY of Villagers, and Vestries well worked by the best of the right hand and left hand, with Pedal Organ Pipes, price 100 guineas, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

THE SICILMA FLUTE.—Old System of Fingering, with important improvements. These celebrated Instruments are now in course of manufacture, and may be had in 8 in 12 guineas, by S. ARTHUR CHAPPELL, 201, Regent-street, from whom a Prospectus may be obtained.

ANTOINE COURTOIS' CORNETS-à-
PISTONS.—The most perfect Instruments, from their unrivalled power of sonorousness in the highest, as made only by E. AMADUR CHAPPELL, No. 201, Regent-street, from whom prospectuses and drawings may be obtained.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and
CO. have the honour to announce that they carry out in the Pianoforte and other trades all the prices largely recommended by the purses of the exhibition to their friends, and give universal satisfaction. Due in the wisdom married for price; others, in plain woods, cheaper, warranted.—31, Regent-street (the only address).

THE CONCERTINA, by
CHARLES WHEATSTONE, F.R.S., the original and only inventor of the instrument, and by all the principal makers. Lists, with Illustrations, and a Treatise on the Concertina, sent free, by post, on application to the Manufacturers, WHEATSTONE and CO., 20, Conduit-street, London.

NEW MUSIC.

CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD'S MUSIC CIRCULATING LIBRARY for Town and Country.
Terms—Two, Three, and Four Guineas per Annum.

HALF-PRICE.—ALL FULL-PRICED MUSIC and post-free at half the marked price by CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE'
LAPI. The Overture arranged by EDWARD F. RIMBAULT. Solo, 3s. Duet, 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE'
LAPI. Les Vivandières, Valse. Solo, 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE'
LAPI. Fantaisie Etincelante, par W. KUHE. 4s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE'
LAPI. Giuglini's charming Romance, "Oh, speriam," arranged by W. KUHE. 3s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE'
LAPI. Mdlle. Trebelli's popular Air, "La bella mia." Arranged by W. KUHE. 3s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE'
LAPI. Fantaisie, by BRINLEY RICHARDS, for Concertina and Pianoforte, by RICHARD BLAGROVE. 3s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE'
LAPI. Lucrezia Borgia. A MANIA. 3s. Performed at the Opera Comique.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE'
LAPI. Silvergia Valse. By CHARLES GODFREY, Jun. 4s. Performed at the Opera Comique.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

SCHIRA'S NEW OPERA, NICCOLO DE'
LAPI. All the Overtures arranged for Pianoforte Duet, by RICHARD MULLER. 4s. each.
"Il bello mio," "Oh, speriamo," "Prima sacrata," and "Il giuoco di Nina Pazza per Amore."
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

RÉNÉ FAVARGER.
Au Feu. Galop brillant ... ... 4s. nt.
Bruyères. Romance sans Paroles ... ... 3s. nt.
Marche Boucanier ... ... 3s. nt.
Les Hirondelles du Salon ... ... 3s. nt.
Reverie. Nocturne ... ... 3s. nt.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

FARBALLETTA.—Signor ARDITI'S New
MAZURKA, for Piano, with Castanets ad libitum, 3s. net. This air is also introduced in the new ballet of "Farballetta," performed with great success at the Royal Italian Opera.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

CINQ PENSIERI.
ROSINA MEAD'S New Song by Mdme. R. Dillon in "The Barber of Seville." Arranged for the Pianoforte by CHARLES COOTE, 4s. net. Words, 1s. net.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ENGLISH SONGS,
A Day Dream ... ... J. Simonetti 3s. 0d.
I Wrongly Deem Dainty Bride ... Frederic Clay 3s. 0d.
Fallen Leaves ... ... Frederic Berger 3s. 0d.
Thou art my beautiful Ethie ... J. Barnett 3s. 0d.
Thou art my Queen ... ... Frank Mori 3s. 0d.
Johnnie Gray ... ... Frank Mori 3s. 0d.
Ah! Mignonne ... ... Frederic Clay 3s. 0d.
Bird of the Wilderness ... ... J. Barnett 3s. 0d.
Shades of evening close around ... Frederic Clay 3s. 0d.
The Sea ... ... Frederic Clay 3s. 0d.
Spinning-wheel ... ... Henry Smart 3s. 0d.
Thy Voice is Nigh ... ... Henry Smart 3s. 0d.
Wayside Well ... ... Frederic Clay 3s. 0d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

THE NEWEST ITALIAN, &c., SONGS,
All transposed for Mezzo-Soprano, Contralto, or Bass by CHARLES COOTE (a specialty in this department).
Ah! non credea mirarti ... ... 3s. 0d.
Ah! non giunge ... ... 3s. 0d.
Casta Diva ... ... 3s. 0d.
Ciascun lo sa ... ... 3s. 0d.
Il Balen ... ... 3s. 0d.
Perfidia Rosamonda ... ... 3s. 0d.
Qui la voce ... ... 3s. 0d.
Vi ravviso ... ... 3s. 0d.
Sung enraptured song by Mdme. Bailo ... 3s. 0d.
Sung enraptured song by Mdme. Bailo ... 3s. 0d.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

VIRGINIA GABRIEL.
Lady's Mabel, Ballad ... ... 3s.
Lady's Mabel, Duet ... ... 4s.
If, for to-day, Ballad ... ... 3s.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

G. GRETTON'S PIANOFORTE WORKS.
Fairy Fingers. Valse ... ... 4s. net.
Fairy Fingers. Quadrille ... ... 4s. net.
Fairy Fingers. Polka ... ... 4s. net.
Fairy Fingers. Galop ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Fantasia ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Duet ... ... 5s. net.
Fairies in Council. Quadrille ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Valse ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Polka ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Galop ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Mazurka ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Schottische ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Polka Mazurka ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Waltz ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances ... ... 4s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Duet ... ... 5s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Septett ... ... 2s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Full Orchestra ... 3s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Military Band ... 3s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Brass Band ... 3s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Septett and Chorus ... 3s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Septett and Chorus, Full Orchestra ... ... 3s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Septett and Chorus, Military Band ... ... 3s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Septett and Chorus, Brass Band ... ... 3s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Septett and Chorus, Full Orchestra ... ... 3s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Septett and Chorus, Military Band ... ... 3s. net.
Fairies in Council. Set of Dances, Septett and Chorus, Brass Band ... ... 3s. net.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

NOTICE.—HALF-PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, post-free for postage-stamps. CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

PLAYED BY COMMAND OF H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES
COOTE'S ROULETTE GALOP. Price 3s.
The best Galop of the day. Now Morning Post.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

PLAYED BY COMMAND OF H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES
COOTE'S ROULETTE GALOP. Price 3s.
The best Galop of the day. Now Morning Post.
CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street.

DEDICATED BY PERMISSION TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
COOTE'S PRINCESS ALEXANDRA VALSE. Price 4s. Illustrated with a splendid Portrait in Colours of Her Royal Highness. Now Morning Post.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE LATEST EXCITEMENT.
COOTE'S FAIRY VISIONS. Illustrated. Price 4s. Now Morning Post. Universally popular. Most charming and fascinating.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-st.

THE BEST SET OF LANCERS ARE
COOTE'S CHERE LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Flights of Love," "My Fanny Fay," "Ici on danse," and "Home, Sweet Home." Illustrated. Now Morning Post. No dance progresses complete without the above. Universally admired.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S VILLAGE-BELLS POLKA. Price 4s. One of the very best published, and will sound in country villages.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

CONTINUED SUCCESS.
COOTE'S PASSION FLOWER VALSE. Price 4s. Illustrated. Now Morning Post. Played by the United English.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

BUCKLEY'S BEAUTIFUL SONG.
COME AND DWELL IN MOONBEAMS LINGER. Price 2s. 6d. The melody is simple and beautiful. HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW BALLAD
SIGHING FOR THEE. By F. BUCKLEY. Price 2s. 6d. Is marvellously pretty.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SUNG BY WARWICK, ALWAYS ENCHEARED.
I WAIT TO HEAR THY SWEET GOOD-NIGHT. Serenade. (Sweet Lady's Song). Price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

AN EXQUISITE MORCEAU.
KUHE'S MOONBEAMS ON MOONBEAMS. Price 2s. 6d. The most favourite piece by the celebrated Composer.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

THE SEASIDE MUSIC BOOK.
A Collection of new Pianoforte and Vocal Music, especially recommended to Tourists and Travellers, so containing in a small compass and at a low price sufficient music for an evening's amusement. In 1 vol., in paper cover, price 2s. 6d., handsomely illustrated, post-free, 2s. 8d.

CONTENTS.
Look out upon the sea—Duet ... ... The Talisman—Bouton.
St. Leonard's Rocks—Stirling ... Tourists' Polka.
Ocean Bird—Duet ... ... Les Hirondelles—Dumas.
Rataplan Quadrille ... ... Sea Breezes—Rimbault.
HOPKEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE AMATEUR'S LIBRARY OF PIANOFORTE MUSIC. Vol. I.—Each Volume contains from 40 to 60 pages of music, ordinarily sold at more than 3s.
1. Challenger's Art of Singing applied to the Piano. With Illustrations. 3s.
2. Kuhe's Six Favourite Airs with Variations Melodies. 3s. 6d.
3. Strauss's Six Favourite Sets of Waltzes. 3s. 6d.
4. Coote's Chère Lancers. 3s.
5. Kuhe's Three Sweet Home Melodies, and "Last Rose of Summer." 3s. 6d.
HOPKEY and SONS, Holles-street.

STRAUSS'S SIX FAVOURITE WALTZES
(the complete sets with introductions and coda) in a large folio volume, price 3s. 6d., contents: Cool Tibet, Winter Blooth, Floating Spirits, Jubilee Waltz, Colonnes, Wien eines Nacht.—HOPKEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MME. OURY'S SIX MOST FAVOURITE
PIECES in a large book, music size, price 2s. 6d.; contents: Grand Valse, Les Bluets, Le Retour de Syrie, Chatsy's Minutes Galop, and Les Hirondelles.
HOPKEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—FIVE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING. Price 4s. net. All the Author's songs. Examples in the simplicity of the melody and words. Price 3s. net. HOPKEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—THE TWO NESTS. A beautiful little song for the present season. Very popular. Illustrated by the author. 3s. net.
HOPKEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CLARIBEL.—YOU AND I. Sung with immense success by Mdme. Oury. The most popular song of the year. Price 3s.—HOPKEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL LIBRARY.—Every
SUBSCRIBER to this Library receives a splendid illustrated Volume of Illustrated Music, and has the use of Twelve Pieces of Music in Town and Country. Prospectus, &c., gratuitously.—68, New Guinea have the use of Four Pieces. Full particulars from 28, Holles-street.

HALF PRICE.—All Music sent post-free at half the published price.
FOSTER and KRIEHUBER, Regent-street, W.

NEW CONTRALTO SONGS.
Corn Line ... ... Victoria Gabriel 3s. 0d.
The Morning Mother ... ... Victoria Gabriel 3s. 0d.
The Homestead ... ... Victoria Gabriel and G. A. Macfarren ... ... 3s. 0d.
The Faithful Victory ... ... Owen Hope 3s. 0d.
Pure as Angel's Breath ... ... W. H. Lole 3s. 0d.
Ah! Mignonne ... ... Frederic Clay 3s. 0d.
FOSTER and LEAH, 61, Hanover-street, Regent-street, W.

GREAT SUCCESS.
NEW PART-SONGS, SUNG BY MR. HENRY LESLIE'S CHOIR.
Speed and Love ... ... J. Barnby 2s. 0d.
Annie Lee ... ... J. Barnby 2s. 0d.
Autumn's Treasures ... ... J. G. Callcott 3s. 0d.
Hail, Smiling Morn ... ... Henry Leslie 3s. 0d.
Hunting Song ... ... Henry Leslie 3s. 0d.
Separate Voice Parts to be had for the use of Choral Societies at 2d. per part.
FOSTER and KRIEHUBER, 61, Hanover-street, Regent-street, W.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FEU DE JOIE.
Over 50 first-rate Pianoforte Pieces played by the unrivalled Pianoforte Writer. Price 4s.
FOSTER and LEAH, 61, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S UNE PERLE DE
VARSOVIE. Polonaise. A perfect specimen of the quaint and characteristic Polish Dance. Price 4s.
FOSTER and LEAH, 61, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LOISEAU DE
FARADI. A most original and admirable piece. "Elegant, brilliant, and effective."—Musical World.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ECLIPSE
played by Madame Arabella Goddard, and encored at the Crystal Palace upon all occasions when she plays it. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE JET D'EAU
played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace with enthusiastic success. One of the most effective pieces of the day. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LADY WHISPERS played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A remarkably graceful, pleasing, and effective Valse. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MORNING
AND EVENING PRAYER, or THE HOURS OF WALTZ. A most charming composition, rich in beautiful and luscious melody. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DEUXIÈME
TARENTELLE. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace with enthusiastic success. A most effective piece. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE CŒUR.
Grand Brilliant Waltz. Played by the Composer at the Crystal Palace. A delightful composition, full of charming melody and effects. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MASANIELLO. A dance, founded on the Barcarolle for the Flute, as the best Air in Auber's pleasingest and spirit-stirring Opera. 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

KUHE'S PILGRIM OF LOVE. A most successful and happy arrangement of Halévy's beautiful melody. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

BOYTON SMITH'S NEW SONG, BIRD
OF THE WILDERNESS. Of the numerous settings to these beautiful words this is the most successful and the best. Price 3s. 6d. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby at the Crystal Palace and other concerts with unprecedented success. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop. One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season. Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY.

BEETHOVEN WALTZ.—O'LEARY'S
Beethoven Waltz is an arrangement of the most fascinating of the slow movements of the Sonata, Op. 27, No. 2.
EWER and CO., 67, Regent-street, London.

O'LEARY'S CELEBRATED DANCES.—The most successful dances of the season. Illustrated in Colours, and published in parts. Nos. 1 and 2, each 2s., net.
EWER and CO., 67, Regent-street, London.

STAMP GALOP.—O'Leary's Stamp Galop is the best and most popular Galop of the season. The Galop is adorned with Postage-stamps of all Nations, beautifully printed in Colours. Sent free on receipt of 12 stamps.
EWER and CO., 67, Regent-street, London.

THE DUCAL WALTZ.—O'Leary's Ducal Waltz is dedicated to the Duke of Edinburgh. The title-page is adorned with the Arms and Crests of all the Dukes of Great Britain, splendidly printed in Colours. Price 4s. net.
EWER and CO., 67, Regent-street, London.

NEW MUSIC.

NEW SONG.—"THESE AS BEFORE US."
Composed by HENRY RUSSELL. Price 2s. 6d. (Sent as last printed). This new song of Mr. Russell's has some of the style of his favourite Song "I'm Afloat." The melody and words are very effective.—DUFF and HODGSON, 26, Oxford-street.

NEW VALSE.—THE ANGLO-DANISH
VALSE. By E. L. HIME. Solo or Duet. Price 4s. (Sent at half price.) This Valse contains the favourite airs of the two countries. Sent free for Thirteen, and at Half the Price for Half.
DUFF and HODGSON, 26, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG. BIRD OF THE WILDERNESS. By EDWARD LAND. This charming song is the most successful of the season. Sung in the countries favourite in the Entertainment on the Stage of Madame Lucy and Miss Emily Soldene.
DUFF and HODGSON, 26, Oxford-street.

HARVEST HOME. BY G. D. ALLEN.
MY OWN DEAR NATIVE FIELDS,
Contralto Song. Sung by Miss Dolby at the Crystal Palace. Price 3s. Sent free for Thirteen Stamps.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

HARVEST HOME. DE
JULLIEN'S GRAND QUADRILLE. By CHARLES COOTE. Illustrated. Price 4s. Played by Coote's Band.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

HARVEST HOME QUADRILLE. By
CHARLES COOTE. Illustrated. Price 4s. Played by Coote's Band.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

KUHE'S HARVEST HOME.
Fantasia for the Piano on the Air from the celebrated Cantata. Price 3s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

KUHE'S SLUMBER, MINE OWN,
Transcription for the Piano of the Song by Mdme. Lucy. Price 3s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S "DREAMLAND."
SLUMBER, MINE OWN. Sung by Mdme. Lucy. Sung by her last in C or in E flat. Price 3s. 6d.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MDME. OURY'S "PURITANI."
Fantasia for the Piano, as played by the Composer. Price 3s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

"THE CAPTIVITY."
MARCH OF THE HEBREWS AND
THE PERSIANS, from F. Benedict's new Oratorio. Transcribed for the Pianoforte by W. KUHE. Price 3s. Sent free for Thirteen Stamps.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

FOR THE POPULAR CONTRALTO SONG.
A WILD WINTER NIGHT. Composed by IGNACE GIBBONS. Price 2s. 6d.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MDME. OURY'S
MARCH ... ... Metzler and Co.
THE HERDSMAN ... ... Metzler and Co.
THE PERSIANS, from F. Benedict's new Oratorio. Transcribed for the Pianoforte by W. KUHE ... ... Metzler and Co.
THE CAPTIVITY ... ... Metzler and Co.
Price 3s. each. Sent free for Thirteen Stamps.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

BOOSEY'S MINIATURE PIANOFORTE.
Price 17 guineas, in walnut or mahogany.—We have had the honour to submit the Description of Boosey's Miniature Piano to Boosey and Sons, which combines quality and sharpness in a remarkable degree, and is unquestionably the best Piano for its size. It retains much of the quality of tone of the Grand Pianoforte, and is most eloquent music with the voice of a full-grown man. It has a rich, brilliant, and sweet quality of tone. It has the same touch as the Grand Pianoforte, and the whole mechanism of the instrument seems to be perfect. It is a Piano that will stand in any climate. Testimonials have been presented to Messrs. Boosey and Sons, by Jullien, Wallace, &c. Feb. 28, 1863. This Piano is well adapted for the cabin of a ship, or for summer visiting.—Boosey and Sons, 24, Holles-street, Oxford-street.

EVANS'S ENGLISH HARMONIUMS.
International Exhibition Prize Medal. These Instruments are manufactured in the most portable manner, and adapted to take 9 guineas. BOOSEY and CHING, 24, Holles-street, London.

CASE'S ENGLISH CONCERTINAS.
These New-Model Instruments, combining in a portable shell unrivalled separation, possess a rapid speech, a good quality of tone, and a perfect equality of power in every part of the compass.
BOOSEY and CHING, Manufacturers, 24, Holles-street.

CRAMER'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY
Was opened on Monday, June 15, with a Selection of Pianofortes by the most eminent Makers, from the Exhibition of 1862. Pianofortes by Broadwood and Sons, Collard and Collard, Erard, Kirkman and Son, Chappell and Co., and many others. Many Instruments are selected from the factories, all that are deficient in the slightest degree having been rejected. Every Piano has been carefully tuned for the Gallery, and will be found to be occasionally exposed from a selection made with competent practical skill.
Cash purchasers will receive the usual discount.
Hire, Exchange, and Purchase.
Cramer and Co. deliver Pianofortes by railway station in the kingdom without risk to the purchaser, and as a very trifling cost, and will be happy to receive Orders for the Country. 201, Regent-street, W., and 207, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S ENGLISH PIANETTE,
Price 50 guineas. Cramer and Co. manufacture this capital small Pianoforte, which has been considered the best of its class for steadiness, solid touch, agreeable tone. The case is of polished oak or pollard oak. In proportion to the dimensions the frame of the piano is strengthened much more rapidly than an an old instrument, hence the Pianette will stand in any climate, and is therefore peculiarly adapted for India.
Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this instrument is made only by Cramer and Co., and that the name of the maker, action, and that Cramer and Co. are the only manufacturers of it in the World. 201, Regent-street, W.

CRAMER'S VICARAGE PIANETTE, in Dark Walnut or Rosewood Cases, 35 guineas.
207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANETTE, in solid Mahogany, for resisting the effects of extreme heat, perfect music. The packing-cases form a dressing-table for an officer's wife. Price 50 guineas. 207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S SEMI-GRAND PIANOFORTE, the most compact and novel yet introduced. The keyboard stands in front of the frame, which is supported by two massive and elegant metal-legs. Admirably adapted for small salons. In rosewood or walnut, 60 guineas. Cramer and Co. have lately strengthened to resist the effects of a warm climate, 80 guineas.
207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S NEW SEMI-GRAND, with
Trichord Treble, Check Action, Iron Bars by Broadwood and Sons, and Collard and Collard, is the most valuable Semi-Grand Pianoforte yet produced, combining the most elegant appearance and singular purity of tone. 105 guineas in rosewood; 110 guineas in walnut.—207 and 209, Regent-street.

THALBERG'S GRAND PIANOFORTES.
The three magnificent instruments manufactured by Messrs. P. Erard, and purchased by Thalberg, are the finest pianofortes ever made. Cramer and Co. have the honour to announce that they have been appointed to be the sole agents for the sale of these instruments, and have just received the first consignment. The case is of walnut and rosewood, and the price 250 guineas.—207 and 209, Regent-street.

ERARD'S GRAND PIANOFORTES.—Only the very best and choicest instruments are to be had at CRAMER'S. Erard's Grand Pianofortes, 250 guineas.—207 and 209, Regent-street.

BOUDIR GRANDS, at 75 and 80 Guineas—supplies improvements extremely desirable, and possessing a very remarkable purity of tone. Cramer and Co., 207, Regent-street, and Monmouth-st., Windsor.—CRAMER and CO.'s Pianoforte Gallery has the largest Stock of Pianofortes.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES.—A great number of Instruments by Broadwood, Collard, and Erard, Kirkman and Son, and other first-rate makers.
201, Regent-street, and 207, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S NEW CONCERTINAS—PRIZE
MEDAL. Prices, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 16, and 21 guineas.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S CORNETS, manufactured by
F. BESSON, the receiver of twenty-three medals. Cramer and Co. have the honour to announce that they have been appointed sole agents for the sale of these celebrated instruments, and have just received a fresh consignment, selected with great care by themselves and give private lessons. 201, Regent-street.

INAUGURATION OF THE EXHIBITION BUILDINGS AT SOUTH KENSINGTON: THE ROYAL PARTY IN THE HORTICULTURAL GARDENS.

GEO. PAGE & SON.—SEE PAGE 681.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE ROYAL VISIT TO THE CITY.

A CONDENSED account of the State visit of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales to the Guildhall was given in our last Number; we return, however, to the subject, selecting from the daily journals, chiefly from the Times, further details supplementary of the information in the copious event contained in this week's Impression.

THE GUILDHALL.—THE DECORATIONS.

To secure most ample accommodation, both for receiving the visitors, for dancing, and for supper, a temporary reception-hall, large enough to cover all Guildhall yard, and two stories in height, was built. Two passages along this hall, one on each side, were apart for the general visitors; the centre avenue, inclosed by ropes of purple and white, was reserved for the Royal visitors alone. The decorations of this room were of a light cream or stone colour, relieved with gold. The ceiling was a very light blue, dotted over with golden stars, while the groining of the arches which sprang from the groups of columns was just sufficiently relieved in colour to mark their outline fully, and give an appearance of lightness to what was a frame-work of the strongest and most solid kind. Handsome stars of gas suspended from the ceiling gave a brilliant light, and the perfection of the decorations of the hall, which were relieved and heightened to the utmost by the dark rich groining of the ceiling, crimson and blue carpet. The side paths were draped with crimson and white, and the side bays forming the supper-rooms alternately filled in with mirrors draped with crimson velvet and superb tapestry pictures.

From this noble reception-hall the visitors passed under the richly-carved panel arched roof, which led to the hall itself, and which had been relieved in gold and colours by Mr. Cruse (to whom the decoration of the Guildhall had been confided) with such admirable good taste that, while the main features of the architecture were brought prominently forward, the best effect in the decorations themselves were kept so subdued as to appear the natural accompaniment of the quaint old carvings of the timber roof they were contrasted with the walls themselves. They harmonized, in fact, not less with the architecture than with the age of the building.

The hall itself was, of course, the great centre where the splendour of the scene was made to culminate, and where the whole effect was to present an aspect worthy of the greatness of the City and the fete. It is very difficult, indeed, to describe the scene in the great banqueting hall. This hall, unsightly panelled roof was no more to be seen. Its ribbed and rough-hewn carved cornice above the columns a line series of cedar-looking cari.ibs or principals, with their quarterfoils filled in with blue and gold giving richness to the whole, and wreaths of fruit and flowers in which the chandeliers were concealed, though not quite so artistically as could have been wished. Above the dais was a raised dais, covered with a rich carpet, stood the throne for the Prince and Princess. It was of crimson velvet, with the Prince of Wales's "feath ers" bearing the arms of the Prince and Princess, shown on a noble tapestry, reproduced from one made for Henry VIII. Above was a rich canopy of crimson velvet, fully 20 feet wide and 30 feet long, and executed in the finest spun glass, like drooping silver. Beneath the canopy two large vases were placed on the dais, richly decorated in rock crystals, angular in appearance, hard and uncanny—in fact, strictly Gothic, even to the ornamental glass stars with legs and arms. The windows just above this were filled with rich tapestry adornments, while behind the throne, on each side, were hung the arms of the Prince of Wales, sovereign, English or Continental, whom the City have entertained. At the west end was the orchestra, where the royal minstrels and the Guildhall band, figures in brilliant armour standing in the niches, and the colossal statues of Gog and Magog glaring grimly down on the scene. Above the walls, hung the banners of the companies, and half-way up the gilded columns were brought the emblazoned shields of the companies. The rich hue of gold and colours here was most appropriately broken by the gilded gallery over the south entrance, which was filled with soft banks of fern and ferns. The minstrels' gallery at the west end were lit from behind, and shone with a quiet rich light that was exceedingly effective, and which was set off by a number of large minute gas-jets round the arched cornices of the windows, twinkling like little diamonds. At the west end and south end the hall was illuminated, and the rest left in darkness that the tones of the stained windows might not interfere with the glitter of the lights, and the effect from behind the dais. Such, then was to have recapitulated, were the changes which were made in the hall, such the details of the ornamentation which made up the splendid whole. All that one would need to write in form and colour to convey an adequate impression of what the scene really was, even if it were possible to convey it by description at all.

ARRIVAL OF THE ROYAL GUESTS.

Soon after the first visitors had arrived, Lord Mayor, in his white robes, and accompanied by the Lady Mayoress, entered the hall, when all rose to receive them. They remained, however, only a few minutes, being followed by Miss Coutts, and then by the hall of reception to receive their guests, who were arriving in what might almost be called a continuous crowd, and by the highest officers of State, of the most distinguished members of either House, of almost all the Ministry, ambassadors, and of the diplomatic corps, were called in rapid succession as carriage after carriage set down, and their company passed from the hall to the side of the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, and then passed onward to the ballroom.

At a quarter past nine o'clock the trumpets announced the arrival of the Royal guests. Foremost came the Lord Mayor's coach, the former wearing his uniform of Field Marshal, with the ribbon and star of the Bath. The latter was in a dress of white and blue dress, with the coronet and brooch of diamonds given her by her Royal husband, but with the regent City chain of office added. The coach was turned back from her forehead, in the style with which her portraits have made us all so familiar, and which gives to her young features and fine expressive intellectual forehead to the utmost advantage. She looked, if possible, even younger than on her marriage day. She looked, indeed, like a girl among the white attire. With them came Prince Alfred, in his Lieutenant's uniform, his face bronzed beyond and almost beyond recognition, and with the fair complexion of his brother, or the still more delicate bloom of his young sister-in-law. With the Royal party came the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of Cambridge, Princess Mary of Cambridge, the Prince of Reuss Schleiz, the Prince of Orange, and the Minister of Servia. Following the Royal party came Lord and Lady Mayoress advanced to receive them, and the Princess of Wales, taking the arm of the Lord Mayor, while the Prince took that of the Lady Mayoress, the party, headed by the entertainment committee, entered the hall. The band played the National Anthem as they passed, and beyond this there was no manifestation, and nothing but the prolonged deep reverences from the ladies as they passed to the dais marked the presence of the Prince and his young bride.

THE PRINCE TAKING UP HIS FREEDOM.

On the arrival of the procession at the dais, where the whole Court and all the chief officers were arranged in a semicircle round it, the formal business of the evening commenced—the presentation of the freedom of the City to the Prince. The City officials mustered round a plain office table placed at the foot of the throne. At the head of this the Lord Mayor took the chair, and the official elements of the assemblage at once resolved themselves into a Court of Common Council—the Lord Mayor, as president of the Court of Common Council, wearing his magnificent official robe and gold chain; the Aldermen their bright scarlet robes, and the Councillors their miniature gowns. The common sword and mace of the Corporation (emblems of its power and antiquity) lay piled in front of the Chief Magistrate. The Town Clerk, the Chamberlain, and the Sheriffs of London (the ministerial officers on whom the duty of conducting the ceremony devolved) were each his official robe, that of the Chamberlain in particular being conspicuous for its elegance.

The routine ceremony of taking up the freedom, the same with his Royal Highness as with any other entitled by birth to the privilege, then began. Mr. Woodthorpe, the Town Clerk, reading the resolution passed by the Court of Common Council at their meeting on the 12th of March last, as follows :—

"Resolved unanimously,—That his Royal Highness Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, be very respectfully requested to take upon himself the freedom of this City, by virtue of his birth, and by patrimony; and that upon his meeting the next request his Royal Highness be presented with the copy of the freedom, inclosed in a casket, to be presented to his Royal Highness by a deputation from this Court for his person and character.

His Royal Highness, the Lord Mayor, the Chamber, read the official record of his Royal Highness's title to the freedom.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales then and afterwards subscribed the usual declaration. The Chamberlain then addressed the Prince, and handed to him the record of the freedom, which was inclosed in a casket of pure gold and silver, and was workmanship. His Royal Highness said, in reply to the Chamberlain :—

My Lord Mayor, Aldermen, Chamberlain, and Gentlemen,—It is, I assure you, a source of sincere gratification to me to attend here for the purpose of being invested with the freedom of this ancient City, a privilege which I am the more ready to confer upon me, and which descends to me by inheritance. It is a testimony that I am regarded with favour by the representatives of the commercial world, which holds its charter from such an ancient date. My wife is interested in it, for she has become a member of it since her own have been enrolled among the citizens of London, more especially when connected with that which is the most ancient and honourable of all, the worship of mercy and of help, and through which I am sure that the Princess and myself will be able to do good. I am, gentlemen, the Princess and myself heartily thank you for the kindness which you have shown us on this occasion, and I beg, gentlemen, for the manifestations of this evening towards ourselves, and for all your prayers for our future happiness.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS SIGNING THE FREEDOM RECORD.

The casket in which the freedom of the City was presented to the Prince of Wales is of an oblong shape, measuring about 7½ in. long, 5in. wide, and 4in. high. It was designed by Mr. Digby Wyatt, of Lodge-hill, and manufactured by him in pure gold, enriched with enamel, and studded in the centre with pearls. The lid is composed of a ground of blue enamel, in the centre of which are raised shields containing the Prince's feathers, bearing in each case the colours the arms of England and Denmark. These are supported on one side by the arms of the City, and on the other by those of the Principality of Wales. The reverse side is occupied by the initials of the Prince and Princess in blue enamel, on a ground of blue and gold, and bears the following inscription :—"Rose, Mayor. Presented by the Corporation of London to their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales the Prince of Wales, on Monday, June 8, 1863." At each corner are two pillars of blue enamel, with capitals and bases of pearls placed in the same order. On each pillar is placed an enamelled mask representing a water deity crowned with bulrushes. The top of the casket, which is of a convex form, is occupied by a richly-enamelled with pierced-work and wreaths of flowers chased in gold of various colours. Surmounting the whole is a figure of Britannia, crowned with pearls, and armed with her trident, supported by the lion and unicorn. At each corner of the top is a forget-me-not in blue enamel. The sides are also richly ornamented with pearls; and the whole is mounted on a highly-polished ebony pedestal. The design and workmanship reflect great credit on the establishment which produced it.

The record which was presented in the casket is a work of art of its kind, not less than the casket containing it, the wording of the document having been executed in the most perfect style. The City arms at one end and the seal of the Chamber of London at the other, while the Prince of Wales's feathers, the Lord Mayor, and that of the Chamberlain were also worked into the fabric.

THE BALL.

Their Royal Highnesses returned to the hall at half-past ten o'clock to open the ball with a quadrille. In the first set the Lord Mayor danced with the Princess, the Prince taking the hand of the Lady Mayoress. The Duke of Cambridge danced with Princess Mary, and Prince Alfred and Princess Mary of Cambridge danced in the same set.

The novelty of the evening was unquestionably with unflagging spirit, her Royal Highness occasionally joining, and the Prince still more frequently. The Prince of Wales danced with Princess Mary, Prince Alfred as a partner in a quadrille, Prince Alfred dancing with the Lady Mayoress and Princess Mary with the Lord Mayor. At times the Duke of Cambridge, Lord Palmerston, Lord Derby, the Duke of Manchester, Lord Granville, Lord Grosvenor, Lord Bury, and other distinguished guests were to be seen dancing, which in addition to the open space in front of the dais, kept with difficulty from the eager crowd of gazers, filled the ballroom to overflowing.

The following is a list of the dances, which were regulated by Mr. Frampton and assistants :—

1. Quadrille, "Semiramide"	Rossini.
2. Valse, "Estella"	Verdi.
3. Lancers, "The English"	Jullien.
4. Galop, "Jean Sbogar"	Strauss.
5. Quadrille, "The Damask"	D. Godfrey.
6. Valse, "Leonora"	Gung'l.
7. Quadrille, "Masaniello"	Auber.
8. Valse, "Les Roses du Destino" ...	L. Jullien.
9. Lancers, "Orange Blossoms" ...	H. Lumley.
10. Galop, "Faropa"	L. Jullien.
11. Lancers, "Faropa"	Coote.
12. Galop, "Faropa"	Hargitt.
13. Quadrille, "L'Etoile du Nord ...	Meyerbeer.
14. Valse, "La Forza del Destino" ...	Donizetti.
15. Lancers, "Les Huguenots" ...	Jullien.
16. Valse, "La Forza del Destino" ...	L. Jullien.
17. Quadrille, "Les Huns"	Gounod.
18. Galop, "Chant d'Opera"	Strauss.
19. Lancers, "Les Huguenots" ...	D'Albert.
20. Galop, "The Derby"	Bellak.

Conductors—M. Jullien.'

THE ROYAL SUPPER-ROOM.

Shortly before twelve o'clock the Reception Committee, and the noble Duke who filled the office for the Prince, as well as the Council Chamber, the Lord Mayor conducting the Princess, and the Prince the Lady Mayoress.

The Council Chamber on this occasion presented a grand and Royal appearance. The ordinary dark panelling of the walls was completely gilded and decorated by Mr. Cruse, and from the four columns on which the dome rests depended large gilt baskets filled with flowers. The table filled the whole length of the hall, and was covered by a portrait of her Majesty in her coronation robes. The east end of the chamber was filled by a magnificent buffet, extending from between the tall, rich, green banks of heaths and ferns and palms to make that most delightful out of the open windows of the adjacent garden in the tropics, in the centre of which a scented fountain cast forth its cooling spray. The buffet, which was approached from long with two of the richest and finest of the series of Giulio Romano's tapestries. The north end of the chamber was devoted to a display of the gold and silver plate of the Corporation, which is unrivalled, and which has yet seen, and from the floor almost to the ceiling this side of the chamber was filled with a glittering mass of the most exquisite gold and silver tiers, in one great pile, over which the statue of George III. seemed to look with open hands. Flanking this were silver vases as large as baths, quaint beakers, and flagons formed like dragons, with finely-painted lids like spires; salts as big and massive as modern footstools, made at a time when they were really used as mark distinction as to rank, when the Court sat above the hall, and the Livery below this ancient emblem of hospitality and welcome. The City companies all poured forth their wealth of cups and salvers to place them at the service of the Lord Mayor on this occasion; and the silver plate was most literally by tons, but scarcely any but gold was allowed a place on this magnificent buffet. Almost the only exception made to this rule, as regarded the City plate, was in favour of the Pepys cup—a cup which, from its chasing, was ten times more costly than if it had been made of the purest gold. Between the tiers of plate were placed wax candles in silver lights, some of ten and twenty branches, and all of the same costly metal and workmanship, while just between the masses of goldwork Messrs. Garrard, who had the entire arrangement of the buffet, had skilfully broken the glittering line by the introduction of some noble works in silver of their own.

Beneath this grand trophy of centuries of well-preserved wealth the table for the Royal party was spread in horseshoe form, and this, too, like the buffet, was almost covered with the finest specimens of art in gold and silver which the City possesses, while over the seat of honour hung the great silver chandelier belonging to the Fishmongers' Company. At the almost equal table the Lord and Lady Mayoress presided, the Princess of Wales being on the right of the Lord Mayor and the Prince on the left of the Lady Mayoress. On the left of the Prince of Wales sat the Duchess of Cambridge and Prince Alfred; on the right of the Princess the Prince of Wales, distinguished guests of the Duke of Cambridge. The other visitors who had the honour of supping with the Royal party, about forty in number, were members of the Government, and the most distinguished persons of the Royal household.

The general company supped in a lofty and commodious apartment over the reception-saloon, and of precisely the same dimensions, designed to accommodate about two hundred people at supper at one time; and immediately contiguous to it were three smaller rooms, adapted for the occasion by decoration by the Court of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, and capable of accommodating about three hundred more. These several apartments were prettily lighted by the stained-glass windows, and presented a refreshing look as the tables were draped with a material of pink and white, cool and agreeable to the eye. Among the guests at the supper-tables were several members in the Court of the Exchequer, and some of the general company, unable to find room elsewhere, took refuge in a temporary box in the open space in front of the Town Clerk's office. The whole company was about two thousand in number.

THE FARM.

ALTHOUGH the rain has exercised a most beneficial effect on all vegetation, it scarcely can be said soon enough to have given grass a uniformly good appearance. Here and there, late old cows, they are terribly patchy, and, as a consequence, there will be the latter harvest, of which, in some districts, there is hardly ever a failure, to contain the many places looks sickly, and "the sere and yellow leaf" betokens that the sun is not yet powerful enough to make the grass grow luxuriant in the early months of spring. The grasses were so thoroughly dried up that even the greater part of genial rains could make their meadows, and, as yet, the scythe lies quite idle in the North and midland counties. Wool continues slightly on the advance, and prices have nearly realized the quotations of last week. In a week or two will undoubted some weeks since. Mutton continues low by comparison with beef, which, in the best quarters, realizes 5s. per stone. Should that long-popular potentate, the beef-steak, is in jeopardy from the cheap supply. Happily, nothing is now reported in the Yorkshire districts of the great growers of the north. The ground had got so thoroughly dry that the heavy rains have done it much good, but the crops will was never better.

"The Shorthorn Parliament" is fairly convened for Wednesday next at Balcraham, and the attendance of members from all three kingdoms round the ropes and stakes is certain to be very large. Everything is looking very well for the meeting. Of the Bates the Patterson, Jubilee First Prize, Lord Chancellor, and Prince Gwynne, the three young bulls which have been purchased since the Oxford meeting, have been dropped since the publication of the catalogue, which, by-the-by, states that Bapchild Wonder was bred in October, 1860, instead of 1861. The Essex Agricultural Society held their meeting next day at Witham.

We hear from Weatherby that Duchess 70th, the 310-guinea calf in arms at Tosworth and dam of Duchess 77th, has dropped a rich roan bull calf to Mr. Barber's Second Grand Duke, and seven calves, all of them heifers, and Captain Gunter has sold nothing from her. Her produce by Oxford salves are by Duke of Clarence, who is let to Mr. Barber, of Sproatly Rise. The white twin, Duchess 79th, has just dropped a white bull calf to Mr. Barber; and Fancy Boy, by Sixth Duke of Oxford, from Flirt, who was purchased for 100 guineas at the sale of Mr. Grey, of Dilston, by Duke of Wharfdale, a son of Grand Duke of Weatherby from calf sister to Grand Duke of Weatherby, and Duchess 77th by very strong in yearlings), whom he has been well dipped into, for Mr. Eastwood's, at Thorney Holme. Rosette has had a fine bull calf, and Emma a red bull calf by Duke of Clarence, also calves from Blush and Bashful, and Princess Maud, while Bluebell's last and Bonniewee a red bull calf by Duke of Clarence; both reared safely last), are due in the autumn. Blissful and Bonniesse were slaughtered last week by Mr. Sutton, and Bonniewee is now in calf to Prince ??? Rosette is now seven years old, and has perhaps travelled farther by rail than any cow in the world, for she has been to Ireland, and, despite all this knocking about, she has produced four live calves and one dead one.

The Sir James calves are gradually arriving at Knowlmere Manor. Bride, whose dam Bridesmaid comes up to Smithfield at Christmas, has had a capital bull calf to Sir James. Miss Mills has also come from Blush and Bashful, and Princess Maud, while Blissful's last and Bonniewee a red bull calf by Duke of Clarence; both reared safely last), are due in the autumn. Blissful and Bonniesse were slaughtered last week by Mr. Sutton, and Bonniewee is now in calf to Prince ??? Rosette is now seven years old, and has perhaps travelled farther by rail than any cow in the world, for she has been to Ireland, and, despite all this knocking about, she has produced four live calves and one dead one.

The Sir James calves are gradually arriving at Knowlmere Manor. Bride, whose dam Bridesmaid comes up to Smithfield at Christmas, has had a capital bull calf to Sir James. Miss Mills has also come from Blush and Bashful, and Princess Maud, while Blissful's last and Bonniewee a red bull calf by Duke of Clarence; both reared safely last), are due in the autumn. Blissful and Bonniesse were slaughtered last week by Mr. Sutton, and Bonniewee is now in calf to Prince ??? Rosette is now seven years old, and has perhaps travelled farther by rail than any cow in the world, for she has been to Ireland, and, despite all this knocking about, she has produced four live calves and one dead one.

The Sir James calves are gradually arriving at Knowlmere Manor. Bride, whose dam Bridesmaid comes up to Smithfield at Christmas, has had a capital bull calf to Sir James. Miss Mills has also come from Blush and Bashful, and Princess Maud, while Blissful's last and Bonniewee a red bull calf by Duke of Clarence; both reared safely last), are due in the autumn. Blissful and Bonniesse were slaughtered last week by Mr. Sutton, and Bonniewee is now in calf to Prince ??? Rosette is now seven years old, and has perhaps travelled farther by rail than any cow in the world, for she has been to Ireland, and, despite all this knocking about, she has produced four live calves and one dead one.

The Sir James calves are gradually arriving at Knowlmere Manor. Bride, whose dam Bridesmaid comes up to Smithfield at Christmas, has had a capital bull calf to Sir James. Miss Mills has also come from Blush and Bashful, and Princess Maud, while Blissful's last and Bonniewee a red bull calf by Duke of Clarence; both reared safely last), are due in the autumn. Blissful and Bonniesse were slaughtered last week by Mr. Sutton, and Bonniewee is now in calf to Prince ??? Rosette is now seven years old, and has perhaps travelled farther by rail than any cow in the world, for she has been to Ireland, and, despite all this knocking about, she has produced four live calves and one dead one.

Percy Mitford, Esq., Attaché to her Majesty's Legation at Brussels, has been appointed third secretary in her Majesty's diplomatic service.

A new act has been passed to limit the notice during the recess to six days instead of fourteen for the Speaker to issue his warrant for election of members for counties.

The International Post Congress has terminated its sittings, and the results of the conference have been extensive and satisfactory, and of a most satisfactory character. New facilities will be given by conventions and by the adoption of uniformity in the postage regulations of nearly all the countries of the congress. There will probably be an augmentation granted to the weight of letters to be conveyed by the mails in the post-bags. The heavy charges on transit are likely to be modified. The sittings of the congress were presided over by M. Vandal, the Director-General of the French Post Office, and we hear that the warmest thanks were given to him for the courtesy and ability with which he directed the discussions. A vote of thanks to the American Government for having taken the initiative in this important movement was also passed, and the liberal ideas advocated throughout by Mr. Kasson, the transatlantic delegate, were cordially acknowledged. A graceful allusion was made to the services rendered by Sir Rowland Hill, the great postal reformer, to whom especially the low rate of postage and the enormous increase of correspondence which has taken place in this country and Great Britain are mainly due. Newspapers, books, and all other articles of post-paper are to be exchanged among the various contracting Governments. The subject is exciting much attention in France.—Galignani.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

E. R. PRATT, ESQ.

Edward Roger Pratt, Esq., of Ryston Hall, in the county of Norfolk, who died on the 18th ult., aged seventy-two, was the eldest son of the late Mr. Sergeant Pratt, by Lydia Susanna, eldest daughter of Edward Rogers, Esq., of Mount Sorrel, in the county of Leicester. He was educated partly abroad, and afterwards at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1817, and M.A. in 1820. He succeeded his father in 1838, and was J.P. and Deputy Lieutenant, and served the office of High Sheriff of Norfolk in 1850. He died unmarried, and is succeeded in the family estates by his only surviving brother, the Rev. Jermyn Pratt, Rector of Compton Abbas, in the county of Dorset, who married, May 4, 1847, Mary Louisa, fourth daughter of the Right Hon. Sir Edward Ryan, late Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, and great-grandaughter of John, ninth Duke of Athole. By her he has issue Edward Murray and other issue. This is one of the only six remaining instances in the Peerage and Baronetage of twenty-five mentioned by Sir Henry Spelman "as living for many years" in 1613. Of these six only two

The Pratts have a very ancient pedigree, and are descended from Sir Thomas Pratt, who was knighted by Charles II., and was a contemporary of Sir Christopher Wren and Evelyn, the latter of whom in his diary Pratt is being consulted by that Monarch relative to rebuilding St. Paul's Cathedral. The Pratts, Barons of Cushill in Berkshire, were a younger branch of the family. Alderman Sir Henry Pratt, the first Baronet, purchased, in 1626, the manor and estate of Colenhill, Berks, the birthplace of the poet Waller, who was then living. The late Dowager Lady Rosslyn-Erskine, who married, secondly, Stewart Marjoribanks, Esq., was a sister of the Mr. Pratt just deceased.

CHARLES STANDISH, ESQ.

Charles Standish, Esq., of Standish Hall, in the county of Lancaster, the representative in the female line of the very ancient house of Standish, and the eldest son (by his wife Anastatia, eldest daughter and co-heir of Sir John Lowther, Bart.) of Charles Standish, Esq., of Standish aforesaid, died lately on inheriting the Standish estates in right of his mother, the granddaughter of Ralph Standish, Esq., of Standish, and only surviving child and heir of Standish. Charles Standish was born on the 19th of March, 1790, and was educated at Brasenose College. He was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Lancaster, and at one time represented Wigan in Parliament. He married, by Royal Licence, January, 1821, Frances Mary, eldest daughter of Sir Matthew, and granddaughter of the celebrated Mme. de Genlis, and leaves issue. Mrs. Standish died on the 19th of May, 1867, and was succeeded by her eldest son, Charles Henry Widdrington Lionel Standish, Esq.; now of Standish Hall, who was born in 1821, and married, in 1847, Emily Jane, daughter of the Prime de Ligne. This line of the family, and that of Standish of Duxbury, are the only two which can trace their descent in the male line from Sir Ralph Standish, who married Alice, daughter and co-heir of Sir John Langton, and died in the reign of Henry IV. Sir Alexander Standish, of Standish, fought so well in the battle of Hedgeley Moor, in Northumberland, in the reign of Edward IV., that he received the honour of knighthood. The Standishes were staunch Cavaliers in the great rebellion, and many have been very active in the public affairs of the county of Lancaster, their original county. Longfellow, in his spirited poem, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," has taken his hero from the Standishes of Duxbury.

JAMES GRENON, ESQ.

James Grenon, Esq., of Athenree Castle, in the county of Meath, and Blossomgrove, in the county of Leitrim, a Deputy-Lieutenant and Justice of the Irish family of Grenon, was the son of Patrick Grenon, Esq., by his wife, Mary, daughter of Edmund Doran, Esq., of Newtownbarry, and died on the 1st of February, 1780, and very early in life took an active part in the Liberal politics of his time. He was a determined opponent of the Union, and of Catholic Emancipation, and was a confidential ally of Grattan, O'Connell, and Shiel. Mr. Grenon interested himself much in the social welfare of the county of Louth, where he was much respected. He was a magistrate for that county, and was the High Sheriff of Drogheda in 1838. He married, first, in 1814, Marianne, second daughter of James O'Reilly, Esq., of Higginstown House, in the county of Meath, by whom he had issue four sons and two daughters. James Grenon died on the 7th inst., at his town house, 4, Seaview-terrace, Donnybrook, Dublin. He is succeeded by his eldest son, Patrick Grenon, Esq., of Athenree, who married, first, in 1859, Marianne, daughter of George Gresbwell, Esq., of Inverary Park, Ireland, and, for the use of the life estate, in 1849, Margaret, daughter of Edmund O'Reilly, Esq., of Sylvan Lodge, in the county of Dublin. William Grenon, Esq., another son, is a member of the Irish Board of Charitable Bequests in Ireland, a youngerson of Mr. Grenon, just deceased.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of the late Marquis of Londonderry, K.G., P.C., D.C.L., F.R.S., was proved in her Majesty's Court of Probate by his only surviving son, hereditary Earl of Vane, now Marquis of Londonderry, the sole executor. The personalty was sworn under £350,000. The will bears date June 10, 1862; and a codicil, dated Dec. 31, 1867, and was made by the deceased in the 72nd year of eight-and-three-quarters. Subject to the life interest hereinafter mentioned, his Lordship left the second Earl of Ilchester, whose wife was a daughter of the Marquis, and Earl of Strafford, as Trustees in trust for his son, the present Marquis, second daughter of James O'Reilly, Esq., of Higginstown House, in the county of Meath, who died in 1849, and had issue four sons and two daughters. The Earl of Ilchester died on the 7th inst., at his town house, 4, Seaview-terrace, Donnybrook, Dublin. He is succeeded by his eldest son, Henry Stephen, Lord Ashley, who married, first, in 1859, Marianne, daughter of George Gresbwell, Esq., of Inverary Park, Ireland, and, for the use of the life estate, in 1849, Margaret, daughter of Edmund O'Reilly, Esq., of Sylvan Lodge, in the county of Dublin. William Grenon, Esq., another son, is a member of the Irish Board of Charitable Bequests in Ireland, a younger son of Mr. Grenon, just deceased.

The will of the late Marquis of Londonderry, K.G., P.C., D.C.L., F.R.S., was proved in her Majesty's Court of Probate by his only surviving son, hereditary Earl of Vane, now Marquis of Londonderry, the sole executor. The personalty was sworn under £350,000. The will bears date June 10, 1862; and a codicil, dated Dec. 31, 1867, and was made by the deceased in the 72nd year of eight-and-three-quarters. Subject to the life interest hereinafter mentioned, his Lordship left the second Earl of Ilchester, whose wife was a daughter of the Marquis, and Earl of Strafford, as Trustees in trust for his son, the present Marquis, second daughter of James O'Reilly, Esq., of Higginstown House, in the county of Meath, who died in 1849, and had issue four sons and two daughters. The Earl of Ilchester died on the 7th inst., at his town house, 4, Seaview-terrace, Donnybrook, Dublin. He is succeeded by his eldest son, Henry Stephen, Lord Ashley, who married, first, in 1859, Marianne, daughter of George Gresbwell, Esq., of Inverary Park, Ireland, and, for the use of the life estate, in 1849, Margaret, daughter of Edmund O'Reilly, Esq., of Sylvan Lodge, in the county of Dublin. William Grenon, Esq., another son, is a member of the Irish Board of Charitable Bequests in Ireland, a younger son of Mr. Grenon, just deceased.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

WAR OFFICE.

2nd Life Guards: Lieut. G. A. Curzon to be Captain; Lieut. A. P. A. Lord Sandys to be Lieutenant; C. A. Rogers, A. Cockburn, and G. F. R. Sandell, to be Cornets and Sub-Lieutenants.

1st Royal Dragoons: G. C. Marvin of Standford to be Cornet.

3rd Dragoons: Cornet Hon. H. Alexander to be Lieut.; Lieut. L. W. Atkinson to be Captain; Cornet R. H. Barrow to be Lieutenant.

5th Dragoons: Lieutenant C. H. Peasley and J. C. S. Fremantle to be Lieutenants; E. S. Warren and the Hon. H. G. L. Chetwynd to be Cornets.

6th Dragoons: Lieutenant Hon. Arthur Annesley to be Colonel-Commandant; Capt. A. Agnew to be Major; Lieutenant Gerard Leigh, retired, and Brevet-Major W. Lennox Lindsay and R. Fellowes to be Captains; Lieutenants J. B. Dyer, J. C. G. Price, and A. Casey to be Second Captains.

Military Train: Lieut. E. Warren and Ensign T. G. Lockyer to be Lieutenants; Ensign J. Hamilton to be Lieutenant; Ensign J. Hall to be Lieutenant and Captain.

Lieutenant-Colonels: Bridges and Lieut. R. Hall to be Lieutenant and Captain; the Hon. J. R. W. Vesey to be Ensign and Lieutenant.

Lieutenant-Colonel Hon. Augustus Anson, Hon. H. T. Fraser to be Lieutenant and Captain; Lieut. Lord Ossulston to be Captain.

2nd Foot: Lieut. R. R. Tucker to be Captain; Ensign R. T. Gwyn to be Lieutenant; J. Campbell and L. Bayley to be Ensigns and Lieutenants; Sergeant-Major J. Hall to be Lieut.-Col. and H. Brown to be Lieutenant-Colonel; Brev. Major F. C. Elton to be Major; Lieutenant and Captain Hon. A. Hood to be Captain; Lieut. R. Hall to be Captain; Ensign R. F. Gallwey to be Lieutenant; Ensign J. Hall to be Lieutenant and Captain; Ensign R. R. Glasgow to be Lieutenant; H. R. F. Phillipps to be Ensign. Lieut. R. R. Glasgow to be Lieutenant; Lieut. A. Carey to be Captain; Ensign R. Hamilton to be Lieutenant; Lieut. C. R. Reeve to be Ensign. 8th Ensign F. F. A. Barne to be Lieutenant. 33rd: C. C. Chichester to be Ensign; Lieut. and Brevet-Major Hon. A. Hood to be Captain; Ensign R. Hall to be Lieutenant; Ensign J. Hall to be Lieutenant and Captain. 35th: Lieut. J. A. Morant to be Captain; Ensign J. Miller and C. F. Percy to be Lieutenants. 38th: Lieut. and Brevet-Major Hon. A. Hood to be Captain; Ensign R. Hall to be Lieutenant; Ensign J. Hall to be Lieutenant and Captain. 41st: Lieut. C. Webber to be Captain; T. Hall, Lieut. A. Walker to be seconded on appointment as Lieutenant-Colonel of Militia. 49th: Lieut. and Brevet-Major Hon. A. Hood to be Captain; Ensign R. Hall to be Lieutenant; Ensign J. Hall to be Lieutenant and Captain. 54th: N. B. R. Yorke to be Paymaster. 57th: Lieut. T. R. Harrison to be Captain; Ensign R. Hall to be Lieutenant; Ensign J. Hall to be Lieutenant and Captain. 59th: Lieut. and Brevet-Major Hon. A. Hood to be Captain; Ensign R. Hall to be Lieutenant; Ensign J. Hall to be Lieutenant and Captain. 69th: Ensign G. L. Thompson to be Lieutenant; R. Peck to be Ensign. 76th: A. W. Lyon to be Captain; Ensign R. Hall to be Lieutenant; Ensign J. Hall to be Lieutenant and Captain; Ensign G. J. Dyke to be Lieutenant.

79th: Lieut. and Brevet-Major Hon. A. Hood to be Capt.; T. Scott to be Lieutenant; R. Dutchman to be Ensign.

DEPOT BATTALIONS.—Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. G. N. Nolmes to be Major; Capt. C. Bell to be Lieutenant-Colonel.

CHAPLAINS' DEPARTMENT.—Staff-Surg. Alfred J. Haywood to have the honorary rank of Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals; Surg. Alexander Gordon, M.D., to be Surgeon-Major.

The Royal Engineers: Lieut. Hon. A. Hood to be Captain; Ensign R. Hall to be Lieutenant; Lieut.-Col. F. P. Robertson to be Colonel; Paymaster S. Severn and Quartermaster-Sergeant J. Hall to be Lieutenant and Quartermaster; Sergeant-Major J. Hall to be Lieutenant-in-the-Line and Quartermaster; Lieut. and Brevet-Major Hon. A. Hood to be Lieutenant-Colonel.

Lieutenant-General; Major-Gen. Sir W. F. Williams, Bart., K.C.B., to be Major-General.

The annual banquet of the Nulli Secundus Club (Coldstream Guards) took place at the London Tavern on Saturday evening.

The Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, Prince and Elfin, have each received a thorough overwhole and embellishment at Portsmouth, in readiness for the service of her Majesty and the Royal Family during the ensuing summer season.

The new iron-cased frigate Royal Oak, 32, Captain F. A. Campbell, was launched from the dockyard at Pembroke on Saturday, the launch being satisfactory in every respect. She realised an average speed of 13 knots on the measured mile during her trials.

Mr. G. Tyrell, of Yarmouth, who is at present erecting extensive new premises on the quay, has taken of Wigg Laurence, for £19,000, to erect Burnt Castle Fort, in Hampshire, with enormous batteries for lighthouses.

Last Saturday there was a grand field-day of all the troops in garrison at Chatham, by Major-General H. Eyre, commanding the forces. A variety of evolutions and manœuvres were performed, and the movements were seen with advantage by the numerous spectators.

The half-yearly inspection of the first division of Royal Marine Light Infantry, by Major-General Sir R. J. Dacres, K.C.B., Commandant, took place on Monday week, at Walmer barracks. After the inspection, the Commandant complimented the officers and men of the division upon its efficiency and appearance, and expressed himself highly pleased with all he had seen.

The Queen has given orders for the appointment of Rear-Admiral the Hon. Edward Alfred John Harris, her Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of Japan, to be a Knight Grand Cross, C.B., conferred with the special mission of the Earl of Elgin to China in the years 1857, 1858, and 1859, to be a Companion of the Bath.

The whole of the troops belonging to Chatham garrison were on Monday morning reviewed on Chatham Lines by Major-General Eyre, who was minutely inspected by Major-General Sir Richard Dacres, K.C.B., in presence of Field-Marshal Sir W. Gomm, G.C.B., Colonel of the Royal Engineers. Some of the prizes to the gunnery cadets at the Royal Military Academy by the Royal Highland Artillery Club were also presented.

The 4th Dragoon Guards, renowned as one of the regiments which took a conspicuous part in the Peninsular war, and which in 1815 was inspected on Wednesday week, on the Fifteen Acres, Phœnix Park, by Major-General Sir Hope Grant, commanding the troops in the Dublin district, by Major Chaplin took command of the regiment, and General Keys, after dismissing the regiment, addressed Colonel Stein and the officers on the efficiency and discipline of the men.

A general Horse Guards' order has been promulgated announcing that commanding officers of regiments are to report annually every monthly muster-parade of officers and men under his command, should the commanding officer of the regiment be absent from any cause, and that if the absence exceeds three months, or reliance elsewhere, such circumstance is to be noticed against his name in the half-yearly return, and the fact is to be reported with explanations to the Secretary of State for War.

Lieutenant his Royal Highness Prince Alfred joined her Majesty's screw-corvette Racoon, 20 guns, Captain Count Gleichen, at Portsmouth, on Saturday, and the vessel proceeded to the Royal Highness's station, a visit to Vice-Admiral Sir Michael Seymour, G.C.B., Port-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, and subsequently to Spithead, and dropped out to the Royal Naval College. The Prince afterwards returned to town on the usual leave. A portion of the Racoon's crew, under the charge of Lieutenant Hall, manned the yards of the Victoria and Albert and Elfin, and the Prince's barge, steered by Lieutenant Hall, manned by the Racoon's crew, left Portsmouth Dockyard Steps at 10.30 a.m. for the Victoria and Albert, and returned to the Steps at 11.30 a.m.

The annual banquet of the Nulli Secundus Club (Coldstream Guards) took place at the London Tavern on Saturday evening.

The Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, Fairy, and Elfin, have each received a thorough overwhole and embellishment at Portsmouth, in readiness for the service of her Majesty and the Royal Family during the ensuing summer season.

The new iron-cased frigate Royal Oak, 32, Captain F. A. Campbell, was launched from the dockyard at Pembroke on Saturday, the launch being satisfactory in every respect. She realised an average speed of 13 knots on the measured mile during her trials.

Mr. G. Tyrell, of Yarmouth, who is at present erecting extensive new premises on the quay, has taken of Wigg Laurence, for £19,000, to erect Burnt Castle Fort, in Hampshire, with enormous batteries for lighthouses.

Last Saturday there was a grand field-day of all the troops in garrison at Chatham, by Major-General H. Eyre, commanding the forces. A variety of evolutions and manœuvres were performed, and the movements were seen with advantage by the numerous spectators.

The half-yearly inspection of the first division of Royal Marine Light Infantry, by Major-General Sir R. J. Dacres, K.C.B., Commandant, took place on Monday week, at Walmer barracks. After the inspection, the Commandant complimented the officers and men of the division upon its efficiency and appearance, and expressed himself highly pleased with all he had seen.

The Queen has given orders for the appointment of Rear-Admiral the Hon. Edward Alfred John Harris, her Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of Japan, to be a Knight Grand Cross, C.B., conferred with the special mission of the Earl of Elgin to China in the years 1857, 1858, and 1859, to be a Companion of the Bath.

The whole of the troops belonging to Chatham garrison were on Monday morning reviewed on Chatham Lines by Major-General Eyre, who was minutely inspected by Major-General Sir Richard Dacres, K.C.B., in presence of Field-Marshal Sir W. Gomm, G.C.B., Colonel of the Royal Engineers. Some of the prizes to the gunnery cadets at the Royal Military Academy by the Royal Highland Artillery Club were also presented.

The 4th Dragoon Guards, renowned as one of the regiments which took a conspicuous part in the Peninsular war, and which in 1815 was inspected on Wednesday week, on the Fifteen Acres, Phœnix Park, by Major-General Sir Hope Grant, commanding the troops in the Dublin district, by Major Chaplin took command of the regiment, and General Keys, after dismissing the regiment, addressed Colonel Stein and the officers on the efficiency and discipline of the men.

A general Horse Guards' order has been promulgated announcing that commanding officers of regiments are to report annually every monthly muster-parade of officers and men under his command, should the commanding officer of the regiment be absent from any cause, and that if the absence exceeds three months, or reliance elsewhere, such circumstance is to be noticed against his name in the half-yearly return, and the fact is to be reported with explanations to the Secretary of State for War.

Lieutenant his Royal Highness Prince Alfred joined her Majesty's screw-corvette Racoon, 20 guns, Captain Count Gleichn, at Portsmouth, on Saturday, and the vessel proceeded to the Royal Highness's station, a visit to Vice-Admiral Sir Michael Seymour, G.C.B., Port-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, and subsequently to Spithead, and dropped out to the Royal Naval College. The Prince afterwards returned to town on the usual leave. A portion of the Racoon's crew, under the charge of Lieutenant Hall, manned the yards of the Victoria and Albert and Elfin, and the Prince's barge, steered by Lieutenant Hall, manned by the Racoon's crew, left Portsmouth Dockyard Steps at 10.30 a.m. for the Victoria and Albert, and returned to the Steps at 11.30 a.m.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

It is announced that as the rifles issued by the National Rifle Association to volunteer corps cannot be obtained from the manufacturer in the stock there will be no objection to lengthening the stock if required, provided it is done neatly, and that it be kept in the original condition if desired.

The Annual Metropolitan Rifle contest at Wormwood Scrubbs, which commenced on Thursday week, was concluded last Saturday. The competitions were for the various prizes presented for annual good shooting was made. In the first competition of the Metropolitan Stakes, value £25, the Lieut.-Colonel's prize, presented by Lieut.-Colonel Loyd, M.P., value £25, was won by Sergeant Gibbs, Bristol Rifles, 46 marks; the second, £15, by Sergeant Hall, Victoria, 45 marks; third, £10, by Sergeant Ellis, 1st Surrey, 44 marks; fourth, £5, by Sergeant Quen's (Westminster), 44. The following were the other chief prizes:—Second Competition—First prize £15, Ensign Barnes, Victoria Rifles, first prize, £10, by Private Symons, South Middlesex, 70. Sixth Competition—Five shots at 500 yards, long Bisley range—First prize, £15, Private Hawkins, 29th (North Middlesex), 18. Seventh Competition—Five shots at 200 yards, all comers, any rifle; first prize, £10, Ensign Banting; 8th, George's, 19. Ninth Competition—First prize, £10, Captain Cooper, 16th Middlesex, 19 marks. Tenth Competition—First prize, £10, Ensign Banting, St. George's, 19 marks. Eleventh Competition (Sweepstakes)—First prize to Private Sandford, St. George's, 19 marks. The first series of extra prizes were competed for at the same range—First prize, Sergeant Andrews, 21st Middlesex, 16 marks; second, Lieutenant Cooper, 16th Middlesex, 15 marks; third, Private Hawkins, 29th Middlesex, 14 marks; fourth, Private Lee, 29th Middlesex, 13 marks; fifth, Sergeant Anderson, Queen's (Westminster), 12 marks; sixth, Sergeant Andrews, St. George's, 10 marks; seventh, Private Symons, South Middlesex, 9 marks; eighth, Private Fellowes, Victoria, 8 marks; ninth, Lieutenant Mortimer, West Middlesex, 15 marks.

The third annual prize meeting of the Sussex Volunteer Association was held at the Littlehampton Fort Government ranges on the 9th, 10th, and 11th inst. The shooting arrangements were excellently carried out under the direction of Major Pipon. Captain and Adjutant Taylor acted as umpire, and Sergeant-Major Dibbin as secretary. The competitors for the prizes on the first two days were enrolled volunteers and the disembodied militia of the county. All the prizes were shot for with three-quarter Enfield rifles of Government pattern (1853), Government ammunition, Hythe position, Wimbledon scoring. The following is a list of the prizes won:—Open to all corps ranges, five shots at each distance—Private Street, 9th Sussex (Arundel) Rifles, 49; Sergeant Lacey, 11th Sussex, 47; Private Bourne (late 4th), 47, 38 marks; Bugler Lacey, 11th Sussex, 43, 35 marks. It will be seen from the foregoing that the highest possible score was 50 marks, and that in shooting off the tie Street made a "centre," and May missed. 400 and 500 yards, open to all corps—Sergeant-Major Wagner, 1st Sussex, 39; Bugler Lacey, 34 marks; Private Scott, 1st Sussex (Brighton) Rifles, 49, 39 marks; Private Street, 9th Sussex (Arundel) Rifles, 45, 39 marks; Private Bourne, late 4th, 39, 39 marks; Corporal Gates, Ensign Padwick, 7th Sussex (Horsham) Rifles, "Consolation" prize, 39 marks. Volunteer officers, five shots at each distance—Lieutenant Warren, 9th Sussex (Arundel) Rifles, 46, 39 marks; Corporal Sharpe, 9th Sussex (Arundel) Rifles, 42 marks. Open to all corps, 200 yards, five shots at each distance—Private (Petworth) Rifles, a cup, value £15, presented by the inhabitants of Littlehampton, Bugler Lacey, 11th Sussex, 49 marks; Private Street, 9th Sussex Rifles, £5, 23 marks. 300 and 500 yards, seven shots at each distance open to all comers—Corporal Hemsley, 11th Sussex (Brighton) Rifles, 41 marks; Corporal Livesey, 1st Sussex (Brighton) Rifles, £10, 40 marks; for the third prize, £5, Private Street, 9th Sussex Rifles, and Sergeant Lacey, 11th Sussex, made 30 marks, and, instead of shooting off, agreed to divide. The competition for the Littlehampton Fort Challenge Cup (presented by Major Pipon) for all-comers made more than a point per shot, the winner of the cup four bulls' eyes and two inners out of seven.

On Wednesday week two batteries belonging to the 1st Kent Administrative Brigade of Artillery, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Glindish, proceeded to the fortifications which command the entrance to the River Medway, for the purpose of practising the field of their annual allowance of ammunition from the garrison guns mounted on the Government range. The batteries were armed with 9-pounder and 12-pounder guns, and 25 rounds of common shell. On the batteries being manned, a few rounds of shot and shell were fired from the heavier guns, the 68-pounders and 32-pounders at a target moored at sea-ward, at a range of 1800 yards. After the heavy guns had ceased firing the field guns were put into action with common shell. Some estimate may be formed of the efficiency of the fire from the fact that the distance from the ordnance was 1800 yards, and the target was on several occasions during the firing, both with shot and shell, shivered to pieces. The practice was witnessed by Major-General Shadwell, while the opinion was freely expressed by competent judges that the practice was equal to that of the best regular artillery.

A review of the first brigade of Kent Volunteer Artillery, comprising the 1st Cinque Ports Rifles, Deal, and Dover, Lieutenant-Colonel Glindish, Acc., will take place during the present summer on Woolwich common.

Last Saturday the 1st Manchester Regiment (6th Lancashire Rifle Volunteers) assembled at the Drill-hall for their annual inspection. The regiment was under the command of the Colonel (Lord Grey de Wilton), and Major Hall, of the Royal Engineers (the Adjutant), was present. Lieutenant-Colonel Bruce was the inspecting officer. The regiment performed the different movements in a very creditable manner.

On Monday afternoon, at Shaftesbury, Colonel Manuel, who was in command of fifteen companies of the Dorset Rifles, got placed himself too near the line of fire during volley-firing, one of the cartridges struck him in the face, and injured it so seriously that it is feared it will become permanently blind.

THE BALLAST-HEAVERS OF LONDON AND THE PRINCE CONSORT.

The ballast-heavers of the port of London have sent a "birthday address" to the Queen, which is worthy of being read by all who are deeply loved by their Sovereign. They say:—"Before he came to our aid we could only get work through a body of overlookers or taskmasters, who made a profit out of every hour they would give us a job, made us drink while we were at it, and kept us waiting for our wages at public-houses, where we had to spend a part of what we got. I can only half our wages home to our families, and that half too often snatched from us by the publican. Prince Albert put an end to all this, and we appealed to the Prince Consort. He got a clause inserted in the Merchant Shipping Act which put these abuses under control." The Commissioners of the Trinity House, passed rules for their employment, got their wages paid in money, and not in tickets to be cash in the public-house, established a benefit fund, and so, indeed, heaped up the improvement while he lived on earth, and now that he is dead, his memory is still the leaven of our every-day life. We have a society in connection with the Corporation of him in the room that he and the brethren gave us: we should like to see his face in marble or bronze in the hall of the Trinity House; we hope to be secured us; we should like to have a framed engraving of him in our waiting and reading-room; we should like to see his name on the books deeply inscribed and served so well, would give us the gift in remembrance of our benefactor." The address is signed by the ballast-heavers, and should read "Our husbands, fathers, and men, what he was. We hope your Majesty will excuse our boldness in addressing you, but we feel that we owe all to the late Prince, and therefore, praying you to grant our humble request, we are your Majesty's most obedient and humble servants."

The following reply has been returned to their letter :—

"Windsor Castle, June 12.

"My dear Sir,—I have had the honour to lay before the Queen the address from the ballast-heavers of the port of London, which you have forwarded to me requesting permission to place a marble bust (kept secret by this spontaneous testimony to the active benevolence of her beloved husband) and amongst all the tokens of sympathy in her grief, which she has gratefully received from every quarter, none have given her more pleasure to the Queen, and no one more in harmony with her feelings, than the simple and touching address which you have forwarded to her hard-working and benevolent to request that you will assure the ballast-heavers that the interest in their welfare so tactfully displayed by him whose life was employed in endeavouring to benefit the people of this country is fully shared by her Majesty, and that her Majesty rejoices to hear of the happy change in their moral and social condition. She trusts that the greatest prosperity may attend the new society mentioned in the address, and has ordered two prints of the Prince Consort, one in uniform and one in ordinary dress, to be framed and presented, to be hung in the room in which the meetings are held. She has also much pleasure in adding that a bust of the Queen would wish, in the remembrance of these proofs of the affection and gratitude of her people, to be placed in some public building.

C. B. PHIPPS.

"Fredk. J. Purnivall, Esq."

The Queen has approved of Mr. B. B. Rebelar as Consul-General in Great Britain and Ireland for the Duke of Nassau.

The list of Queen's Birthday honours has numerous veins of sulphur have just been discovered in the County of Limerick.

A notice has been issued by the Postmaster-General stating that, on the 1st of July next, the intermediate rate between British and Foreign postages upon all letters addressed to Egypt, forwarded via Marseilles, whether by British or Foreign packets, will be reduced by British packets, will be reduced by British packets, not exceeding 1oz. in weight, to 1s. for a letter above 1oz. and under 2oz., and 1s. for each additional 2oz. or fraction of 2oz. The rate to Alexandria will remain unchanged, viz., 6d. per half-ounce. The rate of 8d. per 1oz.; but no unpaid letters can be forwarded to any other port of Egypt.

We continue to receive alarming accounts of the ravages committed by locusts in the Crimea. They have in many parts of the Ottoman Railway and compelled the engine-drivers to proceed with great precaution. The locusts are so numerous that the engine wheels roll on them, excessively greasy and slippery, so that the wheels will scarcely bite. The company have ordered sand to be strewed on the rails in front of the wheels to give the wheels a hold. Several trains from Bykrew have been considerably delayed from the above cause, and the company are losing by the locusts.

The new Income Tax Act has been issued. From the 5th of April next the income tax will be at the rate of 3d. in the £ on £100, and 3d. on £100 and upwards. An abatement is, however, to be made on incomes less than £200 a year. "Any person who shall be assessed or charged in any of the duties of income granted by this Act, or who shall have paid the same either by deduction or otherwise, and who shall claim and prove in the manner prescribed by the said Acts, that his total income from every source, although amounting to £150 or upwards, is less than £200 for the year for assessment of his profits or gains, shall be entitled to be relieved from so much of the said duties granted by this Act as he shall have paid for the said profits or gains, and shall be entitled upon £60 of his income would amount unto, and such relief shall be given in the manner prescribed by the said Acts for the assessment of the said duties, or by the repayment to him of so much of the excess as shall have been paid, or by both of these means, as the case may require."

INAUGURATION OF THE EXHIBITION MEMORIAL OF 1851: THE PROCESSION ASSEMBLING IN THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION BUILDING.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

INAUGURATION OF THE EXHIBITION MEMORIAL OF 1851: THE ROYAL PARTY VIEWING THE MEMORIAL FROM THE PLATFORM.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

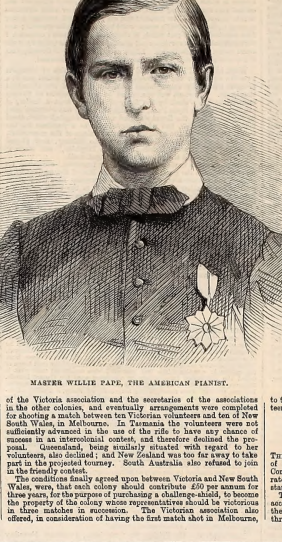
MASTER WILLIE PAPE, THE AMERICAN PIANIST.

WILLIE BARNEMORE PAPE was born at Mobile, Alabama, on the 27th of February, 1850. His talent for music was noticed when only four years old. In 1854 his father commenced giving him instruction, and such was his progress that he played at an exhibition of the new organ of St. John's Cathedral, in Mobile, one of Bach's voluntaries, before an audience of over 2000 persons. In 1858 he was admitted a member of the Alabama Philharmonic Society, and up to January, 1861, he had the honour to be a soloist at every concert given by that society.

At this time his father was advised to place him under some distinguished master in Europe, and for this purpose he left Mobile in January, 1858, and was about taking passage for England when the intelligence arrived of the secession of Alabama from the Union. This determined his father to remain for a time in New York, until the result of this dissolute sentiment should be known. In the meantime the boy was placed under the tuition of Sebastian Bach Mills, a graduate of Leipsic, with whom he went through a course of classical study.

Master Pape appeared publicly in New York for the first time in May, 1861, in a course of concerts at the Stuyvesant Institute, with Mdme. Anna Bishop, and astonished the public by his extraordinary execution and wonderful memory.

In July he made his first appearance at the Academy of Music, New York, playing pieces by Beethoven, Thalberg, and Liszt. In February, 1862, he accepted an engagement in Havannah, where he secured the patronage of the Captain-General, Count Serrano. After spending a few weeks in Havannah he returned to the United States, and was invited by the Philharmonic Society of Brooklyn to be their soloist at their concert of the 8th of May, at which he met with the most marked success, both from the audience and the press. After a short engagement in New York with Mdlle. Patti and other distinguished artists, he took a tour through Canada, making the acquaintance of the Governor-General, Lord Monck, and other noblemen and gentlemen, who took a kindly interest in the young pianist and gave him introductory letters to many influential personages in England. Master Pape made his first public appearance in England at Mdme. Puzzi's matinée at the Hanover-square Rooms on April 27, where he made a most successful début, and was highly spoken of by all the leading journals. He has since played again at the Hanover-square Rooms and at St. James's Hall with great applause, and he has altogether, during the short time he has been in England, achieved a most legitimate and marked success.



MASTER WILLIE PAPE, THE AMERICAN PIANIST.

THE NEW SOUTH WALES RIFLE CHAMPIONS.

(From a Correspondent.)

I SEND you portraits of the New South Wales volunteers who recently engaged in an intercolonial rifle contest with ten volunteers of Victoria. The idea of an inter-colonial rifle match originated with the Victoria Rifle Association, and immediately afterwards the South Australian volunteers suggested that representatives of the other colonies should come to Adelaide and shoot the first match there. Melbourne, however, claimed precedence in the matter, and maintained that, as the idea had originated there, the first match should be shot there. Communications passed between the secretary of the Victoria association and the secretaries of the associations in the other colonies, and eventually arrangements were completed for shooting a match between ten Victorian volunteers and ten of New South Wales, in Melbourne. In Tasmania the volunteers were not sufficiently advanced in the use of the rifle to have any chance of success in an intercolonial contest, and therefore declined the proposal. Queensland, being similarly situated with regard to her volunteers, also declined; and New Zealand was too far away to take part in the projected tourney. South Australia also refused to join in the friendly contest.

The conditions finally agreed upon between Victoria and New South Wales, were, that each colony should contribute £50 per annum for three years, for the purpose of purchasing a challenge-shield, to become the property of the colony whose representatives should be victorious in three matches in succession. The Victorian association also offered, in consideration of having the first match shot in Melbourne, a further sum of £50 to the successful competitors on the first year. The match was to be shot by bonâ fide volunteers, with any rifles, with a pull of trigger of three pounds, each competitor to have ten shots at each of the respective distances of 200, 300, 500, 600, 700, 800, and 900 yards, making seventy shots each in all, Bythe position and Wimbledon system of scoring.

Ten of the best shots in New South Wales were chosen by the association, and as many were chosen by the Victorian association from their shooting in four special practices, and the two parties met at the Melbourne butts on the 3rd of November last, when, after a keenly contested match, especially up to 700 yards, the New South Welshmen were declared the victors, with 64 points to spare. The superiority of the New South Wales party was principally apparent at the long ranges. The scores of both parties were as follow :—

NEW SOUTH WALES.		VICTORIA.
Corporal Lynch	.. 182	Private M'Naughton..	175
Trooper Sharp	.. 177	Sergeant Wright	.. 154
Private Rayner	.. 168	Sergeant English	.. 154
Sergeant Webb	.. 152	Sergeant Sleeth	.. 152
Private Wyndham	.. 150	Private Cole	.. 151
Lieutenant Campbell	144	Captain Radcliffe	.. 141
Sergeant Strong	140	Sergeant Templeton ..	140
Sergeant-Major Hellyer	134	Private Peterson	.. 132
Private Dickson	.. 125	Private M'Ewan	.. 124
Captain Windeyer	.. 120	Private Frost	.. 109
	1497		1432

Majority for New South Wales, 64.

On the evening of the day on which the match was shot the victors were entertained by the Victorian association at a sumptuous banquet, and thus brought this interesting event to an appropriate termination. On the following day the Sydney Volunteers embarked on board the steamer City of Sydney, and when about half way home were cast away on a barren part of the coast, the vessel being run upon the rocks. All lives were saved, but the uniforms, private effects, and valuable small-bore rifles were nearly all lost.

The portraits of the New South Wales party were photographed by Mr. Davis, of Bourke-street, Melbourne. Six of the ten New South Wales competitors were from the Sydney battalion of Volunteer Rifles, one (Sergeant Webb) from the suburban battalion, one (Private Wyndham) from the county corps (West Maitland), and the remaining two (Sergeant-Major Hellyer and Trooper Sharp) from the Mounted Rifles. Captain Harbottle, R.S.V.R., accompanied the ten as Captain, and Sergeant-Major Lee, of the Staff, as marker.

The second Intercolonial Rifle Match is arranged to take place in Sydney in September next, and already the volunteers are looking forward to it with a great deal of interest.

THE MEMORIAL OF THE EXHIBITION OF 1851.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE INAUGURAL CEREMONY.

THE commemorative memorial, erected not less as a perpetual record of the Great Exhibition of 1851 than as a tribute to the Prince Consort, to whose untiring exertions its success was due, was inaugurated at South Kensington, on Wednesday week, with every circumstance of stately pomp and Royal ceremony.

The company began to assemble shortly after twelve o'clock, ample accommodation having been provided for visitors, both in the gardens of the Horticultural Society and in the Exhibition Building, which was thrown open for the occasion. It was arranged that the Prince and

THE NEW SOUTH WALES RIFLE CHAMPIONS.

Princess of Wales and other members of the Royal family should make the tour of the gardens, and their course was marked out by lines of chairs, the front rows of which were very eagerly seized by the company. In the Exhibition Building a space was set apart under the west dome for all invited guests who were to take part in the procession. Seats were placed in the nave and along the line which the procession was to take, and these were occupied by ladies, whose dresses formed a rich groundwork of colour, contrasting most agreeably with the untenanted portions of the building and the fields and trees that stretched from the Exhibition. Soon after two o'clock the guests began to assemble under the western dome. Prominent among them was the party of New Zealand chiefs, whose tattooed features and picturesque garb and decoration formed in a striking manner the state of the decorative arts in the Britain of the south. The various Ministers as they arrived were welcomed, and Lord Palmerston was warmly cheered. The foreign Ministers assembled in force, the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, and members of the City corporation, which in 1851 formed local committees, attended in their robes and chains of office, and the Lords and Commons in great numbers were also represented. There were also present the general committee of the memorial, and representatives of the council and officers of the Society of Arts, and the various learned bodies of which the Prince Consort was a member. The commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851 and 1862 were represented by the Duke of Buckingham, the Duke of Buccleuch, Mr. Cowper, Mr. Disraeli, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Earl Granville, Mr. Lowe, M.P., Sir Henry Lyall, Lord Overstone, Viscount Palmerston, Lord Taunton, and others. The household of the Prince of Wales was also fully represented.

By the time all these had arrived a flourish of trumpets announced the approach of the Prince and Princess of Wales. The Royal visitors were conducted to chairs of State, and immediately upon their arrival the members of the executive committee of the memorial committee and of the council of the Horticultural Society were presented to his Royal Highness. The Prince took an early opportunity after the public appearance of the New Zealanders, and, through their interpreter, conversed with them for a short time. Her Royal Highness wore a light grey mantle and dress, with blue and white lace, with designs worked in black lace, and a light bonnet. The Prince wore the scarlet uniform of a field officer, and Prince Alfred the blue uniform and epaulettes of a naval officer. The procession was quickly formed in the following order:—

Trumpeters.
Mr. George Eyles, the Superintendent of the Horticultural Gardens.
The Sculptor, Mr. Joseph Durham.
The Councillors of the Immediate.
Mayors, Provosts, and Chief Magistrates of those Cities and Towns which in 1851 formed Local Committees.
Provost of Perth, the Lord Mayor of York,
Lord Provost of Glasgow, Lord Mayor of Dublin, and Lord Provost of Edinburgh.
The Sheriffs of London and Middlesex.
Lord Mayor of London.
Colonel the Honourable C. Grey.
Presidents of Societies of which H.R.H. the Prince Consort was a Member.
Members of Works and Buildings Committee.
Her Majesty's Commissioners for the Exhibitions of 1851 and 1862.
His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.
Corps Diplomatique.
Viscount Palmerston, Chairman of the Members of her Majesty's Government and Honorary Members of the Council of Royal Horticultural Society.
Executive Committee of the Memorial Committee.
Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales.
His Royal Highness Prince Alfred.
Her Royal Highness Princess Helena.
Her Royal Highness Princess Louise.
His Royal Highness Prince Arthur.
His Royal Highness Prince Leopold.
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge.
His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge.
Her Royal Highness the Princess Mary of Cambridge.

The procession moved down the nave to the gallery chairs, and so on to a balcony erected over the south entrance to the building from the Horticultural Gardens, the Royal party occupying a place in the front, from which the procession could be seen as it left the hall of the gardens, and immediately in front of the memorial to be uncovered.

When all were seated the Duke of Buccleuch, at the head of the Council of the Horticultural Society, stepped forward and presented an address, which was taken as read. It contained congratulations to his Royal Highness on his marriage, an expression of profound grief at the loss which the nation had sustained in the death of the Prince Consort, and assurances of gratitude for the interest which her Majesty and the whole family of the Royal house had always taken in that institution. It also expressed the satisfaction of the society at their gardens having been selected for the site of the memorial, and their opinion of its suitability for the purpose. It concluded with a statement of the leading features of the conduct of the society, and briefly thanked the council for their address, and stated that a reply would be forwarded.

The executive committee of the memorial committee then read the following address:—

May it please your Royal Highness.—In the year 1853 a meeting, convened by the Lord Mayor of London, Thomas Challis, Esq., M.P., and presided over by him, took its place in Mansion House, to consider the propriety of erecting some memorial of the Great Exhibition of 1851, in connection with a tribute of admiration to the greatly lamented Prince whose loss we are now more lamented father. The propriety of the step was at once recognised; and it was resolved unanimously that a statue should be erected in the metropolis that the exhibition "was an event of the greatest importance to the nations of the world, tending 'to observe the use and to promote the increase of science, art, and national characteristics upon production, by furnishing the means of a valuable review of the past, and by inducing a spirit of generous rivalry for future progress of productive industry and giving it an increased stimulus." The meeting resolved that "the Royal Statue should represent that the tendency has been to promote useful intercourse between all peoples, and Indians in their Native Costume, especially because such a memorial, unanimously subscribed for the erection of a memorial, and active steps were taken to obtain the sum of one hundred thousand pounds for the purpose of erecting Hyde Park. Artists of all countries were invited to submit drawings and models for the statue, and 160 sets out of 200 sent in were duly sent in by Mr. Joseph Durham, whose sculptor's work is now before you.

The endeavours to procure a site in the park having failed, we, the Executive Committee of the Memorial Committee, have thought that no site could be more suited, sought the aid of the Prince Consort. This was at once freely accorded, on the cordial recommendation of Sir Richard Mayne, who considered that the memorial should be in no way personal, but one to which he could himself contribute. We, the Executive Committee, have thought that the site before which we now stand, on land belonging to the Royal Commissioners for the Great Exhibition of 1851, especially because the commissioners have shown concurring in the great; and from that time to the very last his Royal Highness continued to give considerable and valuable attention to the valuable valuable in completing and carrying out the project. Guided by his cultivated judgment, aided by an accurate taste, and by a memory which enlarged and improved by its present form; and the last public act of the Prince Consort was the approval of the site and of the general design of the Queen, then intended to surmount the memorial.

A letter from the Prince Consort's Highness, after the sad event that had plunged the nation into grief, conveying the will of the Queen that, instead of her Majesty's statue, that the late beloved husband should be represented as "Being on your Royal Highness's own part to present the station proposed to be given to the memorial," in first conception of the Royal Highness, and in every one of his original designs for the memorial, the Royal Highness to offer a public and lasting tribute in connection with the great Exhibition of 1851 to his memory. "Prince" to whose influence and encouragement "that" to whose influence and encouragement "that" to first conception was due, and to whose unwearied care, judgment and watchfulness the execution the world is indebted for its unprecedented success.

We take the liberty of expressing our great gratification with the admirable manner in which Mr. Durham has executed the commission confided to him. He has produced a work of art that we believe to be honourable to the sculptor and to the country; and we trust this feeling will be generally shared in, especially by those who have personally known and admired the Prince. Exhibition, and those names he has consequently recorded on enduring granite.

In recording this brief account of our proceedings, we tender most grateful thanks to the Queen for the interest her Majesty has been pleased to show in the progress of this work, and the all-important assistance those rendered us in our self-imposed labour. And we pray humbly and devoutly that Almighty God may long preserve her Majesty's life—a life most precious to her loyal and loving people.

It only remains for us to acknowledge most respectfully the anxious readiness and zeal, the tact, accompanied by the courtesy, which the Princess whom all the kingdom welcomes with open heart, and by your Royal Highness whom all others have greeted, has taken part in the progress of this work. And in the name of the subscribers our earnest thanks, and we solicit that your Royal Highness will now be pleased to consent to accept the sovereignty of the memorial.

The Prince, in reply to the address, said:—

I have listened with an interest which I am sure will be shared by all present to the details which you have given in connection with the memorial to my lamented and revered father, and which we are accustomed this day to inaugurate. As a son I cannot but be deeply affected by that part of your address in which you have referred to the beloved parent whose aid and counsel were ever required when such was to be done, or when difficulties were to be overcome. I can confident that our proceedings in commemorating so proud a year in England cannot but have met with his approval; and I am certain that I am only giving expression to the feelings of my mother in have undertaken, by a conviction and grateful sense that the sympathy of the nation makes possible for me. I have now to perform the pleasing duty this memorial (of which the artist may well be proud) be uncovered.

When his Royal Highness had concluded, a flourish of trumpets gave the signal for the uncovering of the memorial, which was in a moment admirably accomplished amid the cheers of the assembled thousands. Shortly after the uncovering, the guns announced by three minutes to five o'clock by the firing of a salute from a battery of artillery placed in Hyde Park, which was answered by a similar salute from the hoisting of the Royal standard upon the flagstaff which stood behind the memorial, and which served also as a purchase for the scaffolding which had covered the statue during the ceremony. The bands of the Foot Guards, under the balcony, now played Meyerbeer's Coronation March, and "God Save the Queen," which the most incident occurred to mar the success of what was unquestionably the most splendid of the many ceremonials of the year, namely, a sorrowful ceremonial.

We stand giving, in an early Number, our Engraving of the Memorial Statue.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

THE FORMER CONNECTION OF NORTH AFRICA WITH SOUTH EUROPE is the subject of a paper by Professor R. Rossi, of Vienna, a translation of which appears in the Natural History Review. In it, which he brings forward geological evidence in favour of this connection from Lucerne, who was studying the mammalian remains found in the caves of Gibraltar, and Wagner and other travellers, proving the general identity of the land fauna of the regions on both sides. The late Edward Forbes considered that what he called the Lusitanian fauna might be connected with the Canary Islands; Barrow, also, and Professor Lowe, with Madeira and the Azores; Webb and Berthelot, in their rich antilogue fauna of Pikermi and Baltavar has a decided African character. The distribution of the Mammalia, which is considered climatic and not geographical, is also a remarkable fact. Thus the Lusitanian fauna of Spain and Portugal is identical with the Sicilian and Algerian, and the Sardinian is connected with the great extent of land which the sirocco produces on their glaciers, have taught that the Alps were covered with enormous masses of ice, masses no former times by its absence. In this way they have arrived at the same result as that obtained by Forbes from the consideration of the geographical distribution—namely, that the Saharan Desert, the source of the sirocco, was once covered with water. The fact that the Sahara is now a desert is a more severe climate may certainly have been produced by such a cause; but the large basins in which the Chotts and Oases are situated are very likely to have been at the time when the Senegambian multitude of to-day were living with Vercyn, a species of elephant, and hippopotami, which have now vanished, and the white archipelago had, without doubt, notwithstanding the present aridity of the surrounding country.

MAGNESIUM.—On Friday, the 12th inst., Professor Faraday exhibited to the members of the Royal Institution a piece of metallic metal, which he had received from Mr. Tegetmeier, and which was the largest that had been seen publicly. It was about 3 inches long, 2 broad, and proportionately thick. It was, however, not a cast, but a piece of metal which had been produced by the process, which it is supposed, will be applicable on a manufacturing scale, and which is known as that of Bunsen and Matthiessen. It is based on a mixed solution of the chlorides of magnesium and of sodium is evaporated to dryness and then fused in a crucible. The fused mass of the two chlorides is electrolysed (new magnesium; and, 2, That magnesium does not sensibly act upon iron. It is, however, attacked by the salts of copper, and by mercury. Hence it follows that iron vessels may be used in which to effect the reaction of sodium upon the "mixed" salts, and that moulds of iron may be used for metallic magnesium, which was first obtained from the earth magnesia in 1807, by Sir Humphry Davy. It is a white metal, resembling silver in its colour, silver-like metal, permanent in the air, but inflammable at high temperatures, and when once ignited it burns with intense light. It is a good conductor of heat, as the electric light. Like lead, a thin film is formed on its surface by the action of the air, which protects it from further oxidation. Its specific gravity is less than twice that of water.

MARINE CURRENTS.—In the report of the Astronomer Royal, Mr. G. B. Airy, F.R.S., to the board of visitors of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, he has given an account of the method of observation and the work performed. Referring to the splendid aurora seen on the 19th of September last, he mentions that the sense of the direction of the movement in the two earth-current wires, from which had been obtained, by easy reductions, the horizontal force and the vertical force, was reversed in sense of direction, from which curves were constructed. When these latter were compared with the photographic curves of magnetic declination and horizontal force, it was seen that the movement of the earth-current was synchronous. The action of the earth-current upon the magnetic needle is very great. The force of electricity is less than twice that of water.

MARINE CURRENTS.—In the report of the Astronomer Royal, Mr. G. B. Airy, F.R.S., to the board of visitors of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, he has given an account of the method of observation and the work performed. Referring to the splendid aurora seen on the 19th of September last, he mentions that the sense of the direction of the movement in the two earth-current wires, from which had been obtained, by easy reductions, the horizontal force and the vertical force, was reversed in sense of direction, from which curves were constructed. When these latter were compared with the photographic curves of magnetic declination and horizontal force, it was seen that the movement of the earth-current was synchronous. The action of the earth-current upon the magnetic needle is very great. The force of electricity is less than twice that of water.

THE HUMAN JAW AND FLINT IMPLEMENTS recently found in the Somme valley, have been described by Mr. Prestwich, F.R.S., and a recent meeting of the Geological Society, followed by a long discussion. He referred to the circumstances under which the jaw had been discovered, and the consequent doubts, which had only been removed by the actual study of the bone. From the position of the flint implements, he was led to accept consideration of the district, corroborated by the presence of extinct mammals generally of great antiquity, and by the character of the valley itself. In the middle geological could not be maintained; and that, from the occurrence of flint implements in the drift, the existence of man must be carried back to a remote period. He then referred to the question of the origin of the valley and gave a review of the different theories which had been put forward on the subject, and set to a wave of translation or other modification of marine action. He then described the valley of the Somme, whatever may be the cause of its formation, and the evidence afforded by the age of the deposits as to his perfectly well determined as being of the early quaternary or pleistocene period. He then described the geological and anterior to the excavation of the valley of the Somme; and as some flint implements had been found in the lowest bed of the valley, and in undisturbed deposits, the question of the antiquity of man will not be affected, whatever the conclusions may be as to the origin of the valley.

ECLIPSE OF JUNE 1.—During its progress the eminent astronomer M. Secchi observed several small stars of the ninth and tenth magnitude, which were not mentioned in the maps in the usual catalogues. They appeared like so many small meteors moving towards the lunar mountains. This phenomenon occurs only in annular eclipses of the sun.

JUPITER'S SATELLITES.—In the new number of the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society, Mr. C. Mason states his reasons for considering that the fifth satellite of Jupiter is not visible to observers with the naked eye by watching more attentively for a few minutes. Three times successively he found it invisible, but again on each occasion picked up the little star, and always found it in the same position (west of the planet). On turning his refractor upon Jupiter, he found that the west of the satellite were on its western side.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

PROFESSOR ANSTED'S concluding lecture, delivered on the 11th inst., was devoted to the consideration of the Alps as an object of geological investigation; when, by adducing a variety of interesting facts and calculations, he pointed out the necessity of a careful study of the Alps again on the south side, for geological problems; the time required for the original accumulation of strata, as he now places it, is not less than that required for the Alps, the Rhine, the Mississippi, Ganges, and Nile; the time needed for accumulation of the immense masses of organic remains, not only of the short-lived lower animals but also of animals which require many years to attain their maturity; and also of vegetation; the time occupied in burying and solidifying these accumulations and converting them into rocks—clay, limestone, sandstone, &c.; the time required for their metamorphosis, crystallisation, mineralisation, &c.; lastly, the time occupied in their successive depression and elevation. In his concluding remarks Professor Ansted adverted to the facts brought forward in his previous lectures, testifying to the value of the results of modern geological researches, aided by the study of the allied sciences. As we all admit that there can be no limit to creative power, so we should equally admit that there can be no limit to preceding power. The march of events in the history of our earth is not yet completed, but is still in a state of progress. Although the first steps are at present hidden from our view, still there must have been a beginning, a first manifestation of power. The present task is complete to give up much of the romance of geology, we shall scarcely be greatly disappointed if we find that the history of society acquired knowledge is not without its romance.

PROFESSOR TYNDALL, on Friday evening, the 12th inst., gave an account of his latest researches on radiation, which he defined as an explorer of the condition of the ultimate particles of matter, and in the course of his experiments he had found one substance indisputably respirable. The Professor employed as the source of heat a platinum spiral, raised to a white heat, and transmitted the rays through a glass tube filled with water. A brass tube was employed (having portions adapted to receive the various substances to be tested), the heat, subsequently, being brought to act in succession on a piece of rock salt, and attached to an air-pump, by which it might be exhausted of gaseous. Further experiments were made with the combustibles of gas and vapours. The experiments, the subject of the discourse, had been made in order to compare the absorption of the rays of heat by different thicknesses of gas. In order to effect this, Mr. Becker constructed a fine piston apparatus, by which the gas could be forced into a tube of inch or defined gas could be easily measured, and by which the absorption of half an inch of the gas was shown to be considerable, as a mirror attached to it threw the delicate galvanometer. On the wall were exhibited the tabulated results obtained by experiments, from which it appeared that the different thicknesses of carbonic oxide, carbonic acid, nitrous oxide, and olefiant gas, in long tubes, divided against the heat of the lamp, as follows:—The absorption of the rays of heat of olefiant gas was 0·99; of the 16th of an inch, 0·72; of 1 inch, 29·74; of 2 inches, 43·75; of 4 inches, 67·50; of 8 inches, 90·00. The dynamic relations of the above-mentioned gases were also shown in a table. In conclusion, Professor Tyndall described his apparatus for the transmission of heat through liquids, in which he employed the ordinary rays of a luminous source. The rate of transmission to bisulphide of carbon was found to be that of iodine in the bisulphide to be as 1 to 7·1, that of iodine in the bisulphide to be as 1 to 7·3, that of the transmission in chloroform was 7·3; in alcohol, 39; and in brine only 264 per cent. The Professor then described the method of the transmission in the gases, the state adhere to also in the liquid and most probably in the solid bodies. Mr. Arthur Barlow, F.R.S., was elected a member of the Royal Institution.

PROFESSOR WM. THOMSON gave his last lecture, "On the Electric Telegraph," on Saturday last, the 13th inst. He began by referring to various several practical telegraphs, especially those of Morse, Bayne, Wheatstone, Bain, and others, and explained the principles of each. He described the submarine telegraph cable—its, insulation, capacity, and absorption, which depend on the dimensions and character of the conductor. He also explained the resistance of the conductor depending also on its mass per foot and its specific conductivity. The Professor, to explain these principles, used the instruments for which are the electrometer, galvanometer, condenser (Leyden jar), and resistance coils. The electrometer was described and explained, and explained, it was stated that when a joint in a cable is to be tested, it is inserted in one of the arms of a Wheatstone's balance, the other coating of a Leyden jar, and with an electrometer. The conductor of the cable is connected with the electrometer, which the other coating of the Leyden jar with the coating of the jar. If the insulation of the joint is not quite perfect, the jar loses its charge, which is shown by the electrometer needle. The use of the galvanometer was shown and explained. The common test for electric capacity was stated to be the number of miles of a standard conductor which would produce the same retardation, being charged to a battery of well-ascertained intensity, is quickly connected with the cable, and discharged through the other of a galvanometer. The principles of the construction of good conductors is effected by Wheatstone's balance, Varley's differential test, and Thomson's differential test. It was stated by the lecturer in his lecture that in air lines between Edinburgh or Liverpool and London the insulation may be 1,000 millions of times greater than that of a wire of the size of a constant current entering at one end passes out to earth by the other. In the case of submarine cables, the insulation is unfortunately so low that only of a constant current entering at Valencia would flow out to earth through the Newfoundland cable. The speed of working signal current is stated to be 1 per cent. In the latter part of the lecture Professor Thomson explained the principles of the mirror galvanometer, which is due to Sir Snelly, Mr. Latimer Clark and others, and especially described Mr. Varley's mode of ascertaining the position of a fault in submarine cables. He stated that the extraordinary slowness of signalling through submarine lines depends on their greater capacity for charge; and that this is doubled on a core surrounded the insulated conductor, of conducting matter in connection with the earth; and that the speed obtained on the Atlantic cable is probably due to the use of electricity of high tension and to proportion as long as the same proportion of the two materials and of the conductor is adopted in a cable of any length. Since the first working of the cable, it was composed, as well as its workmanship; and expressed a strong hope of the successful laying of the Atlantic telegraph, in reason of the great knowledge and the rigid vigilant testing of every part of the cable to be employed.

THE DISTRESS IN THE NORTH.

At the meeting of the Central Relief Committee at Manchester, on Monday, Mr. Cobden presided, and was supported by Mr. Bright, M.P. Mr. Cobden said Mr. Villiers's Public Works Bill had received the general approval of the executive committee, and the representatives of the Lancashire and Cheshire suggestions, however, had been made to the president of the Poor-law Board, as to suspension which it was proposed to adopt, for the more general operation of the bill in the outlying districts, and he anticipated that the right hon. gentleman would not refuse to accede to the wishes of those officers in this respect. Sir James referred to the mistaken impression which he found existed in the metropolis that the Lancashire districts had already contributed their distress; and to the equally mistaken notion of many people that the Lancashire people were rich. In the conversation which followed the remarks of the hon. Baronet much stress was laid upon the necessity of the Public Works Bill being passed into law. Mr. Hugh Mason, the Sir James Kay-Shuttleworth, was mentioned that the cotton trade was now in a most depressed condition, and that the only expenditure, a loans to boards of guardians was urged as an indispensable necessity; but it was thought that the Public Works Bill would obviate the necessity of boards of guardians, who are to hold a meeting on the subject on Friday, Mr. Farnall, M.P., in the chair, when a deputation will wait upon Mr. Villiers, the object of presenting requiring parochial relief in the distressed unions. A meeting of the Lancashire Members was held on Tuesday, at which Mr. Villiers attended in the chair. The hon. secretary (Mr. J. N. Maclean) stated that the receipts of the Mansion House Fund amounted to £4,000, and that £2,000 more had further been promised. The total receipts of the fund were £6,000 odd. In addition, the committee gave the Blackburn emigration committee, £17; to the Preston Relief Fund, £100; and to the Bolton Relief Fund, £50.

The rules of the "Cotton Districts Emigration Society" have been finished, and branch committees have been established in Manchester and adjoining places. The society intends to aid emigrants to the British colonies and the United States, and has received the first fruits of it in the weekly subscriptions of a penny each share. After a certain amount of money is raised the initial subscriptions will be returned to the donors.

At the fortnightly meeting of the Manchester Relief Committee, on Tuesday, it was announced that there were 30 to 320 statute acres left unsold of the Heaton Park estate, and that it was intended to proceed to dispose of the extent of £17. The committee has been denied to select 20 to 25 single women for each vacancy in the Sisters of Mercy establishment, to their convent. The executive committee has selected 60 statute adults for Quebec, and 40 for Australia, and has been authorised to proceed to Canada Manitoba, and to whom £4 per head had already been granted from local sources.

A statement has been forwarded to us for publication by the Polish Fund Committee, which has been communicated to them by the Polish Committee in Paris. It is to the effect that the Executive Committee, which has been appointed by the National Government with the duty of corresponding with the executive committees of the various branches of the Polish cause, and with sole authority from the National Government to receive all funds that may be subscribed. In virtue of the decree of the National Government appointing them, all other committees of Poles abroad are to cease operations, and all funds to be so delivered up to the Executive Committee in Paris. The special authority from the Paris committee under the national seal. The committee is composed of Prince Ladislas Czartoryski, Messrs. Slevin Gulczewski, Lelewel, Zamoyski, Count Plater, Count Ladislas Zamoyski, Count Orlogon, ancient delegate of the National Government; A. Gurtzy, deputy of Gallicia, and Count Wodzicki, Count Ladislas Zamoyski, Count Plater, who will act with the concurrence of M. L. Wolowski, member of the French Council-General of the Seine, and M. Leon Faucher, M.P., Count Wodzicki, President of the Ancient Polish Relief Committee—all whose signatures are attached to the statement, which is dated May 28.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

Travels on Horseback in Mantcha Tartary. By George Fleming. (Hurst and Blackett.) This is a great book both in size and in interest. It is the first fruits, in point of travel, of the Treaty of Tien-Tsin, an article in which provides that "British subjects are to be allowed to travel for their pleasure, or for purposes of trade, to all parts of the interior." And in July, 1861, Mr. Fleming obtained leave of absence for the purpose of availing himself of it. His name is neither preceded nor followed by any military title; but there is internal evidence that he wears, or at any rate wore, the bustv; and his style of writing is military enough, for what it is, he probably runs the less acceptable to readers. He and his companion, Mr. Michie, of Shanghai, had a variety of adventures and escapes, were robbed, stripped, and, scantily attended, worked their way through dirt and difficulty into "the country of Mashkee, Tibet, and the Tartar Lama dynasty." Tolerably familiar as we have become with the country and the inhabitants of the southern portion of the Chinese dominions, we know but little of the northern districts, and especially these regions which lie beyond the Great Wall. To those Mr. Fleming introduces us, and adds to his account a considerable amount of valuable information. One circumstance he mentions which is particularly creditable to the Chinese, and to the authorities of the country through which he went much, and that is, that he and his comrade performed their journey "without the slightest, or, at least, stealthy attempt at the abstrac tment" they "had started with."

Visits to Japan and China. By Robert Fortune. (John Murray.) We opened the book half in hazard at p. 229, and were at once struck with the similarity between the illustration there, representing "Chinese beggars," and that at p. 71 of Mr. Fleming's book representing the same subject. The number in each case is three; and the dresses and the attitudes so exactly correspond that a single hand, however, in Mr. Fleming's being left-hand in Mr. Fleming's) that the resemblance is singular. It would be odd if these should always hunted in triplets, always in the same dress, and always in the same attitudes. Mr. Fortune acknowledges a photograph as the original of his illustration; but it is not so, so far as we could discover, whence the illustration in Mr. Fleming's book proceeded. Perhaps the same photograph was the bottom of both. Be this as one would not be justified in drawing a conclusion from their correspondence as to Mr. Fortune's practice in illustration. Mr. Fortune gives some account of Pekin and the mountainous country beyond, and his descriptions are very interesting; but, as we have already hinted, Mr. Fleming was earlier in the field, and went further north and north-east. However, Mr. Fortune's earlier pages are filled with entertaining and useful matter on the Japanese and, though we have already had the "Capital of the Tycoon" and other books about Japan, it must not be supposed that the subject is nearly exhausted, and it is treated by Mr. Fortune in a very agreeable manner. His account of his misadventure (and he must not be allowed humbly to express our opinion that he was in the wrong) with "the chief in charge of the Mint" at Nagasaki, and of his fascinating devotees of Jedo: of the attack upon the residence of Mr. Alcock; and of his botanical and other researches, will be very good reading for not only the curious but the studious. For he had in his travels an eye to science, and especially to botany and agriculture.

Strange Things Yet. By R. Bynon. (Chapman and Hall.) It will not be surprising if this book be much sought after, for it treats of ghosts and mesmerism, and spiritualism; and the supernatural will infatuate the minds of the many so long as the many have nerves. The author has clearly a great many remarkable stories, which will make the reader sit upon, but simply for inquiry and consideration. Still, however philosophically one may wish to handle the subject, it is impossible to reveal the ludicrous connection: and the writer exemplifies the truth of this remark by telling a story of a séance which was conducted with the observance of "everything that will be good enough to speak up 'on o' the 'bazes'" for the company was assembled at a noisy tea-party. "Nothing like the story of that 'hot-woman,' with a human head, but "in place of a nose, a huge beak curved and pointed like that of an eagle, and with "two long staring yellow eyes," it seems a pity Mr. Barnum has not been communicated with upon the point, if the phenomenon be still alive. The grisly skeleton would be so useful, make such a capital show, and would be agreeable to all parties and profitable to one, at least, besides saving inexperienced nerves from a shock. We admit that we like the shock which awaits them when they are introduced to "misses."

Good Words. By the Rev. Norman Macleod, D.D., Alexander Smith, Elder, and Co.) She who though pretty and gifted is unsophisticated and modest; who signs away while in a country house fills naturally in love with the "young master" of the house, and though an orphan and penniless prefers justice towards others to her own enrichment; who leaves the management of her own affairs rather than cause him a single pang too soon; who labours anxiously to restore to him the inheritance which he has unwittingly lost; and who is rewarded, at last, by poetical justice which gives her lover and inheritance too, is not our author's model of a heroine. Indeed, she is a quiet tale; it has cleverness of construction; its descriptions both of things and persons are striking; the style is polished; the language is pure, with an Irish, or Scotch, or provincial twang in the case of the future and the conditional; and its general effect is pleasant. A problem, however, must be entered against her: she is left to old-maidenhood. She is a charming little creature; too good, of course, for John Bright; but strong enough to have might have been taken to provide so piquant a young lady with a husband.

The Rose, Myrtle, and Holly. By Henry Holl. (Longman Low, Son, and Co.) The author of this novel comes well recommended: his literary pennies are well known. Hasted tells us that Caxton began having "more him through the press," and the latter having introduced him to his publisher. The story takes us back to the year 1765 and the days of "sword-carrying," and the tilting-ground of the Royal Mail which—we can hardly say ran, for its pace was six miles an hour—moved from London to Exeter. The author is the historian of the mail which is the cardinal point of the novel, and mainly brings to an unknown but highly respectable squire, not perfectly qualified for guard, just as he was in a fair way to change his course and become three gentlemen, and all only one part bulgarised. The book is full of incident: nearly every one is introduced to us by a murderous attempt to murder, suicide, homicide, arson, highway robbery, poaching, forgery, and seduction; and the whole concludes with a general horror, pity, anger, contempt, risibility, and every emotion except esteem: for no one of these is indulged in. The author has a fair expression from the immortal Bumble, "a sar;" and Stapleton resembles Bumble in flavour. He will not, however, be open to the lack of the thrilling element; indeed, the sudden manner in which the author's gun gleams through the branches of a tree, when a gentleman is engaged in a duel, is startling enough. But nothing comes of it, is as startling as anything in the "Flowers of the Forest." It was just there that Sir Walter would be our author's chief fault—prolixity. Perhaps he will take a hint, and in the next story of which we shall be expectant, both especially in pathos and humour, dilution is unbearable. Will he also refrain from the expression, "'curious' as the boy at the gas toast," upon the propriety of making "laid" the preterperfect tense of the verb to lay? Will he has done at least fifty times), and upon the letter which in the oblique case should be spelt "whom" and not "who"? If he will do so, he will add to his merits that of showing more than he has unfortunately usual with many great naval writers to his mother-tongue.

In the course of the current year (1863) one bookselling house in Germany, it is said, attains the zenith year of its existence, and four others may celebrate their jubilee anniversary.

The Privy Council Committee on Education have issued their report for the year 1862-3. It states that more than 1,000 have been visited by inspectors 10,918 daily schools, in which there were 1,067,470 children. The female scholars are 44·78 per cent of the whole number: it was identically the same in 1861. The percentage of females upon the whole population over 5 and under 15 years of age in 1851 was 49·7. In 49 training-colleges visited there were 1972 students. The cost to the public, in 1862, for the maintenance of these training-schools, was £104,706. It will be greater in 1863, for the number of students has been increased by 332. In comparing the expenditure of 1862 with that of 1861, for all purposes, there is a decrease of £30,618. From returns received by the council it appears that 193,876 persons subscribed to the support of schools receiving annual grants, and they contributed £237,411; but to this should be added sums obtained "from other sources," voluntary contributions, swelling the amounts to £400,000.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. B. Belgrade.—Under the circumstances stated a player is bound to castle, if he can legally do so.

PHILOCHESS.—The sealing-up of chess works about to be issued by Mr. Simpson, the bookseller, will no doubt contain the names and prices of the three treatises mentioned. The first of these, "Chess Openings," by Mr. Staunton, is now in the press, and will be out through the first week in July.

A CONSTANT READER.—Both the games which you have sent us are from the "Handbuch" of the ancient chessmen, called the "Chesstoon of Charlemagne." Including the Knight's Tour Conundrum, with the inscription "Mon Retiral Jouera-t-il Rahalli (made by Joseph, of the tribe of Rahall), will be found in the recent "Twiti Collection" of Mr. Wormald, of Bishopsgate-street. The "Chesstoon" is dumped, however, in many rare and obsolete European languages and three pieces of ground.

C. G. U.—The solution is your own. There is no obvious fault also, if we mistake not, in the second position of the problem you have transmitted to us. Should it be Black's Q P 2 instead of Q B 2 (in which case you prevent the mate), the position is correct. Will you favour us with the solution of the problem which you have sent us?

H. L. Silly.—Your letter is received, and we shall be glad to hear from you again. Any one who can send us a game of such a difficult character as you have acquired more knowledge of the game. You are palpably wrong in every particular.

F. C. Clifton, Cal.—Your amended diagram is as defective as the former one. How is it possible for you to overlook the fact that when Black interposes the Bishop at Q 2nd he gives check to White's Q R P, and thus defends the Queen?

AN AMATEUR, Bexley.—In the position submitted, White, having two pieces more than his opponent, can easily win the game. Thus: 1. Q to K 4th, 2. Q to K 3rd, 3. Q to K B 3rd, and 4. Q to K 2nd.

R. C. Ballinsilly.—It is much too easy, and is admits of the same solution beginning with R. to K B 8th (ch), and Q. to K 4th.

A Traveller (Cth, B.C.S., PROFESSOR FORBES, and others.—Your bill. The author of the "Handbuch" is Mr. Lewis, of Berlin. The "Chesstoon" is "A Key to Knowledge" of checking with the Rook. Mr. Lewis's is beyond the skill of White to mate next move.

A. M., Fakenham.—They are both clever, the first particularly so, and shall appear when we can spare space for them.

NOVICE.—The third prize in the Belfast Problem Tourney was carried off by Mr. A. Kempe.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1007.

WHITE.	BLACK.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q 6th (ch)	K to K 5th	4. K to Q 5th
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Any move	5. B, Kt or P mates.
3. P takes B	Q to K 8th (best)
	Q to K 8th (ch)
	Q takes Kt (best)

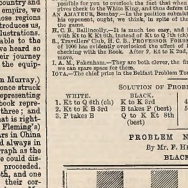
PROBLEM No. 1009.

By Mr. P. HEALEY.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

CHESS IN LONDON.

A smart little Game in the contest between Mr. V. Green and Mr. Healey.

(Irregular Opening.)

WHITE (Mr. G.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. G.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	account that his position is already superior
2. P to Q 4th	P takes P	to his opponent's.
(The eleverest of classical openings will be found in the recent "Twiti Collection" of Mr. Wormald, of Bishopsgate-street.)		13. Q to Q 3rd	B to K B 4th
		14. Q takes B (ch)	K takes Q
3. Q to K R 5th (ch)	K to K 2nd	15. K to K B 2nd	Kt takes B
4. P to K B 4th	P to Q B 3rd	16. Kt to K B 3rd	B takes Q Kt
5. P to Q 5th	Kt to K B 3rd	17. P to K 5th (ch)	K to K 3rd
6. P to Q 6th	Kt to K B 2nd	18. B to K B 3rd	R to K B 3rd
7. P to Q 7th (ch)	K to Q 2nd
8. B to K 3rd	P to Q Kt 4th	19. Kt to K 4th	P to Q 4th
9. P to Q Kt 3rd	P to Q Kt 5th	(To prevent the dangerous attack from
10. B to K Kt 2nd	Kt to Q Kt 3rd	R to Q 8 sq.)
11. P to K 5th	Kt to K 4th		R to K 4th
12. P takes P	R to K R 5th (ch)	20. Kt to K 6th	P to K B 3rd
		21. Kt to K B 4th	R takes P (ch)
(Black and Irregular as Black's game is, he has managed to turn it to such good account that he has now a winning game.)		22. K to K 3rd	R takes Q P (ch)
		23. K to K B sq	B takes Q P (ch)
		And White resigns.

CHESS IN SCOTLAND.

MATCH OF CHESS BETWEEN THE EDINBURGH AND DUNDEE CHESS CLUBS.

This match of chess by correspondence, which was commenced some months ago, has reached a stage of great interest, and will, in all probability, be a very close struggle, having scored a game. The deciding game has now to be played, and will be conducted between Edinburgh and Dundee for the first move. Of the second game, just finished, the following are the moves:—

(Ruy Lopez Opening.)

WHITE. (Dundee).	BLACK (Edinburgh).	WHITE. (Dundee).	BLACK. (Edinburgh).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	27. P takes Q P	P takes Q B P
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd	(The Dundee players consider that Black
3. B to Q Kt 5th	P to Q R 3rd	have thrown the game here, as follows:—
4. B to R 4th	Kt to K B 3rd		R to K 3rd
5. P to Q 4th	P takes P		B takes P
(This is not so aggressive as P to Q 4th or			P takes P (ch)
Castling, but it is a safe and good move.)			K to K Kt sq
6.	B to Q B 4th		Q to K 5th (ch)
7. Castles	Castles		K to K B 2nd
8. B takes Kt (ch)	P takes B		Q to Q R 4th (ch)
9. P to Q 5th	P to K R 3rd		K to K B 3rd
10. P to K B 3rd	P to K R 3rd	28. K to K 3rd	R to K 7th
11. Q Kt to Q 2nd	P to Q Kt 4th	24. Q takes P (ch)
	Castles on K's side	(Is this so good as Q to Q 8th (ch)?)
12. Q to Q B 8th	P to Q 4th.	25.	K to B 2nd
(The Dundee players have reserved		26. Kt to Kt sq.	P to K B 4th their Queen to K 1st or to Queen's sq. and		27. P to Q 6th	P to K B 5th have thus lost a move, which, in this game,		27. P to Q 6th	B to Q Kt sq
we would regard as very valuable.)		(Dundee have no credit for this move, on Having already obtained an almost decisive		account of No. 8 to K 3rd. P to Q B 4th attack on the King's side.		would be better.)
Dundee resolved, however, not to be content		28. Q to Kt 3rd	P to Q 6th with a drawn game.		(Dundee evidently regretted that they did
13. P to K R 3rd	B take Kt	not play Q to Q 8th (ch) on the 24th
14. Kt to K B 3rd	B to Q Kt 3rd	move.)
15. Kt to K 5th	B to Q Kt 3rd	29. P to Q 7th	P to K B 6th
(Well played, anticipating the advance of		30. P to K B 3rd	Q to K 8th
the Queen's Pawn.)		(Dundee shortsightedly regretted that they did
16. P to Q 4th	P to Q 4th	not play P to Q 8th (ch) on the 29th
17. P to K 6th	P to K B 4th	move.)
18. R to K 2nd	P to Q Kt 4th	31. B to Q B 2nd	Q R to K 3rd
19. B to Q Kt 2nd	P to Q R 4th	32. B to K 3rd
20. P to K 4th	P to Q R 5th	(They evidently dared not take the Bishop.
(Dundee think they could have drawn		32.	R to K Kt 4th
here, as follows:—		33. P takes P	R to K 8th
	P takes P	(Dundee think they could have drawn
	B to Q 5th	here, as follows:—
	P takes P		P takes P
	P takes P		Q to K 5th
(Subsequently it was thought that the best			R to K 8th move here was P to Q 8 6th.)			Q R to K 8th (ch)
20. P to Q B 4th	P to Q B 4th		K to K 2nd
21. P to Q Kt 4th		34. P to K 8th	P to K B 6th
(Edinburgh play very cleverly at this critical juncture.)		35. Q to K 4th (ch)	Q R to K Kt 3rd
21.	B to Q B 2nd	36. Q takes R (ch)	K takes Q
22. Q to R 2nd	Q to K B 5th	37. P to K 4th	B takes K R P
23. K to B sq		38. P takes B	Q to K 8th
(This was compulsory, as Black threatens		39. P to Q 8th to take the Kt and win in a few moves.)		And Black resigns.

COLUMN FOR THE CURIOUS.

JOHN NORDEN'S very scarce view of London Bridge is a pearl of great price among print collectors. The readers of our Column interested in London topography will, therefore, learn with pleasure that one of the early impressions of Norden's view has recently been discovered in Germany by an archæological correspondent, who writes:—"The only one, I believe, hitherto known is in Mr. Sutherland's Illustrated Clarendon, in the Bodleian Library; and this print is in the second state, differing most materially from the one first mentioned, originally published by Norden, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and subsequently republished by Mr. Sutherland's publisher. In the first state is measures 20½ by 16½ in., and is engraved within a double line border, with the Royal supporters of Queen Elizabeth, under which is the Tudor motto, 'Semper eadem.' At each side of the print is a shield of arms, that on the dexter side is which will be seen, the other those of Sir Richard Saltonstall, Lord Mayor of London in 1597, and to whom the print is dedicated. The view of the bridge, although not quite in its present state, is really from north to south, the old houses upon it are very neatly engraved; and a whole company of Elizabethan gallants are seen on poles at the top of the Bridge gate, although not so numerous as there seen in the following year, 1600, by Serjeant Bentham, when the view in the two several boats; one on the left, proceeding with a pair of sculls towards Westminster, is occupied by a lady holding a feather fan, and conversing with three gentlemen who accompany her. To the right of boat, from the impetuosity of the stream, has been swamped, and the unfortunate passengers are slowly swimming to land. In the middle of the stream are several empty boats, and above them are engraved the words,

Tame-Isis flovius,
Thamesis.

At the bottom of the engraving, within ornamented borders, are the dedication to Sir Richard Saltonstall and a brief description of the bridge: and in the centre, in a scrupulously ornamented border, is inscribed,

By John Norden,
Speeta, et habes quantum ego.
Anno 1600.

Such is the print in its first state. In its second state it measures but 20½ in. by 10½ in., having lost 6 in. depth. It has no date, but bears the same dedication to Sir Richard, Lord Mayor in 1597. The dedication states, however, that Norden had "described it in the time of Queen Elizabeth, and that he had been now these twenty years embruised and detained by a person till of late unknown." Mr. Richard Thomson, in his "Chronicles of London Bridge," states that the publication of the print of London Bridge (i.e., the Sunderland impression, or second state) addings that it another impression, which was never published, (it would probably produce the superb price of ten or fifteen guineas;" the print in the first state is of much greater rarity than that in the second. It has been stated that the plate was engraved by Norden, in the reign of Elizabeth, it was not published until the latter part of the reign of James I., and the Royal marriage of 1613; though we have here evidence of impressions of the first state.

We may here mention another old view of London Bridge—one of a series published by Boydell and Co., in 1818, with a note stating it to have been "drawn from nature in the reign of Queen Anne." It is very antient picture; but the plate (which was a private one) was afterwards much altered. It is, however, the earliest view of the bridge to St. Katherine's; in it appears St. Paul's, with the spire, which was burnt in 1561. Beneath the view this is stated to be the oldest view of London Bridge that has been known. It was Wyngrede's (1543) view, in the Sutherland Collection. In neither of these views, however, is there any attempt to represent the sudden rise in horizontal view: the detail of the houses on the bridge is surprisingly minute.

We may also point attention to two large views, by Canaletto, of London towards the end of the last century. One of these is now to be seen in the Exhibition of Paintings by the Old Masters, at the British Institution. The first shows Charing Cross and Northumberland House and the Strand, with the Mews in front of the latter. The second view is one of Canaletto's finest pictures, and represents Whitehall, looking towards Westminster. Old Scarlet Whitehall, the gateway stretching across the road. Inigo Jones's Banqueting House, lodsted, and Holbein's Gate, with Montague House beyond (pulled down), with a distant view of St. Paul's. The date of the first painting may be gathered from these facts: Canaletto visited England late in life; he died in 1768; the house signs were removed in 1760. These pictures have been contributed to the exhibition from private collections, but they should be made annually accessible, instead of this opportunity of enjoying his favourite subject.

An interesting addition to the engravings of the portraits of the wives of King Henry VIII. was read to the Society of Antiquaries by Mr. J. G. Nichols, on the 18th inst., from the recent discovery of the prints of such portraits. Mr. Schaer made some valuable critical comments on the various prints, and exhibited a very rare portrait of Queen Catherine Parr, which he considers to be an early portrait of Anne Boleyn on which reliance can be placed is the oil picture in Windsor Castle, which is supposed to be the picture her great uncle. This picture was copied in miniature by Charles I., and formed one of the two which were in the original black frame when belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch. The portraits of Jane Seymour Mr. Schaer considers to be very doubtful. The two original drawings for which are in Windsor Castle. The two types are seen, one at Hampton Court, where the peak of the black veil attached to the head is in front of the face, and the other, at Windsor Castle, where the black peak is at the back of the head. Mr. Schaer's observations are to be printed by the Society in the next volume: as accurate an account of historical portraiture they are valuable.

There lately died in Paris a man who, in his 42nd, at Bayonne, in his one hundred and tenth year, Simon Martin, a Basque peasant. He always enjoyed good health, and earned his livelihood till his ninety-eighth year, when he broke his leg. Two days afterwards the old man ago Martin was presented to Marshal O'Donnell, when passing through Bayonne, and the Marshal kindly shook hands with him, saying, "Adieu, my friend," and rang the air at the same time.

The Gore Rouse estate, now disfigured by the unsightly Exhibition buildings, is a collection of glass, and other unpicturesque structures, comprised within a few years a charming retreat. Here Mr. Wilberforce resided from 1808 to 1825. He writes:—"We are now one mile from the turnpike at Hyde Park Corner, having about three acres of pleasure ground, with shrubbery walks, a large piece of wood and several old trees, walnut and mulberry, of thick foliage. I can sit and read under their shade with delight, and enjoy the sweet retreat of nature as if I were two hundred miles from the great city." Thither came Clarkson, Zachary Macaulay, Romilly, and others, to commune with their friend on matters connected with the abolition of the slave trade. Here Wilberforce entertained his friends at breakfast. He often alluded to his "Kensington Gore breakfasts." He was not in the habit of asking his customary guests to a dinner party, but it should compel him to curtail his charities. The Countess of Blessington was among the same period at Gore House, and Wilberforce—thirteen years. In her time the place retained much of its picturesque character. Its extensive grounds were intersected by a large view in the grounds, with portraits of the Duke of Wellington, Lady Blessington, and other celebrities, including Count D'Orsay, the painter of the picture. The Gore House estate always comprised market-gardens and nursery-grounds, the fame of which lives in "the complete farmer," a standard work of the last century by Hunt and other pleasant places which have been swept away "by Act of Parliament." Gore House is not yet swept away by Horticultural "Gardens." In some metropolitan changes, as Belgrave, Eaton, and Onslow squares, the old "green spots" have been suspected and made part of the new designs; but at Sir Sowerby Kensington everything is sacrificed to iron and glass, to bricks and mortar in the ugliest forms, and the insatiate speculation of her gas-building.

A correspondent writes that one of the six ivory chairs sent by Warren Hastings from India, and referred to in our Journal of May 16, is now at Newstead Abbey: our correspondent adds that this chair was presented by Hastings to Queen Charlotte, and was purchased by the late Frederick Webb, Esq., father of the present owner of Newstead Abbey, W. F. Webb, Esq., who thus became possessed of this memorial of our Indian conquests.

BRITISH ORPHAN ASYLUM, Slough.
Stocks (formerly at Clapham-rise).
Patron—Her Majesty the QUEEN.
The Directors have the honour to announce that Her Royal Highness the PRINCESS OF WALES has graciously consented to preside at the ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL of this Institution, to be held (by kind permission of Sir Joseph Paxton, M.P.) at Sydenham on WEDNESDAY, the 24th inst.
STEWARDS WANTED.
The Directors have the high gratification to add that her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales has also been pleased to intimate her intention to visit the Asylum.
An Address will be presented to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, to which he has kindly consented to be entertained.
The collectory portion of the ceremonial will be conducted by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, who has undertaken to preside at the Festival Dinner.
A detachment of the Cinque-ports Rifles, by permission of his Royal Highness the Lieutenant-Colonel, will attend, and a band of music, by the kind permission of Mr. Thomas Chappell, Master of Wales' Minstrels, has promised to attend.
Tickets, 7s. 6d. each; Stewards' Tickets, £1 1s. each.
A limited number of tickets, including to the ceremonial and the banquet—the price of which will be 21s. each—can be procured only of Ladies—to be obtained at the City Office, 73, Watbrook, E.C.
By order, JOHN WM. BLAKESLEY, Sec.
City Office, 73, Walbrook, E.C.

CHEAP FAMILY TICKETS are now issued by the SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY to the following attractive places:—

	First Cl. Sec. Cl.		First Cl. Sec. Cl.
	Each Passenger.		Each Passenger.
To Hyde	6s. 4s.	To Richmond	3s. 2s.
Ryde	20s. 15s.	Kingston
Weymouth	30s. 25s.	Esher	2s. 1s.
Portsmouth	20s. 15s.	Hampton Court
Southampton		Weybridge	1s. 6d.
(Royal Victoria)	15s. 12s.	Chertsey	2s. 6d. 2s. 6d.
Netley	15s. 12s.	Ascot	3s. 2s.
Lymington	20s. 15s.	Aldershot	5s. 3s.

These Tickets will be issued to the Isle of Wight and Weymouth, and return to Waterloo-bridge Station, by the Waterloo Bridge Station Line, on the day of issue only. Those to Ryde may be extended by a trifling extra payment, for a small extra sum, and may be used by the Portsmouth Railway.
By order, THOMAS BOURNE, Assistant General Traffic Manager.

ISLE OF MAN.—HILL'S ROYAL HOTEL and LODGINGS. Board, Lodging and Attendance 2s. 6d. per day. Visitors a-many for an unlimited period. Map of the Island free.

TO PARENTS AND GUARDIANS.—An Architect and Surveyor in London has no objection for an Articled Pupil to reside with him, if the parents or guardians require residence. For particulars, address "H.," 23, Guildford-street, Russell-square.

IMPERIAL WINE COMPANY, 314, Oxford-street, W., City Offices, 26, Poultry-street, Cheapside, E.C.—Pure Wines, Moderate Prices.

GOOD SOUND CLARET, 14s. per Dozen: dittto, high colour, 16s.; bottles and cases included; delivered free to any railway station in London. Terms, cash. Established 1820. Price current on application.

MORSON'S PEPSINE WINE, containing Pepsine in its most active form, is a most valuable remedy for indigestion, dyspepsia, and debility; is perfectly palatable too, for administering this popular remedy for weak digestion.
Manufactured by T. MORSON and SON, 31, Southampton-row Russell-square, W.C., in bottles, at 4s. 6d., and 9s. each.

TURTLE.—MCCALL'S WEST INDIA. Superior quality, prepared on the spot. Eleven hundredweight and Turtle, with guarantee of quality, given to purchasers. Price 1s. per pound. Address, Mr. MCCALL, Turtle Merchant, Kingston Wharf, Commercial-road, Shoreditch, and Orders.
Previous J. MCCALL and Co.
Preston Street, Kingsland-road, London, N.
Prize Medal for Turtle, 1862. Turtle for Parties of Dinners without overcooking, whereby freshness and flavour are retained.

SAUCE.
LEA AND PERRINS'
WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE,
Pronounced by Connoisseurs
"THE ONLY GOOD SAUCE."
None genuine without the names of Lea and Perrins on wrapper, bottle, and stopper. Sold wholesale by CROSSE and BLACKWELL; Barclay and Sons; and by Grocers and Oilmen universally.

HORNIMAN'S PURE TEA CHEAPER. PER LB. Recommended by purchasers of Horniman's Tea in packets; very similar at 4s. 4d. and 4s. "High Standard" at 4s. 8d. and 5s. 4d.; is the best imported.

LETTERS PATENT 1825. PRIZE MEDAL 1863.
ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS is the most delicious and valuable food for infants and invalids. Unlike Arrowroot, Sago, and the like, this food is one of easy digestion and rich in nourishment.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY makes a delicious custard pudding. Directions for which have been given by Miss G. B. Kent, Miss Acton, and other writers on cookery. Also for thickening soups, gravies, &c. Both of which have used with great success for rearing children by hand.
ROBINSON, BOOKER, BELVILLE and CO.
Purveyors to the Queen.

KEEN'S MUSTARD.
There are many qualities of Mustard sold.
Those of Genuine Character and Superior Quality is guaranteed.
FIRST MANUFACTORY, 1742.
Sold by the Trade throughout the World, and in 1lb. and 4lb. canisters.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELVILLE, and CO.,
Purveyors to the Queen.

OWBRIDGE'S
PREPARED CORN,
for
Publishers, Booksellers, Music-Sheets, &c.
Manufactured and Patented by
OWBRIDGE and SON,
Of Newport, Isle of Wight.
It is the origin of the Starch, but free from the fibre of maize, established 1844, commended by the highest authorities for its purity, and for the value in the economy.
It is a perfect substitute for any of the imitations, has a finer grain and is more durable.
Sold in 1lb. packets, ornamental golden tinge, and not the chalk white produced by artificial processes.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELVILLE, and CO.,
Sole Agents, London.

BROWN and POLSON'S
PATENT CORN FLOUR.
Packets 6d.
Its superiority to all other kinds is well known.
The social quality is acknowledged, and is labelled
HIGHLY RECOMMENDED,
which may be obtained to change on the American qualities, none of which are equal to the Corn Flour sold by them.
Sold by Grocers.

BORWICK'S is the BAKING POWDER for Bread, Tarts, Puddings, and every other purpose in Baking. 1d., 2d., 4d., and 8d.; and in patent Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 5s.

J. C. and J. FIELD, Original Manufacturers of the Registered PARAFFINE CANDLES, to whom the Prize Medal (1862) has been awarded, and their Candles adopted by Her Majesty's Royal Commission, as one of the Military standard candles. These Candles can be obtained of all Chandlers and Grocers in the United Kingdom, and Wholesale of J. C. and J. FIELD, Manufacturers, Belvedere-road, Lambeth, S.E. Each Candle is stamped with the name, and is sold in packets of 12 each, by the Trade, and retailed in our Field's label on the packets or boxes. Whole-sale only, and to the Trade.—Super-refined, Lambeth, S.E.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH used in the Royal Laundry, and by the Nobility and Gentry, and sold by Grocers throughout the World.

VICTORIA PARK LAUNDRY SOAP, or WASHING WHITE—using strips of soap to be so used as almost entirely to save the labour of washing.
Sold in packets of 3d. and 6d. each, and may be had also in bars by the Trade.
Neither for washing by labour, this soap may be used in the cold as the common soap, does not destroy the linen nor injure coloured ink, but will remove stains of fruit and other vegetable matter with ease.
Sold by all Grocers and other retailers of soap, and at PARKINS and GOTTO'S, Oxford-street, Wholesale and Manufacturers.

MILITARY CANTEENS for Officers, &c. No stamps for Oak Case, containing LATEST STOCKS AND PRICES. LATEST TABLE KNIVES.
£ s. d. £ s. d.
4 Table spoons ... 0 16 0 Ivory handles ... 0 12 0
4 Table forks ... 0 16 0 Pair regte tongs ... 0 2 6
4 Dessert spoons ... 0 12 6 Ball spoons ... 0 3 6
4 Dessert forks ... 0 12 6 Pair fish carvers ... 0 7 0
6 Tea spoons ... 0 9 0 Table knives ... 0 7 0
1 Gravy spoon ... 0 5 0 Dessert ditto ... 0 5 0
1 Soup ladle ... 0 5 0 Steel ... 0 2 6
1 Pair fish carvers ... 0 14 0 Pair of chickens carvers 0 7 6
1 Mustard spoon ... 0 2 0 Pair poultry ditto ... 0 5 0
1 Mustard spoon ... 0 2 0 Oak chest, no charge.
£4 19 6 £2 10 0
Every other size and pattern in stock.
MAPPIN BROTHERS, Queen's Cutlery, Work-out House, Sheffield, and 67, King William-street, London-bridge. Same prices charged as both houses as at their Manufactory, Queen's Cutlery and Cabinet Works, Sheffield.
Observe the Address.

ORNAMENTS for the MANTELPIECE, &c.—Bronzes, Statuettes, Groups, Clocks, Candelabra, Lustres, Vases, Girandoles, Table Glass, Dessert Services, Ormolu, Porcelain, Dresden, Sevres, Parian, Statuary, Ivory, Tortoiseshell, Buhl, Marqueterie, Inkstands, Work-boxes, Dressing-cases, Writing-desks, Tea Trays, Tea Caddies, Tea Urns, Kettles, Lamps, Chandeliers, Gasaliers, Portfolios, Envelope-cases, Bagatelle Boards, Chess-tables, Backgammon Boards, Cribbage Boards, Dominoes, Cards, Dice-boxes, Cigar-cases, Tobacco-boxes, Cigar-lighters, Pocket-books, Purses, Bags, Baskets, Fans, Scissors, Razors, Penknives, Pencil-cases, Pens, Pencils, Rulers, Paper-knives, Seals, Watches, Chains, Jewellery, Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, Necklaces, Lockets, Studs, Sleeve-links, Shirt-pins, Waistcoat-chains, Albert-chains, Guard-chains, Watch-keys, Watch-stands, Watch-pendants, Watch-guards, Watch-chains, Watch-cases, Watch-glasses, Watch-movements, Watch-springs, Watch-jewels, Watch-dials, Watch-hands

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1210.—VOL. XLII. SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1863. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE SPADE FOR THE SPINDLE.

THE ancient Egyptians, we are told, at all their great banquets placed a mummy among the living guests, that no one should lose sight of his mortality while enjoying a special abundance of the good things of this life. There was a kind of rude wisdom in the arrangement, the spirit of which, but in a lighter form, we moderns might do well to exemplify. Several causes of late have induced a considerable succession of public gaieties; and even that large proportion of the population which could derive little from them beyond an indirect and passing pleasure have had their hearts cheered by the remarkable geniality and propitiousness of the season. To surrender ourselves so completely to the agreeable influences of the present as to exclude from our consideration the darker probabilities of the future would be an unworthy use of the blessings vouchsafed us by Divine Providence. Whilst, as a nation, England has much to be thankful for, and may justly congratulate herself upon many of the incidents of her lot, it would ill become her to forget, nor has she forgotten, that calamity still hovers over one of her largest and most populous provinces; and that the wide distress occasioned by the protracted dearth of cotton, to relieve which she made such spontaneous and munificent efforts towards the close of last year, is very far indeed from having been removed, and threatens, should the civil war in America be much further prolonged, to become more extensive and severe next winter than it was last. Parliament, we are happy to observe, is making preparation for the too probable contingency, and, all things considered, moves willingly in what most people will admit to be the right direction.

THE OXFORD COMMEMORATION: THE MAYOR AND CORPORATION PRESENTING AN ADDRESS TO THE PRINCE OF WALES AT MAGDALEN BRIDGE.—SEE PAGE 705

The difficulty of successfully grappling with the evil, whether as actually existing or as prospectively imminent, arises far more from its peculiarity than from its magnitude. If the question to be solved were only how a half million of people whose ordinary occupation is suspended are to be fed, clothed, and lodged for the next twelve months, the wealth and energy would, the humanity of England would readily undertake to cope with the emergency. The case, however, is by no means so simple. It is one demanding sound statesmanship even more than free and philanthropy. Here, then, are three hundred thousand persons—men, women, and children—accustomed to earn their living at one particular branch of manufacture, the principal, if not the exclusive, manufacture of the district in which they reside. Suddenly the trade which employs their clerical skill, labour, and special organization, is brought to a standstill, not by a loss of markets, although these may have been overstocked—nor by that rapid internal decay which is sometimes produced by economical errors—nor by a bad season, but by the growth of the raw material, which misfortune the next season might be expected to repair—but by an intestine feud in a foreign country, the effect of which has been the complete stoppage of the exportation to us of the staple of our chief industry for an interval which must have closed all mills for the time so happily and unexpectedly as it commenced, or which may continue for several years yet to come.

What is to be done with the hundreds of thousands of workpeople who are thus deprived of employment? To support them in idleness for more than a few months would be to demoralise them. To find them work for no other purpose than to make it a test for the discovery of impostors would be to reduce them to the level of paupers. To disperse them by a system of wholesale emigration, besides being but a tiny and comparative mode of transporting the poor people to a distant spot to battle with starvation, might prove, three months hence, to have been a wholly unnecessary and irremediably destructive measure. Emigration on so large a scale, and especially at a time for whose peculiarities no precedent exists, there is no demand in the colony to which they might proceed, would effect nothing more than a change in the localisation of the evil, aggravated to no small extent by the special hardships inseparable from that change. To find labour for these hapless people—labour, the result of which shall be fairly worth the money which it earns—labour, too, on the spot where the operatives themselves reside—is now the problem which her Majesty's Government and the Legislature are called upon to solve. To this end the distress must be relieved as beneficially be supplied by any direct agency of theirs without encouraging prodigality, jobbery, and waste. Local authority must determine of what sort the work shall be, and local means must ultimately pay for it as far as they can, and under the best administration, only temporary amelioration, not a permanent cure, of the evil can be looked for, and even this at the expense of some demoralisation. Still, the conditions we have named having been fulfilled, perhaps the nearest approach which human legislation will permit of will have been made towards drawing the sting of this terrible calamity.

It has been ascertained upon minute inspection, conducted by Mr. Rawlinson, the civil engineer of the Home Office, that in the boroughs and townships covered by the cotton distress there is plenty of work that waits to be done, that ought to be done, and that it concerns the health and comfort of the inhabitants to have done. Much of it, so far from deriving its importance only or mainly from its adaptation to give employment to hands unfittingly idle, should have been set about years ago, and neither prosperous nor high civic spirit ought to have been accepted as affording a valid excuse for neglecting it. Several of the places in Lancashire which, although now so populous, have sprung into existence within the last few years, are wholly devoid of sewerage, and others, in very insufficiently supplied with water, present a wretched, unsightly appearance, owing to the incomplete condition of the streets, and are far more difficult of access than they should be, for want of well-planned and well-executed subterranean drains. Some of them might derive great advantage from the inclosure of waste lands, and almost all of them would be the better for public parks or recreation-grounds. It has been further ascertained that the local authorities are ready and anxious to undertake the necessary responsibility of these improvements, and that the operatives would prefer earning wages by labour to which they are little accustomed to receiving charity and eating the fruits of it in compulsory idleness. What, then, has been the obstacle to the way? Briefly, the want of legal powers in the municipal, the township, or the parochial authorities to borrow money for a long term of years upon the security of the rates, and to expend it in the manner now proposed. The subject of the measure now before Parliament is to remove this disability. It will enable the loan commissioners to give to the executive officers of the public in the distressed district precisely the same kind of aid as for some time past they have given to individual proprietors of land. Its principle, as described by Sir George Grey, is for the Government "not to provide employment for all, but, by advancing money upon favourable terms, to enable the local authorities, if they think fit, to avail themselves of the facilities offered to them, each within their own district, to afford employment.

It will be unnecessary that we should describe the provisions of the measure. Its general effect may be stated in few words. Within the district suffering from the dearth of cotton the nation will lend money at a rate of interest barely sufficient to protect itself from actual loss, and legal facilities will be given to all places within that district, whether boroughs, towns, or merely parishes, to borrow and to mortgage the rates for the purpose of executing public works. Thus, the nature of the work to be executed will be determined by the local authorities, its expenditure will be cast upon local vigilance, and the payment of it will come in the end out of local resources.

Sound as is the principle on which the measure is based, it can be regarded, we fear, as a palliative only. Should the whole of the £600,000 be borrowed and expended in aid of it, if so much, it will be spent in the direct employment of distressed operative labour. The purchase of materials for any large public work—such, for instance, as stone, gravel, tag, brick, paving-stone, corbstone, tiles &c.—will require, as is calculated, upwards of £600,000, and the remainder will necessarily be devoted to skilled labour. But then it has to be borne in mind that all the money spent in skilled labour, and, there is ground for believing, 75 per cent of that spent in the purchase of materials, will be laid out in the district for the benefit of which the loan is provided, and will, therefore, diffuse relief through most of the suffering classes. It will not, it cannot, reach to the whole extent of the evil. It may, perhaps, find work and wages for as many as 60,000 persons, but there are 80,000 heads of families, and 250 provide maintenance for about 200,000 persons. The sum proposed to be thus lent may easily be doubled, if need be; and that double will be found sufficient when the new mills now in progress is too much reason to fear. Perhaps it is better to err, if at all, on the side of caution. Emigration will, no doubt, carry off some of the unemployed. Other than factory labour will absorb many of the now idle hands. Cotton-spinning will, of course, be carried on to a limited extent where the present supply of the raw material will admit of. And, it may be, although the prospect of it is not flattering, that the civil contest in America will come to an end before the conclusion of another year. At any rate, and in any event, England will not permit her industrious children to starve. When the pinch recurs, as it may do with the winter, everybody will be eager to do his part towards easing it. Having made prudent provisions against so much misfortune as may be inevitable, we may at least trust in respect of that which lies beyond our ken. To such as do the duty of the day belongs the right of acting upon the maxim of the highest wisdom—"Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE

The Emperor proceeded to Paris on Thursday week, and presided at a Cabinet Council. Mr. Slidell, the envoy of the Confederate States, had a long conference with the Emperor on the same day. His Majesty sent for him as soon as he was up, kept him to a late-o'clock dinner, and then, after a short interval, the Council of Ministers was assembled. The Times' correspondent at Paris states that the Emperor has decided on the recognition of the American war. His proposal is said to be a joint recognition of the South, with the double object of putting a stronger whole, besides its unexampled horrors, is manifestly fruitless, and restoring to their proper course a cultivation and commerce in which France is very much interested.

Rumours which had been afloat for some days respecting important alterations in the Cabinet were confirmed on Saturday by the publication in the Moniteur announcing the following sweeping changes:—Count Walewski, from Minister of Foreign Affairs, to be President of

New Orleans Express also intimates that their appearances much exasperated the Southerners, and that the latter gave no quarter.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, writing from Mississippi that the whole country from Milliken's Bend to Hard Pines, opposite Grand Gulf, a distance of sixty miles, is one "abomination of desolation."

It has been an earthly paradise; lordly palaces filled with pictures, statues and articles of virtu; beautiful gardens, teeming with floral beauties, are now all laid waste. In those magnificent halls which "shadowed the proud chivalry and wealth of the South," the wild cry of "Yankee Doodle" with firm built voice and iron lungs, echoes contemptuously from column, niche and gilded wall. To-day, each, and in the morning abandon all to the horde of fifty thousand men, who follow the same and gather its relics from the verge of useless ruins which smell the carnage from afar. Among these rich palaces were erected the Hill, Cox, and Pemberton Batteries. His dwelling is magnificent even in its ruins, and his gardens are still fragrant with scores of rare roses. When General Grant ordered Major-General Osterhaus to charge on Monday, one of the largest boats on the river, put his most valuable slaves, pictures, plate, cattle, &c., on board, and set out to run the gauntlet. But even while his head blazed with those balls of burning cotton and grenades of corn. His house, with furniture which cost $100,000, was fired, and the house of a neighbour consumed too, while a steed on the bank and watched the mighty conflagration. In the morning he embarked, a ruined man. Cotton had never produced such a revenue to planters as I find in the ruins of the houses of these rich planters. In one garden I found no less than seven hundred bales piled up. The Gin House is the largest collection in America. There are not more than three in Europe that equal it.

THE WAR IN VIRGINIA.

The report that General Lee had crossed Fredericksburg and that Hooker had occupied the city was untrue. It appears that, in consequence of the withdrawal of a Confederal brigade from Fredericksburg, General Hooker sent a division across the Rappahannock at that point to reconnoitre. The Federal division crossed, but, after a heavy fire from the Confederate rifle-pits on the opposite shore, and, after capturing 100 Confederates in the rifle-pits and ascertaining that Longstreet's corps was in force, returned to the north side of the river.

On the 9th there was a severe cavalry engagement on the Rappahannock. Lee had assembled a force of cavalry at Culpepper Court-house for a raid into Maryland, and a brigade of Federal cavalry and 2000 infantry crossed the river at Beverley Ford to attack them. A fight ensued, which lasted all day, when, heavy infantry reinforcements coming to the Confederates, the Federal retired, having accomplished their end and wounded. The object of the expedition, to prevent the raid, was fully attained by the engagement.

The New York Times thus epitomises the great cavalry fight beyond the Rappahannock:—

At daylight on Thursday, the 9th, General Pleasonton crossed the Rappahannock in two columns, at Kelly's Ford and Beverley Ford, both points well known as such. The right column, Kelly's ford, was attacked by a force of the enemy's cavalry and infantry, and a severe cavalry just aroused from their sleep, when the fight commenced, and continued from 8 or till three p.m., by which time the Confederate force, under General Stuart, consisting of 12,000 cavalry and 16 pieces of artillery, were fully engaged, and driven across the river at the same point on the left with slight loss, the left column, under Gregg, having formed a junction with the right, after two p.m. our troops were withdrawn. The object of the fight was discontinued, the rebels having been driven back upon strong intrenchments on the south side of the river, and the whole movement was a part of General Longstreet's force; and our forces returned almost unmolested to this side of the river. The Confederates have the advantage in numbers than ours; but, notwithstanding this advantage, they were driven back with a loss of twenty and a third of cannon, and a considerable number of caisson, by which it appears that General Stuart was to start on his great raid through the States, passing through the Shenandoah Valley. This enterprise has now probably been postponed for a time.

Several other cavalry expeditions have been made in different directions by the Federals, and a great deal of property has been destroyed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Democratic State Convention of Ohio, after having unanimously nominated Mr. Vallandigham for the governorship, appointed a committee to demand his release of the President. Mr. Vallandigham is said to be much admired in Southern political circles. (See page 688.)

The Governor of Illinois has prorogued the State Legislature till the 18th inst. The Democratic and Republican Members of Assembly preventing a quorum; but the Democrats refused to recognise the prorogation, and entered a protest against it. Divergence of opinion, constitutional usurpation and the revolutionary breaking up of the Legislature, are the charges preferred. In this action was that there was disagreement between both Houses on the question of adjournment. Great indignation was manifested among the Democrats.

A meeting was held to raise 10,000 dollars for the General Fremont. It was announced that President Lincoln had consented to give Fremont a command if a vacancy occurred.

President Lincoln, in reply to a Missouri committee of Germans, stated that Generals Fremont, Hunter, and Banks were not "politically kept out of command, but had by their own action placed themselves in their present position. He said that he favoured gradual emancipation. The last President's Proclamation was issued, but having been elected he meant to be President, and perform his duty if he should live.

The enrolment is being resisted in Indiana. The Provost Marshal and his assistants have been shot. Considerable excitement prevails, and a military force has been sent to the scene of disorder.

General McClellan has reviewed two divisions of recruits from the balcony of the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Tremendous enthusiasm was displayed for him by the soldiers and people.

A Democratic meeting has been called in Brooklyn to denounce the usurpation of the Administration.

The editors of the New York journals have passed resolutions asserting their right to criticise the acts of the Administration and to maintain inviolate and keeping the rights of the press to suppress proper published for them the seat of war.

A strike of coal-heavers and longshore men is assuming a formidable shape in New York, and all the men refusing to join are threatened with violence. The Government vessels are being loaded by Government labourers under a guard of soldiers for their protection against the longshore men.

The loss of the Dolphin it has been decided that a vessel sailing for Nassau with the intention of proceeding thence to a blockaded port, is equally liable to capture as if she were actually on her way to a blockaded port. A similar decision had been given in the case of the Peterhoff.

Eight schooners are reported to have been captured in the Gulf.

President Davis has revoked the exequatur of the British Consul at Richmond after discharging the legal duties of the Consulate from Government in assuming to act as Consul for other cities than Richmond and other States than Virginia.

CANADA.

The Parliamentary elections were progressing, and the excitement was high. It was said that the Premier Minister and the Attorney-General were defeated; and the Hon. John Young, supporter of the Government, was beaten by Thomas Darcy Magee (Opposition) by a majority of 17. The election in Kamouraska was accompanied by a steamer sailed, and the result of the first day's voting was unfavourable for the Government candidates. The deduction from the present contest were that the Conservative party will shortly return to power.

NOVA SCOTIA.

An issue of the Royal Gazette Extraordinary, on Thursday, June 11, has the following:—

His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor has been pleased to make the following appointments:—

To be the Executive Council of the province of Nova Scotia.—The Hon. James W. Johnston, Hon. Charles Tupper, Hon. Robert Boyle Dickey, Hon. M'Nab, Hon. Isaac Le Vesconte, Hon. John M'Kinnon, Hon. Alex. M'Farlane, Hon. Samuel Creelman.

The Hon. J. W. Johnston to be Attorney-General of the province of Nova Scotia, in place of the Hon. Adams G. Archibald, resigned.

The Hon. Charles Tupper, to be Secretary of the province of Nova Scotia, in place of the Hon. Joseph Howe, resigned.

The Hon. W. A. Henry, to be Solicitor-General of the province of Nova Scotia, in place of the Hon. Jonathan M'Cully, resigned.

The Hon. James M'Nab, to be Receiver-General of the province of Nova Scotia, in place of the Hon. John H. Anderson, resigned.

The Hon. John Isaac Le Vesconte, to be Financial Secretary of the province of Nova Scotia, in place of the Hon. W. Garvie, resigned.

To be Commissioner of Railways—Mr. J. M'Donald, in place of the Hon. J. M'Cully, resigned.

To be Queen's printer—Mr. Alpin Lowe, in place of Mr. E. M. M'Donald, resigned.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

We learn by telegraph from Suez that Colonel Gordon has besieged and captured Soochow. The previous intelligence of the capture by the Imperial force sent to take possession of the city were murdered.

News received at Shanghai from Japan announces that the Japanese Government had been granted fifteen days to reply to the English ultimatum. War appeared probable. It was reported that Americans were supplying the country with arms and ammunition. Foreigners were embarking, in view of the breaking out of hostilities.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Exhibition of the Royal Academy is open in the evening from eight o'clock, when the rooms are lighted with gas.

The annual general meeting of the Printers' Almshouse Society will be held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Monday evening next.

The Lord Chief Justice of England presided on Wednesday at the leading members of the Conservative party at a grand banquet at the Mansion House on the evening of the 17th inst.

Major Robinson, on behalf of the gentlemen of the Honourable Artillery Company of London, has presented Mr. Hunt, their bandmaster, with a splendid silver cup, which gained the prize medal at the Exhibition.

On Wednesday Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Lawrence and Mr. Sheriff Hale, attended by trumpeters, her Majesty's ships at the Tradagar, as Greenwich. Crowes were laid for 10 guests.

The Lord Mayor has, it is said, recently contracted for the erection of the temporary wooden bridge at Blackfriars, to be used for carriage and foot traffic during the taking down of the old and the rebuilding of the new stone bridge. The cost will be about £20,000.

Last Saturday being the twenty-sixth anniversary of her Majesty's accession to the throne, the Rev. Dr. Martin—the Queen's Jubilee's and St. Margaret's, Westminster, and other churches, rung a merry peal. The Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Aldermen, and the Chamberlain, with the Government establishments. The ships in the Thames were gaily dressed with, and the batteries fired salutes.

On Saturday evening the Hon. Trinity Corporation gave their annual entertainment at the Trinity House, Tower-hill. The guests at the dinner a special room of the Elder Brethren was held for the purpose of swearing in Lord Clarence Paget, who was elected Master at the last court of the corporation. Covers were laid for one hundred. The noble Premier presided at dinner, and the Duke of Somerset occupied the vice-chair.

On Wednesday the Livery of London elected Mr. Nissen and Mr. Cave to the office of Sheriffs of London and Middlesex. It is usual to have one Alderman elected to the high office; but the Aldermen on this occasion were deputed from, and the two gentlemen elected are in the rank of simple citizens. Mr. Nissen is a Liberal Conservative, and Mr. Cave is a Tory, and then the Livery proceeded to elect the bridgemasters, six-corners, auditors, and other officers for the ensuing year.

The great rose show of the season at the Crystal Palace will be held on Saturday next. In addition to the show there will be a dramatic entertainment, under the management of Mr. Buckstone, in the large concert-room, commencing at half-past seven o'clock. The performers are in committee, composed of the Duke of Sutherland, the Earl of Caithness, Lord Richard Grosvenor, Mr. Fox Maule, M.P., Mr. Thomas Baring, M.P., and other celebrated engineers and men of science, will take place of the Exhibition Building.

A grand banquet was given at Willis's Rooms on Wednesday to Mr Charles Dickens, M.P., by the members of the Association of Medical Officers of Health. The chair was occupied by Dr. Lankester, Coroner for the City of London, and on the eve of his departure to that colony. The occasion was a most interesting one, and was very numerously attended, now in this country to hold a social reunion, and by the colonists of Victoria in particular, who are about to return to their own land. The chair was taken by Mr. Foster, ex-Colonial Secretary of Victoria. Sir Charles Darling was himself present, and was received with cheers. The Right Honourable Sir William Bonne, read remained on the premises for about half an hour, but his medical advice was not required by any of the guests.

Last week the births of 908 boys and 941 girls—in all 1870 children—were registered in London. This is the largest number in any week since 1859-62 the average number (corrected) was 1868.——The mortality in London during the week ending last Saturday was 1,170 deaths. The number last continued in the week that ended last Saturday. The number of deaths in the previous week was 1,170. The deaths were 1,170 according to the returns of corresponding weeks in 1853-62, and corrected for increase of population, 1,170. Of the 1,170 deaths, 1,170 were registered in London, 1,170 were three from intemperance, and four from delirium tremens. The oldest person who died was a woman, aged 1,170 years, in Lambeth.

A general court of the governors of St. Thomas's Hospital was held on Tuesday at the London Bridge Railway Terminus Hotel. Sir Benjamin Hall presided. The report stated that the Hospital Committee had appointed a deputation to confer with the governors of Bethlehem Hospital in reference to the proposed removal of that institution, in consequence of the Midland Railway Company's intention, in the event of no arrangement being come to, to continue the railway through the present site of the hospital. The deputation had had an interview with a committee of by Dr. Lees, not to confer with the governors of Bethlehem, in the event of the Midland Railway Company's intention to continue the railway through the present site of the hospital.

BENEVOLENT INSTITUTIONS.—The third annual meeting of the Society for the Relief of Distress was held on Monday at Willis's Rooms—the Duke of Buccleuch presiding. The object of this society, a combination character of their operations, like those of a society with which they cooperate, of the Mansion House Committee, is to relieve, during the winter annually they granted relief to the extent of from £1000 to £1500 a year. The report stated that since the commencement of the present year £1,000 had been subscriptions, £120; the grants to various parties and districts being £1,000. The Duke of Buccleuch, in moving the first resolution, said that although the Duke of London, seconded by the Earl of Dartmouth, and unanimously agreed to. Mr. Hubbard, M.P., moved a vote of thanks to the chairman of the office-bearers, which was seconded by Mr. Thomas Barrett, the meeting separated.

On Tuesday the annual general meeting of the Governors of the Hospital for St. Mary's Abbots, Kensington, was held at the Vestry-hall, Church-street, Kensington, Joseph Freeman, Esq., presided; and Mr. Wilkinson, the secretary, read the report of the Board of Management, which contained an account of the progress of the business of the hospital as compared with what had been done in the previous year. The report stated that charity was in every respect most satisfactory, and the benefits it had conferred on the poor of the surrounding districts increasingly great. During the past year the number of indoor patients received under letters of recommendation was 1,170, and the number of outdoor patients 1,170; the out-patients numbered 7219, the casualties 7139, and the number of poor women attended at their own homes in their confinements 1,170, a grand total of 18,566 relieved during the year by the charity. The balance-sheet showed a balance in favour of the hospital of £1,170. The receipts had been £12,193 and the expenditure £11,779.

The thirty-fifth anniversary festival of the United Law Clerks' society took place yesterday week at the Freemasons Tavern. The Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench presided, and a full and fashionable company of 300 of the friends and supporters of the institution were present. The object of the society is to relieve the distressed clerks of the profession, and to provide for the education of their children. The Lord Chief Justice, in proposing the toast of the evening, said that the society was a most deserving one, and he hoped that it would be liberally supported. Subscriptions to the amount of £50 were announced during the evening.

The public meeting of the Hospital for Incurables was held on Monday at the London Tavern—Mr. C. Pickett presided. The number of in-patients was 1,170, and of out-patients 1,170. Seventy-four new pupils of candidates was two hundred.

The committee of the Royal Hospital for Incurables have had a grand fete and fancy fair in the International Exhibition building, South Kensington, commencing on Monday and closing on Saturday last. The fair was held under the patronage of the Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary, and a very costly and handsome bazaar held stalls.

A fancy fancy in aid of the funds of the London Surgical Home is to be held at 26, James's Hall Bay, 28 to 31 June to the end of July. The Duchess of Sutherland, Lady Constance Grosvenor, and other distinguished ladies will be stallholders. The band of the Scots Fusilier Guards will attend each day. This institution has for its object the treatment of surgical diseases of women. On Monday next the annual summer fete of the inmates of Bridewell Asylum for Boys, near Enfield, will be witnessed by many friends of the institution, who have received a kind invitation to be present. The amusements will commence at one and last until evening, and they will include various games on the lawn, racing and jumping matches, the prizes for some of which are given by the visitors. A liberal supply of refreshments will be provided by the managing committee.

LAW AND POLICE.—The Alexandra case was opened in the Court of Exchequer on Monday and brought to a close on Wednesday. There were eleven counts in the record, but the substance of the charge was that that several persons had built and equipped the Alexandra for service against the Government. The defendants pleaded that it was laid under the Foreign Enlistment Act, and the Queen's subsequent proclamation was observed. There was a formidable array of barristers on each side. The Attorney-General and Solicitor-General leading for the Crown and Sir H. Cairns for the defence. Sir Hugh Cairns delivered a speech of great eloquence and power for the defendants, in the course of which he animadverted somewhat severely against the character of one of the witnesses for the Crown, denouncing him, on the man's own showing, as one of the most accomplished scoundrels that ever set a witness-box. The Lord Chief Baron, in summing up, expressed a pretty strong opinion that there was no case for the consideration of the jury, and Attorney-General declined a bill of exceptions to the ruling of the Judge.

The action of Mr. Hopwood against Lord Cardigan, Mr. Hall Dalton, and General Peel, which has been so long pending, and which has excited much interest in Sporting circles, was concluded on Thursday week in the Court of Queen's Bench. The Colonel charges the defendants with a conspiracy to remove him from the command of the Sherwood Rangers Yeomanry Militia. The defendants pleaded not guilty. On Wednesday, the sixth day of the trial, the case for the plaintiff was closed, indignantly denying the charges that were made against him. He stated that all that was done, so far as he was concerned, was in the way of duty, and that he had no intention of consulting with his subordinates, he formed his own judgment on the case. At the close of the plaintiff's case, Mr. Justice Mellor intimated that he should not like to go to the jury upon the case. He said, after some conversation, Mr. Coleridge consented to withdraw his name from the record. The jury, however, were directed to find a verdict for the defendants. Mr. Dalton, the further hearing of the case was adjourned to Friday (yesterday), and was proceeding when we went to press.

An inquest was held on Thursday week relative to the death of Mary Ann Walshey, aged thirty-two, in the employment of Mdme. Rino, dressing-maker, of 170, Regent-street, where it would seem the average hours of work were 18½ per day. It appeared that the deceased, there was no regular set of delicate constitution, worked in a room with nearly thirty others, and was taken ill on the 1st of June. Her illness from much worry, and medical assistance was called in. Remedies having been administered, she appeared to be getting better, but her relatives on visiting her in the morning was shocked to find her companion dead by her side. A post-mortem examination showed that the cause of her death resulted from apoplexy, and that long hours of work in a crowded apartment, and sleeping in a close, badly-ventilated room, would leave a great tendency to produce the symptoms which he described. Mr. Clarke, surgeon, concurred in the evidence of Dr. Keys. He observed the bedrooms, which were divided by partitions into small compartments, as just large enough to contain two beds placed close to each other. He was asked, there were no windows to such, and he considered they were decidedly unfit places for any one to live in. Mr. Rino, the employer, was then called, and he was sworn. He expressed his opinion that the rooms in which the deceased did were overcrowded, but denied that they were unhealthy; but he admitted that the deceased had been apoplexy; but there is too much reason to fear that her death was greatly accelerated by working long hours in a crowded workroom, and sleeping in a close, badly-ventilated bedroom.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The Prince of Wales has consented to become a patron of the Bath and West of England Society.

A sugar-refinery has been destroyed by fire in Greenock, and property estimated at £20,000 is consumed.

The staff and force of the Irish constabulary are stated, in a Parliamentary return just issued, to amount in all to 11,971. The reserve force is 1,170 strong.

Staffordshire has decided to raise a memorial to its late Lord Lieutenant, Lord Lichfield. Subscriptions to the amount of £1,170 have been received, and Herefordshire also proposes to commemorate the late Sir G. C. Lewis.

A meeting has been held at Ryde, in the Isle of Wight, for the purpose of memorialising the Queen to grant her Royal Charter of incorporation constituting that town a municipal borough, with a separate commission of the peace and Court of Quarter Sessions.

At a recent meeting of the Liverpool Local Marine Board Captain Symons, R.N., reported that he had awarded the Board's silver medal and diploma to Captain Joseph Michel, of the brig Mary Waugh, of Liverpool, for the gallant rescue of the crew of the French vessel.

The Marquis of Hastings, three persons named Storey (one of whom is said to be a negrotress), and three gunkeepers were examined at Ashby-de-la-Zouch on the charge of feloniously shooting at gamekeepers, the 15th inst. The "trials" was fought at Castle Donington Hall. The Marquis of Hastings, it is said, has expended £1,170 in preparing for the contest.

Mr. David Howell, secretary to the Newtown and Machynlleth Railway, North Wales (the opening of which, in January last, was illustrated in the Illustrated London News), has been found lying, insensible and a massive velvet, both of silver, "in recognition of his services in the formation of the railway, and as a testimonial of the high esteem in which he is held by the committee of the railway."

The launch of the new life-boat took place at Bude Haven yesterday week, in the presence of a large concourse of spectators. The boat is the property of the Royal National Life-boat Institution, and is stationed at the quarantine of the craft belonging to the National Life-boat Institution. The entire cost of the establishment, including the boat, has been contributed to the society by the children of the late R. T. Garden, Esq., of River Lodge, Ireland, as a memorial of their father, the late Elizabeth Mount Garden.

In the Court of Chancery at Dublin, last Saturday, the case of "the Earl of Egremont v. the Rev. Sir Lionel Darell and Others" came before the Master Chancellor, when counsel for the respondents in the case in the trial of the issue in the Spring Assizes of 1864. After a full discussion the Lord Chancellor said he would not interfere with the verdict of the jury, and accordingly ordered the motion, with costs. The case will therefore come on at the next assizes.

Yesterday week seven men swam in the Mersey, from New Brighton to Liverpool, a distance of seven miles by the Liverpool Humane Club. In little more than two minutes after starting five of the competitors were left behind, and the race was virtually over. The competitors then left were reduced to two—Messrs. M'Cullis and Atkin. For an hour and a quarter they swam together, when Mr. M'Cullis, finding that Atkin was compelled to succumb, and, climbing into his boat, he left the latter to swim the remaining distance alone. More than three hours and a half were occupied in the race, and, swimming easily down with the tide to the winning post, he was met by a number of boats, and received with enthusiastic applause. The distance, nearly six miles, was completed in an hour and forty minutes.

Yesterday week seven men swam in the Mersey, from New Brighton to Liverpool, a distance of seven miles by the Liverpool Humane Club. In little more than two minutes after starting five of the competitors were left behind, and the race was virtually over. The competitors then left were reduced to two—Messrs. M'Cullis and Atkin. For an hour and a quarter they swam together, when Mr. M'Cullis, finding that Atkin was compelled to succumb, and, climbing into his boat, he left the latter to swim the remaining distance alone. More than three hours and a half were occupied in the race, and, swimming easily down with the tide to the winning post, he was met by a number of boats, and received with enthusiastic applause. The distance, nearly six miles, was completed in an hour and forty minutes.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has signalised his visit to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland to Enniskillen, and on Thursday and Friday, last week. He visited the Enniskillen Infirmary, and presided at and laid at the distribution, on Thursday, of the prizes given at the school connected to the Rev. W. Stacpoole, and at the Enniskillen Model Schools by the Commissioners of Instruction. The Lord Lieutenant proceeded on Friday at noon in the steamer Erne to the Earl of Belmore's residence, and returned in the afternoon to Portora; in the evening he was the guest of the Earl of Belmore at Castle Coole. On Saturday the Lord Lieutenant left Castle Coole on Saturday he proceeded in the steam-yacht of the Earl of Erne to Belleek, where he left the yacht, and proceeded by rail to Bundoran. Mrs. Wynne has remained until Tuesday, on which day he returned to Dublin. His Excellency, on his visit to Enniskillen, was received as usual with cheers by the Town Commissioners; he was afterwards entertained by the officers of the regiments stationed there at a dinner given in the Earl of Belmore's mess-room. On leaving, his Excellency received the usual honours and a Royal salute from the guns of the Enniskillen Artillery Corps, and his visit was the hearty cheers of a large crowd assembled on the occasion.

The King of the Belgians has given his decision respecting the Anglo-Brazilian dispute referred to his arbitration; and it is reported in Brussels that his judgment is entirely favourable to Baron Christie.

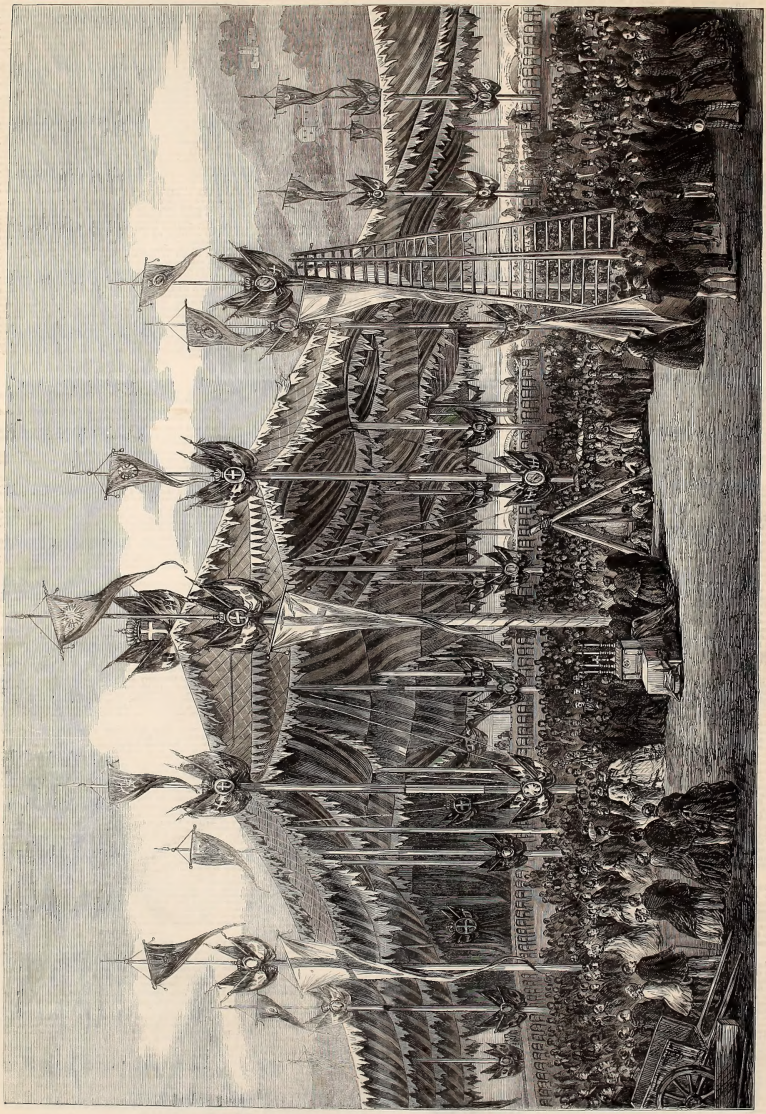
After a protracted illness, Admiral the Hon. Sir George Elliot, K.C.B., died at his residence, Hyde Park-gardens, on Thursday week.

Dr. Letheby calls attention to the importation of large quantities of German sauerkraut with trees, its claim to half the weight of pipestry.

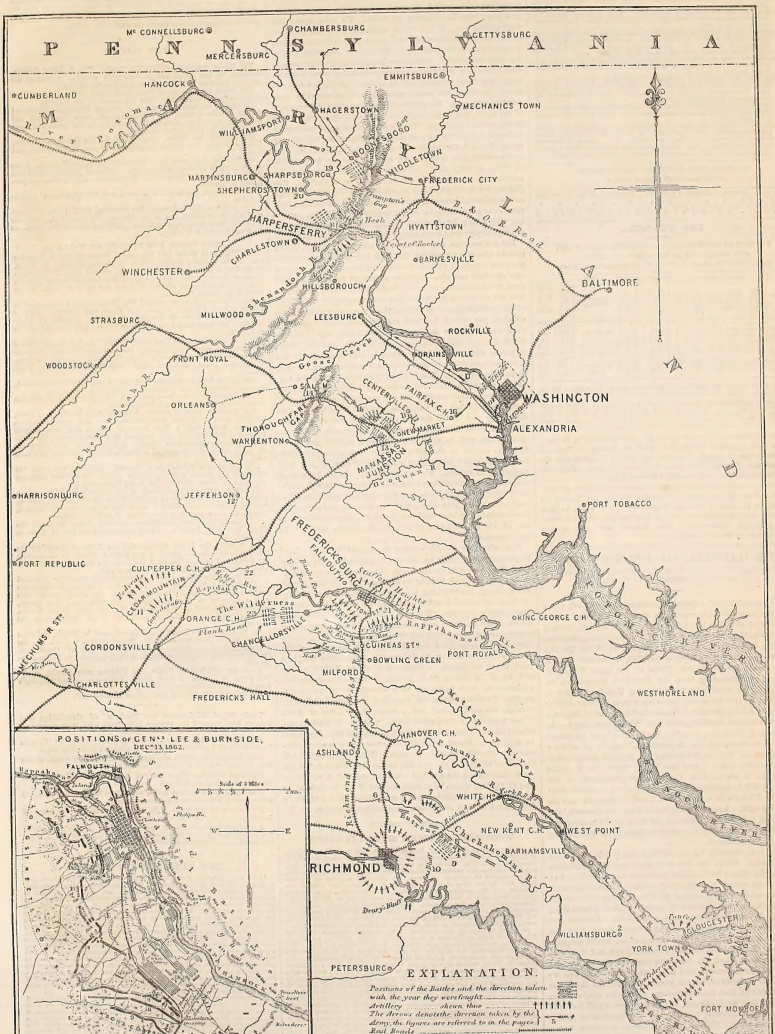
An account of the Austrian dragoons, Prince Windischgrätz, who has been some weeks at Freyssleben, drinking the mineral waters, has been found murdered in his bed. His valet, who had killed him with a log of wood while he slept, carried off the money and effects of the Prince.

The trial-trip of the Italia, the first ship of the reorganised London and Mediterranean Steam Navigation Company, took place on Wednesday, in the Lower Hope. A satisfactory run at the moderate rate gave an average speed of 11½ knots, or about 14 statute miles. The Italia will be followed by the Lusitania, the Alexandra, and the Castilia, new steamers.

We beg to correct an error with respect to the rate of income-tax, which inadvertently appeared in our last Number, in a paragraph taken from one of the daily journals. The tax for the coming year is at the same rate of assessment to be passed, subject, however, to the statutory exemption of incomes between £100 and £200.



INAUGURATION OF THE CAVOUR CANAL.—SEE PAGE 709.



MAP OF THE SEAT OF WAR IN VIRGINIA.—SEE PAGE 702.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 4.

SUNDAY, June 28.—Fourth Sunday after Trinity. Queen Victoria crowned, 1838.

MONDAY, 29.—St. Peter, Apostle and Martyr. King Charles I. defeats the Parliamentarians under Waller at Cropredy Bridge, 1644. The City-road, London, opened, 1761.

TUESDAY, 30.—Sea-fight off Beachy Head between the Allies (English and Dutch) and the French: indecisive, 1690. Foundation-stone of Greenwich Hospital laid by Wren, 1696. Marlborough's great victory at Oudenarde, 1706. Rome surrendered to the French under Oudinot, 1849.

WEDNESDAY, July 1.—Battle of the Boyne: victory of King of England over his father-in-law, King James II., 1690. Capitulation of Paris, 1815.

FRIDAY, 3.—Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Battle of Marston Moor. Great victory obtained by Cromwell over the Royalists under Prince Rupert. Most gigantic meeting of the National Volunteer Association for Rifle-shooting at Wimbledon, 1860.

SATURDAY, 4.—Consistory for defunct Bishops at Advocate, and taken Byzantium, which he afterward named Constantinople, 331. Jack Cade enters London in triumph, 1450.

SATURDAY, 4.—The United States of North America declared "free, united, and independent," 1776. Translation of St. Martin. Sir John Moore defeated the French, under Soult, at Malda, 1808. Deaths of the great ex-Presidents of the United States, Adams and Jefferson (who signed the Declaration), 1826. London and Blackwall Railway opened, 1840.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 4.

Morning.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
	1 30	2 15	3 0	3 45	4 30	5 15
Evening.	1 45	2 30	3 15	4 0	4 45	5 30

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL ADMIRALTY,
Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 15' 47" W.; Height above sea 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER.			WIND.		Rain.
	Barometer corrected and reduced to 32° Fah.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity of Atmosphere.	Amount of Cloud.	Highest.	Lowest.	General Direction.	Highest Velocity in Miles per Hour.	Lowest Velocity in Miles per Hour.	Amount in Inches.
June	Inches.	°	°	0-10	°	°				Miles inches
17	29·664	56·7	84	7	68·1	49·1	W. WNW.	31	1	183 ·720
18	29·766	49·6	74	8	69·1	43·3	S. SE.	19	1	107 ·240
19	29·776	50·9	80	8	64·1	47·7	NNE. S. ENE.	17	1	71·140
20	29·730	58·6	82·0	8·2	69·3	47·6	SSE. NW.	19	1	102 ·040
21	29·710	57·1	84	8	67·2	50·2	W.	19	1	181 ·720
22	29·629	57·1	85·6	10	65·9	47·4	S. WNW.	23	1	338 ·040
23	29·722	49·7	74	2	70·1	52·9	W.	19	1	0·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer (in Inches) corrected	29·664	29·766	29·776	29·730	29·710	29·629	29·722
Thermometer (Fahrenheit)	56·7°	52·4°	52·0°	57·2°	57·0°	56·0°	52·0°
Temperature of Evaporation	52·0°	50·0°	50·0°	52·0°	52·0°	52·0°	50·0°
Direction of Wind	...	WSW.	SSW.	WSW.	SSW.	NNE.	WSW.

TO CONTINENTAL SUBSCRIBERS.—Mr. Ludwig Denicke, Leipsic, has been appointed our special agent for Germany.—Terms of Subscription at Leipsic, including four Double Numbers and the Christmas Number—One Year, 8 Thalers 20 Sgr.; Half-year, 4 Thalers 10 Sgr.; per Quarter, 2 Thalers 5 Sgr.

NOTICE.—By the courtesy of Captains SPEKE and GRANT we shall be enabled, in the next Month of this Journal, to give several very interesting ENGRAVINGS illustrative of their important Geographical Discoveries. The Number will also contain PORTRAITS of the EXPLORERS.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1863.

IT is honourable to the British Parliament, and a fresh proof that it really and truly represents the general feeling of the nation, that at a time like this a single case of horror, the fate of an insignificant person, should be able to obtain attention from the Legislature, and should compel two of the Queen's Ministers to make grave reply to complaints. At this moment great events are before us. Three of the great Powers of Europe are demanding from the fourth a recognition of justice and an atonement for wrong. A French Ministry is changing, and we know not into what course we may drift or bedrawn. A King has sat in judgment on the conduct of England; and is said to have decided against her. We are arranging for the surrender of the Ionian Islands. We have in hand important cases of international law, of theological dispute, of military complications. We are celebrating the grandest geographical feat of modern times. And the Queen sends forth a request for justice and an atonement for wrong. A French Ministry is changing, and we know not into what course we may drift or be drawn. A King has sat in judgment on the conduct of

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Balls and banquets, matinées and soirées, dancing, tea, and conversazioni, a summer carnival of all kinds of gaiety, and yet, to the home-returning traveller, there does not seem to be anything new in this monstrous feverish London. The Guards' ball at the Exhibition building will be very sumptuous; but it will be remarkably like other balls, past, present, and to come. Stay, we have seen something new since our return—the carte de visite of Prince Alfred in full Highland uniform. It is the prettiest and most picturesque photographic portrait we have seen for a long time. The Prince looks born a rover in his naval dress—one of the handsomest and most elegant of modern costumes—and the new carte de visite is, we think, an unanswerable rebuke to the discordant people who object to the wearing of uniform by our naval officers, to substitute a tunic for the dress coat, to replace the cocked hat by a navy cap, and to dismiss at a moment's notice all to take away the epaulettes altogether.

Water, it is said, in persistent dropping will wear away the hardest marble. Our readers may have to wait a very long time for the fact to be accomplished. A quarter of a century has elapsed since Mr. Charles Dickens, in his inimitable novelette, Sketches by Boz, had hundreds of imitators but few compeers worthy of his rivalry, drew attention to the abuses and the temporary evils of the system of employed in the millinery and dressmaking houses of the West End. Year; it is all time since "Nicholas Nickleby" was written—ever since we first read all about Mrs. Mantalini, and Miss Knagg, and poor Kate. At least twenty years have passed since Thomas Hood, in language as noble with indignation as fierce, dwelt on the sublime subject in "The Lady's Dream." Since then there have been numerous meetings held, and bills introduced, and "first hands," and leading articles written; but the water dropping has not worn out the stone. It is as hard as ever. Its components parts are pride and selfishness, and indifference, and cupidity, and it is as hard as the human millstone. An inquiry into a people's dirt who lately died of apoplexy in a fashionable dressmaking establishment has just thrown the public into a ferment, and, with the usual capricious and unreasoning impulsiveness, has all at once made against the particular modiste in whose employ this poor dead worshipped was what we do not wish to preach a crusade against. Anybody. She may be no more than dozens of millinery and dressmaking establishments in fashionable use. It is a question of overwork and late hours that needs denunciation and calls for abolition; and the supporters of the system, in the name of humanity, of disease and death, for haughty dames to whom Thomas Hood in vain appealed—who are morally responsible for the frightful evils so long complained of, so often denounced, and yet, for many, many years, so compulsorily tolerated, if not absolutely encouraged, by "parties of the first respectability."

The year before last M. Du Chaillu was deservedly one of the hottest comets of the season. He had some of the usual comet attributions to boast of. But Captain Speke and Captain Grant, which were two little black proteges, are undeniably the most popular and fashionable pets of the year. Nothing succeeds like a great. Getting aside the fact of their astounding geographical discovery, they seem to have come from a land of promise by far the best adapted for the growth of "de grow beneath their shoulders." What are we to think of Uganda, when unfortunate Speke is obliged to have recourse to ridicule a felony without benefit of clergy?—of Karagwe, where the majority of the black family are known as the children of the Great King, and among the head officials of the Court are first and second class executioners, and men who whistle on their fingers? Even that wretched country Unyoro, which we wished for what it became of the old sans and why the moon made faces at the earth; and the late entire Kingdom of Uganda, all have their share of the popular. The travels of Captains Speke and Grant will, we are sure, prove the book of the season, and engage in popularity the attention of Dr. Livingstone—or Dr. Colenso.

New ideas are always springing up and enjoy a fitful popularity, but some of the most promising and contentious disappear with a suddenness rivalling that of Professor Pepper's ghost. We don't hear quite so much about "Co-education" now, which was the latest "ism" in "Girton" which was to have united "all the talents," literary, legal, and artistical, in the service of social instruction, and to which the Bishops of Carlisle and her Holiness the Pope is said to be no capital hand at making a cannon. Ex-King Bomba, Brigands of Naples, Mrs. Peyser's new novel, and Mr. Gye's opera, will be willing to borrow all the pontifical "cannon" if they could be used as weapons of warfare against the Co-education "ism."

But, touching clubs, we don't know what has become of the Grosvenor-Lansdowne, which, in name has taken the place of the Public Cruscan" or the "Sesquepedalian." The gymnasium proposal was edifying, but hardly practicable. It was "too collegiate," and the next step in club innovation would have been, we suppose, to establish classes for the study of Greek and Latin, and the foundation of a club for the study of political economy. A correspondent of Notes and Queries has been asking for information respecting the "Goldenballs" Club, which, by the May we inquire what is the existing state of the "Goldenballs" Club in London? It seems to be the only association of the kind without some literary association in the metropolis.

On the other hand, there is said to be a young club in Grafton-street, Piccadilly, not pretending to do too much, but promising—to the extent of some actual performance—to do a great deal towards making tailors for light comedy and agreeable. The new club, which is "Chop and Steak" Club, where the amenities of polished intercourse are combined with the foundation of a feast of reason and flow of steaks, and potatoes, "like a boil of four." The collar of wines is reported to be excellent, and the cheapness of the entertainment is moderate, the entire tariff framed with "a strict regard to the economical tendencies of the age."—an age, by-the-way, which is economical in nothing but everything that is worthless, and which is prodigality in everything that is superfluous.

It was high time that a new social club to be established. Gentlemen were growing tired of being blackballed at the big Westend clubs, which, with the exception of old fogies and people of more than Venetian tyranny over eight hundred or a thousand quiet and good-natured men, who would be the foundation of a new institution, ought to be called "The Outcasts," every candidate for which was to be bound to have been blackballed at some club paying a rental of over two hundred a year. The "Outcasts" Club would be the best way to suggest as a most appropriate title for the new "gridiron" fraternity. Still, with all its drawbacks, there is a pressing public need for a "Beefsteak Club," held in the Lyceum Theatre, was established for a somewhat similar purpose. A combination of the Lyceum company, as well as noblemen and M.P.s, used to belong to "the steaks;" but, at present, we believe nobody under the rank of a Duke or a Sublieutenant-Governor has been admitted to the club.

Meanwhile we live in hopes of seeing organised, some day or another, a club among the Academicians and Royal Painters, on the model of Murger, the author of Scenes de la Vie de Bohème, "belonged, the waiter observed, to the Société des Buveurs d'Eau," which, we have only at stated times in the course of every month; and it was only when the water and bread and banquets took place that members were compulsory. At other seasons the members were privileged to drink anything they pleased to pay for or were lucky enough to be treated by, from claret to hippocras. Such a club, in which the only distinctive presence of the water-decanter among beverages on club nights rendered, in a manner, the drinking of it compulsory, would be delightfully, and logic into the argumentative contents of the Buveurs d'Eau.

Albert Smith once drew up two comic Acts of Parliament—one relating to evening parties, the other to matrimony. It is seldom, however, that a real Act of Parliament is funny. As a rule, our legislative enactments are most desperately dull reading. Lord Raynham and Mr. Dunlop have, nevertheless, brought into the Commons a bill which we can scarcely think will ever pass into an Act, which we have no hesitation in characterising as a "screamer." It is the shortest bill we have ever read, but, like a serpent, its sting is in its tail. The preamble is such that it is impossible to regulate the punishment inflicted in schools, and it proposes to enact that housebreaker, schoolmaster, tailor, tutor, or any other person having the care of youth, and not being a parent or nearest relative, shall make use, in the chastisement of children, of any instrument save a birch rod, under pain of being considered guilty of an assault and punished accordingly.

Lord Raynham is a most amiable and well-meaning nobleman; but this Birching Bill is, we take it, a mistake, humorous in the embryo, but calculated to be mischievous if brought to maturity. The authorised use of the birch for "serious flogging, and flogging in private," is barous and revolting punishment which nine-tenths of the public wish to see banished from all schools, private and public. If an educator has got into a difficulty, and knows the shoulders to the hand with a cane there is not, we opine, much harm done, although it is certainly practicable and very desirable that the birch should be abolished in toto at all. But to hint at the revival of a universal regime of rods and ogging-blocks is a most retrograde step. Under the circumstances mend given by this bill, schoolmasters would fog who never flogged before; and thousands of poor children would be continually punished with dishonour and contempt for birch-trees, as in Shenstone's "Schoolmistress," "shaping them into rods, and tingling at the view." If the bill passes, there will be a run upon birch-trees, and "birch" wood will be at a premium, and the village of "Much Birch" stripped to the last twig. We do not like the bill. We do not know where the birch is unknown and the "taws" are triumphant? Seriously, we do not like the principle on which should have been drawn by Dr. Busby—is calculated to do a great deal more harm than good.

We alluded lately to Professor Pepper's Polytechnic ghost. This ingenious and really astounding optical delusion, the invention of Mr. Dircks, C.E., and patented in the names of Messrs. Burnett, of High-street, Hoxton, and in the Strand (at the New Adelphi), is now about to be shown in the Gallery of Illustration, and will be exhibited at one of the new theatres on the Place du Châtelet. A French version of Miss Braddon's "Aurora Floyd," under the title of "La Comédie Miss Aurore," is the piece selected for the first appearance of this highly popular ghost before a French audience.

FINE ARTS.

REFORM OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

A MEMORIAL, signed by nearly a hundred leading members of the artistic profession, with a view to the reform and remodelling of the Royal Academy, has just been presented to the Royal Commissioners lately appointed to inquire into the constitution and working of the Royal Academy. The memorial indicates measures of urgently-needed reform in nearly accordance with those we wish to see adopted that we will quote it without further preface. The memorial runs thus:—

"1. That the present anomalous position of the Royal Academy should cease, and that its constitution should assume a truly national character.

"2. That a large and immediate increase be made in the numbers of associates, so as to include representatives of every branch of the profession. That a certain portion of the associates be admitted to take part in the council of the academy, and that all elections on subjects for the consideration of the council be made by the academicians and associates.

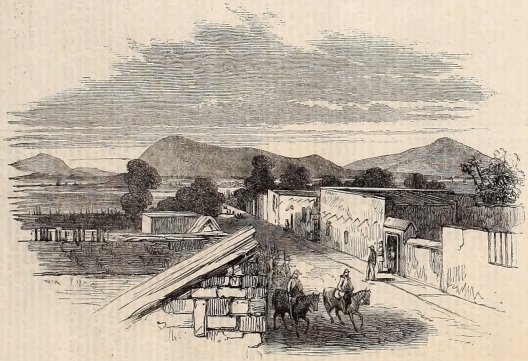
"3. That the associates be incorporated with the Royal Academy.

"4. That a large increase of space for exhibition purposes is absolutely required to meet the growing wants of the profession."

The most pressing causes of complaint are the insufficient space for exhibition and the inadequate number of the representative associates. The insufficiency of space for many years past has completed the ruin of the Academy as a school, has crippled, to a fatal degree, the department of landscape, which deserved exhibition, if our chief annual exhibition is to be a representative one, in the most complete condition and growth of art. This evil has been more severely felt from the fact that many works by academicians and associates which would have been exhibited in the Royal Academy have unquestionably been inferior to a large portion of the rejected. If an artist has once distinguished himself by the production of a meritorious picture, the academy has to give, we may concede that he has established a certain claim to be considered a fair professional, and especially associate, there can also be but one opinion. From the extraordinary growth of the arts during the present century, and within (say the last fifty years, and the proportionate increase of the number of works sent in, the present limit of the membership of the Royal Academy—namely, to include all the distinguished members of the profession—is altogether too small. Many artists, individually ignored, seeing no approximately adequate extension of the number was made to the limit, have withdrawn entirely their contribution

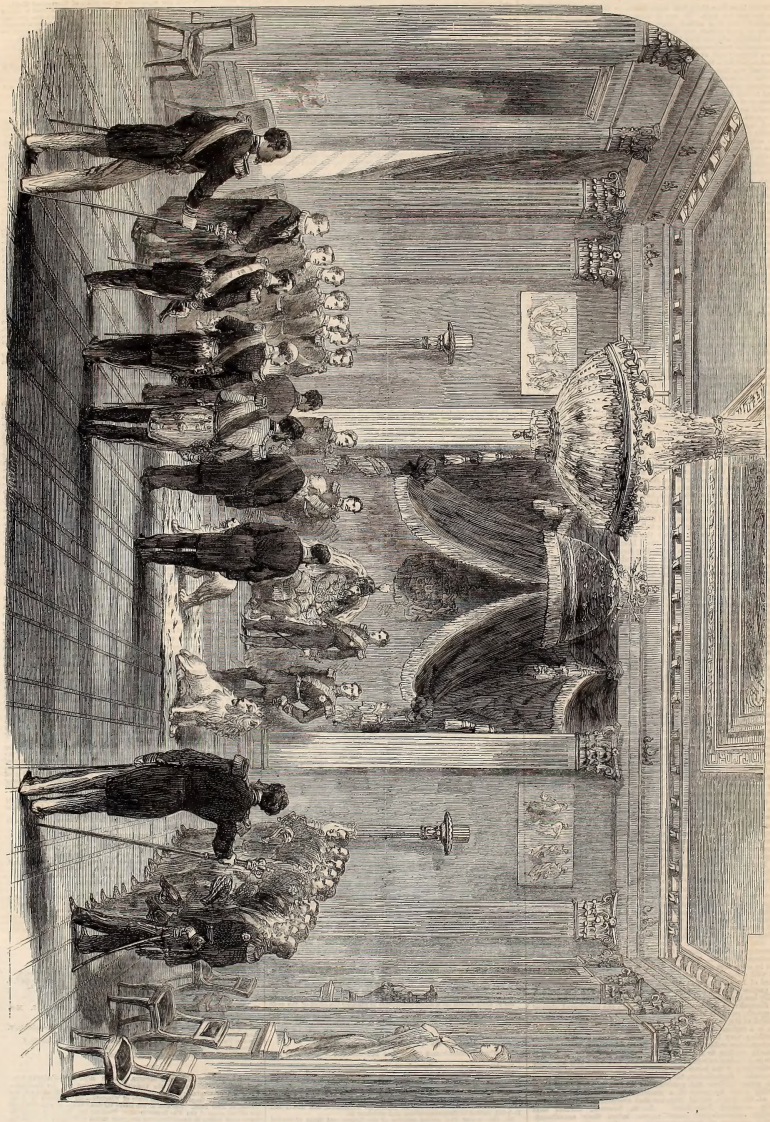
THE WAR IN MEXICO.

VIEW OF PUEBLA DURING THE SIEGE.



A STREET IN PALMAR.

ROAD TO MEXICO: SCENE OF THE DESTRUCTION OF A FRENCH CONVOY.—SEE PAGE 709.



STATE RECEPTION OF THE GREEK DEPUTATION BY THE KING OF DENMARK.—SEE PAGE 702.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

THERE have been three first appearances in the House of Commons this week—though three of too comic only can the term be literally applied; but in a certain sense they were first appearances. Forsooth in point of date was that of Mr. O'Hagan, the Attorney-General for Ireland, who has only lately obtained a place in Parliament. This honorable and learned gentleman came hither with a high reputation as an orator, and especially his private and personal capability, he is to be held in high esteem by every class and party in Ireland. The man was therefore well prepared for him, and the success of his act practically assured unless he should exhibit shortcomings of no ordinary kind. In answering one or two questions which had been put to him Mr. O'Hagan showed that he had a good voice and much power of expression; and in his first speech as a debater many of his real qualities were permanently brought out. He is undoubtedly fluent, but more in the Irish than the English sense of the word; he has much skilful in argumentation, he grows on the House as he gets rather to his declamation than to his ingenuity. His style is of a sonorous order, and is not deficient in point, but it wants terseness, and possesses none of the piquancies, of that gentleman, and was therefore well prepared for him, and the success of his act practically assured unless he should exhibit shortcomings of no ordinary kind. In answering one or two questions which had been put to him Mr. O'Hagan showed that he had a good voice and much power of expression; and in his first speech as a debater many of his real qualities were permanently brought out. He is undoubtedly fluent, but more in the Irish than the English sense of the word; he has much skilful in argumentation, he grows on the House as he gets rather to his declamation than to his ingenuity. His style is of a sonorous order, and is not deficient in point, but it wants terseness, and possesses none of the piquancies, of that gentleman, who is the very reverse of him, and this

THE FARM.

The great Rehmhan corncrops has poured forth its stores to its latest cuff, and the grand sherborne total is 69027 5s., or an average of £55 7s. 2d. for 1245 head. The sale in April averaged £55 19s. for 82 head, and that on Wednesday £54 17s. for 93 head. To this must be added £15,646 18s. 6d., or an average of £11 17s. 3d. on 1356 sheep and all the two great sales before Mr. Webb's death; and we find that the flocks and herds of "the shepherd king" have realised £84,674. Some surprises. The last sherborne sale realised thirty-two Celtes, at £14 11s. 3d. each; sixteen Southdowns, at £14 4s. 1d.; seven Blythe, at £44 8s.; three Beauties, at £30 6s. 8d.; and one Celte, at £28 14s.; three Irrumpents, at £42 10s.; and First Fruits, the young gold medallist bull, £168. The sum total for the sixty-three was £2413 17s., or an average of £41 1s. 6d. for bulls of all cows and heifers, and of £37 6s. for fourteen bulls. The Beauty (by Furbelow from Cumberland Rose 6th), the Celte (by Wolf), and Pet, at the Cobham sale in March, 1859, realised, with her nine descendants, 1253 gs.

The Warlaby calves for the first half of 1863 are on this wise:—red and white bull by Sir Samuel, from Red Rose 2nd, by Meadsley, and a roan bull, by Lord Lyon, from Valley, Lady Blithe, and Charlotte; and a roan bull and a red bull by Lord of the Hills from Rosebud and Helena. Mr. Rowland Kirk would have added fifty a dozen engaged at the battle of Worcester. Mr. Tore's Rescalot 3rd, so closely allied to her namesake, once the prize Queen of Kirkleby, has just had her third calf, a white heifer, Rescalot 4th, by Fitz-clarence, who is shortly to take his bow at Warlaby from Mr. Tore's Rescalotte, by Dr. M'Hale, is in process of engraving for the "Herd Book" (which will appear most probably in August), and her next was the 1st prize bull calf, by The Druid. We learn from the Weekly Messenger that the Grand Duchess tribe are to make their first public appearance at Warwick, whither a couple of cows and heifers, the Duke 9th and Grand Duchess 12th, are bound. Grand Duchess 4th died lately, and Grand Duchess 1st has been slaughtered. The last-named arrivals are Grand Duchess 14th, Grand Duchess 15th, and Grand Duke 12th, all three by Duke 9th.

The Smithfield club purpose giving £1025 in prizes next December, besides two £40 and four £20 cups, a gold medal for pigs, ten silver medals in addition to the £5 in the regulations, and £1 to the butcher's cap to the largest buyer. The £1005 for cattle is thus allotted:—Short-horns, and short-horn crosses, £200; Herefords, £125; crossbreds, £115; Scotch longhorns and polls, £70 each; Norfolk and Suffolk, £70; Welsh, £45; Devons, £45; Sussex, £45 each; and extra stock, £10—a sum which would bear enlarging when we consider what excellent animals are perform found in those stocks. The sheep shall have £500 allowed—Southdown, £100; Leicester, £80; crossbreds, mountain sheep (white faced and speckle or black faced in distinct classes), £70; Cotswold, £60; Lincoln, £60; Oxford and Shrops, £40 each; Oxfords, Kents and other long-wools, £30 each; and pens, £25.

It has been recently decided by the Queen's Bench that a poticlub threshing machine is not a fixture. Chrysler and Lee, the owners, "erected," within the meaning of the 7th section of the General Highway Act; and hence, it is within twenty-five yards of a highway, and may be properly seized, its owner is liable to the penalties imposed by such section. The Common Pleas have also held that when, in addition to the engine, a threshing machine is driven by a steam at a level crossing, and in consequence of the noise so caused a pair of horses which were standing by a cart in the road, and which were waiting to cross it became unmanageable and ran against a wall, the company were not liable for want of care, and limits for the damage is caused to the carriage and horses.

Sir Fitzroy Kelly (who has taken his time about it) has moved for and got his attorney-general, considering the effect of the malt tax as regards revenue, beer, and cattle feeding; and the bill to make the taking of an oath, fodder, &c., by means of false pretences with the purpose of extra feeding them not an indictable offence, but one merely of summary jurisdiction, has received a second reading. The case in which cattlers were punished for stealing their masters' cats for this purpose has always been held to be larceny, and this is the only means the Judges gave for upholding the conviction was, that by putting the horses into better condition the cattler's labour was diminished.

The Federal Council of Switzerland has passed a special resolution securing to England the advantages stipulated in the commercial treaty concluded between Belgium and Switzerland.

A despatch received at the Foreign Office from the British Envoy in Persia announces that the siege of Herat has at length been terminated, and that the city has been occupied by the troops of Dost Mohamed Khan.

In the Grenan Federal Diet, on Thursday week, the Special Committee on the affairs of Holstein brought in a report proposing that the Danish Government should be requested to withdraw the patent of the 30th of March. The Danish representative handed in a protest against it, and the report will be taken into consideration on the 1st inst.

A bill before the House of Lords defines the boundaries of British Columbia thus:—On the south the United States, and on the north 60 deg. north latitude; on the west the Pacific and the Russian territories, and on the east the Rocky Mountains and 120 deg. west longitude. Queen Charlotte's Island and other adjacent islands are included, except Vancouver and its adjacent islands.

The list of Queen's counsel, of commissions and distribution of prizes to the gentlemen cadets of the Royal Military Academy, by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, took place on Saturday in the newly-erected gymnasium at the rear of the institution, in the presence of a large number of officers, professors, and visitors, and the parents and relatives and friends of the students. Major-General Hamilton read a report of the conduct of Military Discipline, and the prizes were distributed to the favourable report from General Sandham, Lieutenant-Governor of the academy, was also read.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The unsettled state of the Polish question has continued to exercise considerable influence upon the market for National Securities. Notwithstanding that the most pacific intentions have evinced from the outset on the part of Russia, and that about £100,000 in gold has been disposed of to the Bank of England, numerous rumours have been taken place, and considerable fluctuations in the said prices have had a drooping tendency. The Unfunded Debt has, likewise, been a heavy feature, and the Consolidated Annuities have declined to 92¾, sold at 93 for the appointment of accommodation. The Bank of England will be prepared to lend money at 3 per cent in open market—which, should what be required, will be a considerable relief to the money market, which has been rather lower. The best commercial bills have been readily discounted, as follows:—

Thirty days' bills ...	3	per cent.	Four months' bills ... 4½ per cent.
Sixty days' bills ...	3½		Six months' bills ... 4½ per cent.
Three months' bills ...	4

In the Stock Exchange money is abundant, at short 3 per cent; and on the Continent it is moderately active, at full quotations. We annex the rates in to-day's Gazette:—

	Bank rate.	Open market.		Bank rate.	Open market.
Paris ...	per cent.	per cent.	Amsterdam	per cent.	per cent.
Vienna ...	6	5	Brussels	3	2½
Berlin ...	5	3½	Hamburgh	3	2½
Frankfort ...	5	3½	St. Petersburg	5½	5

A considerable decline has taken place in the value of silver. Mexican dollars have sold as low as 52½d., and bars at 61½d. per ounce.

The Australian gold exports for the present week amounted to about £200,000, chiefly from Australia.

The Government of the Province of India, London, and China have declared a dividend of 8 per cent for the current half year.

The usual monthly statement of the value of the shipment of gold to this country, and of those on the Continent are favourable.

The Canada Land Company, that of Westminster, a capital of £1,000,000, has been formed.

On Monday Home Stocks were dull and rather lower, whilst Indian Securities and Railway Shares, for Money, realised very full prices. Consols left off to 92¾; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 91⅞; Long Annuities 15 1-16; Exchequer Bills, 5s. to 8s. dis.; Bank Stock, 2274 to 274; India Five per Cent, 102 16s.; the Five per Cent Rupee Paper, 106; the Debentures, 1940 to 105; India Bonds, 18s. prem. Canada were rather lower on Tuesday. The Three per Cents, for Transfer, closed at 92¾; Ditto, for July, 92; Bank Stock, 273 to 274; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 91⅞; India Five per Cents, 108 to 4; Rupee Paper, 105¾ to 107¾; Ditto, 110 to 2; India Bonds, 14s. prem.; Exchequer Bills, 5s. to 8s. dis. On the following day there was no recovery in the market, and the purchases of cash were on a limited scale:—Consols left off to 92¾; Ditto, for Account, 92; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 91⅞; India Five per Cents, 108 to 3; Bank Stock, 273 to 274; Rupee Paper, 105¾ to 107¾, and 111 to 3; India Bonds, 18s. to 15s. prem.; Exchequer Bills, 4s. dis. to par. On Thursday the market exhibited increased heaviness:—Consols, for Money, sold at 92⅝; for Account, 92⅝; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 91⅞; Long Annuities, 15 1-16; India Five per Cent Stock has ranged 108¾.

American Securities have ruled steady, and prices have been well supported:—Atlantic and Great Western have realised 74¼; Erie Shares, 45; Illinois Centrals, 98 dis.; Ditto, 100-dollar Shares, sii paid, 62½; and Pennsylvania, 1st Mortgage, 85.

Much less firmness has been observed in the market for Foreign Securities, and the transactions in Turkish Stocks were very limited. Spanish Passives last week are as follow:—Brazilian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 99½ ex div.; Buenos Ayres 6 per Cents, 1861, 93; Chilian Six per Cents, 1860, 103; Ditto, 1861, 97½; Ditto, Coupons, 17½; Italian Railway, 81; Mexican Three per Cents, 1851, 36; Ditto, Deferred, 19; Ditto, Deferred, 19; Peruvian Six per Cents, 1857, 99½; Portuguese Old Three per Cents, 49½; Ditto, 1853, &c., 49½; Ditto, Four per Cents, 1853, 66; Russian Four per Cents, 1862, 88; Ditto, Five per Cents, 1862, 98; Spanish Three per Cents, 54½; Ditto, Deferred, 49½; Ditto, Passive, 14½; Ditto, Coupons, 15; Swedish Five per Cents, 1859, 104; Ditto, 1860, 104; Ditto, 1862, 71½; Ditto, Four per Cents, 1863; Italian Five per Cents, 74½; Dutch Four per Cents, 1863, 94; Ditto, Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 58; Ditto, Certs, 58.

The Joint-Stock Bank Shares have ruled firm; Alliance have sold at 35½; Anglo-Californian, 7½; Bank of Australasia, 74; Bank of Egypt, 11; Bank of London, 27½; Bank of Upper British Columbia, 1¼; Chartered of India, Australia, and China, 21½; Ditto, Scrip, 1½; Colonial Bank, 15½; Commercial of Australia, 11½; Imperial, 8½; London Chartered of Australia, 23 ex div.; London and Brazilian, 14½; London Chartered of Australia, 23 ex div.; London and South-Western, 43; Metropolitan and Provincial, 18½; Provincial of Ireland, 10½; Royal British Bank, 1½; Union of Australia, 52½; Ditto, New, 51½; and Union of London, 38½.

The Miscellaneous Securities the dealings have been far from numerous:—Canada Six per Cents have been done at 108; Ditto, Five per Cents, 104; Ditto, Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 101; Ditto, Four per Cents, 98; and Six per Cents, 113.

The Railway Share Market has been moderately active and the following are the leading transactions:—Australian Agricultural, 23½; Crystal Palace, 9½; Ditto, Preference, 45; Ditto, Extension, 4½; Great Northern, 127½; Ditto, Quadruple Six per Cent Bonds, 62; Joint-Stock Discount, 4; London Financial Association, 2½; Ditto, Preference, 4½; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 107; Peninsular and Oriental Steam, 78 ex div.; Rio de Janeiro City Improvement, 2½; Ditto, New, 2½; Royal Mail Steam, 87½; Scottish Central, 114; Ditto, 5 per Cent Preference, 114; Scottish North-Eastern, 104; Ditto, Preference, 114; Regent's Canal, 76; Trent Navigation, 93; and West London, 107.

The Foreign Railway Shares have been in fair request, but very inactive state, and in numerous instances quite nominal:—Antwerp and Rotterdam, 5½; Ditto, Preference, 10½; Ditto, Arnaud are Thursday's official closing quotations:—Buenos Ayres Great Southern, 6 per Cent Shares, 100; Ditto, Extension, 6 per Cents, 93; Ditto, A Stock, 86½; Great Northern, 13½; Great Western, 46; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 120; Ditto, Preference, 118; Ditto, Blackburn, 100; Ditto, Bolton and Bower, 43½; London and North-Western, 99½; London and South-Western, 92½; Ditto, Preference, 107; Ditto, Fifteen per Cent Bonds, 17½; Ditto, York, 90; South-Eastern, 93½; West Midland—Oxford, 46½; Ditto, Worcester, 22.

PREFERENCE SHARES.—Great Northern Five per Cent, 114½; Great Western, 120; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 118; London and North-Western, 114; Sales Four-and-a-Half per Cent, 101.

BONDS.—Great Northern, 4½ per Cent, 101 5-8.—Birkenhead, 90; Chester and Holyhead, 94½; Hull and Selby, 112½; North-Western, 1st, 112½; Royston, Hitchin, and Peterboro', 94.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.—Atlantic and St. Lawrence, 6½; Buffalo and Lake Huron, 12½; Grand Trunk of Canada, 1st Preference, 97½; Ditto, 2nd Preference, 83½; Eastern Bengal, 11½; East Indian, 109½; Grand Trunk of Canada, 1st Preference, 97½; Ditto, 2nd Preference, 83½; Great Indian Peninsula, 104½; Indian Branch, 3½; Madras Five per Cent Bonds, 109½; Scinde, 111½; Punjaub, 16½; Ditto, 10½; Ditto Shares, 2½.

FOREIGN.—Dutch Rhenish, 7½; Ditto, Eastern Junction, 1½; Luxembourg, 4½; Ditto, New, 4½; Luxembourg, 14½; Ottoman, 12½.

The amount of the Bullion in the Bank of England on Saturday last, as compared with the preceding statement:—

Amount of bullion deposited on the week ending this day	...	£19,985
Amount of bullion deposited on the week ending this day	...	£19,985
An increase of gold deposits of	...	20,310
An increase of notes issued of	...	2,510
An increase of securities of	...	22,820

The total amount of bullion is £27,257,663; public deposits amount to £10,279,823, and the private deposits to £13,809,996; securities are £12,766,459, and the stock of bullion is £19,998,115.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE, June 27.—Our market, to-day, was very moderately supplied with English wheat, and the trade ruled heavy, at a decline of 1s. per quarter on the prices of this day week. Foreign wheat was in fair request, at the currency of last Monday. Barley was in steady demand, and, in some instances, the currencies were 1s. per quarter higher. Floating cargoes of grain were in limited request, at the following rates:—Wheat, 40s. to 42s.; barley, 30s. to 32s.; and oats, 23s. to 25s. per quarter. The arrivals of wheat, barley, and oats, coastwise, have been about having continued heavy, rain were fell, at the late decline in value. Beans were in good request, at 36s. to 38s. per quarter. Peas sold at 38s. to 40s. per quarter. Flour was the best trade was dull.

The following are the imports into this day was by no means uncommon; yet the demand remained steady:—

Arrivals—English and Scotch: wheat, 3771 quarters; barley, 70; malt, 1130; flour, 550. Foreign: wheat, 10,000 quarters; barley, 2000; oats, 6000; flour, 2000 sacks.

Average prices of corn in England and Wales, for the week ending June 20:—Wheat, 44s. 8d.; barley, 34s. 8d.; oats, 24s. 8d.; rye, 34s. 8d.; grinding barley, 23s. 8d.; distilling ditto, 31s. 8d.; beans, 36s. 8d.; peas, 38s. 8d.; maize, 30s. 8d.; wheat meal, 40s. 8d.; flour, 38s. 8d. per 280 lbs.; Kingston and Ware, 60s. to 63s.; Chevalier, 62s. to 65s.; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, 56s. to 60s.; Scotch, 60s. to 63s.; Essex and Kent, white, 56s. to 60s.; Ditto, red, 52s. to 56s.; Suffolk and Norfolk, white, 52s. to 56s.; Ditto, red, 50s. to 54s.; Talavera, white, 52s. to 56s.; barley, 34s. to 37s. per quarter. Town-made flour, 40s. to 42s.; town households, 36s. to 38s.; Essex and Suffolk, 34s. to 36s.; Norfolk and Yorkshire, 32s. to 34s. per sack.

Good—Linseed is less active, but quotations continued steady, with no change. Other seeds, as well as cakes, were in moderate request.

Linseed, English, crushing, 52s. to 53s.; Calcutta, 53s. to 57s.; Bengeaul, 45s. to 47s. per quarter; Baltic, 45s. to 47s.; Mediterranean, 45s. to 47s.; Odessa, 45s. to 47s.; Black Sea, 45s. to 47s.; Egyptian, 45s. to 47s.; Bombay, 45s. to 47s.; Madras, 45s. to 47s.; Egyptian, £8 10s. to £9 10s.; ditto, foreign, £8 10s. to £9; rape cake, £7 10s. to £8 per ton; cotton cake, £6 10s. to £7; coriander, 22s. to 24s.; carraway, 30s. to 32s. per cwt.

Tobacco—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 7½d. to 8d.; of household ditto, 6½d. to 7d. per 4lb. loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 44s. 8d.; barley, 34s. 8d.; oats, 24s. 8d.; rye, 34s. 8d.; beans, 36s. 8d.; peas, 38s. 8d.

Duties.—Wheat, 12s.; barley, 6s.; oats, 4s.; rye, 6s.; beans, 7s.; peas, 7s.; flour, 2s. per barrel.

Gazette Averages.—Wheat, 44s. 8d.; barley, 34s. 8d.; oats, 24s. 8d.; rye, 34s. 8d.; beans, 36s. 8d.; peas, 38s. 8d.

Sugar.—The transactions in all kinds of raw sugar have been only moderate, and prices have ruled heavy. Refined goods are steady, at the currency of last week. At the docks and St. Louis, 88s. to 89s. per cwt. Refined goods are steady, at the currency of last week. At the docks and St. Louis, 88s. to 89s. per cwt. Refined goods are steady, at the currency of last week. At the docks and St. Louis, 88s. to 89s. per cwt.

Coffee.—Fine qualities of Ceylon, Jamaica, and Costa Rica are in fair demand, at nearly late rates. Stock 17th inst. against 24th inst. in 1862.

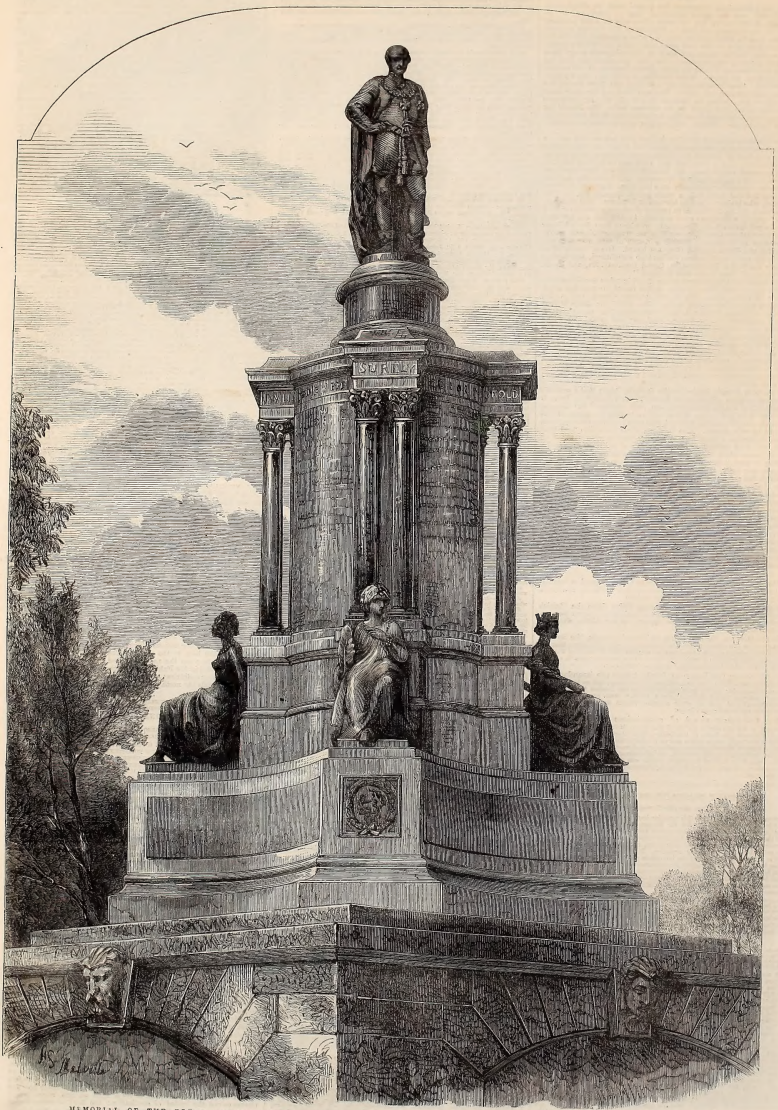
Rice.—The demand for this article continues dull, however, are well supported. Stock, 20,000 tons, against 15,000 tons last year.

Provisions.—Most kinds of butter are in fair request, at very full prices. Bacon is steady, at 60s. to 62s. per cwt. for the best Waterford. Hams are in moderate request, at 70s. per cwt.

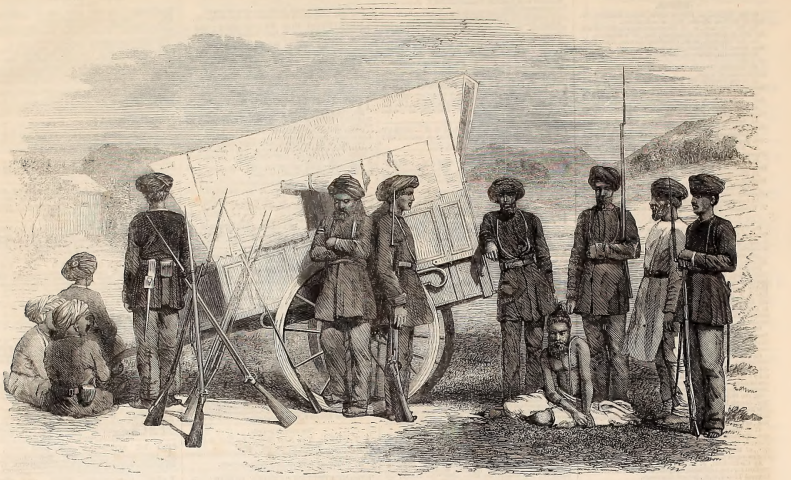
Tallow.—The market is flat, at 45s. 3d. per cwt. for P.Y.C., on the spot, and 45s. 6d. for the next three months. The stock is 7,400 casks, against 6,000 casks last year.

Oils.—Linseed oil is in moderate request, at 32s. per cwt., on the spot. Rape is selling slowly, at £36 10s. per tun. Olive is dull, at £45 per tun. Cocoa-nut oil is steady, at £39 per tun. Palm oil is dull, at £34 per tun.

Hops.—Pockets of 1862 are selling, at £4 to £5 5s. per cwt. Sussex, £4 to £5 5s.; Farnham, £5 5s. to £6 6s.; Kent, £4 to £5 5s.; Weald of Kent, £4 to £5 5s.; Mid Kent, £4 to £5 5s.; East Kent, £4 to £5 5s.; Worcester, £4 to £5 5s.; Yearlings



MEMORIAL OF THE GREAT EXHIBITION OF 1851 AND OF ITS FOUNDER THE LATE PRINCE CONSORT.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

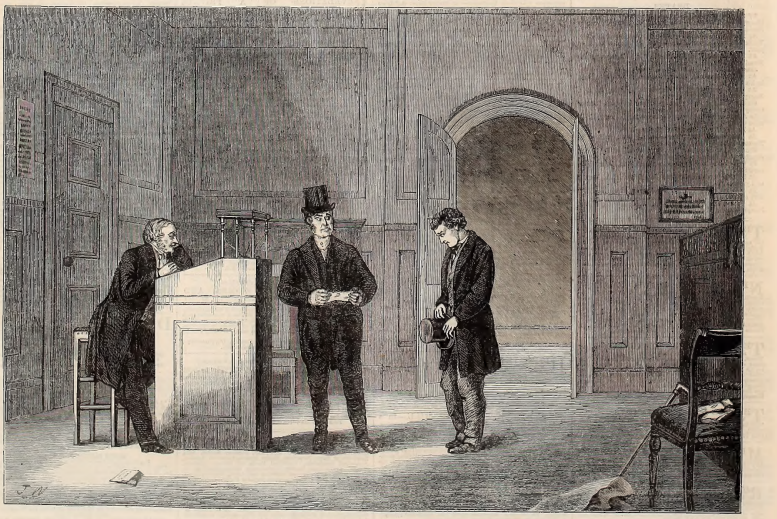


SHOLAPORE NATIVE (INDIAN) POLICE IN CHARGE OF A HINDOO REBEL.—SEE PAGE 703.

ante, all with bronze capitals and bases. Between the pilasters are four tablets taking a circular form, and inscribed with a history of the exhibition and the dedication of the memorial. These tablets, as well as the columns, are monolithic. The columns support an entablature which breaks round them. In the friezes of this are incised texts. Above the entablature, carrying up the outline of the tablets, rises the pedestal of the crowning statue. It is one block of red granite, thus continuing the line of colour throughout the monument. In the statue the Prince is represented, by her Majesty's express command, in the robes of the Great Master of the Bath. Minute attention has been paid to the detail of the robes and orders.'

"THE TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN."

MR. TOM TAYLOR'S new drama, which is so excellently acted that it is marked with a completeness not frequently witnessed on the stage, progresses in the good opinion of the public, and abundantly illustrates the difficulty which the criminal population have to encounter in their efforts to regain a position in society. The hero of the piece, as our readers know, is really innocent of the charge on which he was convicted and transported, and, on his return from Portland, gains a respectable situation, and is about to be married to the grateful girl who had recommended him to the post. But his evil genius follows him; and his former companions in dissipation, unwilling that he should gain an advantage in which they may not partake, denounce him to his employer. The scene is very cleverly managed. There is great variety in it. Hope and fear divide the soul of the returned convict (played by Mr. Neville) until all doubt ends in his dismissal from his employment. It is not the detective (whose part is undertaken by Mr. Horace Wigan) who denounces him, but, as we have suggested, his early acquaintances who had originally betrayed him into error. All now appears to be lost. In the further progress of the play the poor fellow is tried to the utmost, and things come to the worst. Then, by an inevitable law, they mend; and at the conclusion of the piece he has before him a future which abounds in promise of better days.



SCENE FROM "THE TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN," AT THE OLYMPIC THEATRE.

* The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

BIRTHS.

On the 8th ult., at Hornet Ayres, South America, the wife of William Flowers, Esq., of a daughter.

On the 14th inst., at 91, Gloucester-square, Hyde Park, the wife of Alexander Maynard, Esq., of a daughter.

On the 16th inst., at 97, Gloucester-square, Hyde Park, Mrs. Alfred J. Ellington, of a daughter.

At Peel-park, the wife of Major Peel, Captain Bourchier of a son.

At Stanton, Dorset, the wife of Major Porter, late Carabineer, of a son.

At Chelsea, the wife of John T. Lowe, Esq., late Bengal Cavalry, of a son.

At Ashwell-house, the wife of the Rev. Alfred Pavey, of a son.

At Angell-town, Brixton, the wife of the Rev. Matthew Vaughan, B.C.L., of a daughter.

At Kensington Gardens-square, the wife of the Rev. Henry Fry, M.A., of a daughter.

At Devonport, the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon, 7th Regiment, of a daughter.

At Wolverton, Bucks, the wife of the Rev. F. W. Harcourt, of a daughter.

At Cowley Grove, Uxbridge, the wife of Captain G. B. Hennicker, R.N., of a son.

At Shorncliffe, the wife of Major Spier Hughes, 34th Regiment, of a daughter.

At Cambridge, the wife of the Rev. George W. Weldon, of a daughter.

At Lockington, Northamptonshire, the wife of Captain T. Wickham, 15th Hussars, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On Thursday, the 18th inst., at the Church of the Holy Trinity, Kensington, by the C. C. Harrison, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Major Henry Hope Mundell, late of her Majesty's 8th Regiment, to Mary Anne, only daughter of John Walker Hall, Esq., of Berkeley-square, London.

On the 18th inst., at the parish church, Clarkston Kings, Cheltenham, by the Rev. Richard Greenall, Incumbent of Stanwell, and Vicar of Clarkston Kings, assisted by the Rev. Henry Barnard, Vicar of Tatton and Prebendary of Wells, George A. Hamilton, Captain 10th Hussars, son of the late Colonel Charles Graham, C.B., Bengal Artillery, to Lydia Caulfield, youngest daughter of the late Rev. Henry Smalley Potter, Esq., of East Court, Charlton Kings. No cards.

On the 23rd inst., by the Rev. Richard Greenall, Rural Dean, Incumbent of Stanwell, and Vicar of Clarkston Kings, Captain Francis Lyon, Royal Horse Artillery, to Fleet, youngest daughter of the late Hon. Arthur Annesley.

On the 16th of May, at St. Andrew's Church, Red River Settlement, by the Venerable Archdeacon Hunter-Duncan, John Griffin, Esq., Chief Trader, Hon. Hudson's Bay Company, to Mary Ann, eldest daughter of Samuel Sinclair, Esq., late Lieutenant and Acting Chief Factor in the Hon. Hudson's Bay Company's Service.

On the 16th inst., at Hampton Church, by the Rev. Joseph Hetherington, M.A., Henry, second son of the late Robert Ley, Esq., of Ayshford, Devon, to Agnes Mansfield, to Martha, fourth daughter of the late John Sparks, Esq., of Clifton Hall, Workington, Cumberland.

At St. Mary's, Bromsgrove, Alexander Gordon, son of the Rev. Edward Gordon, Rector of Chaceley, Worcester, to Florence Barham, daughter of Sir Frederick Sinke, Bart., K.C., of Ashwood-house, near Bridgenorth, Salop, and Conley-square, London.

At Cheltenham, C. C. Corbyn, Esq., H.M.'s Bengal Medical Service, to Minnie, daughter of the late Lieutenant-General Frith, C.B., Royal Engineers.

At Hillside-crescent, Major Robert C. Dodgson, 41st Regiment, to Jane Agnes, daughter of Mr. George Bell Stevenson, D.D., Professor of Church History, Edinburgh University.

At Denston, Suffolk, Mr. William Goodson, Denston Park, to Elizabeth Ann, youngest daughter of Mr. George Isle of Denston Hall.

At St. James's, Piccadilly, James Robert Walker, Esq., M.P., Barrister-at-law, son of James Walker, Esq., of Hutton, Yorkshire, to Louisa Marlborough, daughter of Sir John Lowther Johnstone, Bart., of Springfield, Dumfriesshire.

At Edinburgh, the Rev. R. B. Gobat, M.A., Incumbent of Ipswich, Wexham, son of the Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem, to Jemima, daughter of Captain Arnold, Esq., of Lethbidel, Kincardineshire.

At St. Peter's, Dublin, Captain F. Lyon, Royal Horse Artillery, to Flora, daughter of the late Hon. A. Annesley.

DEATHS.

On the 21st inst., at Hampstead, after scarlet fever, Alfred Champneys, third son of the Rev. R. C. Savage, Vicar of Nuneaton, aged 5 years.

At Yexford, Suffolk, Lucy Elizabeth, widow of the Rev. W. Burton, late Rector of Wenhaston, Suffolk, in the 82nd year.

At Brighton, Wm. Beaumont, Esq., Manager of the Birmingham Banking Company, in his 71st year.

James Hamilton, Esq., of Kilmarnock, Ayrshire.

At Feltham-crescent, Brompton, George Godwin, Esq., in his 73rd year.

At Bath, Jane, relict of Henry Davis, Queen-garden, the Rev. Henry Hutchins, in his 86th year.

On the 15th inst., at Swindon, Somerset, Mrs. Thomas Corbyn Jones, &c., in the 68th year of his age.

In Athens-road, Bayswater, Mary, Captain George, R.N., aged 41.

At Bramhister, Elwand Fox, Esq., aged 86.

At Randolph-street, Camden-town, Ann, widow of Thomas Gaisford, Esq., aged 86 years.

Elizabeth, widow of the Rev. Lemuel Hall, of Foyle, and daughter of the late Rev. John Vesbey, of Ardmore, co. Derry.

In Wyndham-place, Bryanston-square, Ann Esther Hall, aged 84.

At Lyham, Cheshire, the Rev. Wm. M'Ivor, M.A., Rector of Lymm, aged 74.

At the Parsonage, West Malvern, Rachel Elizabeth, wife of the Rev. C. Bradley, M.A., Incumbent.

At Park-place-villas, Maida-hill West, Angela, wife of Joseph Vaughan, Esq.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—On Monday and during the Week, Mr and Mrs. Alfred Wigan in the new and successful Comedy, in Six Acts, by Sir Arthur Helps, entitled Brighton.—The two new farces, AN UNLUCKY MORTAL and LAST TASK, by Messrs. Brough and Halliday, respectively, every Evening. On Wednesday, July 15, Mr. Buckstone's Benefit, when the Comedy of Brighton, being the 50th time, will be played, and on five other Benefits.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER.—On MONDAY next, June 29, and DURING THE WEEK, the Drama in which, at Easter, a new Drama, entitled THE HAUNTED MAN (in which Mr. Webster will appear), will be produced. Preparations are advancing for the production of Mr. Dion Boucicault's Drama, entitled Alfred Mellon, and Miss M. Simcox; and ILL-TREATED IRON-MASTER, by Messrs. Brough and Halliday. Stalls, 5s.; Pit, 2s.; Private Boxes, 21s. Nation Stalls and Miss E. Saily. Commence at Seven.

THEATRE ROYAL, LYCEUM.—Monday next, and during the Week, the Week, at 8, SUNDAY, at 7, Mr. Charles Dickens' Story, Dombey and Son, Messrs. Wilkie Collins, Hollingshead, and Mr. Fechter. Mr. Fechter will appear in the Drama, entitled THE DUMB MAN OF MANCHESTER, by Messrs. Wilkie Collins and Hollingshead. Mr. Fechter will appear in the Drama, entitled THE DUMB BOY

THE UNION BANK OF ENGLAND and WALES, 2, Threadneedle-street.—Capital £1,000,000 in 100,000 shares of £10 each, with power to increase. Paid-up £500,000. £20—£1. Bring Warrants on Parr's Bank, Limited, Lombard-street, Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, and Tritton's, 50, Lombard-street, and the Branches of the Establishment, Bright, Wood, Esq., Foreign Department, Liverpool. Geo. Em. Glasspoole to Parr's—H. Morrice, late Chief Inspector Glasgow to the Company's Glasgow, Paris, Liverpool Branches. Bankers, Parr's Bank, Limited. The Directors are prepared on the customary conditions of Joint Loans Banks, Deposits received, subject to notice of withdrawal. The rate of interest will depend on the period for which the money is lodged. Persons having current accounts are therefore any portion of their balances not required for immediate use, may obtain the benefit of either, in Paris or London, as required. Approved securities will be accepted and credits opened in London, Paris, and Liverpool, effected with the Establishments of the Company in those cities, and with their correspondents in all parts of the world. Bills discounted, and dealings with exchange and great letters of credit and circular notes on all the cities of Europe. The Bank will transact exchange of letters of foreign stocks, thousand stocks, shares, and securities intrusted to its care. Dividends and interest on foreign stocks, shares, and securities collected, and proceeds remitted. And generally all kinds of English and foreign banking business.

JAMES W. MILLER, Secretary.

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, Brompton, S.W.—Supported by voluntary contributions. Additional and continuous support is required to meet the current expenses of this charity.

CHARLES H. GAINSFORD, M.D., Physician.

FINSBURY-SQUARE.—A HOUSE, or Part of a House, to be LET. Provided for ten weeks from the 7th July.—Apply at 3, Finsbury-square, City, between the hours of 10 and 4.

PHOTOGRAPHIE CLASSIQUE (PATENCHE). 31, Bishopsgate-street, Within Paris, London. Messrs. Ridgway, Bros. & Co. have the honour to announce that they have secured the services of Mr. Claudet, of Paris, to execute, in the above style, all kinds of English and foreign banking business.

BINDING THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—Subscribers and Purchasers can have their VOLUMES NOTED in the Binding, and every Number inserted IMMEDIATELY on publication by sending them, carriage-paid, with Part Office order payable to LEWIS HOOL, Bookbinder, 31, Essex-street, Strand, London. Two-volumes bound on the Proprietors.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—The Authentic Heraldry of the Nobility and Gentry of Great Britain and Ireland, Arms, Crests, &c., authentically. "The Llanover-inn Manual of Heraldry." 3s. 6d., by post 4 stamps. H. Sad Dan Rolfe, Lincoln's-inn Gate.

FOR FAMILY ARMS—the LINCOLN'S INN HERALDIC OFFICE—and Name of County. Arms painted and engraved on Seals, Dies, and Plate, 5s. each. Crests on Rings, Seals, &c., 6s. each. Gilt, Enamelled, and Coloured in the first style of Art. Fee, 5s. each. H. SAD DAN ROLFE, Lincoln's-inn Gate.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—Engraved by the Lord of Crest Kings-at-Arms. Crest on Seals or Rings, 6s. 6d.; Arms, 10s. 6d. Sketch and Search Fee, 5s. Crest, 7s.; a Book-Plate, Arms, and Crest, with Name, 21s.

SIGNET CREST RINGS, 18-carat, Hall-marked, Solid Gold, 10s. 6d. Ditto, handsome Chased Gold, 21s. Ditto, large for Arms, Crest, and Motto, £3 10s.—H. SALT, Silversmith, Die-sinker, Heraldic Artist, Great Turnstile, Holborn.

NO CHARGE at PARKINS and GOTTO'S for Fine Stamping Visiting-paper and Envelopes. Coloured Stamping reduced to 2s. per 100. Perfect Note Paper, Thick Cream Laid, Initial, and Address Dies cut at half price. The public are invited to visit the Show-rooms, and see the trade at Lower Prices. 24, Oxford-street, Manufactory, Sicilian-court, Sicilian-street.

NO PRIZE WRITING-CASE, fitted with Paper, Envelopes, Blotting-book, Pen-case, &c., has so neat portfolio for any part of the world as Tuck's Improved Writing-case in sewage in PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street, London.

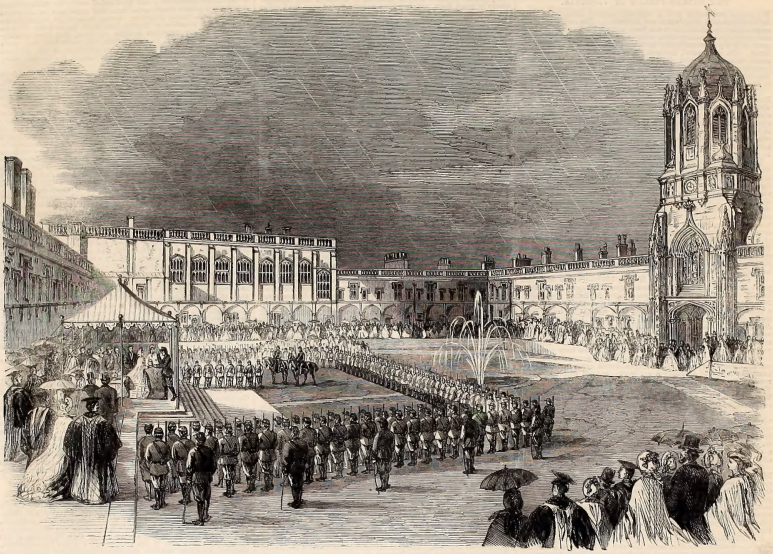
PHOTOGRAPHIC ALBUMS.—A choice of 300 Patterns, 4s. to £5. In each 3 bags variety cards, gilt-edged, beautifully bound, and highly ornamented, from 10s. 6d. 24s. The public are invited to inspect the stock. PARKINS and GOTTO, 24, Oxford-street, London. Albums for postage-stamps.

NO CHARGE MADE FOR STAMPING PAPER AND ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, or Address Dies. Radiegraf Cream-laid Note paper, 4s. per 100. Cream-laid Wove, 5s. per 100. Thick Cream Laid, 4s. per 100. Embossing, 1s. per 100. Steel Dies, 5s. each. Illuminating and Heraldic Office. Arms found at 3s. 6d. Sketch, 2s. 6d. Solid Gold Rings, 18-carat, 10s. 6d. Solid Gold Seals, 18-carat, 10s. 6d. Solid Gold Pencil-cases, 18-carat, 10s. 6d. Solid Gold Pencil-cases, 18-carat, 10s. 6d. Solid Gold Pencil-cases

NEW MUSIC.

FAUST. Opera. By CH. GOUNOD. Performed at Her Majesty's Theatre with unprecedented success. The whole of the Music is now ready.

Opera complete, Voice and Piano, with Italian or French Words ... ...



OXFORD COMMEMORATION: PRESENTATION OF PRIZES TO THE UNIVERSITY RIFLES BY THE PRINCESS OF WALES—SEE PAGE 705

OXFORD COMMEMORATION: THE ARCH OF STEEL—RECEPTION OF THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS BY THE APOLLO UNIVERSITY LODGE OF FREEMASONS—SEE PAGE 705

THE BATTLE-FIELDS OF VIRGINIA.

We present our readers with a carefully-prepared Map of the great battle-fields round Washington and Richmond. The majority of the maps hitherto published have not been compiled with sufficient care and knowledge to render them reliable or intelligent guides in the great military movements that have been followed with such deep interest. We understand, however, that an officer of General Lee's army, who served with that General and Generals Jackson and Longstreet during the whole beginning of the struggle, a native of Fredericksburg, is in England and preparing an authentic series of maps of the war.

The successive campaigns of M'Clellan, Pope, Burnside, and Hooker are no doubt fresh in the memory of our readers; but the details of the rival States, have been in turn threatened and defended. It will be found that there is an unfamiliarity with the military movements of which the Old State of Virginia will in all probability be yet the scene.

With this preface we will proceed to a more detailed account of the various battles. The country represented on the map is about 200 miles long by 140 broad. The battles fought thereon ranged, therefore, over a space similar to that extending between Inverness and the Scottish border. The figures used, it will be seen, are of two characters. The larger denote twenty-four successive battle-fields, or more or less important; the smaller indicate the several encampments and the various routes by which the masterly marches of the late General Jackson to the rear of the Federal army were accomplished to defeat their purpose. It should also be said that, for the purpose of avoiding unnecessary detail all common encampments, on town have been erected upon our map save such as are of military or strategic importance. We shall now proceed to explain the battlefields in detail, and in their methodical order, which will be found to be their chronological, order.

1. Yorktown (April 6 to May 4, 1863).—It was from this point that the first serious advance upon Richmond was made. It will be seen, indeed, that when General M'Clellan projected Richmond from Fort Monroe, with an army of 158,000 men and a large fleet of gun-boats, the Confederates had but 11,000 men to oppose to them. Three lines of works across from Yorktown to the James River, distance about twelve miles. A portion of it, however, was completed in these lines and armaments. General M'Clellan arrived with his army from the Rappahannock in time to stop the progress of the Federal General, who, with a force of 40,000 men, proceeded directly to Richmond, as M'Grudor only had 5000 men under his command. Upon General M'Clellan being reported by the same officer to have boats Johnston had to abandon his works, lest his supplies, which reached him by steamer, &c., by the York River, should be cut off. There were some unnecessary casualties upon Johnston's works; but they failed, with considerable loss to the Federals. Artillery duels continued for many days.

2. At Williamsburg (May 5, 1862) the Federals fell with force upon Johnston's rear as he retired towards Richmond. The actions were very hotly contested, and resulted in great slaughter, the total killed and wounded amounting to 4000. Johnston's object was to shell; but they could not compass impossibilities—the state of the roads and the heroic endurance of the Confederates baffling all their efforts.

3. Barhamsville (May 7th).—Here General M'Clellan next landed, 50,000 men, accompanied by a fleet of vessels which cut off much of the rearguard and waggon-train of Johnston, under command of General G. W. Smith, which must necessarily have fallen into the hands of the Federal General Smith directed Brigadier-General Whiting, with 8000 men, to attack the Federals and drive them back to the river. He expected an attack in the dense forests, where Texan rifles lurked behind every tree, had its effect, and the trains passed in safety all that day.

4 and 5. "The Seven Pines" and "The Fair Oaks" (May 31 and June 1).—General Keyes crossed the Chickahominy, and General Casey, Chickahominy, turned upon and attacked him. The action ceased after dark, M'Clellan's position being now seven miles in advance of the hour and the loss of General Johnston rendered the hard day's struggle fruitless. Though the Chickahominy rose on the night of the 1st of June, 1862, General Lee assumed the general command of the Confederate forces.

6 and 7. Battles near Meehanicsville (June 26).—General Jackson at this time was near Hanover River. General Lee, knowing that General M'Clellan had gone in Richmond, ordered Jackson to join him. He ordered General Whiting to take a division and proceed by night, with energy and despatch, via Lyndhurst and Charlottesville, to Meehan's River (about 200 miles), and report to General Jackson.

While General M'Clellan was being reinforced by Franklin from Washington, and General Banks at Winchester, to look out for Stonewall Jackson, who had been thus heavily reinforced and might threaten either of these forces, by the time Jackson came to the [illegible] and crowns (according to route), taking those very reinforcements back towards Richmond, and before M'Clellan could march on to the rear, some miles north-east of Meehanicsville. As soon as Lee knew of Jackson's arrival at Hanover, Longstreet with A. P. Hill, marched by a roundabout and swept down upon Meehanicsville, and on Thursday, June 26, he was in force at Jackson, in which he remained all night and long, but were only saved from entire destruction by the slow movements of one of the Confederate Generals and the admirable tact and skill of A. P. Hill. Here M'Clellan lost his heaviest guns and numerous artillery. These battles continued for seven days, and were fought over twenty-five miles of ground, and were fought by men and horses, waggons, cannon, muskets, blankets, &c.

7. Gaines' Mill and Gaine's Farm.—Among the battle-fields of June 27, when General Hood's Texans, at command of General Whiting, stormed the left centre of M'Clellan, and Jackson, Longstreet, the Hills, &c., fought over miles of ground.

8. Battles were fought at White Oak Swamp, Sunday and Monday, June 29–30.

9. Malvern Hill, the scene of the terrible action of Tuesday, July 1.

10. The above were engagements in the last days of June, when they have been computed from 25,000 to 30,000. Their result was to deliver Richmond from its endanger [illegible].

10. Second battle at Malvern Hill (August 5–6).

11. August 9 and 9.—Jackson, at march will be found denoted by the smaller figure 3 and arrows, here defeated Banks at Cedar Mountain (also called "South-west Mountain" and "Slaughter Mountain") [illegible] 25,000.

12.—Artillery duel and skirmishing were continued along the Rappahannock [illegible].

13. August 29 and 30.—Jackson here fought the second battle at Manassas. The third figure 3 and arrows, and the smaller numbers, took to get in Pope's rear, Pope having fallen back to Warrenton, Jackson had marched all day and night some fifty miles through Jefferson, Orleans, and Salem, meeting on the way Longstreet, who had to Alexandria the forces sent out to capture General Stuart. He then took and destroyed a railroad train, re-crossed the Bull Run Mountains at Manassas; and, when Pope sent several divisions to surround him, he met and fought them separately and defeated them until Longstreet came up.

14. Longstreet stopped by M'Dowell at Thoroughfare Gap, forced his way through, after an action of a few hours, hastening to reinforce Jackson.

15. Jackson's battle-field at Sudley, and Longstreet's at Groveton, and Manassas. The actions began on Friday, Aug. 29, 1862, and were renewed on Saturday, ending, after a hard day's fight, in a defeat. The line of battle extended in a crescent four miles long, and crossed that of Hill ("Stonewall") Bull Run") at right angles.

16. Battle of Chantilly (September 1). The small figure 3 and arrows denote Jackson's route in again getting on the Federal flank on Sunday, after marching and fighting for a week. Jackson again fought the Federal rear, at Fairfax Court House. General Pope sent General Kearney and others to hold him in check at Chantilly; soon he drew off his troops to Washington. Kearney was killed. The Federals fought well in all these engagements, and attempted to seek shelter in the works around Washington.

17. Bradock's Field, or South Mountain. General D. H. Hill here held M'Clellan in check until a portion of Longstreet's corps came up.

18. Harper's Ferry (Sept. 14, 15). When General Lee went into Maryland he detached several batteries of artillery, with sufficient troops to guard them, and had them secretly posted upon the Loudon Heights, opposite the Shenandoah side of Harper's Ferry, and on the Maryland Heights, on the Potomac side. About the time that these batteries were getting into position Jackson diverged from the road from Boonsboro' to Hagerstown, which General Lee took, and pursued the road leading to a ford over the Potomac, above Harper's Ferry. His course is indicated by fig. 4 and arrows. By this means he drove a large force of Federals out of Martinsburg and followed them to Harper's Ferry. Having then arrested the place, the batteries opened on them from the Loudon Heights, and when they took refuge in the fortress on the Maryland side of the river, Jackson opened on them from the Maryland Heights, Jackson meanwhile shelling them from his position on the river side. The place, having ammunition surrendered, with very large stores, artillery, muskets, &c. About 11,000 prisoners were taken, including General Miles, in command. The surrender of Harper's Ferry was made on Monday. That night Jackson marched to Shepherd's-town, and on Tuesday night was at General Lee's left flank, preparatory to the battle of Sharpsburg, which culminated on Wednesday.

19. On the night of Sept. 14 General Lee withdrew his men from South Mountain, in consequence of General M'Clellan having obtained possession of Crampton's Gap, leading directly to Sharpsburg; and, proceeding to the latter position, he there awaited the coming of Jackson. General M'Clellan fought on Monday afternoon (16th), and General Lee stood at bay for two days on the south-west bank of Antietam, using his artillery to delay M'Clellan's attack until Jackson could join him. The battle commenced on the 17th, the action of Harper's Ferry; and on Wednesday, the 17th, he fought a battle on the extreme left of the Confederate line, which was extended to [illegible] miles long.

General M'Clellan had three lines of battle; General Lee was scarcely able to present a single line, which, in some places, was not adequately supported. In addition to this he had no force in reserve, which was so admirably used that, when the Confederates at any point drove in the Federal line, which they often did, the Confederates were generally able to hold it. On the 18th, the Federal signal corps contributed to this result, by giving immediate notice to Stonewall Jackson of every move of the Federal troops. There was great disparity of numbers between the contending forces. The action lasted from daylight until dark on the 17th, but it did not get into position until late in the afternoon, and his men were wearied by their march from Harper's Ferry. General Lee, finding himself short of ammunition, ordered his return to Virginia. It is said that M'Clellan did not renew the action on Thursday, crossed the Potomac, and left the Confederates in undisputed possession of Maryland. The Federals picked up not know the army was gone until they found the enemy had crossed the river.

20. Shepherdstown (September 20).—On Friday there was an artillery duel between the Confederate General Pendleton and M'Clellan, across the Potomac River at Shepherdstown; but on the next day Jackson directed that a few brigades of M'Clellan's army should be allowed to cross the river, and then attacked. The Federals did attack them. It is impossible to estimate the immense numbers that were slaughtered or drowned in this ravine. The fact is, that M'Clellan did not renew the action on Thursday, crossed the Potomac, and left the Confederates in undisputed possession of Maryland. The Federals picked up not know the army was gone until they found the enemy had crossed the river.

20. Shepherdstown (September 20).—On Friday there was an artillery duel between the Confederate General Pendleton and M'Clellan, across the Potomac River at Shepherdstown; but on the next day Jackson directed that a few brigades of M'Clellan's army should be allowed to cross the river, and then attacked. The Federals did attack them. It is impossible to estimate the immense numbers that were slaughtered or drowned in this ravine. The fact is, that M'Clellan did not renew the action on Thursday, crossed the Potomac, and left the Confederates in undisputed possession of Maryland. The Federals picked up not know the army was gone until they found the enemy had crossed the river.

21. Fredericksburg (December 13).—This was the first occasion on which General Lee had the chance of fighting on the defensive. He selected a magnificent plain about five miles long and from two to two and a half broad, and surrounded it with abattis, rifle-pits, and batteries. Here he awaited the attack of General Burnside, under command of General Burnside, ventured. Longstreet was on the left, with his artillery in front, in the form of a crescent, and swept the plain were in the form of a crescent, and were such surmounted with batteries and entrenchments. The plain was thoroughly well acquainted with the extent of the Federal losses, he would have moved from his position and completed their destruction. As it was, he fully expected that as it was, he would have moved from his position and completed their destruction. As it was, he fully expected that as it was, he would have moved from his position and General Burnside succeeded in withdrawing his army in the night, crossing the river by the bridges. The Federals lost 12,000 men, and the Confederates 5000. The latter were in some cases shot and shell were sent five miles across the river and plain. There were few trees upon the plain, and consequently the wounded were not protected from the fire of the guns.

Stonewall Jackson had his head-quarters on a hill in rear of Longstreet's position, and Lee's were also on the hill. The city within one hundred yards of where he stood. As St. Marye's-hill the ground was occupied by the Federals in great numbers, massed in some places two or three deep. The cross-street on this hill formed the principal scene of the slaughter of the Federals.

22. (March 17, 18-3). A cavalry engagement between a large body of Federal cavalry (said to be 2500) and Brigadier-General Pix-Lee with 1500 men, at Rev. J. [illegible]. The latter were driven back but the Federals re-crossed the Rappahannock. General Lee had only 25 men killed and wounded.

23. The Wilderness.—General Jackson, with a portion of his corps, made a flank movement on the right of the Federal army to turn the flank of General Hooker, whose army had crossed the river and was in the Wilderness. The Federals were driven back and the fords and pontoons by which alone he could re-cross the river. Had it not been for his being wounded by his own men he would, in all probability, have destroyed the army of General Hooker, or fully way back to the river. Jackson had only 20,000 men in the action. Longstreet's corps was not engaged. The loss was 15,000 to Hooker.

24. Marye's-hill.—General Sedgwick, with 20,000 Federal troops (another statement makes it only 15,000), having taken possession of the heights above Fredericksburg, and said, captured, or scattered the troops left in charge (supposed to be Colonel Marye's regiment), was in turn attacked by a division of General Lee's army, and routed with great slaughter.

In all the above engagements, and in others of less importance, the Federals fought well, and their losses were enormously disproportionate as must be evident when the length of time they held their ground and the nature of the contests are considered.

On the other hand, the victories of the Confederate leaders, hardly gained as they have been, have failed often in bringing about those results which might fairly have been expected from them. The overwhelming numbers of the Federal armies, their abundant supplies, the splendid discipline of their soldiers, and the vast resources at their command, with the numerical disproportion and exhaustion of the Confederates, have hitherto, in spite of their unparalleled valour, saved the nation, to render many of the above hardly-fought and victorious fields barren of results.

A map of Vicksburg and the adjacent country, illustrating the plan of General Grant's campaign, is in preparation.

INAUGURATION OF THE CAVOUR CANAL.

(From a Correspondent.)

MONDAY, the 1st of June, will be a day ever memorable in the history of the industrial progress of Piedmont. On that day the magnificent head of the ancient city of Chivasso, was laid the foundation-stone of a great work inspired by the patriotism, and bearing the name of the illustrious Count Cavour—a work which, indeed no less than Italy may claim an interest, for without the resources of English capital and English skill, and English faith in it, the execution might, in all probability, have been long delayed. To fertilise extensive tracts of land in the province of Novara, which depend on the same system of irrigation long found so beneficial in Milanese Lombardy, is the object which the Italian Irrigation Company proposes to carry out, and which, with the consent and co-operation of the Italian Government, the gigantic Cavour Canal, to be supplied from the waters of the Po, will effectually realise.

For some years past the various questions connected with Italian irrigation have been the subject of careful study by engineers and economists, and capitalists of our own country. About ten years ago Colonel Jacob Brett, a well-known engineer, published a pamphlet, a detailed inquiry into the economical, engineering, and legislative conditions of the system, with a view to its bearings on the irrigation of our Indian possessions; and his classical work, the result of that inquiry, is a perfect storehouse of facts and arguments on all points connected with Italian irrigation. Owing in no slight degree to his inquiries, the attention of English capitalists, particularly of those interested in the irrigation systems of India, has been recently directed towards Italy, to what extent, the mere fact that three millions of pounds sterling have been embarked in the purchase of the crown canals in Piedmont, and in making the Cavour Canal, may alone suffice to testify.

Throughout all Italy the construction of the Cavour Canal is regarded as a national work of the highest importance. Accordingly, the inauguration, on the 1st of June, at Chivasso was honoured by the presence of the Crown Prince of Italy, Humbert; of three of the Cabinet Ministers, Rattazzi, Peruzzi, and Menebrea; the Admiral of Commerce, Orso and Justice, and Public Works; of the Bishop of Ivrea (who blessed the works), the Syndic of Chivasso, the contractors, and a host of Italian notabilities—senators, deputies, and others. Letters from Turin amongst the number—with vast crowds brought by the Turin and Milan Railways, from all parts in the neighbouring towns and villages. Amongst the eminent persons present, whether Italian or English, there was much representing the company itself, the most conspicuous were the Marquis Cavour, the brother of his celebrated uncle, the statesman; and Senator Count Oldofredi, the vice-chairman; the Chevalier Nöe, the engineer-in-chief to the Italian Irrigation Company; Mr. Mansel, the chairman; with Colonel Colbey, of the Indian Engineers; Col. J. Dickson, Mr. Cargill, of the Oriental Bank; Mr. Reid, formerly Governor of Singapore; Mr. Bateman, formerly of the Inland Revenue at Calcutta; the directors, and Mr. Abernethy, the engineer of the Cavour Canal.

The view given in our Engraving represents the precise moment of the ceremony when the Count Benedetto Cavour, the Bishop of Ivrea, is raising his benediction to the undertaking and congratulating the Crown Prince Humbert on the benefit conferred on his father's enlightened policy has conferred on the Italian people. It will be seen that a magnificent tricolour pavilion had been erected for the convenience of the actors and spectators in the ceremony, over which floated the flag of the Italian kingdom, of the different provinces and communes through which the canal will pass, and of the Irrigation Company. The pavilion itself, there covered with villas and cottages in the background are the hills of Castellenzi, and the Monte Rosa range. The pavilion rears its summit, at this point, the first great cutting is to be made to supply the waters for the canal. On the left the municipal benediction had been given, the Crown Prince Humbert, attended by the Chevalier Nöe, descended into the species of pit or well, around which appear in the Engraving the workmen in their blouses. Behind the Crown Prince are the ministers, the Count Cavour, and then the more favoured portion of the spectators in the pavilion. A number of carriages with well-clothed table provided by the hospitality of the company for its guests, the Crown Prince returned to Turin, and the day was closed by a "Hip! hip! hurrahs!" welcomed the toasts given by the Marquis of Cavour and Mr. Mansel, the chairmen of the Italian and English Boards, in honour of the health of the Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales, and of the King and Crown Prince of Italy. At about one o'clock the Crown Prince, attended by all his suite, with the engineers and directors of the two boards, returned by special train to Turin from Chivasso, where the streets and windows were magnificently having occupied about three hours of a morning on which the Italian sky and scenery were in their most splendid beauty.

The Engraving has been taken from the photograph executed on the spot by the Brothers Bernieri, of Turin, the most eminent photographers of that city.

THE WAR IN MEXICO.

We are indebted for these Views to an officer serving in the French expedition to Mexico. Recent events have deprived his verbal description of the interest which it would otherwise have claimed. Writing from Puebla while the fate of the town was still undecided and fortune seemed to incline rather than to the side of the French arms, he speaks of the slow progress which the expedition, delicate in composition, had made, and the reluctance it created the spirit of the determination with which the Mexicans had fortified and were defending the city; of the necessity of proceeding against it cautiously, and of the small hope that the place would be carried by a coup de main assault. At the date of our correspondent's letter the Mexicans were holding Puebla entirely invested on every step of its defence and advance and forcing them to lay siege to each house of the suburbs through which they passed before they could push into the town. Since our correspondent writes, that is often happened that the French troops found the enemy in their rear after having taken large places which they had passed in their advance—the handful of Mexicans acting thus devoting themselves to certain death. Upon the hill to the extreme left of the Engraving were placed the batteries of the French General Commanding-in-Chief. Below, and encircling a portion of the town, the trenches they were to occupy are visible.

We give from the same pencil an Engraving of the scene of an engagement between the French and the Mexicans, in which a convoy was waylaid and the troops in charge of it slaughtered. The Mexicans, with a barbarity and cruelty of which civilised warfare by which there can be no excuse, neglected to bury the dead, and left their bodies a prey to the vultures, which have become masters of the country which its human inhabitants have been compelled to leave. The Engraving has subsequently collected their remains, and placed them reverently under a mound on which a cross has been erected in the ground.

Our other Engraving represents a quiet street in Palmar, a village on the road from Vera Cruz to Puebla, which was occupied by the French troops.

THE GREEK DEPUTATION TO DENMARK.

(From our own Correspondent.)

THE deputation sent from Greece to Copenhagen to offer the Crown of Greece to the young King Elect, Prince William George of Denmark, and who have now (June 11) left the capital and fulfilled their mission, consists of Mr. Alexander Mavrocordato, M. Zaimis, Servia, the deputation; and Major Moüas, Captain Soumi, Lieutenant Kriezis, and Lieutenant Kalergi, Aide-de-Camps to the Viceroy, Dr. Ehil.; and M. Stavros, Dr. Med., attendants.

Their reception in Denmark took place on the 6th inst., with much pomp and ceremony, laid down in a programme from the Chamberlain's office, the Deputation, specially for the occasion. The Throne-room at the Palace of Christiansborg had been decorated, and, the three silver lions, which are always used on State occasions, were placed there. At 12 o'clock His Majesty appeared, attended at the indicated hour, with his customary punctuality, and in his complete Russian uniform, and took his seat on the throne. The King of Greece appeared in the uniform of a Captain of the Navy.

His Royal Highness Prince Ferdinand, the Royal Highness Princess Prince Ferdinand (his grand-uncle), and his Royal Highness Prince Christian (his father) accompanied the King, and took their places around the throne, as indicated in the Sketch of Lord.

On the one side of the throne stood the Ministers of State, the Prince Minister, the Lord Mayor, the Admiral; on the other several high officers, civil and military. The Ministers at the Court or Ambassadors to the three protecting Powers, England, France, and Russia, were placed in front of the throne, behind the Greek deputation, who were those ushered in, after having made their usual salutations, the address was read by the veteran Admiral Kanaris, who was then supported on each side by Zaimis and M. Mavrocordato. The other attendants were placed behind them on each side and are visible in the Engraving. The moment chosen for taking the sketch was that when the King was about to answer, when his Majesty bade the young Prince advance to him, and gave him the sceptre which he had already held in his hand, and which he favourably commented on.

The whole scene was imposing, and, on returning from the Palace, the Greek deputation and the young King were much cheered.

On the evening of the same day the King gave a grand dinner to two hundred and fifty distinguished guests. His Majesty, it will be remembered, in proposing the health of the King of Greece, took occasion to remind him of the duty of his people to feel that the real spring of his happiness. The young Prince, much moved, replied that it would be his endeavour to follow the example which his Royal relative had set him, and to do honour to the country from which he had sprung. On the following day the members of the deputation had audience of the King, who conferred upon them certain Danish orders. Admiral Kanaris received the grand cross of the order of the Dannebrog, M. Zaimis and Captain Coundouriotis the commanders of the Greist, while the others received lower grades of the same order.

THE SHOLAPORE NATIVE POLICE.

(BOMBAY PRESIDENCY.)

THERE can be little doubt that Nana Sahib is still alive and busy provoking hostility and rebellion to the British rule. Such, at least, appears to be the impression upon the best native people capable of forming a correct opinion. In the latter part of last year, as we learn from the Bombay Gazette, the Nana was at the head of the rapine-committed at Sholapore, in the Bombay Presidency, that intended of police and the commissariat of the Nizam's dominions. The Nana is a native of the Deccan, and the same to be tried for murder, was apprehended in disguise in that part of India, endeavouring to raise the country. Spies were set to watch them, by which continue a rebel of no common note, named Balcharwa his Rajaram, and aided by a number of the Rajah Rao, Peshwa of Poona, and first cousin of Nana Sahib, was arrested. Judging from the documents in his possession found that the police, had assumed commissions to raise men in his name, ordered a wholesale massacre of the Europeans in Sholapore, and promised a reward for the killing of Europeans. He admitted upon examination having left the Nana in the Nizam's little State a year before, but he expected that he had seen him more recently before, but he expected that he had seen him more recently. Upon this evidence, the Session Court of Sholapore found the prisoner guilty of abetment of war against the Queen, and he was sentenced to death. A petition was, however, forwarded to the High Court of Bombay; and, upon a rehearing of the case, the Court commuted the sentence to transportation for life and forfeiture of property. Some suspicion appears to have been aroused that the police, in their anxiety to secure a conviction, may have entrapped him into treasonable acts or statements; at least inquiry must be made before the fate of so many, sufficient proof remains of the existence of disaffection to the English rule. It is satisfactory to find, however, that in the opinion of the Bombay Government no such charge can be brought against the Native police with which the prisoner was connected. The Session Court of Sholapore found the prisoner guilty of abetment of war against the Queen, and he was sentenced to death. A petition was, however, forwarded to the High Court of Bombay; and, upon a rehearing of the case, the Court commuted the sentence to transportation for life and forfeiture of property. Some suspicion appears to have been aroused that the police, in their anxiety to secure a conviction, may have entrapped him into treasonable acts or statements; at least inquiry must be made before the fate of so many, sufficient proof remains of the existence of disaffection to the English rule. It is satisfactory to find, however, that in the opinion of the Bombay Government no such charge can be brought against the Native police with which the prisoner was connected. The Session Court of Sholapore found the prisoner guilty of abetment of war against the Queen, and he was sentenced to death. A petition was, however, forwarded to the High Court of Bombay; and, upon a rehearing of the case, the Court commuted the sentence to transportation for life and forfeiture of property. Some suspicion appears to have been aroused that the police, in their anxiety to secure a conviction, may have entrapped him into treasonable acts or statements; at least inquiry must be made before the fate of so many, sufficient proof remains of the existence of disaffection to the English rule. It is satisfactory to find, however, that in the opinion of the Bombay Government no such charge can be brought against the Native police with which the prisoner was connected.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

SECRETARIES and Bibury set much by the absence of the Duke of Hamfort, and the meetings were rather dull on the whole. Fairwater and King of Diamonds, with "a hook as big as a cocoa-nut," had to compete for supremacy at their respective meetings. Mr. Merryman, Lambton, won so cleverly that it may well be a source of regret that he is in another line than that of a jockey. The Derby Day's Yeddtes got a race each; and Sea King, the much derided "magistrate's colt," by Lecydid—Gladstone ever so commercially—"two heads" and "two necks" helped out a dull first day at Newcastle, where little Job Marson made his maiden appearance in the "all spots" with his father's colours, and was not well; and Carbineer was unable to give 4lb. to Caller Ou in the finish for the Northumberland Plate, the latter winning.

The Tomato case has been reopened by a majority of 3 to 1, and there seems little doubt that the decision will be reversed. Even those who would be benefited by the new Onslow-Stuart doctrine, that the bets need not necessarily be paid if the race is not run on the merits, are in favour of their champions. "Argus" pertinently remarks, "What strikes the looker-on so extraordinary is, that the colleague of Messrs. Black and Admiral Rous, who is supposed to be Mr. Tattersall's, should not have discovered that he was acting with an incompetent body, and that after the way he had been treated by his own views. Had it been in accordance with his sentiments, then has discretion on those who have taken the law into their own hands, and informing the spectator crowd (who seem to have pretty well made up their minds that the decision was right) that the Derby Cavalcade was seen unruled for, as we understand that Lord Glasgow received £6000 from the Municipal at Doncaster in consequence of Mr. Merry's double mission.

The Field states that most probably Earl Derby will run no more horses, and that Lord Zetland has given up racing, and never to part with Voltigeur. Let us hope that the long-promised Londesboro portraits of Mr. Merry, Lord Brown and his colt, will be the result of the next Royal Academy.

The 13th anniversary of the Corner expires in 1865, and the Messrs. Tattersall have just begun to build their new yard and betting-rooms at Knightsbridge, which will be a most handsome structure.

The Sporting Life alludes to a rumour that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has purchased Bilton Hall, near Rugby, which will command the Pytchley, Atherstone, and other hunts, and will belong within easy distance of other Midland packs, for £70,000. Sir Frederick Hamilton's property is said to be in Monaghan. It is a fine sight best avenged 1484 guineas.

Hollow Stakes is the order of the day in cricket matches. Surrey, beaten at every point, save wicket-keeping, found themselves an innings and 95 runs to the bad after the Gentlemen had finished with them with them. Things would have been very different if Mr. Dowson could have held "a hot catch" early in the day, but he did not, and the two hundred runs by Mr. C. G. Lyttelton and Mr. E. De Grey, being their together, ran up 101 and 64, while Mr. Booth, not out, added 41. Mr. Marshall's 64 and Mr. Grace's 49 not out also excelled the season. The vanquished put their teeth well into Kent the week at Cambridge, Leland Mr. Mynn and them in order to all 11 runs to spare. Caffyn and Griffith bowled well, and the former made the best average, 5 for 49; and Julius Caesar, in his very best form, the second one of 34. Cambridge and Oxford met at Lord's, on Monday and Tuesday, but the bowling of Voules was too much for the light blues at the latter commencement. Mr. Ridley did the best bowling so utterly at defiance that the tell-tale's son announced that the match was lost by an innings and 4 runs. Monday's meeting at Eighteen from the Colleges of Rugby, Marlborough, and Cheltenham (who scored exactly one-half on the occasion), at Lord's, and on the same day the Gentlemen of Kent v. Gentlemen of Sussex, will be played at Brighton. The former, who are captained by Mr. Hill and Ground v. Rugby; on Thursday, Gentlemen v. Players, at The Oval, and at England v. Twenty-two of Leeds, at Morley, near Leeds. The Gentlemen v. Players became a go. The Surrey division

Gentlemen: Hon. C. G. Lyttelton, and Messrs. F. Burbidge, A. W. Daniel, R. Dowson, E. M. Grace, R. A. Mitchell, T. F. Miller, A. Rowley, J. Walker, R. D. Walker, and V. E. Walker; and Players: Atkinson, Caffyn, Cesar, Griffith, Hearne Julius, Hodgson, Lockyer, Mortlock, H. H. Stephenson, and Wisden.

The Surrey v. Cambridgeshire (return) has gone off, as Hayward, Carpenter (who generally plays with the A. E. E. now), and Tarrant chance to judge the Derby Day Cavalcade, a discovery and a new county. As long as the anti-Surrey clique was confined to Farr and Wisden nobody cared about it; but the absence of such a rare trio as the above from The Oval really does create a go. The Surrey decision about "talent money" was, however, most ill-advised, and not calculated to smooth matters at that juncture.

The Normandy, a new steamer built for the London and South-Western Railway Company, to run on their line between Southampton and the Channel Islands, was launched last week from the yard of Messrs. James Ash and Co., Cumberland Basin, Bow, Bridge, a fine clipper built paddle-wheel boat of 600 tons, guaranteed to perform her passages at an average speed of 16 knots.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE anniversary of her Majesty's accession was commemorated in the usual manner at the dockyards on Saturday.

The officers of the 7th (Queen's Own) Hussars had their annual banquet at the Clarendon Hotel on Tuesday week.

The Earl, 20, screw, Captain Hamilton, sailed from Spithead on Thursday week for the Australian station.

Lieut. his Royal Highness Prince Alfred rejoined her Majesty's screw-corvette Racoon, Captain Count Gleichen, at Portsmouth, on Saturday, and hoisted his flag.

The Enchantress, Admiralty yacht, 250-horse power, Master-engineer Tovey, has been taken round the Isle of Wight, and the engines, Her speed was 14 knots with whole power, and 12½ knots with half power.

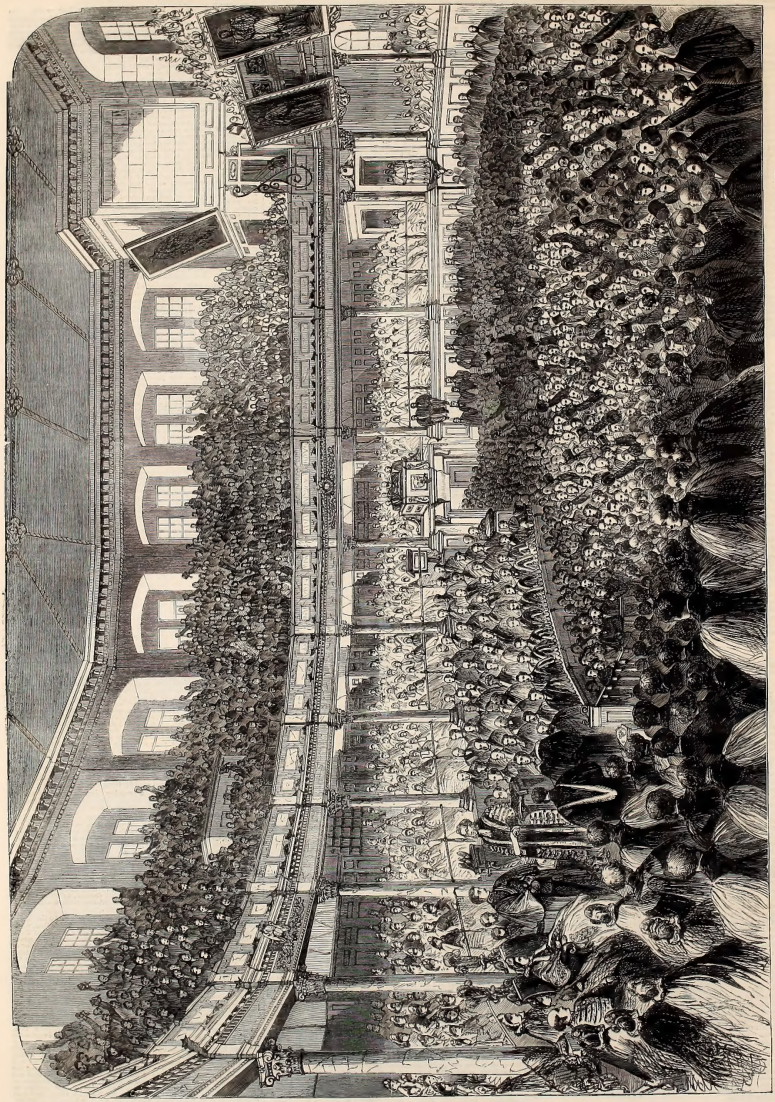
The Queen and Prince Consort, with the Royal children, left Windsor on Monday. The Prince and Princess of Wales were present, and took considerable interest in the various evolutions of the troops. The Duke of Cambridge was the reviewing officer.

The system hitherto adopted of placing the infantry troops for manœuvres under the command of generals has been resorted to during the present season, in consequence of there being ample accommodation on a camp of exercise for the assembling of large bodies of troops.

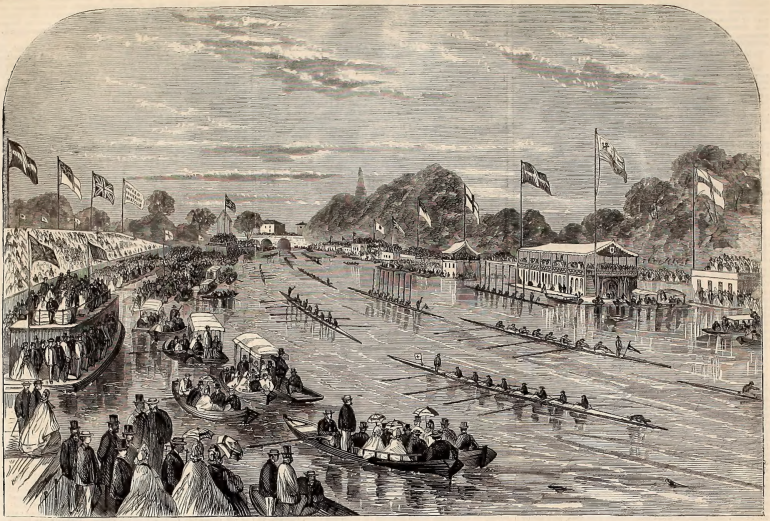
The Commander-in-Chief has intimated that candidates for the commissions in the Artillery who have taken the degree of Master of Arts in the University of Edinburgh shall be accepted as qualified for commissions by purchase, without being required to pass an examination in the subjects detailed in clause 4 of the regulations of May 1, 1863.

The 12th Regiment of Foot (the Suffolk and Somersetshire), under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Frederick English, C.B., stationed at Portsmouth, will proceed to Ireland in the course of the autumn. Lieutenant-General Lord W. Paulet, C.B., the general officer commanding Portsmouth garrison and the south-west district. The regiment is in a high state of discipline.

Commander John Hay, R.N., the naval examiner to the Royal Mail Company, has just been awarded the first-class prize medal of the Royal Humane Society, together with the thanks of the committee and the approval of the composed protractor, which affords the readiest means of projecting courses on a chart, of ascertaining the distance travelled by any course and distance, of ascertaining the distance travelled by any course and distance, of ascertaining the distance travelled by any course and distance



THE OXFORD COMMEMORATION: CONFERRING THE DEGREE OF D.C.L. UPON THE PRINCE OF WALES, IN THE SHELDONIAN THEATRE.—SEE NEXT PAGE.



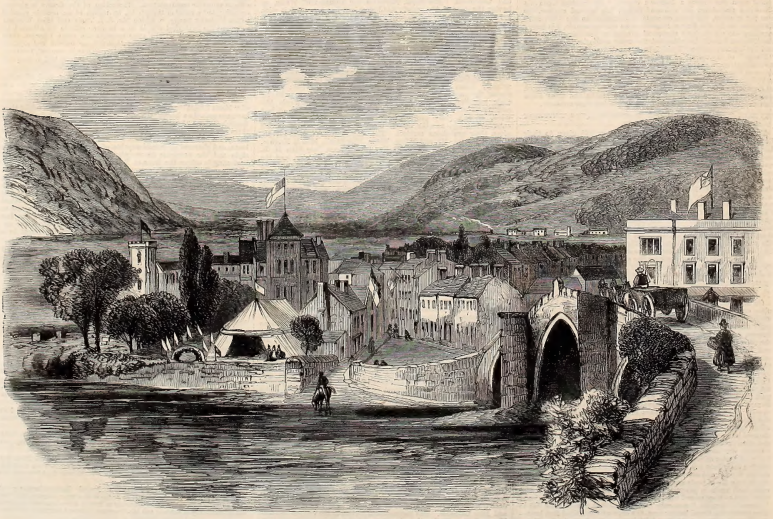
THE OXFORD COMMEMORATION: THE PROCESSION OF BOATS.

OXFORD COMMEMORATION.

We gave last week a brief account of the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Oxford, and of the hearty welcome which they received. In our present Impression we illustrate the chief incidents of the proceedings in which their Royal Highnesses bore part.

THE MAYOR AND CORPORATION PRESENTING THEIR ADDRESS TO THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS.

Their Royal Highnesses arrived at Oxford on Tuesday. They proceeded by special train from Paddington to Culham, and thence by carriage to Oxford. On arriving at the centre of Magdalen Bridge the carriage occupied by the Prince and Princess was thrown open, and immediately followed cheer after cheer. At this point they were met by the university authorities in their academical robes. In the front rank were the Vice-Chancellor (Dr. Lightfoot), the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Bishops of Oxford and Lincoln. The University dignitaries having paid their homage to the Prince and



OPENING OF THE CONWAY AND LLANRWST RAILWAY: THE VALE OF LLANRWST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Princess, the Royal carriage proceeded to the west end of the bridge, where they were met by the High Steward, the Mayor of Oxford and Corporation, and Mr. Cardwell. Along this point the Corporation had erected on each side of the bridge large stands, which were occupied by ladies only; and on the arrival of the Prince and Princess this aristocratic assembly gave to their Royal Highnesses a hearty welcome. The following address from the Corporation have been presented to their Royal Highnesses:—

To their Royal Highnesses Albert Edward Prince of Wales and Alexandra Princess of Wales.

We, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Corporation of the city of Oxford, in council assembled, beg leave to tender respectfully to you, your Royal Highnesses, a hearty welcome to our ancient city. Not long since we were gratified by receiving within our walls as our guest one who, by his personal character and by his position, is the object of our loyal affection; for many years we have been proud of the University of Oxford, which has been so highly distinguished by the constant and affectionate regard which your father has always shown upon the orders which you have so happily contracted. May your Royal Highnesses be long enabled partakers of every blessing with which Providence has crowned our home.

Given in our Council, under our common seal, the 16th day of June, 1863.

The Prince briefly thanked the Mayor and Corporation for their kind wishes, and the Princess graciously bowed to them.

The procession was then proceeded up Magdalen-bridge, the Prince pointing out to her Royal Highness the various colleges and churches which he had previously visited at the same time that he visited the place with dear Sir. Addie's to the deanery at Christchurch College. The whole line of route was crowded with people anxious to obtain a sight of the Royal pair.

THE PRINCESS PRESENTING THE PRIZES TO THE BEST MARKSMEN OF THE UNIVERSITY RIFLE VOLUNTEERS.

After a short rest the Prince and Princess issued from the deanery, and proceeded to an awning in the Quadrangle, where the distribution of prizes for rifle-shooting by the University Volunteers took place. Here there was a very brilliant assemblage, who lined the four sides of the quadrangle. Her Royal Highness presented the prizes as follows to the prince. Amongst those present were Earl Granville, the Duke of Newcastle, Sir C. Wood, and the Bishop of Oxford. The University Volunteers, about 250 strong, were drawn up in front of the awning, and, in their grey coats, purple stockings, and grey dress, they presented a very fine appearance. As the successful competitors received their marks, Colonel Bowyer handed the prizes to her Royal Highness, who in her turn gave to their owners, bestowing on each with a mark of recognition and gracious smile. By the desire of the Prince the corps went through several manœuvres, and performed them in a splendid style. During the march past the band played. The Volunteers drew up in line and presented arms.

THE DEGREE OF D.C.L. CONFERRED UPON THE PRINCE IN THE SHELDONIAN THEATRE.

On Tuesday the degree of Doctor in Civil Law was conferred upon the Prince. By two o'clock every available place in the Sheldonian Theatre was taken up except the reserved seats in the area around the Chancellor's throne. Within the theatre, in the commodious reporters' gallery, dashing their cheers for the ladies in all colours of the rainbow and many of every variety of loveliness, were the fairest the wildest squeeze prevailed. Then the great doors were opened, and the Archbishop of Canterbury came in state, followed by the Chancellor, afterwards Dr. Liddell, with Mrs. Gladstone. Then another pause, after which, the hall of the theatre being still silence, the Princess entered, led by Dr. Liddell. Scarcely had she reached her chair a distance to the throne, when a loud, deep cheer arose, such as seemed to shake the fabric to its foundations. Again and again was this continued without intermission; the ladies joined in the general enthusiasm, waving their handkerchiefs, and the gallery was much moved, and acknowledged the undisguised loyalty of area and galleries in the most graceful and winning manner, almost blushing under the deep fervour with which she was greeted. At length there was another lull, when the doors were thrown wide open, and, led by the Earl of Derby, the Prince was conducted to the throne, the organ playing "God Save the Queen." All joined in, and the first verse of the National Anthem was sung at the top of the voices of the youthful young Englishmen. The Prince had reached the throne, and then a tremendous cheer was raised. The Princess was conducted, and stood by Lord Derby's side, bowing to all parts of the theatre. When the cheering had subsided, Lord Derby in a very graceful and eloquent Latin speech, which was frequently interrupted by enthusiastic cheers, set forth the grounds on which it was proposed to confer upon the Prince a honorary degree. He dwelt upon his illustrious parentage, he honoured father, his beloved mother, his own fair princess, the bright example of purity and of domestic discipline set by the Prince himself as an undergraduate, his happy marriage with a lady by a rhetorical figure he called the sister of the Princess herself, he attracted the most enthusiastic applause—and the hoped prospect in the future, concluding with a request to the "Placet" of the assembled members of Convocation. This was most cordially given, and the Prince sat down a D.C.L. of Oxford. Then followed the usual cry of congratulation. And the Chancellor, the degree of D.C.L. upon Prince Louis of Hesse, and a few honorary degrees on members of the household of the Queen and Prince. Convocation was adjourned, and the Royal party retired amidst the same eager demonstrations of affection and loyalty as had previously occurred.

THE BALL GIVEN TO THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES BY THE UNIVERSITY AT APOLLO LODGE.

Tuesday's proceedings were wound up by a ball given to their Royal Highnesses in the New Corn Exchange, by the Apollo University Lodge of Freemasons. This was a very brilliant affair. The Prince and Princess, accompanied by Lord Granville, the Vice-Chancellor of the university, arrived at eleven o'clock, and were led at once to the raised dais at the upper portion of the hall, where chairs of state had been placed for them, and with their several the ball began. The Princess was in white, with a wreath of white flowers in her hair, and wore scarcely any jewels save the principal diamond of the Cleft necklace. Her lord, which, as usual, was the favourite of the Imperatrice. Her Royal Highness only danced a few sets of quadrilles and lancers; but the Prince, as heretofore, was indefatigable, and stood up in every set till past one o'clock in the morning. Soon after one their Royal Highnesses took their leave, cheered by the guests and the crowd still more lustily by the people in the park, who had waited all the night in the rain to witness their departure.

We give a drawing showing the grand entrance by which the Prince and Princess were received by the brethren of the Apollo Lodge—the lofty pointed passage under "the arch of steel" formed by eight knight templars crossing swords.

THE PROCESSION OF BOATS.

On Wednesday evening the time-honoured procession of boats took place on the Isis. The river presented a most beautiful sight. The various college barges moved along the bank, their tops covered with gaily dressed people. The University barge, decorated with flags and flowers, was an object of general attraction. On the opposite side of the river the college barges were erected, and as the barge of the Prince and Princess arrived at the barge in a boat constructed for the occasion by Salter, the famous Oxford boatbuilder, they received that position in the Royal boat. After rowing past the barges the Royal boat returned to the University barge, when the Prince and Princess disembarked. The roof of this vessel was filled by a distinguished company. Two picked crews then pulled a short race past the Royal barge; every few of the boats were capsized, though all must have admired the skill and strength with which they rowed. Then came the procession of boats, the Prince's boat at the head of the river, sweeping proudly up in its "eight," which came down the river in the same manner as quickly as it could be stopped in its own length before the Royal barge that the boats of all the other colleges might do homage to their supremacy and past year's triumph over them. This they did in the usual manner as they came by in long procession, tossing their oars in honour of Trinity, and then waving their hats and cheering in honour of the Princess, who seemed deeply amused and interested in the whole proceeding. This over, the whole long file of boats swept under Folly Bridge, and, turning there, came back again in procession two and two abreast. All again tossed their oars as they passed the Princess. The cries of "Corpus" and "Jesus," "torpids," not only tossed oars, but rose to their feet as they passed the Royal barge; and the new "Eight" Balliol first boat—"with a view," as one of the eight declares in a letter to the Times, of adding to the amusement of the spectators"—deliberately upset her boat opposite the barge, and then, up to their waists in water, renewed their cheering. Again the Royal ensign took to their boat and the plaudit "God Save the Queen," and the prettiest of the Commemoration day was over.

OPENING OF THE CONWAY AND LLANRWST RAILWAY.

The branch railway from Llandudno to Llanrwst was opened on Tuesday week. A special train left the Victoria Railway station, Manchester, at 11 a.m., with a number of directors, officials, friends, and gentlemen to take part in the ceremony of opening the branch railway. At Chester and other stations invited guests were picked up, and the train deposited its passengers at Llandudno at noon. Half an hour was allowed for a ramble on the beach, or a scramble on the hills by the bold, when the train started for Llanrwst. The new line crosses the Chester and Holyhead Railway at the Llandudno and Conway junction, and skirts the edge of the Vale of Conway. The windings of this pretty stream are closely followed for several miles. The line has twelve miles long, presented no very important difficulty, and cost £75,000. The steepest gradient is 1 in 150, but the length is not sufficient to require more than two stations. The first is Llansantffraid, which is two miles, and the second is Talycafn, which is five miles, from the junction. Both villages are on the left of the line, and both are picturesquely situated, the former on the hillside, and peeping out from among the trees. On the right, at some distance from the bridges and castle of Conway, the line runs on the left bank of the River Conway, and beyond it are seen ranges of lofty mountain hills—Snowdon-capped in the background—the valleys of which are there with white-fronted houses, or mansions embowered in trees. Glimpses are gained, as the train runs on, of two very pretty waterfalls on the Conway, on the right-hand side. The first seen is called Forthlyd. The water of this cascade, which is a tributary of the Conway, leaps from a little above a broad band of silver down over and amongst trees and rocks. The second is called Dolgarrog, but it is by no means so fine a fall. Nearer to Llanrwst, on the same side, is the straggling, picturesque village of Trefriw. The train arrives at Llanrwst about half-past one. Large numbers of people mustered about the station on the platform, and a band, dressed in volunteer uniform, gave a Welsh rendering of "Rule, Britannia." Triumphal arches were erected at the back of the Eagles Inn. About one hundred and forty sat down, under the presidency of Mr. Wynne, of Voelas, to a dinner at which the chair was filled by Mr. Wynne, of Voelas, to a dinner at which the chair was filled five, and the return train left the Llanrwst station, in brilliant sunshine, at six, and arrived in Manchester at ten.

MUSIC.

The two Italian theatres furnish little or nothing in the way of information or remark this week. At Her Majesty's Theatre they are waiting for Mario, who is to be by the uninterrupted run of "Faust;" and at the Royal Italian Opera the novelty announced is produced by the elaborate preparations for producing that opera, which is to be performed for the first time on Saturday next with a splendour and magnificence beyond precedent, it is said, even at this theatre. The object of the performance, which is to be given at the Théâtre Lyrique, is to perform the character at Covent Garden, and M. Gounod conducts the orchestra in person at this opera.

The Annual Concert of the ROYAL SOCIETY OF FEMALE MUSICIANS took place at the Hanover-square Rooms on Thursday afternoon last. This society is one of the most flourishing and useful importance to the musical profession, and deserving of public support. It was established for the purpose of relieving, as far as possible, the distressing a deficiency in the constitution of the great and well-known Royal Society of Musicians, which provides for the widows and children of its deceased members, but which does not afford relief to the members of the profession who have not the above claim to participate in the benefits. The Female Society has accomplished its intentions in a greater institution: its members are all females, and acquire the right to participate in its benefits by subscribing for a year. It is of judicious appointed, and that it is making progress in efficiency and usefulness is shown by the following statement of its affairs are administered by a committee of management, composed of ladies of high position, whose gratuitous services are given with prudence and discretion; for it seems evident that its funds are well applied and of judiciously applied, and that it is making progress in efficiency and usefulness is shown by the following statement of its affairs having the state of the society laid before her, has honoured it with her patronage, and has graciously signified her intention of visiting the nations, we observe that the Queen, the late Queen Dowager, the Duchess of Kent, and the Princess Alice have successively been its patronesses. Jenny Lind has shown to this society her characteristic munificence. The donations alone, from 1842 to the present time, amount to no less than seven hundred pounds: and the society have appropriated a larger sum of fifteen pounds to the relief of an indigent female musician and a member of the society, which fund is to be styled "the Lind-Goldschmidt Gift," in commemoration of the donors. The princely sum of £1,000 has been bequeathed by the late Miss Ayrton, to shows the names of many celebrated foreign musicians who by their contributions have assisted the society, and who have visited the country in which they have been sojourners. The concert of last week, though necessarily poor in appointments and in musical entertainment, a number of our most eminent performers having given their gratuitous services. The singers were Mdlle. Parepa, Mdlle. Liebhart, Mr. and Miss Lascelles, Mr. Frank Bodda, Mr. Santley, Mrs. Saunders, Miss Mary Martin, Mrs. Morest (late Miss M. B. Hawes), and Mr. Weiss. Mr. Benedict was the conductor, and the Orpheus Glee Union. Solos on the violin and the piano were played by Mr. Sainton and Mr. Alfred Mellon, and on the harp was performed by Mr. Belcer-Chatterton and Mr. John Thomas. There was a large and very musical audience, who seemed much gratified by the performances.

The last Concert but one of the MUSICAL UNION for this season took place at Mr. Ella's (the Musical Union) last Tuesday. It was "the Director's Grand Matinée," given for the benefit of Mr. Ella, and was, as usual, attended by a crowded assemblage of the most fashionable company. Generally there is no vocal music at these matinées, but on this occasion several airs were sung by Mdlle. Marie Jaëll and Signor Agnesi, and received with the greatest enjoyment. The instrumental concerted pieces were Beethoven's celebrated sextet in E flat, Op. 81, and Mozart's pianoforte quartet in D minor, op. 74. These were played by Herr Auer, violin; Mr. Webb, violoncello; Mr. Lazarus, clarinet; Mr. E. Pratten, contrabasso; Mr. Lazarus, clarinet; Mr. E. Pratten, flute; Mr. Barret, tenor; Mr. Hausmann, violin; Mr. Harper, horn; and Herr Ludwig, pianoforte—a constellation of talent such as is seldom met with. Besides these great concerted pieces, Beethoven's "Sonata Pastorale" for the piano, Op. 28, was played by Mr. Charles Hallé, and "Marcia Fallers," by Signor Patti; and a solo on the violin by Herr Auer. Mdlle. Marie Jaëll played a composition of her own, called "La Dame Blanche," and a pretty Tyrolese melody. The audience were highly delighted, and were favoured with a degree of warmth seldom seen in so fashionable an assembly.

The Morning Concert given by Miss LASCELLES and Mr. FRANK BODDA, at Willis's Rooms, on Wednesday last week, was an entertainment entitled to special notice. Miss Lascelles is a lady whose claims upon our musical readers are already the first rank of English contraltos; and Mr. Berger is equally distinguished as a pianist and as a composer. The programme, which, of course, was constructed so as to afford room for the talents of both, Miss Lascelles sang the scena from Mozart's "Clemenza di Tito," "Parto, parto," with a fine effect. She was encored for a contralto voice, "Non più di fiori." The beautiful clarinet accompaniment was played by Lazarus, and nothing could be more delicious than the blended tones of the voice and the instrument. Mr. Berger's beautiful song, "Fallen Leaves," was sung by Miss Lascelles; his Italian trio, "Qual rusciellello," was sung by Mdlle. Parepa, Miss Lascelles, and Signor Bardini; and his German ballad, "Un Mitternacht," was sung by Mdlle. Parepa. Among the other vocal pieces perhaps the most remarkable was the duet from Rossini's "Matilde di Shabran," sung by Mdlle. Parepa and Miss Lascelles. The instrumental portion of the concert included Hummel's quintet for the pianoforte, violin, viola, violoncello, and contrabasso, performed by M. Berger, with Messrs. Deichmann, R. Blagrove, Lidel, and Reynolds; Lafont's violin fantasia on "Masaniello," played by Herr Daichmann; and several of Mr. Berger's solos for the piano, played by himself. Miss Lascelles and Mr. Berger both stand high in public favour, and their concert, consequently, attracted a crowded and fashionable audience.

MR. J. P. GOLDBERG'S Matinée Musicale, on Friday week, in the Royal Dudley Gallery, Egyptian Hall, was a classical and interesting concert, consisting chiefly of vocal music. Several of Mr. Goldberg's own compositions were included in the programme, particularly his two Italian romances, "La Costanza" and "Addio, mio dolcemare," which were exquisitely sung by Mdme. Alboni and Signor Gugliini, and vociferously applauded. An air de ballet, "Viola, la Sarta Fronta," sung by Herr Reichardt and Signor Tagliafico, was received with much favour. Madame Rudersdorff, Mr. Schiller, the pianist who has recently become so favourably known to the public, played one of the finest movements of Beethoven with remarkable grace and brilliancy style and execution, albeit under the influence of a degree of timidity which is excellent in a debutante, but scarce to feel. Mr. Payne, one of our most eminent violoncellists, played two solos delightfully. The room was crowded with elegant company.

THE THEATRES.

PRINCESS'—Mr. Walter Montgomery, whose name has been underlined for the last week or two by Mr. Fechter, but who, in consequence of the run of "The Duke's Motto," has not had an opportunity of appearing at the Princess, made his debut at that theatre on Saturday. The part selected for the occasion was Othello. Mr. Montgomery is the son of Basil Montgomery, a well-known author, and probably attracted by the proceedings in which his father has been instituted to prevent his appearing, and to secure his services for M. Fechter's future benefit, he has, it would have been supposed, that, though a young man, Mr. Montgomery has acquired considerable reputation as an actor in the provinces; and we may add that performance of the early scenes of "Othello" fully justified the accounts of him which had reached us. The best parties have only been waiting for him to his merits. In the third act Mr. Montgomery suffered from partial loss of voice, and, we hope, however, he ultimately recovered—a loss, we believe, due to the anxiety of the occasion and to the fatigue of a study process which had only the previous day been decided in his favour. Throughout the performance Mr. Montgomery showed much taste and purpose, and an evident aim to introduce new points of business, some of which were decidedly successful. We are disposed, however, to conclude that in Mr. Montgomery we have an actor ripe for the London stage, and likely to be a considerable favourite on it.

NEW ADELPHI.—The management of this theatre is at length becoming active, and we are likely now to have a succession of novelties, the result of their previous long suspension. In addition to the burlesque of "Ill-Treated Il Trovatore," Mr. Webster promises for the present week a new drama, and for next week a one now to the public generally. "The Irish Tiger" was acted for the first time, on the complete success. The part of Paddy Ryan was capitally supported by Mr. Webster, Mr. Stephenson, and that of Sir Charles Lavender by Mr. Billington. The fight was admirably managed, and elicited much applause. A piece of a different kind followed, one contrived for the purpose of introducing Professor Pepper's ghost entertainment. Nothing, indeed, is the subject that has already received illustration at the Polytechnic Institution—"The Christmas Carol" is the most conspicuous example—"The Haunted Man." The argument is divided into three tableaux, each devoted to a particular phase of the Ghost's Bargain, respectively entitled "The Gift Bestowed," "The Gift Abused," and "The Gift Recovered." This fatal gift poisons not only his own existence, but that of others; and, as in the case of Midas, after a few evenings it ceases to be not adequately made out in the drama. Probably the audience are sufficiently versed in Mr. Dickens's Christmas Carol to dispense with the dramatic explanation. The scientific appearitional results are undoubtedly managed, and with much improvement on the Polytechnic illusions. The appearances are startling, and are extremely startling, sudden, and surprising. All the qualities usually attributed to ghosts—including a shrieking—are given enough; but a relief is thrown in, by means of an episode relative to the Tetterby family, in which Mr. J. S. Toole and Miss Woolgar represent the husband and wife in a manner worthy of the great historic genius. In some respects the scene between these two performers is the best piece of acting we have seen in any theatre than the ghastly phenomena themselves. Time is required, however, for its proper appreciation. After a few evenings it will be properly understood by the public, and its success is then certain.

HER MAJESTY'S.—Mdme. Ristori on Friday and Monday continued to act in her usual repertory, as previously announced. In the tragedies of "Elisabetta" and "Maria Stuart." We think it would have been better if the latter piece had obtained, and the assortment of "Maria Stuart" preceded that of "Elisabetta." We might then have recognised an historical connection with the death of the English Queen; though, in the structure of the dramas themselves, the two pieces stand alone and apart. In both characters, the tyrant and the victim, Mdme. Ristori reached her highest excellence, and charmed all minds capable of appreciating the classic in style and the natural in action. Mdme. Ristori is already beginning to eclipse the fame of Rachel in the estimation of many. We are no longer disposed to compare the two, but to acknowledge the greatness of the Italian tragedienne. We are, indeed, surprised at the vividness of impression she has made. And remembering through the period of mere force, she has safely transported herself to the serener attributes of artistic development, and is now at the height and very culmination of spiritual power. We cannot suffer this notice to close without a word in favour of the company which she has associated with her labours. Signor Belletti, in particular, is an excellent artiste, and support the general caste of the pieces in a manner that adds to the pleasure we witnessing the performances.

SADLER'S WELLS.—An American lady has recently assumed the direction of this theatre for a few nights. Miss Helen Western is a lady of some reputation in her own country. She has performed Mathilde, in the "French Spy," and supported six characters in "A Devilish Good Joke." She is a decidedly popular artiste in Helen Western. This week she has personated Don Cæsar de Bazan with great effect.

The Empress Eugénie, it is said, has dyed her hair perfectly dark, both eyebrows and eyelashes remaining.

The Court photographer, Joseph Albert, in Munich, has discovered a new method of printing photographs in carbon.

A younger son of the Earl of Elgin has died at Trinity College, Glenalmond, in his twelfth year.

Mrs. Bates, widow of Mdme. Van de Weyer, wife of the Belgian Minister, died at an early hour on Monday morning, after a lengthened illness.

A French officer, in garrison at Evreux, has died from a flyon the lip. The insect, it is supposed, had been feeding on putrid meat which had been left out in the open air during the night.

A junk left Macao for Hong-Kong with 300 passengers, 150 of whom were Europeans, on the 10th inst. Only 100 persons on board had been one cup of tea ("congee") per man per day.

Her Majesty's Government has appointed Mr. Huxley, and Mr. Caird, M.P., the Royal Commissioners for inquiring into the subject of sea fisheries.

It appears from a Parliamentary return issued on Monday that the revenue of the Court of Bankruptcy in the year 1861 was £104,329, and the expenditure £81,260. In 1862 the revenue was £124,540, and the expenditure £119,759.

Mr. Michael Robert Westropp, Legal Remembrancer at Bombay, has been appointed a Puisne Judge of the High Court of that Presidency. Mr. Arthur Crawford, Second Secretary at Buenos Ayres, has been appointed Second Secretary at Athens; and Mr. Drummond, Second Secretary at Athens, has been appointed Second Secretary at Buenos Ayres.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

Arabian Days and Nights. By Marguerite A. Power. (Sampson Low, Son, and Co.) "Bakhsheesh!" has become to readers of travels in the East almost as common a cry as "Copper, yer Honour!" at the crossings in the streets of our own country; and it is probable that Eastern travellers in England return to the Land of the Morning with as many stories of having been asked for "a copper" as English sojourners in the gorgeous East of having been pestered for "bakhsheesh." However, the demand seems to lose nothing of its singularity from the fact that we are perpetually inoculated for it in this manner. The beauties of the sprightly volume here noticed has not disdained to harp upon the subject. She apologises for the name of her book as rather far-fetched, remarking that she could not discover the places to which chiefly she confined her observations; but a taking title is almost a necessity nowadays, and she has contrived to make her book very interesting and pleasant. The descriptions of a Jewish wedding, the manners and of a Persian bridegroom, are very entertaining; and the new-born eulogisers of the Turk and the Turkish bath, and everything which is Turkish, may learn from these pages what they suppose to be the true sentiments of Haïm Pacha about the women of his race.

Regardful Sinners. By Mrs. Brotherton. (3 vols. Hurst and Blackett.) No particular plot is elaborated in this novel. Sinners of the regardful order—that is, those who outwardly make much of religion and sometimes too much of its professors or expositors—are represented in a regulative light; and sketches of life, character, ability, or very little of it, to shelter themselves under are exhibited in bright colours. The commencement appears to have proceeded from a friend a puerile strokes was necessary to bring him to a sense of his shortcomings. Mrs. Brotherton writes in a very pleasant style, and is great in the depiction of children and in the infantile talk. She leads us to infer that children for the most part big or spoil as if they had a cold in the head, which, as we all know, is productive of a great many more "ls" in conversation than the consonants in the world account for.

A Norseman's Views of Britain and the British. By A. O. Vinje. (Edinburgh: William P. Nimmo. London: Hamilton, Adams, and Co.) The Norseman is a gentleman of—to judge from his writings—strabismus temperament. He came over here a few months before the opening of the International Exhibition, for the express purpose of "assuming and studying the characteristics of this great commercial land, and the manners, habits, and pursuits of its people." He seems to have been considerably disgusted, and he expresses his disgust considerably. "Here is a set of religious, bigoted, God-asking, God-worshipping, boasting, tuft-hunting, Mammon-serving, half-civilised Hampdens, who do everything with a view to pay," says the Great Exhibition was only a gigantic speculation for gain, not for intercourse and goodwill. Our leading newspapers, and as soon as it is threatened not to pay our public writers abused it; we have made "the Highlands a grave," and human beings that there may be more abundance of "sheep, and grouse, and deer;" we "speak with west-end noses as being altogether different from those in the eastern parts of London;" we "manufacture cosmetics for public nursing and lotures like a drunken rubble;" we are very little behind our "relation Pandoma in national vanity;" we are clumsy, of apprentices are not good, our loaning of farms is shameful, and calculated only to increase "the importance of the village usurer, whom they call the lawyer;" "man is divided" we deserve vengeance for our dealings with poor, ctarved, hunted-Dodge-shamefaced Ireland; our proprietor, "after sucking the marrow out of a district, gives a few roods and potates the poor, builds a chapel, or subscribes a trifle to schools," and straightway thinks of himself as a benefactor to his race; and so on to a host of wonderful benevolence; at our Universities, "schlarships, fellowships, and livings are usually given to the impecunious younger relatives of the patrons, without, it would seem, any great respect for real merit;" our leading newspapers, especially the Saturday Review and the Times, laugh to scorn any but the family-interest plan, in dealing with "our Church;" Lord Derby is raised to the manit-system "the worst kind of preferment" (the Norseman having most likely mistaken the Earl's meaning); we are so hard upon people, that, like Lord Derby, "they become desperate," even as idea as nauseous as leprosy once did in the Holy Land;" even our Sundays are "horrible," but on a Monday we are "dressed, weedy creatures; and we are altogether in a very bad way—not worse, in fact, morally, politically, and intellectually, than our fellow-creatures elsewhere. We ought to take a lesson from Norway and submit to reform from within. It is not necessary, as it is, at least, his tone would lead one to conclude; for, though there is much—both much truth in many of his uncomplimentary remarks, his self-complacent assumption of superiority renders them more than usually unpalatable. Had he had the grace to publish his letters before he left, Lord Ely would have had a most valuable reading for that season of penance.

Translations by Lord Lyttelton and the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone. (Bernard Quaritch.) To classical scholars these translations will be welcome for themselves; to the world at present accomplishment for the authors' sakes; and to lovers of nice-ordering books for the sake of their neat exterior. It is unnecessary, as this is a second edition, to blow the trumpet in honour of Lord Lyttelton's and as widely-praised achievements of the noble Lord and the right hon. Commoner. It may be useful, however, to those who have no acquaintance with the dead languages to mention that the Chrysotom of the Commoner's powers as a translator are Homer, Dante, and Italian as well as upon Latin and Greek, and with as much success.

Memoirs. (Ehas Bancroft and Co.) (Simpkin, Marshallan and Co.) This is the first number of that ever-dying, ever-reviving periodical, the magazine. The conductors request support in every way—by purchase and by letter—by contributions, by subscribers and lovers of Eton. The present number is chiefly remarkable for containing the speech that was spoken upon the 28th of April by the Prince and Princess of Wales, and there are no doubt many (particularly Eton boys) who will be glad to get it. And so, in imitation of the well-known motto, Avant Brunswick!

Wild Scenes in South America. By Don Ramon Paez. (Low, Son, and Co.) This book is full of exciting adventures by flood and sea, comprising passages in the Venezuelan war of independence. Vigorous illustrations accompany the letterpress and add to the interest. Whether or not the spirit of the late Baron Munchausen may be considered to have passed into the author of this book from the following anecdote:—"During the engagement Captain Las Casas, with his men, on a General, while attempting to cut down a struck by a musket-ball on the nose, which feature was previously a little one-sided. Finding the ball come from the blow except a temporary inflammation, we concluded that the ball had passed through the head. Notwithstanding the satisfaction, his nose from that time became prominent, and has continued so to the present day. The occurrence of this event, on returning to Caracas from exile, I was surprised to hear these same people say that the General had coughed up a musket-ball during the night. The affair naturally excited a good deal of talk throughout the city; but, on examination by competent persons, it was discovered that the missile—doubtless the identical one fired at him by the guerrillas—proceeded from his nose, having worked itself a passage through the roof of his mouth into his throat." Let readers be free from the slow except a temporary inflammation, we concluded that the ball had passed through the head. Notwithstanding the satisfaction, his nose from that time became prominent, and has continued so to the present day. The occurrence of this event, on returning to Caracas from exile, I was surprised to hear these same people say that the General had coughed up a musket-ball during the night. The affair naturally excited a good deal of talk throughout the city; but, on examination by competent persons, it was discovered that the missile—doubtless the identical one fired at him by the guerrillas—proceeded from his nose, having worked itself a passage through the roof of his mouth into his throat." Let readers be free from the slow except a temporary inflammation, we concluded that the ball had passed through the head. Notwithstanding the satisfaction, his nose from that time became prominent, and has continued so to the present day. The occurrence of this event, on returning to Caracas from exile, I was surprised to hear these same people say that the General had coughed up a musket-ball during the night. The affair naturally excited a good deal of talk throughout the city; but, on examination by competent persons, it was discovered that the missile—doubtless the identical one fired at him by the guerrillas—proceeded from his nose, having worked itself a passage through the roof of his mouth into his throat."

A New Zealand paper states that during one week 3000 persons landed on the Dunedin jetty, bound for the Otago goldfields.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

DEMOSTHENES.—The best authority on Philidor's history is his life by Professor Allen, of Philadelphia. According to this biography the great French chess-master received his instruction in chess from Legall de Kermeur, and died in London on the 31st of August, 1795. You appear therefore to have been misinformed both as to the date of his birth and of his death.—See "The Life of Philidor, Musician and Chessplayer, by William Allen, A.M."

E.L.—It may occur of course to suppose so terrible a contingency as that of a player's having to move his King into check, but in such a position would be to continue the struggle to undergo a course of tortures too dreadful to name. If that infliction did not continue of his evening, he must be considered inconsistent, and ought to be placed under restraint for his own safety.

A SHORTY (late RUBY ARTS on Saturday, the 27th, Derby, L.K.T., and others.—It was mentioned to our last that the author of Problem No. 1095 had overlooked the fact that Black by playing 1. Q to Q 4th could draw the game.

R. D. C.—After the adverse opinion expressed by the examiners the diagram you speak of will be considered by the solvers as a mere curiosity. Perhaps you can find a better.

J. W. B. Hambleton.—Quite true.

E. C.—It was an all-round match, but the qui parti game, and that is unsuitable for a newspaper.

 The little counsel between M. Bilski and Mr. Mucklow is not yet concluded, we believe. The score will be published in our columns when it is finished.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 1097, by Patrick, W. W., Miroslo, A. V., George, T. B., Hereward, Rev. J. Wayte, Shakespeare, Rev. J. A. Wray, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Hall, Rev. J. Jones, Rev. W. A. Wray, Rev. J. Hall, Rev. J. Owen

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.—TOURIST TICKETS, at Cheap Fares, available for one Calendar Month, are issued to the Midland Counties, Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, and other principal stations, to RICHMOND, Harrogate, Bridlington, Scarborough, Whitby, Redcar, Saltburn, Hartlepool, Durham, Darlington, Stockton, Middlesbro', Ferryhill, and Bishop Auckland; to RIPON, Leyburn, Penrith, Carlisle, Dumfries, Ayr, Glasgow, Stirling, Dalkeith, Perth, Aberdeen, Inverness, Dundee, Montrose, Arbroath, and Aberdeen; and to STRANRAER, Whithorn, Wigtown, Portpatrick, Girvan, Maybole, Ballantrae, Newton-Stewart, Port Ellen, and the Isle of Mann.

For further particulars see programmes, to be obtained at King's-cross Station, at all the receiving-offices in London, and at the Midland Railway Stations, Derby, Leeds, Bradford, Hunslet, Wakefield, Normanton, Hull, Sheffield, Rotherham, Masborough, Lincoln, Nottingham, Retford, Doncaster, Gainsborough, Boston, Sleaford, Grantham, Peterborough, Wisbech, Spalding, Stamford, Market Harborough, Kettering, Wellingborough, Higham Ferrers, Bedford, and Hitchin.

By order, SAMUEL SWARBRICK, Secretary.

King's-cross, June, 1863.

MIDLAND RAILWAY.—TOURIST TICKETS at Cheap Fares, available for One Calendar Month, are issued on and after the 20th inst. to the Midland Counties, Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, and other principal stations, to LONDON, Bedford, Hitchin, Peterborough, Boston, Sleaford, Grantham, Retford, Doncaster, Gainsborough, Lincoln, Nottingham, Derby, Leicester, Rugby, Northampton, Kettering, Wellingborough, Higham Ferry, Wisbech, Spalding, Stamford, Market Harborough, Leeds, Bradford, Hunslet, Wakefield, Normanton, Hull, Sheffield, Rotherham, Masborough, Penrith, Carlisle, Dumfries, Ayr, Glasgow, Stirling, Dalkeith, Perth, Aberdeen, Inverness, Dundee, Montrose, Arbroath, and Aberdeen; and to RIPON, Leyburn, Richmond, Harrogate, Bridlington, Scarborough, Whitby, Redcar, Saltburn, Hartlepool, Durham, Darlington, Stockton, Middlesbro', Ferryhill, and Bishop Auckland; to STRANRAER, Whithorn, Wigtown, Portpatrick, Girvan, Maybole, Ballantrae, Newton-Stewart, Port Ellen, and the Isle of Mann.

For further particulars see programmes, to be obtained at King's-cross Station, at all the receiving-offices in London, and at the Midland Railway Stations, Derby, Leeds, Bradford, Hunslet, Wakefield, Normanton, Hull, Sheffield, Rotherham, Masborough, Lincoln, Nottingham, Retford, Doncaster, Gainsborough, Boston, Sleaford, Grantham, Peterborough, Wisbech, Spalding, Stamford, Market Harborough, Kettering, Wellingborough, Higham Ferrers, Bedford, and Hitchin.

By order, SAMUEL SWARBRICK, Secretary.

King's-cross, June, 1863.

ISLE OF MAN.—HILL'S ROYAL HOTEL, DOUGLAS. Board, Lodging, and Attendance, 6s. 6d. per day. Unique scenery for sketching. Table and Billiards free of charge.

HIGHLAND SHOOTING-QUARTERS (economically and expeditiously furnished with every necessary article of use and comfort) recommended by parties who have tried or reathem. One of the largest stocks in Great Britain to select from. Illustrated Price-List free. Messrs. Thompson Fitting Warehouse, 10 and 24, Sloane Square, London, S.W.

TO PARENTS and GUARDIANS.—An Architect and Surveyor in London has an opening for an ARTIST'S PUPIL of GENTLE FEELING and REFINEMENT. Domestic residence. For particulars, address "H.," 13, Guildford-street, Russell-square.

WANTED, in the House of a Private Family of good position in society, a Sitting-room and Two Bedrooms, for a married man and wife—no children. Address, stating terms, to W. L., care of Mr. Bowden, 314, Oxford-street, W.

MONEY ADVANCED by Mr. LUXMOORE, 30, Sidmouth-street, Regent-square, W.C. (opposite New Church), on Personal Security, Life Interests, Reversions, Annuities, Legacies, &c. Interest as low as 5 per cent. Sweets and pure Assurances.

LARGE PICTURES, as presented by the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, framed in GOLD or ROSEWOOD, with Glass and Backing complete, Price 10s. 6d.

LONDON STEREOSCOPIC and PHOTOGRAPHIC COMPANY, 54, Cheapside, London.

A SET of 12 HANDRINGHAM STEREOGRAPH: with portrait of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, complete. Price 30s.

See Review, "Times," June 17.

Sent free by post on receipt of Orders to JOHN JENNINGS, Cashier.

GILT FRAMES, with Glass and Board complete, 18in. by 14in., 1s.; 20in. by 16in., 2s.; 24in. by 20in., 3s. 6d.; 30in. by 24in., 5s. 6d.

STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY.

THE ST. GEORGE'S CHALLENGE VASE, presented by the St. George's Rifle Corps to the Volunteers of Great Britain, to be shot for at Wimbledon on the 15th of July, 1863. ELKINGTON and CO., 22, Regent-street.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—A MEDAL, &c., may be selected on very moderate terms from the Collection of Mr. C. E. TAYLOR, Numismatist, 6, Montague-street, Russell-square. Articles forwarded for inspection to any part of the country. Coins and Medals purchased. Gentlemen attended at their residences during pressing press on application. Attendance daily from 10 a.m.

MARBLES ONYX D'ALGERIE.—One Thousand Objects made from this beautiful Marble, and comprising Tables, Vases, Clocks, Candelabra, Inkstands, Paperweights, Card-trays, Card-cases, Pen-trays, Cabinets, Jewel-cases, Work-boxes, Tazzas, Obelisks, Porte-bouquets, Lamps, Egg-stands, &c., &c., are now being exhibited at the Show-Rooms of Messrs. HOWELL, JAMES, and CO.'S, 5, 7, 9, Regent-street.

A FORREB, Hair Jeweller to the Queen, has a Show-room at 3, Argyll-place, RAGHOTTON Regent-street and Baker-street.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—G. HOOPER, ARTIST IN HAIR, Hair Gold Receiving Brushes for hair not combing out, and Manufacturer of Hair Rings, Pins, and Chains. Illustrated Catalogues sent free.—113, Regent-street, Leicester, W.

DENTS CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, and CLOCKS.—E. DENT, 34, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, Watch, Clock, and Chronometer Maker by special appointment to the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Illustrated Price-List sent free.

"CHRONOMETER" GLASS, 9s. 6d.—E. WRIGHT, 6, is achromatic, and so strong that ships, horses, bridges, &c., can be plainly seen at 3 miles' distance. Sent free and when used as a landscape glass is valuable on a twenty-five mile range. Sold by all Opticians, Jewellers, and Dealers in Nautical Instruments. I never before made any use of the word "chronometer" save on my maker's recommendation."—F. H. Fawkes, Esq., Farming Correspondent. Testimonials supplied by Messrs. Smith and Beck, framed with them.—From a report by the Head Gamekeeper of the Right Hon. Lord Ashburton:—"I have tried your glass, and find it the best of the sort I ever had. It was particularly good on a very misty morning against all the glasses possessed by the members of the corps, and could distinguish the hour on the church clock at the village of Kingsclere, 5 miles off, when the others could not see the church." Sent free by receiving bullet mould on 7000 yards, 10s. 6d. These Glasses are only to be had direct from HAGEN and SON, 26, Frederick-street, Edinburgh, who have no agents.

RIFLE TELESCOPES, from 30s. Illustrated Price-List, post free, of J. HUBBUM, Manufacturer, 3, Ludgate-hill, London, and Wallis-street, Birmingham.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO-GUINEA BINOCULAR FIELD, RIFLE, or OPERA GLASS.—The extraordinary success of this instrument renders it necessary to state that objects distinctly at ten miles' distance—minutely for the Cinema, Theatre, Reviews, Steeplechases, Yachting, and all Out-door Amusements.—Manufactured by Messrs. Lane of Optical Instruments for the Million.—39, High Holborn, London.

OPERA, RACE, and FIELD GLASSES in every variety of form and mounting, from the simplest and most magnifying power and sharpness of definition, prices from 30s. each, at CRICHTON'S, 22, Old Bond-street, W. Illustrated Catalogues sent free by post. N.B. Mr. Crichton has had the honour of supplying Her Majesty the Queen, Viscount Palmerston, Field-glasses made expressly for India, and wishes to call attention to the greatly improved Opera Glass, with patented Glasses the made for H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, through one of his servants.

TESTIMONIALS of the NEW FIVE-POUND TELESCOPE.—Although hardly yet known to the public, Messrs. Collingham.—I am happy to inform you that astronomical observations with your 5-guinea Telescope, both by day and night, have more than equalled the very favourable opinion which I had previously entertained of its capabilities. I have compared it with one of the best London makers' telescopes, and have found no difference whatever in performance, its getting-up, or its surprising cheapness.—Edward J. Stanley, F.R.A.S., Rudge Observatory, Wellington, Salop. Mr. Stanley, F.R.A.S., Dunde, M.A., Rector of Alford, Lincolnshire, writes:—"I am much pleased with the Telescope you sent me. It is very portable, and yet has a large field, and will, I have no doubt, bear a much higher power than I have yet used." Mr. Dunlop, having tried it against several others belonging to his friends, writes:—"I find it to be the best of the lot." Sold by Opticians, Booksellers, and Chemists, price 5l. 5s.

5 and 5, HOLBORN, Opticians, 19, Aldermanbury-street, Finsbury.

OPERA GLASSES.—Just brought out, an entirely New, Small, and Powerful Glass, of great BEAUTY and LIGHT RECONNOITRING and RIFLE GLASS, for the weakest pocket, magnifying 30 times, and will show the time by a church clock 10 miles off. Price 10s. 6d. Also, a large size for Naval, Military, Yachting, Reviewing, Steeplechase, and Public Amusements, 21s. Sent free, 10s. 6d. and 21s. Post-office Orders.—THOMAS, No. 38, Aldermanbury.

SPECTACLES.—The PATENT TINTED SPECTACLES are patronised by the majority of the nobility, gentry, and public generally, as the most comfortable and effective for day and night to weak, sore, and defective vision. Thousands of spectacles to inspection unless by experienced persons is beneath of the importance. One of the Firm who has had great experience and practice attends to the branch only.—S. and H. SOLOMONS, 39, Aldermanbury-street, Finsbury. Opposite the York Hotel.

DEAFNESS.—The SOUND MAGNIFIER and VOICE CONDUCTOR, the newly-invented Instrument for cases of Deafness. In this tube no ear-piece is required, nothing enters the ear, it is the best, and enables the deaf to hear distinctly at church and at public assemblies.—S. and H. SOLOMONS, 39, Aldermanbury-street, Finsbury, opposite the York Hotel.

MILITARY CANTEENS for Officers, £8. No charge for Case, containing PLATED SPOONS AND FORKS. IVORY TABLE KNIVES.
12 Table spoons ... £2 8 0 | 12 Dessert forks ... £1 8 0
12 Table forks ... 2 8 0 | 12 Dessert spoons ... 1 8 0
12 Dessert spoons ... 1 8 0 | 12 Tea spoons ... 0 18 0
12 Dessert forks ... 1 8 0 | 1 Butter knife ... 0 3 6
12 Tea spoons ... 0 18 0 | 1 Sugar ditto ... 0 3 6
1 Gravy ditto ... 0 6 0 | 1 Soup ditto ... 0 6 0
1 Soup ladle ... 0 3 0 | 1 Pair of meat carvers ... 0 7 6
1 Sauce ditto ... 0 2 6 | 1 Pair of chicken carvers ... 0 5 0
1 Sauce ladle ... 0 0 9 | 1 Ivory-handle steel ... 0 3 0
1 Fish slice ... 0 4 0 | 1 Pair of game ditto ... 0 3 0
Carried forward, £8 8 6 | Complete ... £8 0 0
MAPPIN BROTHERS, Manufacturers, Queen's Cutlery Works, and Royal Sheffield Plate Works, 67 and 68, King William-street, London-bridge. Large plate rooms and show-rooms as at their Manufactory, Queen's Plate and Cutlery Works, Sheffield.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, TEA, and TOILET SERVICES, in every variety of style and good patterns. Also a beautiful variety of every description of Cut Glass, Glass Dishes, &c., suitable for wedding and birthday and the parties furnishing to choose from.

DEANE, DRAY, and CO., 46, Superior table-knives, 12 pairs, 30s. Superior carvers, 3s. 6d. per pair. Superior dessert knives, 12 pairs, 30s. Superior carvers, 3s. per pair.

GARDNERS' £2 2s. DINNER SERVICES, A large assortment of patterns of the choicest description; Dessert, Tea, Breakfast Services, &c., at equally low rates. At the lowest possible prices; table-glass of the utmost brilliancy of colour; Chandeliers, Lustres, Candelabra, Ormolu Ornaments, Bronzes, and Clocks.—GARDNERS, Strand, Corner of Wellington-street, and 4, Duncannon-street (adjoining). Established 1715.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the Best.—The most economical, safest, and most brilliant Lamps in London. Moderator Table Lamps, from 5s. 6d. each; Engravings free by post.—GARDNERS, Strand, Corner of Wellington-street, and 4, Duncannon-street (adjoining). Just Received, from their Manufactory, four dozen Trafalgar-square; and 4, Duncannon-street (adjoining), London. Trafalgar-square; and 4, Duncannon-street (adjoining), London.

CHANDELIERS in BRONZE and ORMOLU for DINING-ROOMS and LIBRARY, Candelabra, Moderator Lamps, in the Elizabethan, Louis Quatorze, Louis Quinze, and other styles.—GARDNERS, Strand, Corner of Wellington-street, and 4, Duncannon-street (adjoining).

OSLER'S CRYSTAL GLASS WORKS, WALL'S COURTS, and Lustres, for Gas and Candles. This Week Jun. 27, Illustrated Catalogues sent free.—OSLER, 45, Oxford-street, W. Glass Dessert Services for 12 persons, from £3.

All articles marked in plain figures.

Ornamental Glass, English and Foreign, suitable for presents.

Glass Chandeliers, Lustres, Candelabra, Gas Fittings, Inkstands, Globes, Shades, &c.

Birmingham—Manufactory and Showroom, Broad-street.

MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS FURNITURE.

Families who study economy, comfort, durability and elegance should visit the show-rooms of Messrs. MAPLE and CO., where the best goods are sold at the smallest remunerative profit. A ten-roomed house furnished complete in one visit. Drawings and estimates submitted and purchase on application.—Tottenham-court-road.

The Furniture Gazette, illustrated, free by post.

MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS FURNITURE.

Mahogany winged wardrobes, 3 guineas; drawing-room fauteuils, from 1l. to 10 guineas; the Buckingham easy chair, 5l. 5s.; couch in new spread, 3 guineas; fancy chiffoniers, with plate-glass and marble tops, 5l. 5s.; Arabian couches, 5l. 5s.; Arabian chairs, 2l. 2s.; Arabian ottomans, 3l. 3s.; Arabian tables, 2l. 2s.; Arabian cabinets, 5l. 5s. Detailed catalogues free on application.—Tottenham-court-road.

MAPLE and CO. for CARPETS. A Manufacturer, at 5s. 6d. per yard, Brussels carpets, 3ft. 3in.; Axminster Carpets, 3ft.; Turkey Carpets of all sizes. Tottenham-court-road, London, W.

SUPERIOR EASY-CHAIRS and SOFAS, in best leather, from the Show-Rooms of Messrs. JAY, FILMER, and SON Manufactory, 31, 32, and 33, Berners-street, Oxford-street. An Illustrated Pamphlet sent free by post.

HANDSOME BRASS and IRON BEDSTEADS.—REAL and SOUND Showrooms contain a large and well-selected Stock of Bedsteads, suitable for Servants' Rooms, Children's Nurseries, Hospitals, Public Institutions, and Private Families. Bedsteads for servants; every Bedstead fitted with Patent Woven Wire Mattress. In Mahogany, Birch, Walnut-tree Woods, Painted Deal and Japanned, all fitted with Bedding of every description. Lists sent free by post.—HEAL and BEDDING Furniture.—Heal and Son, 196, Tottenham-court-road, London, W.

LE SOMMIER ÉLASTIQUE PORTATIF. 4l. The Sommier Elastique Portatif is the most luxurious, and the usual Spring Mattress to use heavy and cumbersome for general use. It is made in all sizes, and packs into a portmanteau. It is the best article for Servants' Bedrooms, Camp Bedsteads, and portable use. It is also cheap and durable; and, as it has no stuffing on the top, it is cool during the summer. Lists of prices sent free by post.—HEAL and SON, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

CATALOGUE of GOTHIC BEDROOM FURNITURE.—HEAL and SON having been frequently solicited for furniture in accordance with the style of the Gothic and Mediæval houses now so frequently erected, have manufactured a variety of Bedroom Furniture in the Mediæval Style. Heal, 196, which they invite the attention of their intending customers. Also a Catalogue of Bedsteads, Bedding, and Bedroom Furniture.—Heal and Son, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

HEAL and SON'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of BEDSTEADS, with Prices and Sketches of 80 different Arrangements of Bedroom Furniture, sent by post free on application. 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

WEST-END FURNITURE GALLERIES, 144, Oxford-street (opposite Bond-street), and 13, Newman-street.

Good Cane-seat Chairs, 10s. each; Polished Mahogany Chairs, 12s. each; Polished Mahogany Chairs, with Spring-seats, 18s. each; Mahogany Drawing-room Chairs, 2l. 2s. each; Elegant Mahogany Drawing-room Chairs, 3l. 3s. each; Bedroom Bedsteads, from 2l. each; Mahogany Dressing-tables, 3l. 3s. each; Mahogany Wardrobes, 3l. 3s. each; Mahogany Chiffoniers, 3l. 3s. each; Mahogany Dining-tables, 3l. 3s. each; Mahogany and Oak, from 3l. to 6l. 6s. each; Chimney-Glasses in endless variety, from 1l. 1s. each; Pier-Glasses, in handsome carved and gilt frames, from 3l

FJ2009.084.10630

ILLUSTRATED
LONDON NEWS

VOL. 42
JAN.-JUNE
1863